BOMBAY dispatch: "The greatest excitement has been caused here by a report that the Ameer of Afghanistan has been killed by the rebels, or, according to another version, that he has committed suicide." .... Madrid telegram: "The Minister of the Colonies has agreed with the Bank of Spain for a very large advance to meet the expense of the reinforcement of Cuba. The reinforcements will include artillery. The Spanish politicians express much apprehension about the news from Cuba."

THE Moscow journals relate an extraordinary escape of a young Nihilist girl named Gobiczlawska from the hands of the police. The latter had discovered the house in which she was concealed, and were about to make the arrest, when, to their surprise, they saw a balloon rising from the garden containing the object of their search and two men. They rapidly disappeared for some unknown destination, leaving the gendarmes to gaze disconsolately after them.

The Cabul Revolt and Massacre.

Advices from India give particulars of the attack upon and slaughter of the entire British embassy at Cabul, the capital of Afghanistan. The New York Herald correspondent at London telegraphs under date of Sept. 5:

The worst fears regarding the fate of the British Envoy at Cabul have been realized. Positive information has been received that Maj. Cavagnari and his suite have been massacred. For this act on the part of the troops of Yakoob Khan, however unable he may have been to control them, England will exact a terrible reckoning. In the intense interest felt last night at all the clubs the supreme anxiety of the patriot was mingled with the curiosity of the politician. As the details come in from the Indian Government to the Foreign Office, the prospect grows hourly more serious. The latest authoritative announcement is to the effect that the attack on the residence of the British agent at Cabul was opened by three regiments of the Afghan army, which were joined later by nine others.

Yakoob Khan writes that their regular troops began by stoning a small party of British officers on the streets. It seemed only an ordinary attack by a mob at first, but the report that all the British at Cabul were to be killed spread through the barracks and the city with great rapidity, and before all the members of Maj. Cavagnari's suite and his body-guard could be collected from the various parts of the city an immense crowd had assembled around the Embassy building, and the troops, leaving the camps and the barracks, appeared in large bodies upon the scene. Meanwhile the building had been stoned, and several shots had been fired from the crowd, but without perceptible effect. A heavy volley of musketry was then fired into the crowd from the Embassy building, followed by several successive volleys. The destruction of the British residency and the lives of its inmates were demanded on all sides. "Death to the British," was heard in every mouth. Meanwhile fully 6,000 troops, regulars and irregulars, had thoroughly surrounded the building and cut off all possible means of retreat. The force defending the Embassy numbered seventy-nine. They fought with the greatest bravery. It is said that the Ameer's son was fatally injured. A large number of the mutineers were killed. After the buildings of the Embassy were fired, the survivors sallied out and defended themselves desperately, but all were killed, including Maj. Cavagnari. Intense excitement prevails throughout India.

The British Mission to Afghanistan consisted of Maj. Cavagnari, his secretary (Jenkins), Dr. Kelley and Lieut. Hamilton, commanding the escort, consisting of twenty-six cavalry and fifty infantry and Sepoy guards. The troops of the Embassy were lodged in two houses in the city, joined by a quadrangle. The houses were spacious, but, unfortunately, chiefly constructed of wood. The mutineers finally burned down the doors of the Embassy and swarmed in. The party made a very stubborn defense. The loss of the rioters killed in the fight is estimated at over 100. The British are advancing on Cabul in three columns. A dispatch from Calcutta says: "From the imperfect information so far obtainable, there seems to be good reason to favor the view that the disaffection has not spread all over Afghanistan, but that the affair is merely a local emeute which will speedily disappear when the British troops arrive at Cabul. The Government apparently does not doubt the fidelity of the Ameer. Badshah Khan's adhesion to the British cause is valuable as removing what might have been a serious obstacle to the advance from Kuram to Cabul. The fact that the insurgents did not wait until the winter snows had blockaded the passes, or even until the British had evacuated Candahar, seems to indicate that the rising was wholly unpremeditated."

Turkey's Dry Rot.

In his book Valentine Baker writes: A most intelligent Turkish officer, holding a high official position, accounted to me for the evil as follows: "In Turkey there exists no aristocracy, properly so called, which may show an example of honor and honesty to those immediately below them. For this, to a considerable extent, the social system is to be blamed. But we must seek farther than this want of an aristocracy among the better classes for that general system of corruption which is the bane of official life and of all prosperity. This kills the patriotic feeling which alone can sustain the existence of a nation in times of trial, and utterly debases the whole fabric of social organization. For the origin of the evil we must look to the constant system of change in official positions which seems to have become almost inherent in Turkish government, and to the system of protection which will so constantly raise people of low and often menial positions to the highest offices of the state. The result is that men who have no fortunes of their own, and whose tenure of office is likely to be limited, seek to make the most of their opportunities by rapid and wholesale robbery. From this springs a system of bribery, extortion and general corruption. Every man is trying to jostle his neighbor out of some post, in order that he may secure it, either for himself or for a friend who may be useful. The state is a bad paymaster, yet rapid fortunes must be made. This once accomplished, and the power to bribe being available, the official may rest pretty well assured that, even if reverses come upon him, he will not be long left out in the cold. The result is intense jealousy, distrust and intrigue. No one unacquainted with Turkish life can believe the extent to which this jealousy is prevalent, nor how the desire to oust some civil rival from his position seems to be the all-absorbing idea of nine out of every ten Turkish officials. The canker extends to the army, more especially to the higher ranks, and it is to this that we must trace the conduct of Suleiman in the late campaign, as well as most of the disasters that have befallen the Turkish arms in previous ones."

Army of the Cumberland.

Gen. Phil Sheridan, President of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland, has issued the following call:

To the members of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland:

GENTLEMEN: Having received notification that the arrangements for the unveiling of the statue of Gen. Thomas in Washington would be completed early in the month of November next, in pursuance of the resolution of the society adopted at the last meeting, the next annual meeting of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland is hereby called to meet in Washington, D. C., Nov. 19 and 20, 1879, the anniversary of the battle of Missionary Ridge. All members are urgently requested to be present at the meeting.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
President of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland.

The Negro Exodus.

A Washington telegram says: "Prominent colored men just arrived from the South report that the attempts to dissuade the blacks from going West and North this fall are futile, and that nothing remains but to let them go and give the matter a practical test. They report that the exodus will set in in dead earnest the latter part of October, and where one went this spring five will go this fall. The movement, however, will not be confined to Kansas, but all Western States will receive accessions."

Facial Peculiarities.

A writer in the Popular Science Monthly tells the following:

I was once sitting in a cool underground saloon at Leipsic, while without people were ready to die from the heat, when a new guest entered and took a seat opposite to me. The sweat rolled in great drops down his face, and he was kept busy with his handkerchief, till at last he found relief in the exclamation:

"Fearfully hot!"

I watched him attentively as he called for a cool drink, for I expected every moment that he would fall from his seat in a fit of apoplexy. The man must have noticed that I was observing him, for he turned toward me suddenly, saying:

"I am a curious sort of a person, am I not?"

"Why?" I asked.

"Because I perspire wholly on the right side."

And so it was; his right cheek and the right half of his forehead were as hot as fire, while the left side of his face bore not a trace of perspiration. I had never seen the like, and, in my astonishment, was about to enter into conversation with him regarding the physiological curiosity, when his neighbor on the left broke in with the remark:

"Then we are the opposites and counterparts of each other, for I perspire only on the left side."

This, too, was the fact. So the pair took seats opposite to each other and shook hands like two men who had just found each his other half.

"Well, this makes an end of natural history!" exclaimed another guest, who hitherto had quietly gazed on this strange performance as though it were a play, and every one who overheard what was said came to look at this novel wonder. "This makes an end of natural history!"

This expression excited me to laughter, and involuntarily I exclaimed:

"No, sir; this is just the beginning of natural history, for nature has many strange caprices even as regards her symmetry."

I then mentioned the case of a man I had known in my boyhood who, Janus-like, had two totally different faces—on one side laughing, on the other crying. Naturally I dreaded this strange double face, with one side smooth, plump and comely, like a girl's cheek, while the other was all scarred by the small-pox. This side of the face denoted churlishness; and, while the other side wore a smile, this boded mischief. In this instance disease had been unsymmetrical.

An Indian's Stoicism.

From a London (Canada) paper we copy the following account of the flogging of an Indian with the cat-o'-nine-tails; Doxtater was brought out. He is a muscular, heavy-set Indian, and had a laugh on his face. His back was bared, his wrists were strapped to the upper parts of the arm of the triangle, and his knees and ankles to the lower part, throwing his back out. The only sign of nervousness manifested was a quick look at the cat-o'-nine-tails which was in the hand of a stout expert, who had been a drummer in the Twenty-third British regulars. The cat had a short handle and nine thongs of hard, heavy cord a yard long, with nine knots in each. At the command of the Sheriff the cat was flourished around the whipper's head with a quick jerk, whistled through the air and fell with a [illegible] thud over the left shoulder-blade, [illegible] large blue marks. At the third the flesh was cut open, but the prisoner's muscles never quivered, though, of sixty spectators, fully half of them sickened and turned away. Twenty-five lashes given with all the power of a strong man in one place caused the flesh to creep up in purple welts, which were cut transversely into small squares, out of which the blood trickled. But few of the crowd could look at it throughout. The Indian never flinched. and after the last blow, which was given with extra vigor, the Sheriff cried, "Enough," and Doxtater laughed and said:

"Bully for Injun."

When he was released the porter asked him how he felt. He answered, "Feel him back very much." The Indian asked the whipper for a "chaw baccer," and grabbed a pipe out of the turnkey's mouth and went to smoke, but it was taken from him. The wounds were washed with salt and water to prevent inflammation, and that made Josiah wince worse than the flogging.

Died from Over-Study.

A New York paper tells the sad story of a girl of 20—the youngest of a family of six daughters in that city—who has just died from over-study. A year ago she graduated from Mt. Holyoke Seminary, where she had been three years. Leaving the institution she took up the study of natural philosophy, astronomy and history, and passed, not long since, an excellent examination for the position of teacher in one of the public schools. But, while directing the study of others, she still pursued her own, and took up painting in water-colors, for her own recreation. When the summer vacation began she went to Lake George to spend it with a sister, taking her books and paints with her. The tragic, but not unnatural, sequel is now recorded. The poor abused nerves could at last no longer perform their functions. The muscles refused to act, and the power of articulation left her, and she died in utter agony, the victim of a passion for work and study.—Boston Post.

A REMARKABLE freak of lightning is recorded in a French newspaper. A farm laborer, running for shelter, was suddenly thrown to the ground, the fork he carried on his shoulder being wrenched from his grasp and carried through the air a distance of fifty or sixty yards. The prongs were bent and twisted, with well-nigh mathematical accuracy, into the shape of corkscrews, the steel being burnt, and formed, on its exterior surface, into small laminæ, which emitted a slightly sulphurous odor. The laborer escaped without injury.

ALL SORTS.

THE deepest spot in the Hudson river is opposite West Point, where the water is 216 feet deep.

HERR KRUPP, the cannon king, returns a larger income than any of the Emperor William's subject, save the Rothschilds.

THE Texas Pacific railroad is trying to raise money by a mortgage of $20,000 per mile on its finished road to extend it to Guaymas.

MR. GLADSTONE thinks that the settlement of the Alabama claims by arbitration will rank in history with the abolition of the slave trade.

THERE are two things that will make us happy in this life, if we attend to them. The first is never to vex ourselves about what we cannot help; and the second never to vex ourselves about what we can help.

THE percentage of university students to the population is larger in Scotland than elsewhere, being one in 800. In the German empire the proportion of university students to population is one in 1,600; in England, one to about 4,500.

A RUSSIAN Government official sent from St. Petersburg to report on a miraculous hot spring at Shalazgori was almost killed by the infuriated villagers because he declared the spring not to be holy. Four of his assailants have been sent to prison.

THE total amount of anthracite coal mined this year, down to the middle of the current month, is 60 per cent. larger than a year ago at the same date, and in spite of a remarkable activity in iron it is not strange that rumors are afloat that the great companies will shortly suspend production.

AFTER three medical celebrities had gone from the bedside of the French General X., the General rang for his man servant: "Well, Jacques, you showed these gentlemen out; what did they say?" "Ah! General, they seemed to differ with each other; the big, fat one said that they must have a little patience, and at the autopsy—whatever that may be—they would find out what the matter was."

A GIRL at Hopkinton, Vt., was a cripple from her birth until lately. The story of her cure, as her family tells it, is that, while at dinner, a deadly pallor and an expression of agony were observed upon her face, and she complained of a sudden, terrible pain in her diseased leg simultaneously with the appearance of a strange, shadowy form by her side. From that hour she began to recover, and she is now comparatively well.

MR. PENDERS, the Director of one of the largest submarine-cable companies, has communicated to the members of the International Telegraphic Conference, held at London, the information that the length of the terrestrial telegraph lines of the world is about 1,250,000 miles, that the total cost of them was over $100,000,000, and that the length of all the submarine cables is 60,000 miles, representing a capital of $125,000,000.

SIXTEEN years ago a woman at Bridgeport, Ct., was accused by her neighbor of stealing his watch, and her house was searched. There was no evidence against her, nor was she able to give satisfactory proof of her innocence. She grieved constantly over the matter, and of late, as she grew old and decrepit, she feared that she would die without being able to clear herself of the disgrace. But the watch has now been turned up by a plow in a field where the careless owner had originally lost it.

A GOOD story comes from Woodstock, Me. A grocer there owns a cow with horns of inferior length. Last week some mischievous boys obtained from the tannery a pair of cast-off horns, which, with a bit of cement, they nicely fitted over the horns of the cow and left her to go home at milking time, which she did. Her owner not only failed to recognize her, but actually used force to expel her from the premises. The village was searched in vain for the missing animal, and an advertisement was inserted in the local paper. Day after day the stray cow was turned away, until, at last, refusing to obey the verbal order, the victim of an innocent joke seized her by the horns, which came off, and in the intruder he recognized his own property, for the loss of which he had so sadly mourned.

England's New Steel Ships of War.

Three steel-clad ships are, it seems, at this moment building in the Government yards at Portsmouth, Pembroke and Chatham. What their cost will ultimately be when completed it is too early to make even a rough guess; but the two larger ones, to be named the Majestic and Colossus, are not likely, so far as we at present know of the expensive material of which they are to be composed, to be finished and fitted for sea for less than $1,000,000 apiece. The least of the three, the Conqueror, whose lines have been laid down at Chatham, is to be some 2,000 tons less than her big sisters, but they are all to be built on the model of the Inflexible turret-ship, and not of the old broadside pattern, which seems, for some reason or other, to have been abandoned for some time past. The Majestic and Colossus are to measure 9,100 tons, and will, therefore, be considerably smaller than the Inflexible; but, as their armor will be of steel, there is no necessity for carrying so much of it. The Inflexible turret-ship carried twenty-four-inch armored plates on her turrets, while it is anticipated that the same amount of protection will be afforded to the Colossus and her sister by sixteen inches of steel. Moreover, steel will be employed in building the ships as well as in perfecting them; and in this way it will be possible to construct them upon finer lines, while still remaining as strong as broader craft of iron. A greater speed will also result from this innovation; and the Majestic and the Colossus, provided with engines of 6,000-horse power, will doubtless realize a speed of sixteen miles an hour under favorable circumstances. Like the Inflexible, and the Ajax, and Agamemnon, our new steel-clads are not to have their revolving turrets in a line with the ship, as in the case with the Thunderer and earlier vessels of that type; but the two structures will be placed diagonally across the deck, so that all the guns can be fired right ahead of dead astern.—London Times.

How Bessemer Learned.

It will be of interest to the reader to learn that, according to Bessemer's statement, his knowledge of iron metallurgy was at that time very limited, so that he had to get up the whole of the subject. He is now, however, of opinion that his ignorance proved of great advantage to him, as he had very little to unlearn, and could thus approach the subject free from the bias inseparable from those who have followed a beaten track and vainly endeavor to get out of the rut. These words of Bessemer require, however, to be carefully considered. He does not imply that a state of ignorance would enable him to invent, as many schemers imagine, who put forth crude ideas which are crushed by practical men. He set to work to learn the whole business thoroughly, first from books and then in the foundries. Still it will be seen that here was a man well on in the world, who set himself to hard learning, while many of us think that we can do very well without learning at all, or without learning any more. To the public, who thus get details at first hand, it is also of interest to know that, having built a small experimental iron works in St. Pancras, and begun his preliminary trials, months rolled on, and he spared neither labor nor money, but made failure after failure. To the wise man, however, failure is a way of learning, and failures are carefully recorded, first, because they show us the way how to save our time by not trying the failure over again; secondly, because they show us, through narrowing the field, in what way we must try; and, thirdly, because they in themselves often suggest some further experiment. Bessemer, indeed, says that during this long time of failure he was accumulating many important facts which could not but ultimately be of value to him.—London Society.

A Singular Cat Story.

A queer cat story comes from Preston, Ct. A farmer had been troubled with rats for some time, and finally purchased a cat that was recommended as a good mouser. The cat sustained its reputation, and rats were soon unknown in the house, and the farmer congratulated himself greatly. His dreams of freedom were dispelled one day, however, by the cries of the servant girl, who said that on going down cellar where the cat was indulging in his noonday repast she saw a large rat eating out of the same dish with the cat, and solemnly averred that when she went toward them the rat chased her and made her run up-stairs. The cat, she said, seemed to enjoy his company, and appeared as if charmed by the rat, just as a snake charms a bird. The farmer would not credit the story until he saw the same thing a day or two afterward. He allowed the strange friendship to exist for several days, the rat coming regularly to partake of meals with the cat. Finally the farmer decided to put an end to the singular friendship, and taking a gun went to the cellar. No sooner, however, had he fired at and missed it than the cat jumped upon the rat and killed it. Now the farmer wants to know why the cat did not kill the rat before.

Manufactured Jellies.

The jelly that is manufactured in Boston is nearly all made of apples, and sells at about 14 cents per pound. Apples now form the base of an endless number of jellies, such as currant, raspberry, peach, pineapple, etc., which are made by simply adding extracts to the apple-jelly; and so perfect is the imposition that the great majority of consumers are deceived by it, or, in other words, cannot tell it from the jelly made from the fruit with which this is only flavored. It comes much cheaper than the real article. Real currant jelly, for instance, costs somewhere about 28 cents per pound. The latter is made to some extent, and is sold by grocers who cater to the highest class of family and hotel trade.—New England Grocer.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$6 25	@$10 25
HOGS	3 50	@ 4 00
COTTON	12¼	@ 12½
FLOUR—Superfine	3 75	@ 4 10
WHEAT—No. 2	1 02½	@ 1 12
CORN—Western Mixed	46	@ 48
OATS—Mixed	32	@ 34
RYE—Western	64	@ 65
PORK—Mess	8 90	@ 9 10
LARD	6	@ 6¼
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 65	@ 5 25
Cows and Heifers	2 25	@ 3 75
Medium to Fair	3 90	@ 4 25
HOGS	3 15	@ 3 75
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex.	4 50	@ 5 50
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	4 00	@ 4 75
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	86	@ 89
No. 3 Spring	83	@ 85
CORN—No. 2	33	@ 34
OATS—No. 2	23	@ 24
RYE—No. 2	49	@ 50
BARLEY—No. 2	76	@ 80
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	17	@ 19
EGGS—Fresh	11	@ 12
PORK—Mess	8 40	@ 8 50
LARD	5½	@ 5⅝
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	98	@ 1 00
No. 2	89	@ 90
CORN—No. 2	33	@ 34
OATS—No. 2	23	@ 24
RYE—No. 1	50	@ 51
BARLEY—No. 2	64	@ 65
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red Fall	94	@ 96
CORN—Mixed	31	@ 32
OATS—No. 2	23	@ 24
RYE	46	@ 47
PORK—Mess	8 25	@ 8 50
LARD	5½	@ 5⅝
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT	90	@ 95½
CORN	37	@ 38
OATS	23	@ 28
RYE	54	@ 55
PORK—Mess	8 25	@ 8 50
LARD	5½	@ 5⅝
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—Amber Michigan	99	@ 1 00
No. 2 Red	99	@ 1 00
CORN—No. 2	36	@ 37
OATS—No. 2	23	@ 24
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice	4 75	@ 6 25
WHEAT—No. 1 White	98	@ 99
No. 1 Amber	97	@ 98
CORN—No. 1	39	@ 40
OATS—Mixed	24	@ 25
BARLEY (per cental)	1 05	@ 1 35
PORK—Mess	9 75	@10 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	5 00	@ 5 25
Fair	4 00	@ 4 75
Common	3 25	@ 3 75
HOGS	2 50	@ 3 25
SHEEP	3 00	@ 4 00

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED.
ROB. J. LOWRY. | Editors.

SHERMAN'S PET BANK.

And the Peculiar Financial Operations in Connection Therewith.

[New York Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.]

That the First National Bank of New York is John Sherman's pet bank, was shown by his recent extension of time on a check drawn on the bank for $4,000,000 by Acting Secretary Gilfillan, while Sherman was off junketing and speech-making recently. Mr. Gilfillan, who is a business man, wanted $4,000,000 for the use of the Government, and, very naturally, he drew a check on the bank that owed the Government the most money. If Sherman had not gone out of his way to grant the extension, the First National Bank would have had to pay up promptly, just as the other members of the Syndicate did.

The reason assigned by Sherman for granting this favor to his pet bank is that, being the last to subscribe, that bank should be the last to pay. As a matter of fact, all the banks subscribed on the same day, within a few hours of one another. In other words, Mr. Sherman permits the First National Bank to profit three-quarters of one per cent. on $40,000,000 because it was about three hours behind other banks in subscribing to the loan. There is no reason for his extending the time for the First National Bank to pay up that would not justly apply to other members of the Syndicate; and the opinion is freely expressed in Wall street that the First National Bank has been made to share its profits with Mr. Sherman's friends. A big slice of the profits went to defray Republican expenses of the pending canvass in Ohio. It is freely asserted that a member of the Ohio State Republican Committee went to all the Syndicate banks and substantially demanded a share of their profits to help bolster up Hayes. At least one-half of the banks, however, refused to pay a cent. The officials applied to said promptly: "I've got no interest in the Ohio election. I would just as soon see Ewing elected as Foster. I don't care a fig about either one, and I won't subscribe a cent."

There is much dissatisfaction among national-bank officers and other holders of call bonds at Sherman's preference of the First National Bank as a purchaser of 4-per-cent. bonds. After his circular, promising an opportunity to holders of 10-40s to exchange them advantageously for 4 per cents., his sudden dicker with the Syndicate, and his preference of the First National Bank to the detriment of more than 2,000 other banks is considered as influenced by motives somewhat peculiar. An officer of one of our banks said this evening:

"Sherman gave all of us cause for complaint when he gave an extra commission to banks that made speculative subscriptions. That was a poor encouragement to banks that were acting prudently. When the First National Bank wanted to realize on those bonds, they got the price down to ½ per cent. premium, with ½ per cent. of earned interest. Since they got the extension from Sherman they put the bonds up to ¾ and ½ per cent., showing the value to them of being relieved from the payment of their debt to the Government. Instead of permitting the First National Bank to play fast and loose with the Government, Sherman ought to have kept faith with the other banks, and allowed them to come in and get some of the 4 per cents. There would then have been no need of granting an extension to any bank; and when the Government wanted its money it would have got it. As for Mr. Gilfillan, he would not take any part in Sherman's scheme to favor the First National Bank. I guess he would rather be kicked out of there than not. He is not afraid of Sherman, and evidently did not understand Sherman's plan to favor the First National Bank, or he would not have drawn that $4,000,000 check.

"There is no doubt that if Sherman had not stepped in the First National Bank would have been in a tight place. They would have been obliged to offer their bonds, and must have broken down the market. This would have been disastrous. One peculiar feature of it is that if the First National Bank had come to grief by its speculation in 4 per cents. its depositors would have lost everything, because the Government is a preferred creditor. That sort of gambling in banking should be prohibited by law. It is singular that the Government, having charge of our national banks, should permit such enormous operations by small banks like the First National Bank, knowing that if the speculation failed the result would be so disastrous. Sherman has been so partial to the First National Bank in the matter that it is common talk in the street. The attempt to make capital for the Ohio campaign fund out of the Syndicate banks is also well known. Mr. Sherman's explanation of his reason for giving an extension to the First National Bank will not bear investigation by those who have watched the course of events. He has, at least, narrated the facts in such a way as to deceive the public."

"Have you any positive reason to know that politics have been brought to bear in the placing of this 4-per-cent. loan by Secretary Sherman?"

"Only this: Just before the announcement was made that an extension of time had been granted by Secretary Sherman to subscribing banks to the 4-per-cent. loan, a member of the Ohio Republican State Central Committee called on me, in connection with my bank, for a subscription to the Foster campaign fund in Ohio. I asked why he came to me. He said that Secretary Sherman had directed him to call on Gen. Hillhouse, and that he would give him a list of banks to call on in this city. Gen. Hillhouse had given him the list of those banks which had subscribed to the 4-per-cent. loan, suggesting at the same time that out of their profit they could certainly afford to contribute."

"Was he successful in soliciting contributions?"

"The story is told. You may draw your own inferences."

Fixing Things Beforehand.

Did Mr. John Sherman have reason, eight months ago, to expect that his friends of the First National Bank would find it impossible to pay back into the treasury the millions which he proposed to leave on deposit with them?

In the circular issued by Mr. Sherman on the 1st of August, 1878, the relations of the Government with banks acting as agents of the Government in the sale of 4-per-cent. bonds were clearly defined. That circular gave the banks ninety days in which to turn over the money received for 4 per cents. This was its language:

> As soon as the 4-per-cent. bonds are paid for by certificates of deposit of such public depositories, or otherwise, a call will issue, maturing within ninety days, for the redemption of 6-per-cent. bonds, and the money received for 4-per-cent. bonds will remain on deposit until such call matures.

On the 1st of January, of the present year, Mr. Sherman increased the commission to be allowed to the First National and other depository banks on the bonds for which they might subscribe. This kind act of Mr. Sherman's practically put the whole business of selling the bonds into the hands of the favored banks, chiefly the First National, for it enabled them to undersell the Government itself in disposing of the bonds in small quantities to actual purchasers. At that time, as will be remembered, the daily subscriptions increased in an enormous proportion. Simultaneously with the increase, Mr. Sherman issued another circular, suspending that of Aug. 1, 1878.

This new circular said nothing about ninety days' grace to the banks. In almost so many words it promised the First National Bank, controlled by the old Jay Cooke, McCulloch & Co. ring, that the money derived from the sale of the bonds should remain on deposit as long as Mr. Sherman chose to let it remain. This was the language of the new circular:

> The money received by depository banks on account of subscriptions will remain on deposit with said bank, but subject to the order of the Treasurer of the United States.

Several interesting questions arise: Did John Sherman, in the kindness of his great heart, foresee, eight months ago, that the Jay Cooke financiers would be embarrassed to settle with the Government within the ninety days' limit?

Did the ingenuous financiers of the First National Bank, in the simplicity of their natures, misinterpret the thoughtful act of kindness, and assume that Mr. Sherman meant that they might go on owing the Government thirty or forty millions until the crack of doom?

What would become of the people's money if the Jay Cooke, McCulloch & Co. financiers should fail, as they have been known to do before?

Is the refunding of the 6-per-cent. loan an accomplished fact, as Mr. John Sherman claims in his stump speeches in Ohio and elsewhere?

If so, where is the money, or its equivalent in called bonds, that ought to be in the treasury of the United States?—New York Sun.

The Notions of Mr. Wm. M. Evarts.

The volume of 428 pages, just published from the State Department, under the title of "The State of Labor in Europe: 1878," and consisting of letters on the subject received from Hayes' Consuls, opens with a letter of Mr. Evarts, which covers one-tenth of the report and professes to generalize the facts which it sets forth. The greater part of the Consular letters to be found in the report are brazen illustrations of the stupidity, ignorance and incapacity of the men sent abroad upon official duty by Mr. Wm. M. Evarts; and the spirit that runs through the report, from first to last, is far from being candid or being justified by experience. The toiler is told by these officials, sitting in their easy chairs and drawing large salaries for signing their names, that his condition is of the very worst; that it cannot be bettered, and that the only thing for him to do is to accept it resignedly, and to make the most of the wages he is able to get. Some apology may be made for the Consular correspondence, but there is none possible for Mr. Wm. M. Evarts when he joins in the hue and cry against the working classes of Europe, and actually traces the wrongs and evils under which they suffer to their struggles for industrial and social improvement.

Mr. Wm. M. Evarts tells the workingmen of the United States:

> Under no consideration must we have strikes; under no consideration must our factories lie idle. If our manufacturers cannot run their establishments profitably and pay the prevailing wages, our working people must help them to make profit by consenting to a reduction of wages.

American workingmen are admonished by Mr. Wm. M. Evarts to prepare for a reduction of wages to the basis of the European mechanic and laborer. Here are his very words:

> In the near future the workingman of New York cannot expect twice or thrice the wages of his fellow-worker in Europe, while all other things—food, rent, clothing, etc.—are on an equality; nor can the coal miner of Pennsylvania expect twice the wages of the Northumberland miner, while coal from the Northumberland mines can be landed in New York at less than the price of Pennsylvania coal.

Again Mr. Wm. M. Evarts says:

> The first great truth to be learned by the manufacturers and workingmen is that the days of sudden fortunes and double wages are gone.

Again Mr. Wm. M. Evarts says:

> Let the workingman feel, as he should feel, that the man who employs him, who enables him to feed and clothe his wife and children, is his friend as well as his employer, and that all within and about the workshop are things to be protected, even with life if necessary, instead of being destroyed.

Mr. Wm. M. Evarts is said to be an aspirant for the nomination for Governor of this State, and for the Presidency also. These are his sentiments and opinions concerning the life and labor of the great body of the American people, the men who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow. They are the notions, too, of other Republican leaders. The whole policy of the Republican party is to degrade and impoverish labor; to create aristocratic classes; to ennoble wealth; and to plant deeply in this soil the tastes, habits and institutions of the monarchical system.—New York Sun.

WISCONSIN DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

The Democracy of Wisconsin, in convention assembled, declare the following convictions and principles of their political faith, and cordially invite the co-operation of all good citizens in the endeavor to establish them as guides for the government of the country:

1. The Democratic party was founded by illustrious statesmen in the early days of the republic to settle the forms and customs calculated to secure self-government to the people and the largest measure of political liberty and equality to every citizen, regardless of birth, rank or wealth, and in express and unfailing antagonism to all those politicians, by whatever party name designated, who assent and support the aristocratic doctrine of centralization of political power in the hands of a few for the government of the many, and it maintains against adversaries now, as heretofore, the right of free citizens to local self-government.

2. To secure and perpetuate the blessings of such liberty and equality, our system of government was formed; that in that system the National Government is an indissoluble union; that within the limit of powers delegated by the constitution and its amendments the National Government is supreme; that all powers not thereby delegated to the United States nor prohibited to the States are reserved to the States respectively or to the people; and that the preservation of the just powers of the Federal Union and the rights of the States, as vital parts of one harmonious whole, is essential to the protection of liberty for ourselves and its transmission to our posterity.

3. The Government of the Union has proved itself strong enough to cope with and overthrow the most powerful attempt at disruption by force which can be aimed against it. The danger to democratic liberty and self-government from centralized power and oppression, shown by all history to be the most fatal, has yet to be encountered, and we charge upon the leaders of the Republican party the responsibility for the most perilous steps toward that end. They have sanctioned the use of the military to overawe elections and control elections; they have defended flagrant outrages in the counting of votes by illegal Returning Boards; they have upheld and supported fraudulent State Governments by military power; they have established a horde of infamous partisan officials at the polls in divers cities, chiefly in the Northern States, at the expense of the national treasury, with power to imprison free citizens, their opponents, without warrant, in order to intimidate electors and control elections; they have, by treasonable conspiracy, defeated the popular voice in the election of a President, and placed in the Executive office a defeated candidate; and they have, by forcing him to the unjustifiable exercise of the veto power, defeated the will of the people expressed by decisive majorities in the houses of Congress in an effort to secure the freedom of the ballot-box from interference by the central power; while, by various acts at different times, they have unreasonably multiplied the number of Federal officials, and unjustifiably increased and concentrated political power in their hands and imposed grievous burdens on the people.

4. That the inauguration of Rutherford B. Hayes into the Presidential office, to which Samuel J. Tilden was constitutionally elected, was the highest crime ever successfully perpetrated against the spirit of the institutions of our republican liberty, destructive of confidence in free suffrage, imminently dangerous to the life of the nation, and shocking to all moral sense; and we solemnly declare that, as that crime has never been condoned, so it shall never be forgotten, and that the same spirit of patriotism which forbore the contest upon the first offense will resist and punish any attempt at the repetition.

5. The Democracy of Wisconsin denounce and condemn whatever of intimidation, violence, or fraud has been practiced by lawless and unscrupulous partisans on either side, and wherever done; they also stigmatize as wicked, atrocious, and demanding summary and condign punishment all deeds of violence on political adversaries. They would, however, for all such, pursue the remedies given by law, and they call upon the authorities of the States and localities where any such offenses have been perpetrated to justify the law and unrelentingly prosecute and punish the offenders. But alleged frauds do not warrant political conspirators to decide how a State ought to have cast its vote, or so to declare it by fraudulent count in favor of some candidates and against others on the same ticket, who received the same or a greater vote; nor do occasional deeds of personal violence, though springing from political animosity, authorize usurpation or unjustifiable interference with local government by Federal officials; and, in the turbulence and disorder of some portions of some Southern States we recognize the legitimate and natural fruit of the unlawful carpetbag authority and misrule to which they have been fraudulently subjected by the leaders of the Republican party.

6. The Democratic party is unalterably opposed to the assumption or the payment by the United States of any claims of any character to States or individuals engaged in or supporting the late rebellion against the Union, resulting from or growing out of the injury or destruction of property in war, notwithstanding an enormous amount of such claims was allowed and paid under authority of Congress while in the hands of the Republican party.

7. That as the Democratic party adhered to the financial doctrine which it established when in power, that the constitutional currency of the country and the basis of all other should be gold and silver coin, so we maintain that all national treasury notes and authorized currency should be convertible into the same on demand.

8. That the Democracy does not forget that to the promptness, valor, endurance and noble devotion of the patriotic volunteers of the army and navy in the late war this country is indebted, under Providence, for the salvation of its form of government, and the constitutional liberty and prosperity now enjoyed by all its citizens, and again thankfully acknowledges the debt of national and individual gratitude which is due to the living and dead heroes of the nation, an obligation which increases with years, and which entitles the survivors to receive all the marks of appreciation and honor which a grateful people can properly bestow.

9. That the administration of State affairs ought to be conducted with greater economy, and a greater effort made to diminish the burden of taxes; that all official salaries and fees and all expenditures for State, charitable, educational and penal institutions, raised to meet the necessities of high-priced times, must now be correspondingly reduced, and all useless boards and commissions abolished; and that the candidates of this convention pledge their best endeavors to pursue a course of public retrenchment in public expenditures.

10. We should protect our naturalized citizens as we do our native-born in every part of the civilized world, and we should resist all improper claims upon them by Governments to which they no longer owe allegiance.

11. That as the Democratic party, being founded on those principles which best support the liberty and welfare of the citizen, has hitherto survived all former adversaries, so, by faithful adherence to its time-honored doctrines and the selection of honest and competent men for public affairs, it looks forward with abiding confidence to its final and complete triumph over all who now oppose those principles.

How Sherman's Speeches Are Distributed.

The official envelopes of all the departments at Washington have a printed notice on the front forbidding their use for any private purpose. The notice is in the following words, with the name of each particular office inserted, in lieu of "Treasurer of the United States:"

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.
To be returned to
TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES
If not delivered in ten days.
Official Business.

Any person using this envelope to avoid the payment of postage on private matter of any kind will be subject to a fine of $300.

Thousands of copies of John Sherman's partisan speeches have been circulated in these envelopes all over the country in direct violation of law, for which the sender might be prosecuted. When the head of the department thus openly prostitutes a public trust to a personal object, and makes his subordinates participants in the offense, it is easy to see what effect such an example must have on the clerks, and what the state of discipline must be under him.

This is only an illustration of the practices at Washington, where the whole public service is used to advance partisan and personal interests, and where hypocrisy is added to the corruption that Grant bequeathed as a legacy to his successor.

Pillage Must Cease.

It has been said that since the accession of the Democratic party to power in both houses of Congress the lobby has disappeared. This fact speaks louder than platforms or speeches. The people know that it means smaller appropriations and lighter taxes. The ruthless application of the knife to executive estimates, and the large reduction of expenditures made by the lower house in the Forty-fourth Congress, had much to do with the election of Tilden and Hendricks in 1876. This, with the economical administration of Gov. Tilden in New York and his war upon the rings, undoubtedly produced the great majority against Hayes and Wheeler which was given, and was falsified in the interest of further corruption and extravagance. Mr. Blaine, Mr. Sherman, the third-termers, and the fraudulent administration may make speeches, and more speeches, and do what they will to turn the public mind off upon other questions, but the real issue is this of honest and economical government. The people are determined to stop the plundering and the squandering, to reduce their taxes, and pay for nothing but the support of their Governments. They know that extravagance is the parent of every other evil, and that a people who permit the earnings of industry to be taken and enjoyed by their rulers, either with or without the forms of law, are mere slaves. The political history of the last few years shows that this great truth has leavened the whole public mind. The real struggle now is for the emancipation from corrupt combinations, rings, and corporations, which, in ways too numerous to mention, prey upon the people and eat out their substance.

The campaign in Pennsylvania shows perhaps more clearly than any other the fact that the popular apprehension is fully alive to these issues. There reform seemed to be hopeless. In the State and in the chief cities, rings of political criminals, growing visibly rich from public plunder, controlled everything, and their despotic rule was scarcely questioned. The treasury ring embezzled millions, with but a feeble popular protest, which the leaders of both parties took care should find no effectual expression. The Pennsylvania railroad debauched and used the Legislature, and, in collusion with the rings, owned and directed the State administration.

But they overdid the business. The recent attempt to filch $4,000,000 from the Commonwealth by bribing the Legislature to give it away was too startling. Men began to figure up how much it was proposed to steal from them individually, or from their counties, by this single tremendous grab. Had this operation been successful, Lancaster county, for instance, would have been required to pay up, as her share of the ring's booty, $121,000; York, $76,000; Chester, $77,000; Franklin, $45,000; Berks, $100,000, and so on through the list. Decent householders over there have begun to cipher—it is high time—and while they are about it they propose to find out to what extent they are robbed by the unconstitutional freight discrimination against them by this same Pennsylvania railroad, which they created and endowed, not to be their master but their servant.

When they get this sum done, there will be a revolution in the old Commonwealth, and the Republican ring, which openly sustains these iniquities, refuses to let its convention condemn the four million steal, and forces it to declare against "honest men in office," will be broken into fragments. The people are evidently determined that pillage must cease.—New York Sun.

Mr. Moody at Home.

Mr. Moody is described as being at his very best at Northfield, Mass. One of his neighbors says of him: "I have seen him at a great many large places, but I come here to this little town, where he knows everybody and takes an interest in everybody, to be more thoroughly charmed with him then ever before. People like to laugh; Mr. Moody knows it, and has the tact to put the audience in good humor to commence with." "That is very good singing for one congregation," he said at a meeting the other day at the close of the first verse of "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah," "but there are a good many different congregations here, and we ought to sing better than that. All sing now. Mrs. Davis, take that fan away from your mouth! Mr. Smith, I didn't hear your voice! Uncle Charles, you can sing! Here, mother, here is the place, you sing! Now try again. I'll keep watch and see if there are any who don't sing."

The Rush to the West.

The figures that show the movement of population to the new farming lands in the West are almost startling. During the year that closed with last month not less than 16,000,000 acres of Government lands were taken up by homestead entries alone, and fully 14,000,000 acres of new lands were sold to settlers. It is estimated that 500,000 people settled upon the new lands in 1878, and the number for the present year promises to be even greater.—Washington (D. C.) Post.

THE production of butter and cheese in this country is said to be four times greater in value than the total yield of our gold and silver mines.

THE REDEMPTION BUREAU.

A Busy Division of the United States Treasury—How Old Bills Are Canceled—The Dead Letters.

Very few people, says a Washington correspondent of the New York Graphic, have an idea of the amount of business transacted by what is known as the redemption division of the United States treasury. It is this division which has charge of the work of redeeming and reissuing the mutilated or worn-out notes of national banks, and is under the very able superintendence of Mr. E. O. Graves, of New York. The division is supported by the national banks, each bank being assessed upon its circulation to pay the expense. When a bank finds itself in possession of worn or mutilated currency, it packs it up and sends it to the redemption division, where it is counted, examined and sorted, and is redeemed by an equal amount of new or fit notes for circulation. During the fiscal year of 1878 there were sent in for redemption $213,000,000 of national-bank notes out of the entire national-bank circulation, which, in that year, was $324,000,000. But, in October last, Secretary Sherman issued an order that banks sending money to the treasury to be redeemed must pay the express charges in advance, and this had the effect of reducing very much the amount of money sent in for redemption, so that during the fiscal year of 1879 just closed the amount received was only $157,000,000, which is the smallest for many years. Formerly the express charges were paid by the division and assessed upon the banks according to the amount of their circulation redeemed. This order of Secretary Sherman has caused national-bank notes to remain in circulation about one-third longer than usual. In the fiscal year of 1878 the actual number of notes redeemed was about 23,000,000, while in the fiscal year of 1879 the number was 18,000,000. The reason why there is so much difference in the value and the number of notes redeemed, when comparing the two years, is that when banks did not have to pay the express charges they sent many bills of large denominations, but since Secretary Sherman's order they have stopped sending large bills, because the express charges are reckoned upon the value of a package, and not upon its weight, so that it costs just as much to send a $1,000 bill as it does to send 1,000 $1 bills. There are more $5 bills sent for redemption than any other denomination. This is because, of course, that in the general exchange of money more fives are used, and the largest issues are made of this denomination. The fifties redeemed present the largest value, and there is about one fifty presented to nine fives.

Of the $157,000,000 received for redemption last year, only $40,000,000 was found to be totally unfit for circulation and was destroyed. The remainder was reissued.

Of the $157,000,000 sent in, $3,016 was found to be counterfeit, which is an exceedingly small proportion, and shows that the secret-service system is doing great good in suppressing counterfeits.

It is generally believed that banking people are very careful and accurate in handling money and doing business, but inquiry at the dead-letter office of the Postoffice Department will show that a great proportion of the misdirected letters containing valuable papers received there are from banks, and in the $157,000,000 received at the redemption division last year the girls who count the money found errors amounting to $32,054.77. The treasury "countesses" are proverbial for their accuracy in counting and their aptness in detecting counterfeits. Gen. Spinner used to say that women handle money under all circumstances better than men. But it is due to the banks to say that nearly 70 per cent. of the errors they made last year were against them. Out of the $32,054.77 errors, $22,148.42 were "overs," and only $9,906.35 were "shorts," to use the slang of the counting-room.

The circulation of national banks is not at all evenly distributed through the country, but four-fifths of it is in the Eastern States. The Boston banks alone have over 12 per cent. of the entire circulation of the country. The amount of the circulation of Boston national banks during the last fiscal year was $28,325,000, while the circulation of the New York banks was but $22,086,000, and of the Chicago banks but $565,000. And it is a peculiar circumstance that, of the $28,000,000 of Boston circulation, nearly $25,000,000 passed through the redemption division last year. This is a phenomenon difficult to explain, but it is a fact that Boston money wears out faster than that of any other locality.

Life in the Clouds.

Few people, even among those who have visited this wonderful region, realize the magnitude of our mountains and the altitude of our peaks. With the exception, perhaps, of one or two isolated spots in Colorado, mining, we believe, has never, in this country, been carried on at such a height above the sea as in Lake district. Virginia City was for a long time the loftiest mining camp of prominence on the coast. When the Comstock began to winter at 6,800 feet, they thought they were up in the world, sure enough. Finally came Bodie with its 8,500 feet, and that threw Virginia in the shade. It was reserved for Lake to walk off with the persimmon in the form of altitude. The office in which the Herald is printed is 10,200 feet above the level of the sea. The immense croppings of the Mammoth mill are 11,000 feet, while the summit of Mineral hill, near the Headlight and Monte Cristo shafts, is 11,700 feet above the sea level. The latter is 1,300 feet above the surface of Lake Mary by actual survey. When we think of these enormous heights, and compare them for instance with the famous Mount Washington, of New England, the latter seems little more than a mole-hill. And what a difference, too, in the temperature. Here, though we have plenty of snow in winter, yet at 10,000 feet elevation we live all the year round in frail board houses, lined with muslin only and papered, while on Mount Washington, 6,000 feet high, no one ever lives in winter but United States meteorologists, and they are quartered in a stone hut with walls three feet thick, lined with felt and heated with massive stoves. In this den they stay without ever poking their noses out of the doors until the coming spring relieves them. Though within the region of perpetual snow, we spend our winters comfortably, and, for instance, last winter work was hardly suspended for a day.—Mammoth City (Nev.) Herald.

INDIANA ITEMS.

MRS. O. P. MORTON and her son Oliver have gone to New Haven to remain during the winter. The son will attend Yale College.

JAMES MCLAUGHLIN, of Coal Creek, recently killed a rattlesnake near that place five feet and four inches long and having thirteen rattles.

AUSTIN M. PURTY, who twice represented Parke and Putnam counties in the Legislature, died a few days ago at his home in Fremont county, Col.

A NEW shoe-peg factory will be started at Richmond in a few weeks. It already has orders for 100,000 bushels of pegs, to be delivered inside of a year.

OLIVER H. MILLER, of Rising Sun, whose term of office expires next month, has held the office of County Clerk and Auditor alternately and consecutively for twenty years.

JOHN C. HUCKLEBERRY, aged 70 years, a native of Clark county, is dead. He served in the Black Hawk war in 1832-3, was several time a member of the Indiana Legislature, Clerk of the House in 1835-6, and from 1838 to 1841 publisher of the Southern Indianian, a Democratic paper at Charlestown. He was also Sheriff of Clark county two years.

REV. FATHER CHASSE, Chaplain of St. Mary's of the Woods, died a few days ago. He was a native of Brittany, France, and was 63 years of age. He came to this country and settled at Vincennes many years ago, and was a teacher in St. Gabriel's College. When this institution was closed he was appointed chaplain of the Orphan Asylum at Vincennes. He afterwards was appointed priest of St. Simon's church, at Washington, Ind. He was also connected with St. Joseph's church, Terre Haute. He succeeded the late Father Earle at St. Mary's in the Woods in 1872.

Colored Methodists.

The fourth annual conference of the A. M. E. Churches of Indiana and Michigan was held last week at the church in Ypsilanti, Mich. Following are the appointments made by Bishop Shorter before adjournment:

PARISH APPOINTMENTS.
Richmond, Ind.—L. D. Crosby.
Indianapolis, Ind.—Bethel, to be supplied.
Indianapolis, Ind.—Allen Chapel, R. Titus.
Detroit, Mich.—Bethel Church, D. P. Roberts.
Detroit, Mich.—Ebenezer Church, J. Simpson.
Evansville, Ind.—M. Lewis.
Terre Haute, Ind.—J. Mitchem.
New Albany, Ind.—H. H. Thompson.
Vincennes, Ind.—John Ferguson.
Ypsilanti, Mich.—Jesse Bass.
Crawfordsville, Ind.—Jason Bundy.
Jeffersonville, Ind.—H. B. Gordon.
CIRCUIT APPOINTMENTS.
Mount Vernon, Ind.—M. Coleman.
Charleston, Ind.—I. B. Channers.
Knightstown, Ind.—H. Harper.
Mitchell, Ind.—A. J. Ferguson.
New Gordon, Ind.—John Myers.
Cambridge City, Ind.—G. B. Pope.
Lafayette, Ind.—I. Buren.
Logansport, Ind.—J. M. Smith.
Kalamazoo, Mich.—R. Jeffries.
Franklin, Ind.—John Jordan.
Madison, Ind.—D. A. Johnson.
Rockville, Ind.—W. S. Langford.
Brownsville, Ind.—G. W. Benson.
Ann Arbor, Mich.—H. H. Wilson.
St. Joseph, Mich.—L. Radcliffe.
Battle Creek, Mich.—G. H. Alexander.
Princeton, Ind.—A. H. Knight.
Greencastle, Ind.— —— Clay.
South Bend, Ind.—J. W. Harper.
Saginaw, Mich.—G. W. Gilmore.
Bloomington, Ind.—A. A. Burley.
MISSION APPOINTMENTS.
Corydon, Ind.— —— Cole.
Fort Wayne, Ind.— —— McDaniels.
Evansville, Ind.—Mission, T. E. Wilson.
Indianapolis, Ind.—Mission, — Hutchinson.
Marion, Ind.—P. O. Tuttul.
Grand Rapids, Mich.—To be supplied.

Pioneers at the State Fair.

The State Pioneer Association of Indiana has issued the following circular to the pioneers of Indiana:

To enable the pioneers and old settlers of Indiana to avail themselves of the favorable action of the railroad companies, who propose to grant free transportation to and from the convention, to be held in connection with the State fair, Oct. 1, 1879, a meeting is hereby called of the county Pioneer and Old Settlers' Associations, in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, at the Court House in each and every county in the State, at 10 o'clock on Wednesday, the 10th day of September, 1879, to make preparation by selecting or reappointing a President, Secretary and an Executive Committee of one or more members in each township, to see that their aged friends are notified and have opportunity to apply for the favorable terms proposed.

Where no county society exists the attention of our early settlers is earnestly invited to this matter, as the conditions announced and embodied in blank certificates must be exactly fulfilled, and no possible complaint will compensate for neglect of duty. Blanks of the following form will be sent to each County Clerk before time for the county meeting:

STATEMENT AND CERTIFICATE

To entitle pioneers and old settlers to free transportation on railroads to annual convention and admission to State fair.

(Residence)....................Ind............1879.

I am now seventy......years of age; have lived in Indiana forty......years, and desire to attend the Pioneer State Convention at the State Fair of 1879.

(Signature of applicant)........................

The above statement is correct. ....Pres't. of......County Pioneer Old Settlers Association.

Attest....................Sec'y.

Good on.........R. R., Sept. 29 to Oct. 4, 1879.

CERTIFICATE

Of County Clerk or other county officer having a seal

....................County, Ind., 1879.

The foregoing signatures of President and Secretary of............County Pioneer or Old Settlers' Association are authentic. ....C. C. C.

[Affix seal.]

There must be a county society, with President and Secretary, to attest the signature and postoffice address of applicant; the signatures of said President and Secretary to be authenticated by signature and seal of Clerk of Circuit Court or other county officer having a seal to secure the benefits offered of free transportation and admission to the State Fair.

This offers a rare enjoyment to the fathers and mothers of our State who so grandly planned and improved the noble heritage we now hold.

The attention of county papers is invited to the foregoing notice. As it will be of interest to many of their readers, they are respectfully solicited to publish it in full for the benefit of the pioneers of Indiana. By order of CHARLES H. TEST, President.

JOHN COLLETT, Secretary I. P. A.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, SEP. 18, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

Jay Gould has donated $10,000 in cash to the Memphis sufferers.

◆

Maine has elected the entire republican ticket.—Republican.

As she has done for twenty years, with one exception.

◆

Republicans sing praises to California.—Republican.

Yes, give thanks that you are only 20,000 in the minority.

◆

The copy of the Warsaw Union received by us last week, was so pale that we were only able to recognize two COURIER editorials without credit. Keep your eye on the eighth commandment, Bro. Zimmerman.

◆

The New York Tammanyites are fighting Tilden over Robinson's shoulder. They propose to kill Tilden politically before he gets into the national convention, and it looks as though they had accomplished their object.

◆

The Fort Wayne daily Sentinel is a first-class evening paper, and the weekly Journal is making rapid strides to the front. Both will be able to do the democracy of old Allen great good, if they can keep from quarreling.

◆

If Auburn is situated in an "obscure corner," as intimated by the Bluffton Times, we are wont to repeat that old inquiry, "whereabouts in h—l" is Bluffton? Swamp Angels from Wells county are not competent to judge as to the beauties of DeKalb's paradise.

◆

What a display of republican roosters there will be after the New York election. Every republican newspaper in the land will claim a great victory, but they will be very careful to not intimate that the democratic party is divided.

◆

On to Richmond! The brigadiers captured! California and Maine have spoken.—Republican.

Do you mean rebel "brigadiers"? How many "Johnnies" did the republican states of Maine and California furnish in the late unpleasantness?

◆

The split in the democratic party in New York will result in the election of a republican governor. The defeat of Robinson the democratic candidate for governor, will result in defeating the nomination of Tilden for president, the only redeeming feature of the Tammany bolt.

◆

Every true democrat will condemn the action of Tammany in withdrawing from the New York democratic convention, however great the grievance might be. It is characteristic of New York leadership, however, and Tilden is no exception to the rule. The "rule or ruin" policy generally ruins.

◆

In the convention that nominated John Kelley for governor of New York, the following counties were represented. Cayuga, Montgomery, Tioga, Erie, Chemung, Albany, Dutchess, Sullivan and Westchester. The delegates represented 100,000 democratic voters, all anti-Tilden. Does that indicate that Tilden is popular in his own state? Certainly not.

◆

The true inwardness of the New York Tammany association crops out in the following extract from the New York Express, concerning the nomination of John Kelley for governor. The Express says:

"He has not sought the office, and does not expect to be elected to it; but he does want to break down now and forever the corrupt and unscrupulous Tilden ring in this state, and to assert the great fundamental principles of municipal self-government in affairs. And this he will accomplish."

◆

The Indiana asylum for feeble-minded children, will be ready to receive pupils on the 1st day of November next. Parents, guardians, or persons having the custody of a child or children of this unfortunate class, deeming themselves unable to pay for the support of such children at the asylum, can get such information as they desire upon the subject by calling upon the county auditor. We only add, that no epileptic; no paralytic; no incurable hycrocephalic; none afflicted with chorea, or St Vitus' dance; none with the least symptoms of insanity; no extreme low case of idiocy, nor any greatly deformed child, will be admitted.

◆

Henri Waterson is very much excited since the New York democratic convention. He weeps and wails for Tilden. Hear him:

"We are willing to take our share of the responsibility for another fight on the old line. If we can not get this, we shall fall in at the tail of the column and work heartily as a private in the ranks under the lead of those who shall make themselves answerable for a different result. But one thing must be made so clear as to be misunderstood by nobody; there must be no divided responsibility. They who lead must lead. They must take their political lives in their hands and abide by the consequences. They must make their bed, and they must lie in it. If they win they will stand vindicated, and will proceed in their glory, not one ray of which shall be dimmed by any work of ours."

Hon. Alex. H. Stephens visited Jeffersonville, Ind., a few days since, and during his stay was interviewed concerning the renomination of Mr. Tilden. In that interview Mr. Stephens said:

"I have been represented as saying that I opposed Mr. Tilden's election and would oppose it again. This was incorrect; I said I had opposed Mr. Tilden's nomination and would oppose it again. I do not think he is a suitable candidate. I have been represented as saying in my opinion Tilden could carry New York. This was an error. I said directly to the contrary; that I did not think he could carry New York."

Mr. Stephens spoke very favorably of Mr. Hendricks, also Mr. Thurman and Mr. Bayard, and closed by saying that Gen. Hancock is "eminently a fit person for the presidency." Hancock is our choice for the second place, the first always reserved for Hendricks.

◆

The Whitley county Commercial advocates the claims of Godlove S. Orth as the republican candidate for governor. Give us a rest, on Godlove. We have had too much of that dose. Give us something that don't require so much sugar-coating and washing down.—Kendallville Standard.

It is easy to judge from the above, which is the better politician of the two, Baker or Myers. The mind of the latter is evidently not clear as to the innocence of Orth, and he frankly admits that Godlove would be too much of a dose for the better class of republicans to swallow. The democrats of Indiana would have no objection to the nomination of Orth by the republicans, but there would be considerable objection to his election. If Godlove is willing to be the martyr, trot him out.

◆

We desire to impress upon the minds of the farmers and mechanics of DeKalb county, the importance of giving aid and attention to the fair soon to be held at Waterloo. Every farmer in the county should be interested in the improvement of live stock, and the increased quantity and superior quality of every variety of grain. Farmers and mechanics are equally interested in the improvement of farm machinery, and all should be on hand to discuss the merits of the machinery exhibited, with a view to additional improvements. Careful inspection and continued criticism has produced great changes in machinery, and added greatly to the quality of domestic animals. In order to keep step with the age, annual and semi-annual meetings have become a necessity for the exchange of views as to the various breeds and different kinds of live stock, the best and most profitable kinds of grain, the cultivation of different varieties of fruit, etc., etc. Again we urge the people to turn out, put something on exhibition, and each do his or her part to make a grand display. No pains will be spared, on the part of the management, to make the coming fair a success; let us all lend a helping hand.

◆

The First Convention of the National Liberal Party at Cincinnati—A Bold Platform.

Fort Wayne Sentinel.

The liberal convention called by Bob Ingersoll and others to organize a new political party, met at Cincinnati Saturday, about 200 delegates present. Hon. Elizur Wright took the chair and made an address. A committee on order of business was appointed, and speeches were made by Prof. Toohey, of Boston, Parker Pillsbury and others.

A committee on unfinished business and upon the order of business and the expediency of taking political action was appointed, with Ingersoll as chairman.

Col. Ingersoll offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"That we express the deepest sympathy with D. M. Bennett and family, for the reason that he has been convicted by religious bigotry and ignorant zeal, and has been imprisoned and is now languishing in the cell of a felon, when in truth and fact he has committed no offense whatever against any law of this country."

The convention adopted a long declaration of principles. It styles itself the "National Liberal Party," and proclaims its motive to be "to realize more fully than has ever yet been done, the main object of a government by the people as expressed in the declaration of independence." To secure these purposes more fully "a new party is necessary to administer and reform the national and state governments."

The principles enunciated are, equal and exact justice to all men of every religious and political belief, honest friendship with all nations, and entangling alliances with none; the support of the state governments in all their rights as the most powerful bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies, the preservation of the general government in all its constitutional vigor, the freedom of religion and of the press, of persons under the protection of habeas corpus, and trial by a jury impartially selected. Labor reforms of various kinds are asked for, legislation against tramps condemned; reforms demanded in the currency and in land laws; universal, compulsory, secular education called for; the election of all officers by the people favored, and a repeal of the Sabbath sumptuary and temperance laws.

Our Daily Food.

Adulteration prevails in our daily food. Food is a most important necessity, and it should be wholesome and nutritious. If all articles that are used were as pure and healthful as Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder, we should escape many of the ills of life.

The democracy of New York met at Syracuse on the 10th inst. and nominated Gov. Lucius Robinson for re-election. John Kelley was there at the head of the Tammany delegation, and at first succeeded in having John C. Jacobs nominated by acclamation. Mr. Jacobs declined, a roll-call was ordered for another nomination, pending which Augustus Schell rose, and recited the earnest fidelity of the city democracy at all times in the past, in sunshine and storm, and that under no circumstances would that democracy support Lucius Robinson, though they would the remainder of the ticket that should be nominated, and that their representatives in the convention would retire.

The ballot resulted in the nomination of Robinson. The Tammany delegation, after withdrawing from the regular convention, proceeded to another hall, and after considerable speechmaking placed in nomination John Kelley, for governor. In calling the Tammany convention to order Samuel G. Courtney said; "The representatives of 70,000 voters of New York city and 20,000 voters of Kings county, have met here to vindicate their manhood." He arraigned Governor Robinson as one "owned by the great trickster of cipher alley," (meaning Tilden.) David Dudley Field was chosen chairman. He said "This convention is the assembly of democrats of New York city and other parts of the state, who sympathize with them in their work of the past two days. This delegation, although called the Tammany delegation, yet it had been declared by the state convention the only regular delegation from that city. No democratic ticket had ever been elected or could be elected without the vote of the democrats it represents. What, he asked, have you done? You have been offended by Governor Robinson, and you said so. You said more, that you could not support him for office, and you had a right to say this, and it was your right to say this. What has the majority said to you? It has said that you should have that nomination thrust down your throats. You have taken the only step your manhood could dictate. They have said to you, you shall take that nomination, and none other. It has been said you would not take this step; that within 24 hours you would be throwing up your hats for Governor Robinson. Never, never!

Thus was democratic success and a democratic majority in New York thrown away, all the result of the deep laid schemes of Samuel J. Tilden and his followers on one side, and the bullheadedness of John Kelley and Tammany on the other.

◆

—For first-class job work, come to the COURIER office Good work, good material and low prices guaranteed.

Fast Superseding.

The Unique Perfumes of Dr. Price are fast superseding all others. Their fresh, flowery fragrance is admired by all who use them. For an evening party his Alista Bouquet is captivating; while for the parlor, church or concert, his Pet Rose is the most delightful odor.

◆

Spencerville.

—No church next Sunday.

—Benj. Zimmerman has reorganized a singing school at the M. E. church.

—Rev. T. E. Lancaster preached his farewell sermon at the M. E. church, Sunday evening last.

—H. W. Emanuel, M. D., has returned from Alvarado. He will attend some good medical college this fall.

—Railroad fever prevails. The Celina, Van Wert & State Line is almost despaired of, but a road is proposed to run from Fort Wayne to Butler, via Spencerville.

—G. A. Bishop and wife are at Chicago.

—Prof. D. M. Allen and lady visited here this week. He is engaged in the furniture business at Maysville, and we learn that he will be assisted in the undertaking department by A. Kinsey, of this place.

—The Spencerville silver cornet band has reorganized and is about to purchase new uniforms.

—Commissioner Blair visited Spencerville this week.

—An excellent bridge is being built near the cemetery, about one mile south of town.

—A grand birthday party was given last Friday night at Jos. Spitler's, in honor of Miss Ida.

SCRIBBLER.

Dentistry at Waterloo.

Dr. Johnston, dentist at Waterloo, will fill teeth with the ordinary silver filling for 50 cents; with combination of gold and silver, 75 cents; gold filling as low as one dollar. New teeth on best rubber plate—best, $12.00; those generally used, $10.00; cheaper, $9.00. The doctor has no student and therefore does all the work himself, and makes this reduction so that every one will have their teeth put in good order. 30tf.

PROF. RICE'S NATIONAL MUSIC CHART [illegible] by which beginners, even [illegible] can in a few hours learn to play [illegible] any song or instrument, on the Piano or Organ. Full, thorough, and scientific. [illegible] tion of all music, with full thorough bass, and an infallible key to transposition. A dozen songs on each chart, with the chords under each word, and teaching the fundamental laws of pure harmony. It is well worth $25. Sent, postpaid, for $1. Send for Circulars. JOHN ROSS & CO., General Agents, 312 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.

RUPTURE Can be RELIEVED and generally CURED! by our appliance. Send address on postal card to Rupture Relief Co. Box [illegible], St. Louis, Mo.

WANTED AGENTS TO SELL TEA, Coffee and Baking Powder to families. PROFITS VERY LARGE. Outfit free. People's Tea Co. Box [illegible], St. Louis, Mo.

LADIES [illegible] CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS [illegible] Dr. Butts' Dispensary, [illegible] St. Louis, Mo. [illegible]

Seminal Pastille. An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz.: Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease. [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

THE Book for the Million. A new and complete GUIDE TO WEDLOCK, containing Chapters on A Competent Womanhood, Selection of wife, Evidences of Virginity, Temperaments, Sterility, Advice to Bridegroom [illegible] It is also a "Private Medical Adviser" on diseases resulting from impure sexual associations, and on self-abuse [illegible]

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY, No. 12 N. 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

$50,000! $50,000!

$50,000

WORTH OF CLOTHING!

Which was manufactured for southern trade, is now offered at

Sixty Cents on the Dollar.

We bought these goods of a large New York house, which manufactures for, and depends principally on southern trade. Owing to the fever raging so furiously south, they could neither sell nor ship their goods, and were obliged, therefore, to dispose of their entire stock to northern dealers at a big sacrifice.

We took advantage of this rare chance by buying only for cash, and therefore are enabled to sell these entire new goods at 65 cents on the dollar.

SAVE MONEY BY FAVORING US WITH A CALL.

SAM, PETE & MAX, Managers

Star Clothing House, FORT WAYNE, IND.,

Anticipating an unusually large trade this fall, the indications of which are unmistakable, and which, indeed, has already begun, we are now daily receiving large quantities of all kinds of SEASONABLE GOODS in our line, and shall soon be able to show the largest, best selected and most complete stock of

DRY-GOODS, CARPETS, NOTIONS, &C.

That we have ever before been able to offer to the people of Fort Wayne and vicinity. Our well-known LOW PRICES—to which the present extent of our business is mainly due—shall be strictly maintained in every department. The closest cash buyers will find it to their interest to look through our stock before purchasing.

ROOT & COMPANY, Calhoun Street, Fort Wayne.

DRY-GOODS, CLOTHING, HATS AND CAPS, GROCERIES, &c., &c.

HERE WE ARE AGAIN!

WITH THE LARGEST STOCK OF

DRY-GOODS, CLOTHING, HATS AND CAPS

EVER BROUGHT TO DeKALB COUNTY.

$12,000.00

Worth of new dry-goods, clothing, hats, caps, notions and novelties, which will be sold without any regard to the advance in the east, and a great many cheaper than ever before.

Knowing that all cotton and woolen goods must advance this fall, owing to the scarcity of raw material, we concluded that it would pay our customers as well as ourselves to buy our goods before any advance, and we are happy to say that we are now enabled to sell goods cheaper than ever before. We would advise all our friends and customers that are in need of any goods to buy them soon; by so doing they will certainly save money.

DRY-GOODS DEPARTMENT.

We have everything in both staple and fancy dry-goods, prints, muslins, denims, ducks, flannels, jeans and tickings, in endless variety, and at prices below all competition. We have the best of dress goods, alpacas cashmeres, dusters and waterproofs in large quantities and the best selections—in fact the largest stock to select from ever brought to this county.

CLOTHING: CLOTHING.

In this department we have taken particular pains, and can say we have the best and only well selected stock of clothing in the county.

$6,000 (SIX THOUSAND) $6,000

Worth of clothing to be sold cheaper than the same kind of goods have ever been sold in Northern Indiana. Suits from $4.00 up to the finest trecots and imported worsteds. Over-coats from $3.00 up to the very best of all wool beaver. We guarantee as good a fit as any tailor can make, or no sale.

HATS AND CAPS!

In this department we have everything pertaining to a first class hat store, from the cheapest wool to the very finest fur hats—as good an assortment as has ever been offered in DeKalb county, and at prices below all competition.

GROCERIES! GROCERIES!

We are now selling choice family groceries as cheap as they can be bought in any house in Northern Indiana. Best coffee A sugar 9c., best coffee C sugar 8c.; good rio coffee 12c.; splendid rio coffee 15c.; best rio coffee 18c.; best black pepper 20c. per lb.; best Carolina rice 3 pounds for 25c.; the very best roasted coffees, also all kinds of canned fruits, dried fruits, prunes, raisins, apples, as low as the same can be bought anywhere in the state.

Thanking the public for past favors, and asking the continuance of the same, we ask of the people of DeKalb and surrounding counties to come and examine our goods and get prices, and we are sure they will be convinced that they can save 20 percent, by buying their dry-goods, clothing, hats and caps, groceries and notions of

SCHAAB, BEUGNOT & CO.,

West side of public square, Auburn, Ind.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—Mortgages,
—Warranty Deeds,
—Quit Claim Deeds,
—Guardian's Receipts, (bound),
—Administrator's Receipts (bound),
—For sale in large or small quantities at the Courier office. tf.

—Are you going to the fair?

—Subscribe for the Courier.

—A picnic for pick-pockets to-morrow.

—High time at Waterloo during the fair.

—Fresh bologna by the mile, at Houston's meat market.

—Remember the printer when you come to the re-union.

—See the mammoth stock of goods at Schaab, Beugnot & Co's.

—Excellent cigars and coal oil for retail, at the Physician's drug store.

—Read the new advertisement of Root & Co. They offer extra inducements.

—Rev. W. J. Norris drives a dashing little team of long-eared quadrupeds.

—Tom. C. Mays is again at home, having wound up his Pinafore business.

—Remember the date of the Waterloo fair, October 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th.

—Mrs. Adam Deets, of Fairfield township, had an arm fractured Tuesday morning.

—Three extra clerks will help Sherm. Hollister at his restaurant, Friday and Saturday.

—Kiblinger's dog, Fred, is rapidly attaining the proportions of a royal Bengal tiger.

—If you want "sow-belly" to feed the soldiers, you can get it at Houston's meat market.

—You will be surprised to find how low Schaab, Beugnot & Co. are selling their new goods.

—During the days of the re-union would be a splendid time to subscribe for the Courier.

—Read what Schaab, Beugnot & Co. have to say in their advertisement on the opposite page.

—Houston's meat market is full of the nicest beef, pork and veal, ever offered in Auburn.

—D. D. Snyder has sold seven clover-hullers this season, and he hasn't convassed any, either.

—The Saginaw railroad employes are jubilant, having received their ducats Tuesday morning.

—Thank goodness! The sidewalks are being repaired on Fifth street, near the Saginaw depot.

—Those fine hogs, slaughtered by M. Houston for the re-union were furnished by Mr. Ed. Kelham.

—A section of grape-vine was exhibited at the Wabash county fair, containing 160 clusters of grapes.

—It is now time to pickle gauze undershirts and open your canned overcoats for the winter season.

—The happiest results invariably attend the taking of Sellers' celebrated liver pills. 25 cents per box.

—Mr. David Wunderlich, of Philadelphia, spent several days last week, with the family of Theo. Reed.

—Boils, pimples, and all blood diseases are cured by Dr. Lindsey's blood Searcher. Sold by all druggists.

—Did you ever see as much nice meat at one time as Houston has, to supply his customers during the reunion?

—Attorneys desiring first quality legal cap paper, can get it at the Courier office, in unbroken packages, at low rates.

—All soldiers attending the re-union are cordially invited to call on the Courier office, and make themselves at home.

—We suggest that every soldier who registers his name at re-union, be requested to add his present postoffice address.

—The hotels will overflow their top story windows to-morrow, as rooms have been engaged at all of them in advance.

—Mrs. John L. Davis, of Auburn, and Mrs. Byron Davis, of Wabash, were in town to-day.—Fort Wayne Sentinel, Tuesday.

—When your friends come to see you during the re-union, give them the best of meat. You can get it at Houston's meat market.

—Nick Ensley, of the east side millinery store, boarded the Cincinnati excursion train yesterday morning, and now he's back.

—The ague has also tackled Charlie Emanuel, and he is going to use whisky and quinine—quinine externally and whisky eternally.

—The proprietor of the "Mosher Mansion" desires to retain an attorney. Here is a chance for some public-spirited limb of the law.

—A. S. Lauferty & Co., the C. O. D. clothiers of Fort Wayne, speak a new piece, in this weeks Courier. See their adv't headed Caution.

—"What nice fat beef" was a frequent remark, as Houston's wagon passed along the street with load after load of meat for the soldiers' reunion.

—John Robbins says he always thought Cas. Coats was studying for the ministry until—but it will tickle John to tell you about it himself.

—D. D. Moody and E. Harris took advantage of the rates to Chicago, and visited the exposition this week, starting Monday noon.

—The largest stock of goods ever brought to Auburn, can now be examined at Schaab, Beugnot & Co's. Prices lower than ever.

—Two brass cannons from Toledo arrived yesterday on the Eel River road. They are now on exhibition in the court-yard; were made at Cincinnati in 1864.

—The communication from Newville concerning the proposed new railroad must be held over until next week, when it will appear on the outside of this paper.

—Another "scursion" to Chicago next Thursday, Sept. 27th, from Jackson. Round trip tickets from Auburn, $3.50. Anybody can ride on the "keers" at such rates.

—That Chicago excursion Tuesday morning, over the B. & O. road, was well attended, the train consisting of eight cars of human freight when it passed Auburn.

—A telephone connection between Waterloo and Auburn would be a great convenience to the business men of the former place. Will Waterloo lead off in the enterprise?

—A Muncie train, off the track at Ft. Wayne, delayed the northern bound train on the Jackson road three hours Tuesday evening. It is due here at 6:50 and passed through at 9:30.

—Lawyer Dills now occupies the Woodford property on north Jackson street. Any person who contemplates moving will find Mr. Dills an able assistant. He likes the business.

—Frank Leas struck a temporary job this week, behind the counters at the restaurant, and will assist in dishing out goodies to the visitors during the re-union to-morrow and next day.

—Fort Auburn—how would that sound? If you think there is no fort here, take a stroll down to the bridge on Ninth street and see the one erected for use by the soldiers' to-morrow.

—Billy Edgington has secured the services of another barber to help him through with the rush during the re-union. Billy was a good and true soldier and deserves a liberal patronage.

—Why couldn't Auburn and Waterloo be connected by a telephone?—Press. Sure enough! That is a capital idea. Make your suggestions Bro. Baxter, and the Courier will assist in the undertaking.

—The Richland township Sunday-school workers' institute will meet at the Heist school-house on Saturday, Sept. 27th, at 9½ o'clock, a. m. A cordial invitation is extended to all Sunday-school workers.

—Superintendent Rummel, of the county farm, is entitled to the credit of having furnished the finest beef-cattle sold in this market this year. They were bought by M. Houston, and slaughtered for the soldiers' re-union.

—The Michigan City excursion last Thursday was all that could have been expected in point of pleasantness, and we feel ourself under personal obligations to the manager, J. W. Baker, of Columbia City, for courtesies extended.

—"Pennsylvania Dutch girls," remarks an exchange, "make excellent preserves." How nice!—but then, we never tasted a preserved Pennsylvania Dutch girl. They are not so far ahead, though, for some of our Hoosier girls make elegant jam—we've been told.

—For the benefit of hunting parties of four or more persons, to points north of Bay City on the Michigan Central railroad, the Ft. W., J. & S. company has reduced the rate to two cents per mile each way, and will carry camping outfits free.

—Billy Shaffer has had a "heap 'o trouble" lately. Tuesday he bought a round-trip ticket to Ft. Wayne for 90c, but it was dated wrong and he had to pay full fare both ways, or $2.60 in all; and then he got left for the morning train yesterday, and—he is all out of tune generally.

—Messrs. Steves & Fassett, of Waterloo, have about completed their work in the court-room. The kalsomining and paper decoration adds much to the beauty of the room, and is done in a tasteful and workmanlike manner. Other needed repairs are being made in the court-room and jury rooms.

—The Fort Wayne Sentinel of last Saturday, in copying our item in regard to the establishment of a marble shop here, errs typographically in stating that it is P. S. Underhill who thinks of coming. That gentleman died at Ft. Wayne, some time since, and it was his son, E. S. Underhill, whom we alluded to.—Please "follow copy" hereafter.

—Henry Fenrich, car inspector at the junction, had the cheek to undertake to pay his subscription with a big ten-dollar bill, on Tuesday. Of course we couldn't make it and so had to go after change, that being the largest pile we have seen together this season. Harry Yesbera was the only man in town who could change it, and he had to borrow a dollar from his tailor.

—The following allowances were made at the May term of the DeKalb circuit court.

Grand Jurors	53 90
Petit "	760 56
Bailiffs, etc.	387 75
Specific allowances	374 31
Damages and cost in Joseph Fenick case	243 51
	[illegible]
Total	$1770 00

—The re-union at Auburn on next Friday and Saturday promises to be a big thing. A large number of Fort Waynites will be present.—Daily News.

Yes, that's correct; it is estimated that there will be from eight to ten thousand people in Auburn on those days—in fact, the largest crowd ever assembled here.

—Mike Long hitched himself up Tuesday with McQuiston & Ralston's big Thomas cat and endeavored to capture a little mouse on the opposite side of the street. Mike engaged to do the watching while the pussy did the heavy work; but one was afraid and the other got scared, and the mouse won the battle without half trying.

—J. L. Ferguson, proprietor of the Columbia City marble works, has just taken a contract for erecting a beautiful Scotch granite monument (of cottage design) over the remains of the late Mr. Beardsley, of Huntertown, far ahead of the Hillegas monument in the same cemetery, and costing very little more than one-half as much. Ferguson is the coming marble man.

—George Hough, of the noted Pleasant Lake vineyards, was in town Tuesday. He gave the Courier a call and donated a large basket of the finest grapes we have seen this season. The whole outfit of the office filled itself full and then went and lay down. Mr. Hough will be on hand to-morrow and next day, as will be seen by his card elsewhere.

—The Corunna Headlight, last issue, gets off its little pencil thusly:

> "The Courier and the Press are wrangling over the question of responsibility as to which paper started the Munchausen story concerning the infantile belly-ache epidemic at Auburn."

Joseph, your language is rather obscure; but if you allude to that cholera infantum business, you have got it wrong, for all "wrangling" has ceased and the "responsibility" has long since been saddled on to the Press.

—The new Hoe press, recently added to the Sentinel office, at Fort Wayne, proves too much for the boys. Two of the fastest feeders in the establishment were unable to slide 'em in fast enough, necessarily requiring a change in the pulleys; but it is now printing the daily edition and works admirably, its capacity being estimated at 5,000 per hour. The Sentinel, by-the-way, is bound to win under the new regime, and its patrons all recognize its superiority over the average city daily.

—The sportsmen again banged away at the glass balls last Saturday, and, as before, Lute Wright was the winner in the ten shot score, hitting eight balls. Dr. Ford was right on Lute's heels, however, with seven hits, as was also Mr. Swihart, while S. Swineford came in next with six smashed globes. In the five-shot score Mr. Swineford redeemed himself handsomely—five straight hits—and Dr. Ford took the second place with four. At the close of the regular business there was one ball left for each man, and Jay Van Auken, who hadn't hit a ball in fifteen shots before, was the only man who made a count. He shut his eyes and trusted to Providence, and that's how 't was done.

—"J. W. Clark, Print, Arcanum, O.," sends out the nobbiest little circular, advertising a stolen horse, that it has ever been our lot to peruse. It is artistically embellished with "wrong font" type, and gives every evidence of having been printed on a lemon-squeezer; but its cardinal attraction is the orthography and punctuation, as will be observed by the appended verbatim copy:

Stolen Aug 24 1879 1 Light Bay Horse Three Years Old last spring Heavy limb Heavy fourparts and little pointed Behind. his feet Slightly Crooked in at both hind pasture joints he has no regular composed Gate there are two marks on his right side About 3 inches long where the hair was Knocked off $25, will be given for the where abouts of the horse, and $100. Will be given for the Convicted man or party, Adress Henry Swank
Arcanum, Dark Co. Ohio
J. W. Clark, Print, Arcanum O.

—Joking, when kept within a reasonable limit, affords pleasure to all, as a general rule; but when practiced to the injury of others, it loses its smartness and becomes abominable. The following serious "practical joke" takes the first premium over anything we have heard of lately: A man at Michigan City, who was laboring under an over dose of corn-juice, a few days ago sent a telegram to his brother at Valparaiso, announcing his own death and requesting the brother's immediate presence to attend the funeral, the telegram being signed, of course, by another man. The Valparaiso gentleman, shocked by the news, started forthwith to Michigan City, incurring considerable expense in preparation and transportation. Imagine his consternation upon coming face to face with the animated corpse of his brother, standing in a saloon door! As may be inferred, the meeting wasn't particularly brother-like. No tragedy.

The Best—The Garland.

W. H. Kiblinger & Co., have spared no time or expense in looking after and securing a first-class base-heating coal stove. After examining a number of different makes, they have decided to handle the well-known and popular "Garland." To any who are contemplating the purchase of a coal stove, we have only to say that it is A No. 1. Come and examine it at W. H. Kiblinger & Co's.

The Soldiers' Re-Union

Will be attended by an immense crowd of people, and all should call at the large establishment of Nicholas Ensley & Co., and examine the largest stock of dress-goods and trimmings, millinery and fancy-goods ever brought to DeKalb county. Having bought all goods in New York and Chicago for cash, the proprietors are enabled to make prices lower than ever known on this class of goods. Remember the place, east of the public square, Auburn, Ind.

Incorrect.

[Fort Wayne Journal.]

The material, good will, etc., of the Fort Wayne Journal office has been purchased by Senator T. J. Foster, Judge Lowry and Joe Cope. It will be published in the interest of Mr. Foster and the democratic party.—Decatur Democrat.

Judge Lowry would make a most excellent partner, and, if his business was such that he could join us, and desired to do so, we would be glad to associate ourselves with him. He is, however, in no way connected with the Journal.

Among Strangers, Yet Not Without Friends.

[St. Charles (Mich.) Business.]

Last Monday evening a sad death occurred at the depot in this village. Mrs Carrie Davenport, wife of F. E. Davenport, of Auburn, Ind., who has been for some time an invalid, as a last resort went to Otsego Lake, in this state, with the hope of again recovering that blessed boon, health. For some time the delusive disease, consumption, gave promise of departure from the afflicted lady, but last week she began to sink rapidly, and one week ago all hopes of recovery were abandoned. Her heart cried out continually for one more sight of her beloved children, and as a last and imparative request, her husband, who had been summoned to her side, yielded and started for the home she so longed to see, accompanied by her nurse, Mrs. McConeaey, but the yearning and longing for a mother's last look into the eyes of her beloved children was not effectual to stay the grim and unyielding hand of death. The tired spirit left the tenement of clay within a few minutes of the time they left the train at this place. Mr. Davenport, worn out with continual watching and borne down by the sad event, was a stranger in a strange land, but he was a member of the mystic tie and soon found himself surrounded by a band of brothers—not such in name only, but in deeds of brotherly love. Cheerfully was their kind offices tendered and gratefully accepted, their hearts went out to the afflicted husband and father in tender affection giving to him comfort in the hour of bereavement and every attention that sincere sympathy could suggest.

The remains were attended to the depot Tuesday morning by members of the order, and deposited on the south-ward bound train. Mr. Davenport will ever cherish a kind rememberance of the friendly offices tendered him here, and the worthy brothers of this lodge have the satisfaction that follows practical exemplification of the principles which underlay and are the foundation of the organization.

Proceedings in Commissioners Court, September Term, 1879.

Williams street, east of East street, ordered vacated, on the petition of R. Elson.

Ordered that a sidewalk be constructed along the east side of the public square, in Auburn.

License to retail liquor, granted to the following parties:

August Thenell,	Garrett,
J. D. Williamson,	Corunna,
Tomlinson & May,	Butler.

In matter of public highway, in Concord township, petitioned for by J. D. Leighty, et al., the viewers report favorable, and the highway is ordered located to the width of forty feet.

In matter of public highway, in Concord township, petitioned for by A. M. Dermott, et. al., Messrs. Henry W. Clish, James W. Clark and Edward Erwin, were appointed viewers, and the case continued.

In the matter of public highway, in Jackson township, petitioned for by F. Seidtman et. al., proceedings dismissed.

Adam C. Brown, et. al., petition for highway in Union township, Messrs. James L. Latson, James Griswold and Jacob Walborn appointed viewers.

Oliver P. Learned, of Franklin township petitions for the establishment of an old road, which petition is granted.

In matter of public highway, in Smithfield and Franklin townships, petitioned for by Benjamin Kiblinger, et. al., the viewers report favorable, whereupon sundry persons petition for damages, and the board appoints Freeman Kelley, Cyrus Bowman and Clark Parker, reviewers, to report next term.

On petition of B. F. Cornelius, et. al., for location of highway in Troy township, the board appoints Messrs. Geo. W. Swartz, Jeremiah Lewis and W. L. Blair, viewers.

Mary Weicht, et. al., petition for ditch in Troy township, W. L. Blair, Jeremiah Lewis and Geo. W. Swartz, appointed viewers.

In matter of public ditch petitioned for by Samuel Goodwin, et. al., in Union township, the viewers appointed to assess the damages that Wm. H. Leas would sustain, report the damages as assessed at $12. The board orders the ditch located and established.

Board adjourned until Oct. 3.

St. Joe.

—J. S. Coulter, of Hicksville, was in town on Friday. He is a big-souled fellow, always happy himself and trying to make others ditto.

—J. D. Leighty and lady took in the excursion to Niagara Falls and Toronto last week, arriving home Saturday evening.

—Owing to the heavy rains of Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, the brick building belonging to J. D. Leighty, which is yet unroofed, settled an inch or two at one corner, though it is not materially damaged.

—Prof. Hadsell is conducting a class in singing at the St. Joe chapel, assisted by M. T. B. and O. H. W.

—The building to be occupied by M. Olds, as a general store, is nearly ready for the plasterers.

—The Mitchell Bros., of Newville, have secured the contract for putting up a new building here, 20 x 40 feet, to be used as a drug-store.

—The railroad excitement at Newville, which has been running low for some time, has broken out afresh.

Vidette.

Newville.

—Mr. Shull has commenced the earth work on the new bridge across the creek.

—Rev. Oviatt commenced a series of meetings at the Disciple church Sunday evening, which will be continued for some time.

—Last Saturday afternoon two boys of G. M. Rex were struck by lightning, while plowing in the edge of Ohio, injuring them considerably but not seriously. A valuable horse belonging to Mr. Rex was struck at the same time and killed.

—The firm of Headly & Rhodes has been dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. Rhodes retiring from the butchering business and John Miller taking his place.

—Let us have a large turnout of democrats to hear the "Tall Sycamore of the Wabash," next Saturday, at Defiance.

—We learn that parties have been viewing the route from Newville to the B. & O. road, with a view of laying a track from that point to Newville.

Alpha.

Inquire for Them.

We have used Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts, and can confidently recommend them to the community as the best articles in domestic use. They are the leading articles of their kind in America, and should be on the shelf of every well-regulated family.

Grapes.

I will be in Auburn on Friday and Saturday, and will be pleased to take orders for grapes in any quantity, from my old customers. I will be located just east of the creek, near the grove.

George Hough,
Pleasant Lake Vineyard.

CAUTION

Should be used to find our store as misrepresentations are often made by Dealers claiming that their Store is the

C. O. D.

CLOTHING HOUSE. Our number is 9 East Main Street, and exactly opposite the North Door of the Court House. WE DO A STRICTLY

ONE PRICE BUSINESS!

And show the Largest Stock of Men's Boys' and Children's Clothing, Men's Furnishing Goods, Hats and Caps in Fort Wayne.

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.,

Opposite North Door Court House.

Notice to Contractors

Notice is hereby given that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Ind., will, at the times and places hereinafter named, let to the lowest responsible bidder, certain work in the construction of ditches and embankments on roads, in separate jobs.

MONDAY, SEPT. 29th, 1879,

at 11 o'clock a. m., at Auburn, to let building of sidewalk on court yard square. Same day at 2 o'clock p. m. in Butler township, on Rowley ditch.

TUESDAY, SEPT, 30th, 1879,

at 10½ o'clock a. m., at county allotment of John Carper drain, in Jackson township. Same day at 3 o'clock p. m., embankment on highway near John Jenkins, in Concord township.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 1st, 1879,

at 10½ o'clock a. m., at county allotment of John Crouse drain in Wilmington township. Same day at 2 and 3 o'clock p. m., at county allotment on Fisher and Fink drains, in Troy township.

THURSDAY, OCT. 2nd, 1879,

at 10½ o'clock a. m., at county allotment on Lockhart drain, in Franklin township. Same day at 3 o'clock p. m., at county allotment on Lawhead drain, in Franklin township.

Plans and specifications and profile of work can be seen and examined at time and place of letting.

The lettings will be made by public outcry, and the board reserve the right to reject any and all bids. Persons to whom contracts shall be awarded, will be required to give bond for the performance of, and payment for, all labor, board and material used in the construction of said work.

B. F. BLAIR,
Auburn, Sept. 2, 1879. Pres't of Board.

[Auburn Republican and Waterloo Press authorized to copy.]

Excelsior Hardware,

Auburn, Ind.

SURE THING!

We buy goods to sell and not to keep.

Cooking Stoves, Box Stoves,
Flat Stoves, Heating Stoves,
Parlor Stoves, Elevated Stoves,
Coal Stoves, Oil Stoves,

And stoves of every kind. We have the largest stock of stoves in the county, and will sell cheaper than the cheapest. Farmers, mechanics, merchants, traders and everybody, when you want a call on us, we will sell you a first-class stove for less money than it takes to tell it.

STOVE!

Call and see what a pile of iron and tinware you can buy for a few cents. Our stoves are all fully warranted in every respect.

Our stoves have been submitted to the

SEVEREST TESTS

for years. They have become and are recognized as the

STANDARD COOKING STOVES

of America, and the fact that 420,000 are now in daily use, is positive proof of their great superiority over all others. Our large sales enable us to sell stoves at very low prices.

"SMALL PROFITS AND QUICK SALES" IS OUR MOTTO.

W. H. KIBLINGER & COMPANY,

North of court house, 1st door west of McQuiston & Ralston's double store.

REMORSE.

"The [illegible] [illegible] sting, O, terrible Remorse!"
WHITTIER.

O, ghostly memories of my vanished years!
O, dark, weird visitors who nightly come,
With looks reproachful, all too deep for tears,
To haunt my couch, to crowd my sleeping-room;
The world asleep, why am I doomed to wake,
Shrinking from visions the worn heart to shake?

O, youth! proud youth, who caution cannot brook,
Upon whose brow no shade of care has been,
Might I but warn thee that a word, a look,
May prove a dragon's tooth to raise armed men;
Those who may scourge thee as with scorpion's stings,
When o'er gray hairs blest sleep on shadow flings.

Life in its wane, and brief, and no amends
For all the noble chances slighted, lost—
So time once more to seek life's greatest good,
A sinking back upon dark visions lost—
Ah! what is life whose aim is not that quest,
"Peace, as a river," bearing us to rest.

Is there no refuge from these haunting throngs,
These murdered hours, these follies shaped to crimes?
Must these, once dwarfs, now grown to giant wrongs,
Thus haunt me nightly till the early chimes?
Must I, the couch, once sought for gentle Sleep,
Loathe, for the somber shapes which 'round it creep?

O, what a mystery is life, at last!
Beset with snares, a ceaseless war to wage,
Where seeds, sown carelessly in the the far-off past,
Sprout the sharp thorns which torture us in age;
How, tangled midst these as the step grows slow,
We halt, and groan, and stumble as we go.

I am no murderer of men! and yet,
As if "blood cried to me from out the ground,"
A thousand looks reproachful I have met,
Which come unbidden, my sore heart to wound;
I am not cruel!—yet the heedless word,
My taunt—forgotten—at deep midnight stirred,

And came to life, and sadly stood and gazed
From out the darkness, as with eyes of light,
To grieve my very soul, till Slumber, crazed,
Fled from these eyes for all the weary night;
Oh, God! that memory should bring such grief,
A weary burden, hopeless of relief.

What though fierce Provocation plied its sting,
Till all but madness tortured the spent soul,
Though ceaseless griefs, like insects on the wing,
Seemed on my path to find their fittest goal?
All this, perhaps, should teach me to endure
With patience ills for which life finds no cure.

"Peace waits us on the shores of Acheron!"
So sang a sufferer in years agone;
Must only certain natures crave that boon
The herd of men find nothing to atone?
Must but the few move sadly midst the throng,
The world itself, regardless, feel no wrong?

Peace! there will be peace beyond the stars;
The heavens, which look down on these midnight hours,
Peace, undisturbed by what of griefs or wars,
Torture the heart in this dark world of ours.
Driven from my couch by visions of the night,
Let me my home see in those spheres of light.
CHICAGO, Ill. ACTRON.

HOW POTTRIDGE LOST HIS LUCK.

Mr. Thomas Pottridge, of Smallborough, had been renowned in his native town for his constant run of luck, so that at the age of 40 he was reckoned the "warmest" man there—an Alderman who had been twice Mayor of his city, a church-warden and a very popular character among the fair sex by reason of his being a bachelor. One or two things more only were wanted to complete his happiness—namely, a good wife, a nice little estate in the country and the honor of Knighthood. Mr. Pottridge wished to become Sir Thomas Pottridge. Having long cherished this idea, and resolved, indeed, that he would not propose for the hand of pretty Miss Lucy Dott, the banker's daughter, until he could make her a Ladyship, Mr. Pottridge ended by thinking that he could best secure his object by causing himself to be re-elected Mayor, and, arranging, if possible, that H. R. H., the Prince of Wales, should pay a visit to Smallborough during the term of his office. Intent upon this scheme, Mr. Pottridge came up to town to call upon Lord Beaconsfield. Lord Beaconsfield hearkened kindly to the grocer's prayer. Smallborough was about to inaugurate some public baths, the first establishment of the kind ever seen in the town, and nothing could be more suitable than that the heir of the tohrne should preside over the ceremonial. "Truly," said the Premier politely, when he had heard the Alderman speak, "the cleanliness of the people must always be a matter of interesting concern to those who are brought into relations with them. I shall be happy to take her Majesty's commands on the—ahem!—public-spirited proposal which you have laid before me."

"If you can manage it, my Lord, I should be glad if the visit could take place some time after the 9th of November next, for I shall be Mayor then and able to see that the reception given is a proper one."

"Ah, quite so!" answered Lord Beaconsfield, dropping his eyeglass, for he had studied Mr. Pottridge through it and knew the man by heart.

Leaving Whitehall, Mr. Pottridge sauntered toward Regent street, and, as he walked along, life seemed rosy to him because of Miss Dott. He began to stare into the shop windows, admiring pretty things which he was tempted to buy for his love. He was turning over this fancy and fumbling wistfully at the pocket where his check-book lay, when suddenly he beheld through the window a curious sight. An elegantly-dressed lady was seated at the counter examining pieces of Brussels lace. The shopman averted his head for an instant, and she deftly whipped up a yard of the costly texture and transferred it to her pocket. The shopman spread over the counter a number of square, flat boxes containing handkerchiefs, and once more turned away. Again the lady's deft hand went to work, and a couple of handkerchiefs found their way under her cloak. "Now that woman must have capacious pockets," soliloquized the astonished Mr. Pottridge. "She's a cunning thief, anyhow, and I'll just step in and warn the firm."

He hesitated a moment, and while he hovered about the doorway the lady came out, escorted by an obsequious commissionaire with medals on his breast. A footman, one of a row basking on a bench like oysters, rose and signaled to the coachman of a handsomely-appointed brougham, who at once drove forward. Evidently this lady was not an ordinary thief. She was a tall, dark person of about 30, superbly dressed and very handsome. Perceiving Mr. Pottridge and seeing his glance fixed on her as she waited for her carriage, she eyed him with aristocratic superciliousness and thereby settled her fate, for Smallborough's Alderman, who could not brook the disdain of a shoplifter, hurried into the mercer's and explained what had happened, speaking in so excited a voice that a number of customers heard him.

Great commotion was caused by his announcement, and the shopman who had served her was quickly fired by the idea that he had let himself be outwitted. Darting out of the shop he accosted the thief as she was stepping into her carriage: "Will you come back, if you please? There is some mistake."

"What mistake?" asked she, turning round with a flash in her eyes. But she grew ashy pale.

"Come back, please," repeated the shopman, a pushing young man, whose voice broke from emotion.

A small crowd had already collected and the lady was obliged to retrace her steps; but as she was about to enter the shop she slapped her hand into her pocket and let a piece of lace fall onto the pavement. "No, ma'am, that won't do," cried Mr. Pottridge, seizing the thief's wrist. "You're going to pretend those things fell by accident into the folds of your dress; we know that trick." And, officiously acting as searcher, he plunged his hand into the pocket despite the lady's struggles and drew out a second piece of lace, three cambric handkerchiefs, two pairs of new gloves, one pair of silk stockings and a lady's silk cravat. "Well, I never!" exclaimed the pushing shopman, and there was a murmur among the bystanders, including the lady's own footman, who looked like a powdered figure of consternation.

"How dare you?" screamed the lady, purple with rage and mortification as she glared at Mr. Pottridge; "I'll prosecute you for assault. I told the shopman here that I meant to buy these things. Let the bill be sent to my address; I'm Mrs. Pounceforth-Keane."

"Ah, I dessay," responded the shopman, "but I'm just going to give you into custody;" and, running to the door, he beckoned to a blue-coated member of the force.

One of the partners of the firm, a gray, civil-spoken man, who had been summoned from his study, now came forward; and he was at first disposed to rebuke the haste of his shopman, but it was too late. The policeman had already entered, and all the shopmen and shop-girls, the customers and the desultory people crowding around the door, were instant in chorusing that the thief should be made on example of. Mrs. Pounceforth-Keane, seeing public opinion so dead against her, uttered a howl, and fell swooning to the floor.

"Never mind that; we'll soon rouse her," said the policeman, facetiously, for he did not yet know that he had to deal with a lady who kept a brougham. "The magistrate is sitting now at Marlborough street; we'll just go there at once and have her charged."

This arrangement was acceded to, and in a few minutes the lady and policeman (who had got abashed by this time from finding himself seated on the silk cushions of a carriage) were riding to the police court in Mrs. Pounceforth-Keane's own vehicle, while Mr. Pottridge, the shopman and the mercer followed on foot to give evidence.

* * * * *

One would think that in a case where the offense was flagrant and the testimony so clear the magistrate might have sentenced the defendant straight off to six months' imprisonment, and, indeed, had the thief been a person of the lower orders, it would probably have been her fate to be convicted summarily. But it turned out that Pounceforth-Keane was the real name of the elegant shoplifter, whose husband was a person moving, as reporters say, "in the best ranks of society." Mr. Pounceforth-Keane was sent for, and arrived breathless in a hansom from one of the best clubs in Pall Mall. At the sight of him his wife, who had been locked up for an hour in a police cell, wept profusely, and Mr. P. K. was himself much agitated. He asked for a remand, and tendered bail, saying he should produce medical evidence to the effect that his wife had lately suffered severely in health. The magistrate—a timid man, who had grown-up daughters to marry, and was terribly afraid of society—stammered out something like an apology, and readily acceded to the application for bail. So very soon Mrs. Pounceforth-Keane tottered out of court, weeping like a victim, on her husband's arm, and Mr. Pottridge walked away with the shopman and the civil-spoken mercer. All three were crestfallen, as if they had committed a blunder. "This will be a very bad affair for me," grumbled the mercer. "I would have lost a hundred yards of lace sooner than appear in court against a lady like this."

"Well, but she's a thief," cried Mr. Pottridge, rousing himself and speaking with spirit. "What harm can she or her friends do you?"

"Are you quite sure you saw her steal the things?" asked the mercer, gloomily. "Besides, supposing she did put them in her pocket, she says that she told my shopman to send her the bill."

"I'm hanged if she did," ejaculated the shopman, indignantly.

"Silence, sir," answered the mercer, with a stern frown. "If this be really a case of theft, you are self-condemned, for you ought to have kept your eyes about you. For some time past I have noticed that you have been very negligent in business."

The shopman collapsed; as for Mr. Pottridge, he trudged back to his hotel, feeling half inclined to go and ask Lord Beaconsfield what he ought to do. The case had been adjourned for a week, so he traveled back to Smallborough in the evening, and by the time he reached his native town he had worked himself up into a state of contempt for the mercer and the metropolitan stipendiary, who seemed to draw a distinction between well-dressed and ill-dressed plunderers. Meeting Mr. Bangs, the brewer, near the railway station, he gave him an account of what had happened, and was hearkened to with sympathy until he mentioned the name of Pounceforth-Keane; then Mr. Bungs pursed up his lips. "Why, bless me, that's the cousin of Lord Keynsole, brother-in-law of our Lord Lieutenant!"

"What difference does that make?" stammered Mr. Pottridge, like a man who feels less sure of his ground.

"Oh, nothing, except that I don't see why a lady of that sort should commit robberies," responded Mr. Bungs.

Further down the street, Mr. Pottridge, who was rubbing his pate in rather violent perplexity, encountered Mr. Dott, the banker, whose daughter Lucy he loved. "Pounceforth-Keane!" exclaimed Mr. Dott, as soon as he had heard the grocer's story. "Why, Lord Keynsole, his cousin, banks with us."

"Well, but come, Dott," retorted Mr. Pottridge, impatiently, "is that a reason why Mrs. Pounceforth-Keane shouldn't be a dishonest jade?"

"No, but I think the whole thing improbable," answered the banker, "and I confess I should be sorry if anything unpleasant happened to Lord Keynsole's family."

Mr. Pottridge was not in very good hmuor when he went to bed that night. A magistrate himself, he knew that shifts are often made to withdraw well-connected offenders from justice, and, so far as he was concerned, he would have cared little had an appeal been made to him, ad misericordiam, to acknowledge that he had, perhaps, been mistaken in fancying that he saw Mrs. P.-K. pocket some lace and handkerchiefs. But Mr. Pottridge could not bear to be pooh-poohed at or threatened with unpleasant consequences if he did his duty. He was an Alderman, a grocer with a blameless conscience, and he feared no man. Feeling that his character for veracity and common sense was at stake, he resolved to give his evidence against the wife of Lord Keynsole's cousin with no more hesitation than if she were the commonest jail-bird.

From that date, however, things began to go wrong somehow with Mr. Pottridge. It seemed as though his long luck had forsaken him. On the morrow of his adventure in London, Mr. Chuckleworth, the principal solicitor of the town, who was Lord Keynsole's legal adviser, passed him in the street without nodding, and later in the day Mrs. C. sent a stiff note, begging that Mr. Pottridge would send in his bill, and intimating that she would henceforth purchase her groceries at another house. Now, the Chuckleworths had always been excellent customers of Mr. Pottridge.

This was bad enough, but worse was to follow. Next day some inspectors of weights and measures arrived at the Alderman's shop and found a piece of lard sticking under his scales. They declared they should make a report of the fact. Scarcely had they gone, leaving the grocer speechless with confusion, than two well-dressed strangers entered and bought some tea, brown sugar, cocoa, pepper and a pot of mustard; after which they stated that they were public analysts, who were going to examine the quality of these goods. They examined them, in truth, so fast, that two days later Mr. Pottridge received a summons to answer a charge of putting birch twigs in his tea, sand in his sugar, turmeric in his mustard, clay in his cocoa, etc. Mr. Pottridge shrugged his shoulders at first, taking it for granted that the charge would be dismissed by his brother magistrates, Messrs. Dott, Bungs & Co., but before the case came on for hearing it fortuitously transpired that Mr. Pottridge had been up to London interviewing Lord Beaconsfield for the purposes we know, and this made the other Aldermen furious. Mr. Bungs, the brewer, was particularly angry, and declared that Pottridge was a traitor, insomuch as the poor grocer, instead of having a friendly bench to judge him, found a very stern one.

"I am sorry for you, Mr. Pottridge," said Mr. Dott, who sat as Chairman, "but men in your position should set an example. You are fined £20 on each count, with costs. Total, £120."

Ill-starred Pottridge! He left the court politically done for, for he could no longer hope to be re-elected Mayor, nor to marry Miss Dott. He should have, moreover, to resign his Aldermanship, and his personal character, as well as that of his tea, sugar and mustard, was ruined.

So ruined was Mr. Pottridge that when he went to London to give evidence against Mrs. Pounceforth-Keane, the first question asked him by the council for the defense—a blustering Old Bailey barrister—was, "I believe you have just been convicted of selling adulterated goods and at false weight?"

"Let me explain," stammered poor Pottridge.

"No explanations, sir. Give me a plain answer, yes or no!"

"Yes, then."

"Well, then, if you are liable to make mistakes about your weights, you may err in other things."

"Perhaps," replied the grocer, desperately, "I may have been mistaken in thinking this lady was a thief. I have had enough bother about the business."

"You ought to be ashamed of your flippant conduct, sir," cried the counsel harshly, and the wretched grocer hobbled out of the witness-box feeling very mean indeed. After this confession of possible error on the part of the chief witness, the case against Mrs. Pounceforth-Keane was, of course, dismissed, and Mr. Pottridge slunk out of court with a magisterial reprimand ringing in his ears. To conclude this little story, one has only to add that when H. R. H. the Prince of Wales graciously went to open the baths at Smallborough it was Mr. Bungs who was Mayor and eventually got Knighted, while Mr. Pottridge was not even invited to the dinner at the Town Hall, whereof he paid his share like the other rate-payers.

He is no longer regarded as a lucky man.

IN Lombardy large fields of watermelons are raised solely for making sugar. They are planted upon the sandy borders of the rivers after the spring floods retire. Unlike the mode of planting adopted here, the vines are planted one foot apart in the row, and the rows eight feet apart. The vines are all turned one way. Only two melons are allowed to grow on each vine. The melons are cut open by hand and the inside scraped out. The pulp is put through a strainer, and the juice is then boiled down and made into sugar.

THE quantity of ashes thrown into the New York rivers and harbors per day by steamboats, tugs, etc., is 250 tons.

Well-Water and Typhoid Fever.

In the summer of 1878 some forty persons in Rochester, whose supply of drinking water was derived from a certain well, were taken sick with typhoid fever and other zymotic diseases. The health officer had the well closed, so that the people had to get water from other sources. Their recovery was rapid from that moment. A request was then addressed to all the physicians in the city to report the names and residences of all persons sick with typhoid fever. About fifty cases having been reported, health inspectors were sent to the various localities, who inquired into their sanitary conditions, the distance of cess-pools, sewers and privy vaults from the wells; also, whether the patients drank well-water either at their homes or at their places of business. Samples of water were taken from the wells and submitted for analysis to Dr. Lattimore, Professor of Chemistry in the University of Rochester. The result of the inquiries was to show that, of the whole number of cases of typhoid reported, all but two had followed from the use of well-water; the exceptional cases arose from ill-ventilated apartments in close proximity to foul water-closets. It was also ascertained that a very large number of the wells in the city were situated within an average distance of less than thirty feet from cesspools and privy-vaults, while a great many were distant from them not over ten feet! In Prof. Lattimore's report occurs one passage which must be quoted in extenso, namely, the one in which he remarks on the significance of the presence of common salt in well-water: "I would direct your special attention to the second column" [of his table showing the amount of solid matters in the water], "which shows the number of grains of common salt per gallon of water. No single indication is of so great sanitary importance in judging of the purity or impurity, and consequently of the safety or danger, of any water. How a substance, which is in itself not only harmless, but by most persons considered indispensable as an article of diet, becomes to the sanitarian a signal of danger in well-water will be easily rendered apparent. No mineral substance is perhaps so universally diffused as common salt. It exists in the air, hence in all rain water; in all soils, hence in all well or spring-water, though often in quantities too minute to be weighed upon the chemist's balance, as is the case in the Hemlock lake water of this city. Salt being remarkably soluble, it is constantly being washed out of the soil into the streams, and ultimately carried down to its great reservoir, the ocean. We may, therefore, find salt present in all ordinary well-water. What might fairly be considered as the average proportion for uncontaminated well-water in Rochester can be only estimated, but it certainly cannot be large. Rivers may derive large quantities of salt from the drainage of manufacturing establishments upon their banks, but wells are not usually thus affected. Therefore, whenever, in well-water, it rises above a very few grains per gallon, it becomes certain that it comes from some other source than the soil. What is that source? A moment's reflection will convince any one that nearly all the salt used for domestic purposes escapes by the way of two channels—the water-closet and the house-drain. Therefore we should expect, what is always found on examination to be true, that, whatever sewage may or may not contain, it always contains salt."—Popular Science Monthly.

Standing by Their Colors.

Two instances occurred at the battle of the Alma wherein the Victoria cross was earned—pas vole—by devotedness to the colors, saving them in the true military sense of the word. The Twenty-third Fusiliers of Brown's division went forward on the left, with the Scots Fusiliers of the Duke of Cambridge's division in support. They effected the passage of the Alma, mounted the rugged and broken banks, pressed through vineyards and felled trees, and advanced under a galling fire of grape and musketry. There was a redoubt in front. When near the redubt the colors were made the object of particular attention. Luke O'Connor was one of the center sergeants between the officers who bore them. Lieut. Anstruther was mortally wounded and dropped his color. O'Connor was struck in the breast at the same moment and fell, but, recovering himself, snatched up the color and carried it until the end of the action. Color Sergt. Luke O'Connor of the Alma is now, I am proud to say, Lieut. Col. Luke O'Connor. The other instance happened in the supporting regiment. The Scots Fusiliers were thrown into momentary disorder—one of the accidents of war; the Twenty-third were confused, as well they might be with eleven officers and over 200 men knocked over, when a voice shouted, "Fusiliers, retire!" and the guardsmen, fancying the order was addressed to them, hesitated. At this critical moment Brevet Major Lindsay "stood firm with the colors, and by his example and energy greatly tended to restore order.—Tinsley's Magazine.

Phenomena of Rain.

One of the most curious things about rain is the inequality of its distribution. The reader is of course aware that rain may be measured in inches in almost any vessel set out to catch it. If a pail, for example, be put out in an open space on the ground, it will catch as much rain as would otherwise have sunk into the ground on the space occupied by the pail. If we visit the pail after every shower, we may, by means of a two-foot rule, tell what depth of rain has fallen. This is the principle of the rain gauge. In practice better means are of course adopted, so as to prevent evaporation and to measure the depth. Now it is of great consequence where we place our rain gauge. It might be supposed of no importance whether it were on the top of the house or in the garden close by. And yet, strange to say, a gauge in the garden near Westminster Abbey caught twenty-three inches of rain in the course of the year, while one on the roof of a house caught only eighteen inches, and one on top of the abbey only twelve inches. The fact is, rain forms at a very low elevation—much lower than is generally supposed; or, if not actually formed at a very low elevation, it increases the size of the drops which come from higher levels. Thus, while Mr. Glaisher was descending in a balloon, he passed through a dry, and then through a wet fog, where the drops of rain were exceedingly fine, covering his note book like pins' points. These increased in size on approaching the earth, and more rapidly when very near the earth.

How to Split a Sheet of Paper into Three Parts.

We have often read that a sheet of paper can be split into three parts. Thus it is said that a piece of newspaper can be divided into three leaves—one consisting of the surface on which an engraving or cut is printed, one with the letter press, and a perfectly blank sheet between them. To those who are incredulous we commend the following experiment—which we have not tried:

Get a piece of plate-glass and place it on a sheet of paper, which must be thoroughly soaked. With care and a little dexterity the sheet can be split by the top surface being removed. But the best plan is to paste a piece of cloth or strong paper to each side of the sheet to be split. When dry, violently and without hesitation pull the pieces asunder, when a part of the sheet will be found to have adhered to one and a part to the other. Soften the paste in water and the pieces can be easily removed from the cloth. This process is generally demonstrated as a matter of curiosity, yet it can be demonstrated, and it can be utilized in many ways. If we want to paste in a scrap-book newspaper articles printed on both sides of the paper, and possess but one copy, it is very convenient to know how to detach one side from the other. Some time ago the information how to split paper in this manner was advertised to be sold for a considerable sum.

A Philosophic Fiend.

"I should like to sell a gimlet," said a careworn-looking man, as he walked into the office, the other day.

"We have no use for one," replied the cashier.

"But you should always look into the misty future," went on the fiend demurely; "next winter you will want to make holes in your boot-heels, so you can get your skates on."

"I use club skates—no straps required."

"You may want to screw some boards together some time. The old-fashinned method of driving screws in with a hammer is pernicious, as it deteriorates the tenacity of the screw, as it were."

"Nothing to-day, sir."

"This gimlet also acts as a corkscrew."

"I don't want it."

"It also may be used as a tack-hammer, a cigar-holder, and a tooth-brush."

"I don't want it."

"It has an eraser, a pen, an inkstand, a table for computing compound interest, and a lunch-box attachment."

"I can't help it; I don't want it."

"I know you don't; you are one of those mean men who won't buy a gimlet unless it has a restaurant and a trip through Europe and an Italian opera company attached. You're the kind of a man who would live near an electric light to save the gas bill."

And the peddler walked out with his mental plumage on the perpendicula.

A Crowd Insulted.

A traveling tramp was yesterday trying to sell toothache-drops and corn-salve to a small crowd at the head of Monroe avenue. As sales were slow he thought to flatter the crowd by saying: "Gentlemen, I have traveled over 25,000 miles in this country, seen all sorts of people and come in contact with all colors, and I must say that you twenty men now surrounding me have the most intelligent appearance of any coterie I ever saw."

In the crowd was a six-footer who drives a coal-cart. He had been chewing gum in a very deliberate and methodical manner, and when the speech was ended he slowly turned from man to man to see what effect had been produced. Finding a look of indifference on each face he swallowed his quid, pushed his way to the front, and, kicking over the dry-goods box used by the "doctor" as a counter, he flourished his fists and called out:

"Mebbe this 'ere crowd can stand to be insulted to its teeth, but I'm a clothes-pin who can't be stepped on in my own town by a stranger! Come up here like a man and strike right out from the shoulder! No man can call me a coterie and keep a sound head on him!"

The doctor had pressing business down Randolph street.—Detroit Free Press.

A Sad Condition for a Man.

Matthews Rankins, of Lewiston, Me. has for twenty-three years been confined to one chair. The Journal of that city says that when a schoolboy, twenty-nine years ago, a companion tripped him, and in falling his spine was hurt. For two years after the accident he was able to walk around some, then he lost the use of his legs, and finally his whole body became rigid. His fingers and toes are all disjointed, the only material joint in his body being in one thumb. He can use his hands and ankles a little, and his eyes and tongue fully. When he sleeps, his low rocking-chair is simply tipped back and he is covered with a blanket. He has invented ingenious contrivances by which he reads and writes a great deal, and he seems as happy and contented as if he was not afflicted, though he suffers great pain incessantly.

TWO MEMBERS of the Galway Blazers an Irish hunting club of local distinction, bet $250 on the jumping quality of their horses. In the trial Mr. Power's Ruction cleared a railroad embankment, with a descent of fifteen feet, and won, although the rider of Mr. Bodkin's Droolen was ready to take the jump over a wall that had a perpendicular fall of twenty-five feet on the other side.

A GOOD-NIGHT SONG.

BY LA MOILLE.

God keep you safe, my little love,
All through the night;
Rest close in His encircling arms
Until the light.
My heart is with you as I kneel to pray;
Good night! God keep you in His care alway.

Thick shadows creep like silent ghosts
About my head;
I lose myself in tender dreams,
While overhead
The moon comes stealing through the window bars,
A silver sickle gleaming 'mid the stars.

For though I am so far away,
Feel safe and strong,
To trust you thus, dear love, and yet—
The night is long—
I say with sobbing heart the old [illegible] prayer,
Good-night! Sweet dreams! God keep you everywhere!
SHABBONA'S GROVE, Ill. [illegible]

PITH AND POINT.

THE common people of England object to the nobility because their offense is rank.

"ALAS! this fatal gift of booty!" as the man said who was arrested for receiving stolen goods.

SMITH thinks that his tailor's persistent demands ought to be checked, and so does the tailor.

"A KIND word spoken to a husband will go farther than a broomstick or a flirtation," says a woman of experience.

WHAT a paradox to say that gout runs in a family. Whoever saw gout even make a decent attempt at walking?

A SAILOR put a saddle on hind part before. A bystander showed him his error. The sailor exclaimed, "How do you know which way I am going to ride?"

HANDS have they, yet feel not—clocks. Legs have they, yet walk not—tables. Eyes have they, yet see not—needles. Teeth have they, yet chew not—combs.

A LADY'S underwear is described by that delicate and dainty term "lingerie," but a man is obliged to use such blamed commonplace terms as "shirt" and "night-gown."—Boston Post.

WHEN a husband comes home after midnight and asks his wife the time of night, and she bats him over the head with a rolling-pin, and tells him it has struck "one," it is time to retire.

"Aw! it is not to be wondered at," remarked Mr. Toplofty, as he adjusted his eyeglass; "sea-bathing has grown unpopulah; because you see—aw—the vulgah herd took to the watah, and it has become vewy much soiled."

A BALD-HEADED professor, reproving a youth for the exercise of his fists, said, "We fight with our heads at this college." The young man reflected a moment and then replied, "Ah, I see, and you have butted all your hair off."

AN Iowa editor acknowledges a present of grapes in rather ambiguous language. He says: "We have received a basket of grapes from our friend W., for which he will accept our compliments, some of which are two inches in diameter."

A WORD to the wise is sufficient. A minister made an interminable call upon a lady of his acquaintance. Her little daughter, who was present, grew weary of his conversation, and whispered in an audible tone, "Didn't he bring his amen with him, mamma?"

TWO FRIENDS met each other on a Paris boulevard. Laura—"My gracious, Emilie, how old you look to-day! I never remember you looking so old as you look to-day." Emilie—"You shouldn't be surprised, my dear, for I never was so old as I am to-day."

A WELL-KNOWN local preacher in a suburban town, while instructing a class of urchins in the catechism, told them that God could do everything, whereupon one of them asked: "Can God make a rock so big that he can't lift it?" The boy's question remains unanswered.

GOETHE said energy would accomplish anything desired in this world. Oh! Goethe, old fellow, were you only in the land of the living to-day, we should give you the task of talking a barber to death, competing with a man at his own game, as it were.—Turner's Falls Reporter.

A LONDON gent, walking in Dublin for the first time, got into easy conversation with a native, and chaffed him considerably, winding up with this smart observation: "Now, tell me, Pat, where you would be if the devil got his dues?" Pat replied with feigned simplicity, "Sure, then, I'd be alone, yer Honor."

The beauteous, buxom Bertha Bangs
Is one of our divinest girls;
She bangs the doors and bangs the chairs,
And likewise bangs her auburn curls.
She bangs on the pianny, too,
And bangs upon the light guitar—
But oh, of all the bangs she bangs,
She mostly bangs her auburn hair.
O banging, bouncing, buxom belle,
The poet's lyre with rapture twangs—
Responsive to the influence
Of thy beloved and beauteous bangs.
—St. Louis Times-Journal

A PROVIDENCE man relates that when he was a little boy he was one day standing in Market square with his grandfather, when four Irishmen came up, one of whom asked the distance to Pawtucket. He was told by the old gentleman that it was about four miles. "Well, faith," said Pat, in a mock tone of encouragement to his three tired companions, "that's not bad at all—only a mile apiece for us." "Whom do you want to see in Pawtucket?" inquired he. "Be jabers," was the quick reply, "I want to see meself there the most of anybody."

ALL honor to the man whose epitaph is written below; we never shall look upon his like again. When he departed his friends put up a marble slab with this inscription, the duplicate of which you will hardly find in any other country:

An honest fellow here is laid,
His debts in full he always paid;
And what is more rare, his neighbors tell us,
He sent back borrowed umbrellas.

Business Cares.

A pompous lawyer said to the keeper of an apple-stand, "Your business cares seem to wear upon you. You should go into something which is not so trying to the brain." "Oh, 'tain't business," replied the apple-seller; "it's lyin' awake nights tryin' to decide whether to leave my fortune to an orphan asylum or to a home for played-out old lawyers, as is killin' me!"

SABBATH READING.

Unspoken Prayer.

Too tired—too worn to pray,
I can but fold my hands,
Entreating in a voiceless way,
Of Him who understands
How flesh and heart succumb—
How will sinks, weary—weak.
"Dear Lord, my languid lips are dumb,
See what I can not speak."
Just as the wearied child,
Through sobbing pain opprest,
Droops, hushing all its wailings wild,
Upon its mother's breast—
So on Thy bosom, I
[illegible]
Nor doubt that Thou wilt let me lie
In trustful weakness there,
And though no conscious thought
Before me rises clear,
The prayer, of worthless language wrought,
Thou yet wilt deign to hear.
For when, at best, I plead—
What so my spirit saith—
I only am the bruised reed,
And Thou, the breathing breath.
—Margaret J. Preston.

Light in Darkness.

It is dark in the hut and cold.

The earth is covered with snow and the wind blows through the cracked window-panes, and in her poor home by the Zuyder Zee the blind girl spins.

Though dark she turns her wheel, for this is the only way to keep herself warm.

She toils on, whether the sun sends his bright beams into the hut or whether the veil of night is over all. She toils hard, for the spinning-wheel is her only means of support.

To-night the blind girl spins unusually fast, until at last the flax is all worked off the bobbin. Then the wheel stops, and with a sigh she drops her hands and thinks.

She arises, and finding her way groping along the wall to the little bureau in the corner, she eagerly grasps the only book in the room. Returning in the same manner to her chair, she sits down, opens the book and begins to read.

Read? Yes, read, and to find consolation in God's word. Though dark it may be without, within shines the light of the gospel. Her dark, dreary life is illuminated by Christ's love.

Beneficent friends have given her a "Bible for the blind," and taught her how to read with the finger tops. For many years she has found peace and happiness in the words of her Redeemer. Alas! this refuge, the only one she has, will be denied her.

In vain she feels over the letters and endeavors to make a phrase out of the few letters she can distinguish here and there. Incessant labor had hardened her fingers' tops; she could no more distinguish the letters with those callous fingers.

For a while she seemed to be stupefied. She is bereaved of the only thing which made her bear her gloomy lot patiently. She feels more forlorn than she ever did before. It seems to her that even God has forsaken her.

"I will bring the blind by a way that they know not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight; these things will I do unto them and not forsake them." These words of Isaiah come to her mind, and, ashamed of her unbelief, she kneels down, and, with the Bible still clasped in her hands, she prays:

"Dear Lord, Thy will be done; but it is so hard to part forever with Thy precious word, which has given me so many a consolation, and has always been a friend in need and my guide on my dreary path; still, Father, I submit to Thy will, for I know Tou shalt not leave me uncomforted."

At these words she pressed the book against her lips as if to give it the last parting kiss.

A cry breaks the silence of the room It is a cry of joy.

God has heard her prayer and restored the Bible to her. Her tender lips have touched the letters, and distinctly can she tell the words they pressed on. With tears of joy rolling over her pale cheeks, she again and again reads those words of the Savior:

"I am the light of the world; he that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness but shall have the light of life."

Faith had provided a way, as it will for all when the hour of extremity arrives—that hour which so frequently discloses the wisdom and love of God. —J. C. Honigh, in Youth's Companion.

Dorcas and Peter.

One of the liveliest occasions connected with the recent Baptist anniversaries in London was the Zenana breakfast, given at Canon Street Hotel, in the interest of the Zenana missions in India. The most taking of the speeches made was by Dr. Sanford. We quote some portion of it:

Cardinal Manning has spoken with stately eloquence about the primacy of Peter, but I think something might be said for the primacy of Dorcas. Peter was all very well for a man (of course I now leave out the mysterious element of the supernatural); he was "a rich, rough gem;" he had good sound sense; he was hardy, not fearing to let the wet wind whistle through his hair; he was loud, that superlative quality in a minister, and with a voice accustomed to battle with the hiss and roar of many waters; he was the very man to make everybody hear him in a great crowd, that voice of his being doubtless one reason, along with others, why divine wisdom appointed him to be the preacher to the Pentecostal crowd. With all his distinction, if he had tried to fill the place of Dorcas for only one week, he would have been made to feel his own nothingness. He was no shy violet hiding in the foliage and pouring its fragrance from the shade. A sick-room would not have been his sphere. His hand would have been too clumsy, his voice too noisy, and his foot too tremendous on the stair for a nurse, and he would have provoked a saint to say, if a saint had been familiar with the quotation, "A ministering angel, thou!" Could you have seen him with fumbling fingers and with eyes sweeping the horizon, essay to cut out coats and garments, you would have seen directly that, whatever else he might become, he would never become a seamstress. No, but the Lady of Joppa knew how to make the very needle evangelical, and she did such beautiful kindnesses with it for the women and children that with grateful delight they fondly lingered on her name, calling her "Gazelle." For her dear sake her Savior got a hearing, and we are quite sure that if there had been any Zenana work to do in her country she would have been the first to do it.—The Standard.

A TREACHEROUS MURDER.

The Killing and Robbing of a Boston Merchant in His Own House by Some Young-Men Guests.

Joseph E. Frye, of the Boston leather firm of Madan & Frye, 60 years old, was found dead in his cellar, with a bullet hole in his head. Near him in a coal bed was a revolver. His family were all absent. Two of the murderers have been arrested. They are Antonio Ardito, a Greek, and Nicolo Infantino, a Sicilian. Both were young barbers, and Ardito is said to have fled from his country to escape arrest for murder. Associated with them in the plot was Larry O'Neal, another barber, a notorious character and a professional thief. He is also a Sicilian. When Infantino and Ardito were arrested O'Neal slipped away, and he cannot be found. Infantino weakened in the hands of the police and told the story of the murder. Frye was frequently shaved at the shop where he was employed, and an intimacy sprung up between the two. Occasionally Infantino was invited to his victim's house, and enjoyed his hospitality, sometimes stopping to play in the latter's private billiard hall. With base ingratitude, Nicolo finally plotted with Ardito and O'Neal to kill and rob his friend. It was agreed that Infantino should obtain an invitation to Frye's house for himself and his friend, the Greek. This was accomplished, and the conspirators met on the Common the night of the murder, Nicolo having a pair of barber's shears, while O'Neal had a revolver. When they arrived at Frye's residence, Larry was stationed as a sentinel outside, and the others went in. Frye received his visitors most cordially. During the evening Nicolo and Mr. Frye played billiards in the upper room, while Ardito amused himself playing on the piano, and at intervals all had something to drink. Between 11 and 12 o'clock Nicolo, acting under instructions from the Greek, urged Mr. Frye to visit the various parts of the house for the purpose of showing it to them. This request the old man did not at first seem willing to grant, but, after considerable persuasion, he finally consented, and the trio started down stairs to the basement, Mr. Frye all unconscious of the terrible fate in waiting for him. It had previously been arranged between them that if he was induced to go down in the cellar they would take away what money he had, after which they were to rob the house. Acting in pursuance of this agreement, as soon as Frye reached the bottom of the stairs the Greek turned on him with the ferocity of a tiger and stabbed him with a pair of scissors. The doomed man made a desperate resistance and begged Nicolo to spare his life. At this point, however, Ardito ordered Nicolo to shoot the victim on pain of being killed himself; the shot was fired, and Frye fell forward on his face with a cry. The murdered man's pockets were rifled, his watch, chain, seal and keys being taken, and then the murderers went up-stairs and attacked the safe, carrying off silver-ware and other things. After leaving the house, the murderers divided their plunder and concealed it in different sections of the city, where a part of it has since been found.

Frye was very fond of young companions, and he does not seem to have been very choice in his selection of them. When he found a young man that he liked, he was almost over-attentive to him, taking him on excursions, inviting him to his house and demonstrating his friendship in other ways. Once he took a young man to New York with him, paying all his expenses.

How to Live for a Century.

The experience of the French clergyman, Canon Beadon, who lately died at the age of 102 years, offers a few suggestions to those who seek to know how they may attain to long life. He ate anything with impunity, not only eating heartily at every meal, but often nibbling biscuits, etc., between meals. He drank moderately of wine, and was to the last very fond of sweet things. He never knew what headache or rheumatism was, and, when a middle-aged man, could and would go out shooting from morning until night, exposed with no ill-effect to cold and wet. At 97 he had the first severe illness of his life—an attack of bronchitis. Up to this time he had performed service in his church every Sunday, with his regular three months' duty in Wells Cathedral, his voice continuing distinct and powerful. To the day of his death he never lapsed into anything like "second childishness." Possibly the explanation of his very long and healthy life lies in this: He had a most imperturbable temper and singularly even spirits, and would not allow anything to worry him. He had many an entertaining remembrance; not the least of them was the being held up to the window by his nurse to see the soldiers in the street during the Lord George Gordon riots. This was in 1780; the future canon was then 3 years old.

To Attain Long Life.

He who strives after a long and pleasant term of life must seek to attain continual equanimity and carefully to avoid everything which too violently taxes his feelings. Nothing more consumes the vigor of life then the violence of the emotions of the mind. We know that anxiety and care can destroy the healthiest body; we knew that fright and fear, yea, excess of joy, become deadly. They who are naturally cool and of a quiet turn of mind, upon whom nothing can make too powerful an impression, who are not wont to be excited either by great sorrow or great joy, have the best chance of living long and happy after their manner. Preserve, therefore, under all circumstances, a composure of mind which no happiness, no misfortune, can too much disturb. Love nothing too violently; hate nothing to passionately; fear nothing too strongly.

The President receives about a bushel of letters every day, relating to every conceivable subject.

FARM NOTES.

Rubbing the Tail by Horses.—Washing the rump and roots of the tail, both on top and underneath, with strong vinegar at least twice a day, and giving a small portion of tobacco, well broken up, in the feed, will usually cure this vice in a few days. In some cases it is a good plan to nail a piece of plug tobacco in a corner of the feed box, and let the animal bite at it at will. Where ascarides or pin-worms cause the irritation and trouble, tobacco is as good a vermifuge as can be used. It has the merit of rarely, if ever failing.

The experiment has been made of sowing oats and wheat together with a view to obtain a winter covering for the wheat. The seed, in the proportion of one part of oats to two parts of wheat, was sown in the fall, and the oats sprung up quickly and were killed by the early frost, the stalks and leaves lying on the ground all winter, keeping the snow from blowing away and preventing the sun from thawing the frozen ground. In the spring the dead oats made a good top dressing for the growing wheat. The crop of wheat in the following season was reported to be excellent, while wheat on the adjoining land planted in the usual manner was of no value.

Many of the embarrassing and dangerous accidents that occur in riding and driving might be prevented by a little attention. The rider should know for himself that every part of the bridle and saddle is in reliable condition. The driver should know if the harness and vehicle may be safely trusted. Considering the carelessness of multitudes, it is wonderful that there are not vastly more accidents in travel. It is time wisely spent when one walks around and cautiously inspects the several things upon which his limbs and life will depend. Those who keep trappings and vehicles should examine them patiently, from time to time, when not in use, and not wait till the moment of starting to work or to travel.

Whey for Calves.—An English exchange says: Where cheese is made this is the staple food for the calves, but it is a poor diet unless well supplemented with other food. Calves are very fond of sweet whey, and will drink much more than is good for them, to the refusal of other food. A meal of whey ought never to exceed three quarts, and trough food is indispensable. A change of food often brings on scour, which, if not checked, is a wearing and sometimes rapidly fatal complaint. An ill-ventilated box is a fruitful source of the same disorder, which is infectious. Prepared chalk and laudanum is the usual remedy; but a more simple, and, if taken in time, an excellent dose is two ounces of starch dissolved in half a pint of water.

A Remedy for Gapes.—In answer to a recent inquiry in the Rural for a cure for this pest of the poultry house, L. P. J., of Bethlehem, Ct., says: "I know there are innumerable so-called remedies for this malady, and I have tried a great many of them, besides giving my fowls a different course of feeding each year, and yet all my early chickens died. At length an old uncle—a prosperous farmer—told me to just take my coops into the orchard or meadow, entirely away from the house; to place each coop under a tree, mowing the grass where necessary. I did so, and even the chicks that were affected with the gapes speedily recovered, and I have not lost one since then. I was so glad at having found a cure for the gapes at last, that I have given this as another remedy for gapes in chickens, in the hope that others also may share my satisfaction."

Barn Yards.—The condition of the yards and stock-pens should be well looked to at all times. There are several reasons for this. Chief among them are the comfort of the cattle, and the quantity and quality of the manure. The bedding should be sufficiently deep and compact to absorb the moisture and cover the droppings, and yet not so much so as to leave a mass of mixed straw in place of good manure. It should also be amply sufficient to keep the animals clean and comfortable. The frequent summer showers should also be provided for, and the hollow places in open yards should be so well littered that pools are not formed, or, if they are, that they are covered over or filled with straw or other proper absorbents. In course of time, when it comes to be admitted and believed that the making of good manure is a sufficiently important part of farm business to receive the consideration it deserves, we shall, doubtless, have before long covered yards and sheds expressly for the making of manure.

Salt to Prevent Garget.—"O. W. W.," Sterling, Mass., writes: "A friend having a herd of cows was considerably troubled with garget. A portion of the bag would become inflamed and hard, the milk from that portion thick and ropy, and finally the inflamed portion would become useless. Four or five years ago he commenced giving to each cow, in her stall, a small handful of salt, every morning before milking, and has not had a single case of garget since he commenced the practice. He says he does not know that the salt prevents the garget, but is inclined to think it does. His cows seem to be anxious for their salt the first thing in the morning. Not long since he omitted to give the usual ration of salt before milking, and the first cow he sat down to was so uneasy that he was reminded of the neglect, and gave the cows their salt, after which there was no trouble. The reason he commenced to give the cows salt in their mangers was, because when he put salt in any receptacle where the cows had it in common, only the stronger of the herd would get any, these driving away the weaker ones, which would soon learn that the salt was not for them, and cease all attempts to get any. —American Agriculturist.

The Empress Eugenie.

The Paris Gaulois says that the Empress Eugenie is still in the same state of depression. She receives nobody, and dines alone in her own apartment. She only leaves her room to go into that of her son. On the first day she entered it since his burial she nearly fainted on beholding the fatal saddle which cost the Prince Imperial his life. The Empress supports herself with the consolations of religion. When she is not praying she gets her companion to read pious works to her, such as those of St. Augustin and Massillon. Her Majesty is still obliged to take chloral to obtain sleep. Her friends have tried in vain to induce her to change her residence and go to Spain; she insists on remaining at Chiselhurst for the time.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

HOUSEKEEPING IN SUMMER.

When the mercury is up among the nineties, and the air and earth are full of insect-life, the cares of the housewife are greatly increased. At that season, all the apartments of the dwelling, especially the pantry, store-closet and cellar, need the closest scrutiny.

Those who build and occupy their own houses are less likely to be troubled with house-bugs than those who move annually into rented houses. However, due caution on the part of the housekeeper is always essential in order to keep her house free from insect pests.

Without doubt, insects are much more interesting to the entomologist than to the housewife.

The surest way to keep clear of ants is to leave nothing around that they like. In extreme cases, an old table can be put in the cellar to keep provisions on—each foot of the table to rest in a saucer of water, so that the ants cannot cross it. The food that is kept on the table should be in covered dishes to keep out dust and flies, although there need be no trouble from the latter if the cellar windows have screens. The class of ants called "workers," that are disposed to visit the sugar barrel, cake box, etc., etc., fortunately have no wings.

Flies can be kept almost entirely out of the house if movable wire screens be fitted to every window and door. Mosquito netting will answer, but it is not so good as wire, which keeps in place better, and is not so soon injured by storms. But keep these pests at a distance by not allowing anything to be thrown about the yard to attract them.

The sow-bug, often seen near potatoes in the cellar, can be banished by sprinkling salt over all the vegetables.

Cockroaches can be driven away, if green cucumber parings be put near their haunts.

Moths may be kept out of carpets by shaking them thoroughly at house-cleaning time, after which the frequent use of the broom with an occasional sprinkling of camphor gum or insect-powder, and plenty of sunlight will exterminate them.

One of the annoyances of housekeeping in summer is, that food, however carefully prepared, soon spoils. There is no economy in using food that is not perfectly fresh. Meats that have the least taint about them should not be made into hashes, and the evil disguised by high seasoning. Disease lurks in such food. Fresh meats are best kept in refrigerators with plenty of ice above them, while at meal times they should be covered with wire screens, that are made for the purpose.

Ice is a great preservative, and the woman who has a liberal supply of it, with a good refrigerator, will find that these articles lessen the perplexities of housekeeping in summer.

FOR LOW SPIRITS.

Take one ounce of the seeds of resolution, mixed well with the oil of conscience, infuse it into a large spoonful of the salts of patience; distill very carefully a composing plant called "others' woes," which you will find in every part of the garden of life, growing under the broad leaves of disguise, add a small quantity and it will greatly assist the salts of patience in their operation. Gather a handful of the blossoms of hope, then sweeten them properly with the balm of prudence, and if you can get any of the seeds of true friendship, you will have the most valuable medicine that can be administered. Be careful to get the seeds of true friendship, as there is a seed very much like it called self-interest, which will spoil the whole composition. Make the ingredients into pills and take one night and morning, and the cure will be effected.

Mrs. L. Gardner.

COOKING RECIPES.

Boiled Okra.—Boil the tender pods in salted water for twenty minutes, and serve with butter, pepper, salt and vinegar.

Jelly Cake.—One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, three eggs, one teaspoonful of soda, and two of cream of tartar; three table-spoonfuls of sweet milk, and one cup of flour.

Okra and Tomatoes.—Peel and slice eight good-sized tomatoes, cut into rings the same number of tender okra pods and chop fine two small green peppers; boil in a porcelain kettle—iron discolors the okra—for 20 or 25 minutes. Season with butter and salt.

Lima Beans and Corn.—Boil a pint of shelled beans in water just to cover, for ten or fifteen minutes. Cut corn from half a dozen ears and add to the beans; boil twenty minutes or half an hour, adding hot water as needed to keep from burning. Season with pepper, salt and two table-spoonfuls of butter.

Tough Steak.—Instead of pounding, cut it with a sharp knife, making fine parallel cuts on either side until every part has been crossed and recrossed. Press it together and lay on a wire broiler. Hold close to the fire until each side is seared to retain the juice, then turn and tend with the utmost care. Place the steak upon a hot platter and season with bits of butter, pepper and salt.

Iced tea is becoming a fashionable, as it is a decidedly pleasant beverage. The tea should be made in the morning, and of half green and half black; make stronger and sweeter than usual; pour into a jug, and place in the ice house or chest. Serve in goblets, with small pieces of broken ice. To make lemon tea, add a few slices of lemon and a little of the juice to tea made as above.

THE CHINESE WALL.

Gen. Grant's Visit to the Great Monument.

[From a New York Herald Letter.]

About 2 o'clock in the afternoon Lieut. Sperry, the navigator, had an experience that must have reminded him of Columbus discovering America. He had found the Great Wall. By carefully looking through our glasses, in time we saw it—a thick, brown, irregular line, that crumbled into the sea. The Richmond steamed towards the beach, and so gracious was the weather that we were able to anchor within a mile of shore. All the boats were let down, and as many as could be spared from the vessel went ashore—the Captain, the officers, sailors in their blue, tidy uniforms, and an especial sailor, with a pot of white paint, to inscribe the fact that the Richmond had visited the Great Wall. The Great Wall is the only monument I have seen which could be improved by modern sacrilege, and which could be painted over and plastered without compunctions of conscience. From what I read of this stupendous achievement it was built under the reign of a Chinese Emperor who flourished two centuries before Christ. The Emperor was disturbed by the constant invasion of the Tartars, a hardy, nomadic race who came from the hills of Mongolia and plundered his people, who were, indeed, afterward to come—if the only the Emperor could have opened the book of fate and known—and rule the country and found the dynasty which exists, after a fashion, still. So his Majesty resolved to build a wall which should forever protect his empire from the invader. The wall was built, and so well was it done that here we come, wanderers from the antipodes, twenty centuries after, and find it still a substantial, imposing, but, in the light of modern science, a useless wall. It is 1,250 miles in length, and it is only when you consider that distance, and the incredible amount of labor it imposed, that the magnitude of the work breaks upon you. We landed on a smooth, pebbly beach, studded with shells which would have rejoiced the eyes of children. We found a small village and saw the villagers gathering corn. The children, a few beggars, and a blind person came to welcome us. The end of the wall which juts into the sea has been beaten by the waves into a ragged, shapeless condition. There was an easy ascent, however, up stone steps. At the top there was a small temple, evidently given to pious use still, for there was a keeper who dickered about letting us in, and the walls seemed to be in order, clean and painted. The wall at the site of the temple was seventy-five or 100 feet wide, but this was only a special width to accommodate the temple and present an imposing presence to the sea. As far as we could see the wall stretched over hill and valley, until it became a line. Its average width at the surface is from twenty to twenty-five feet. At the base it varies from forty feet to 100. It is made of stone and brick, and, considering that twenty centuries have been testing its workmanship, the work was well done.

As a mere wall there is nothing imposing about the Great Wall of China. There are 100,000 walls, the world over, better built and more useful. What impressed us was the infinite patience which could have compassed so vast a labor. Wonderful are the Pyramids, and wonderful as a dream the ruins of Thebes. There you see mechanical results which you cannot follow or solve, engineering achievements we could not even now repeat. The Great Wall is a marvel of patience. I had been reading the late Mr. Seward's calculation that the labor which had builded the Great Wall would have built the Pacific railways. Gen. Grant thought that Mr. Seward had underrated its extent. "I believe," he said, "that the labor expended on this wall could have built every railroad in the United States, every canal and highway, and most if not all of our cities." The story is that millions were employed on the wall; that the work lasted for ten years.

An Explosion of Starch.

Nearly two years ago a violent explosion occurred in a candy factory in this city, causing the death of thirteen persons. The cause of the explosion was never clearly known, though the evidence pointed strongly to the starch room as the source of the disaster. A similar, but fortunately less fatal, accident occurred lately in another candy factory in Elm street, under conditions which leave no doubt that starch dust was the explosive material.

The explosion took place in a drying room on the second floor, where the temperature ranges from 140 to 180 degrees. The drying rooms are 5 feet by 6 and 6 feet by 8 respectively, and are 12 feet high. In each is a furnace kept constantly red-hot. The walls are built strongly of brick incased in wood. In the rooms are arranged slides for starch boxes, in which the candies enveloped in powdered starch are placed to dry. The small room has slides for 2,000 boxes, and the large room slides for 3,000. Four men were at work in the drying room taking the candies from the racks. One was on a step-ladder to hand down the trays to the others, who stood around the furnace. He had five trays in his hands, and was about to hand them down when his foot slipped on the step-ladder, the trays fell, and, in falling, turned over so that a heavy cloud of heated-starch dust was thrown against the red-hot furnace. The sharp explosion that followed shook the building and filled the room with a sudden flame. The intensely-dried woodwork of the drying room caught fire instantly, and the apartment was swept by flames which threatened the entire building. The hands of the factory, however, attacked the flames and extinguished them before any serious damage had been done. The four workmen were severely but not fatally burned.—Scientific American.

Pot Calling Kettle Black.

A gentleman in this city has a crow that talks equal to a parrot. A few days since a colored individual was passing the house when the crow sung out: "Heigho!" The negro stopped and looked about him for some moments, at a loss to determine from whence the voice proceeded, when he suddenly discovered the loquacious bird of dusky plumage, and responded: "Heigho, Jim Crow!" The crow cocked his eye at the darkey a moment and then said: "Go long, nigger, go!" This made the colored individual as mad as a hornet, and, striking an attitude, he looked defiantly at the crow and exclaimed: "You go 'long yourself; who you call nigger? You're a darned sight blacker'n I am, now."—Wilmington (N. C.) Star.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

It is not generally known, as it ought to be, that the remedy for burns by carbolic acid is Canada fir balsam, spread on the part attacked.

Remedy for Hay Fever.—Green mountain asthma cure: Take quinia twice a day. Bathe the forehead in a dish of warm soft water; have the water deep enough so that the nose will fill. Do not snuff or use anything that will irritate the lining of the nose. The bath will soothe. Dip a linen cloth in a solution of camphor and hot water, and keep on the eyes as hot as you can bear. I have had the hay fever twenty years, and this, in all my experience, is the best remedy I have found.—Mrs. D. P. Wayne.

It is now the season when boys and girls in the country give their mothers sad nights by coming home in the miseries of poisoning by ivy. The irritation by this poison is acute, as I have reason to know, but the speedy cure for it is a wash of oxalic acid, a teaspoonful of the salt to a pint of water, with which the poisoned spots are bathed as often as they grow troublesome. The lotion smarts severely for a few minutes, but is followed by cessation of the poison pain, which itches as if one could tear the part to pieces. The above may need reducing for young children. Make it weak at first, and add grains of the salt till it is strong enough to give relief. A desert-spoonful of sweet oil taken daily is said to drive the poison out of the blood, but three severe cases were cured without it, to my knowledge, by the acid alone. It should not be put in tin, or any thing metallic, as it corrodes, and may form poisonous compounds.

The tortures which babies have to undergo are so many and so pitiful, and visited impartially on all about them in travel and at home; so many ailing, miserable little creatures are to be seen on the cars and ferry-boats, taken out by their distracted mothers for change of air, that I feel it will be giving general relief to tell the advice of a hospital physician, which proved an entire success in my own family. The pain of teething may be almost done away with, and the health of the child benefited, by giving it fine splinters of ice, picked off with a pin, to melt in its mouth. The fragment is so small that it is but a drop of warm water before it can be swallowed, and the child has all the coolness for its fevered gums, without the slightest injury. The avidity with which the little things taste the cooling morsel, the instant quiet which succeeds hours of fretfulness, and the sleep that follows the relief, are the best witness to this magic remedy. Ice may be fed to a 3-months' child this way, each splinter being no larger than a common pin, for five or ten minutes, the result being that it has swallowed in that time a teaspoonful of warm water, which, so far from being a harm, is good for it, and the process may be repeated hourly, or as often as the fretting fits from teething begin.

Wanted a Specimen.

They were sitting in the office of Engineer DeHaas yesterday afternoon, that is, a few of Burlington's most worthy officials, when a Hawk-Eye reporter intruded upon them in search of news. There was a positive declaration from each of them that he knew nothing. After a few moments' commonplace remarks, one of the gentlemen told a story. This reminded another official of a little incident in his experience as a school-teacher. He said: "I had a small microscope in the school, and I thought I would entertain the children with it one afternoon. I had heard that a louse was a wonderful thing under a magnifying glass, so, just before school was dismissed at noon, I told the children that I wanted a big, fat louse, and that for the finest and fattest one I would give 15 cents. Well, sirs, I dismissed that school, took my dinner and went over in a corner to eat it. I had my lunch nicely laid out, and had just got started, when I noticed a little 6-year-old come in the doorway and start toward me with his right hand extended and a triumphant expression lighting up his countenance from ear to eye and back again. He marched right up to me, and as he got within reaching distance he unclosed his hand, and said, 'There, teacher; there, I got him,' and with that he deposited a fine, fat gray-back alongside of the lunch. He was about to start off when in came a little girl in the same manner, walked up with her head down, her thumb in her mouth, and laid down two. Well, they began to come in then right along, until about 75 were crawling around before me. I told the children to take them out, and save me two of the best of them. Then they gathered them up and took them away; but, gentlemen, I ate no more dinner. It took a week's salary to pay off the various 15 cents I had promised, and when the debts were all paid the study of animated nature in that direction was suspended for the present." Here the official paused and looked around for the "next," but no one offered to go one better, and soon the news-seeker quietly withdrew.

Connecticut blue laws cannot be enforced so easily, after all. The City Attorney of Norwich refuses to prosecute Sunday excursionists under the statute of 1702, believing that it would not be conducive to the best interests of the city, secular or religious, to do so.

A prisoner in the jail at Brunswick, Ga., washed his face and combed his hair in a bath-room, and emerged so changed in appearance that he was able to walk past the jailer into the street unrecognized.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, SEP. 18, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

REPUBLICANISM.

FROM THE LEMARS (IOWA) SENTINEL.

The Leading Republican Editor Again Gets Up on His Pastern J'ints—"Ruthford, Dare You!"

Now, Ruthford Burchard Hayes,
President of the United States in defiance of the constitution of the United States,
Counted in by Zach Chandler, and placed on the chair by Grant,
Taken from the gutter and seated on the throne.
Are you a man or a mouse?
Such an opportunity as is now within your grasp,
Comes but once in an era, and when utilized serves to mark the beginning of new epochs.
Are you a game cock or a dunghill rooster,
A bubble floating along on the turbulent waves of destiny,
Or a master-spirit evoked from the Laboring Ages?
A fraud or a fact?
Ruthford, from your eyrie cast your eye to the Southland,
From swaggering Kentucky to lying Louisiana,
From chafing Carolina, across cowardly Mississippi to brutal Texas,
And note the campfires of Rebellion and Hate
Burning in the eyes of the baffled traitors who sought to destroy this nation.
Note red-handed murderers, and noon day assassins,
Sitting in a place of honor
(Providing one can conceive of an honorable place in such a land),
And fanning anew the flames of treason,
See there, down in Yazoo, in old Mississippi,
Yazoo, the pride and glory of Rebeldom,
The home of cowardly cut-throats, and states rights;
The air of human butchers and state soverignty;
The entrenched haunt of political assassination and last ditch of state lines;
The invulnerable citidel of murder and roaring champion of state constitutions;
The port cullis of treason and implacable enemy of the nation:
We say, Ruthford, look down there,
Take your cue,
(If we were sure you were a reality and not a sham, we would say inspiration instead of cue),
Proclaim the states of Mississippi and Louisiana in open rebellion against the nation,
And declare every state of the old rebel confederacy in a state of seige.
Ruthford, dare you?
The man who dares not is lost,
Or drifts along like a maggot on a chip into the oblivion from which he should never have emerged.
Thirty million loyal hearts are behind you, Ruthford,
Are ready to echo the first note
That tells of a grand strong purpose.
This is a Nation.
Ruthford, dare you say it?
It takes a giant to pronounce the word from the lofty eminence you occupy,
A giant with lungs of leather and thews of brass.
Ruthford, are you the man?
Issue the proclamation.
Appoint Ben. Butler military governor of the insurrectory provinces, with headquarters in Yazoo City, in old Mississippi;
Call an extra session of congress;
Exclude therefrom every so-called senator and representative from the rebellious territory,
And with a loyal legislature begin the great work of moulding a plastic nation into form.
This is the heroic method, and requires a hero in the van.
Rutherford, we fear you are not the man on horseback.
The white-winged couriers of the deep will bring HIM from the Orient,
Where he is now arbitrating the affairs of Empires whose history takes roots in the mists of an antiquity measured by thousands of years.
Grant, the simple citizen, smoking his cigar, the statesman without an equal, the soldier without a peer,
Is coming, he for whom the loyal north
Watches and Waits.

MORE OF THE SAME SORT CONCERNING SOUTHERNERS.

That so infamous, villainous, base, relentless, incorrigible, sinister, indecent, corrupt, false-hearted, unscrupulous, ignoble and Demoniacal a people should ever have enjoyed a reputation for chivalry, honor or courage, is bad enough;
But that, after the American people had got to know them as they really are,
Such spawn of hell should have been rehabilitated with political rights, and made the political equals of Loyal,
Brave,
True,
Northern men,
Is the champion crime of the nineteenth century.

Idiotic Jokes.

Charlotte N. C. Observer.

The old joke of swapping the shoes that may be left outside the hotel doors thereby producing no little confusion among the owners of the same when they awake the next morning, has just been supplanted by one more seriously practical. At a watering-place which rarely fails to have representatives from Charlotte during the summer, practical jokers got in the laundry-room and marked all the unmarked clothes. As a matter of course, they utterly disregarded the fitness of things, and the result was a degree of confusion which defies description. Old gentlemen got things which were the reverse of pinafores; old ladies tried on garments which were both too long and too short, and children had to be led away to rest in—well, there was no end of it. This story is told by a young man who came home with a low-neck and short-sleeve shirt, ruffled and furbelowed till there was scarcely room for the practical jokers to inscribe his name.

Buying Gum on Trust.

A small boy with a big cent in his hand stood before a Michigan-avenue grocery for a long time before making up his mind to enter. When asked what he desired, he inquired: "If a boy should come here and get trusted for a stick of gum, how much would it be?" "One cent," was the reply. "And a boy should come here with the cash, how much would it be?" "Just the same." "Then I guess I'll get trusted," remarked the financier as he slipped the cent down in his pocket.

Not a Horse for a Lady.

[Causeur in Boston Transcript.]

A well-know Bostonian was trying a horse one day in company with the owner, a professional "jockey." Having ridden him a mile or two, the gentleman, who noticed that he pulled pretty hard, and showed a good deal of spirit, requiring constant watching and a steady rein, said, "Do you think that is just the horse for a woman to drive?" "Well, sir," answered the jockey, "I must say that I shouldn't want to marry the woman that could drive that horse."

Life in Detroit.

Detroit Free Press.

"Your folks gone anywhere this summer?" inquired one boot-black of another at the post-office yesterday.

"Has your'n?" was the evasive reply.

"Say, Jim, what kind of a boy are you?" asked the first, after a long pause.

"Me? Well, I never give a feller away."

"Then, if you won't let on that my mother had to stay at home to wash for her regular customers, I won't say anything about your father, who is taking his vacation in the work-house."

They shook hands over it and both will keep mum.

"Bangs" Vindicated.

EDITOR HERALD:—I read in the last issue of your paper your article on "bangs," also one in a former issue on the same subject. Now, Mr. Editor, it is not right to abuse the vanities of the fair sex. Don't you know that in our dress we aim only to please the sterner sex? Why is it, then, that you laugh at all our pains? Don't you suppose that we are well aware of the fact that, —laugh at the prevailing style as you may—should one of us be strong minded enough to set it aside in our dress there is not a man among you but would laugh at her more derisively than you do at fashion's extremest folly? Now, my dear editor of The Herald, if we thought you were in earnest in your dislike of bangs, and were not talking to hear yourself talk, there is not a daughter of Eve among us but would eschew them forever. You say they do not improve our looks. Now, my mirror tells me differently; and if you think that it does not tell the truth, could you see me when I comb my bangs from off my noble brow your love of truth would compel you to coincide with the mirror. Now, don't I pray you, make fun of us any more, but bear in mind that there is not a folly in fashion's vagaries so absurd that we would not heartily indorse did we but think it would please your sex.

ONE WHO WEARS BANGS.

This is the first attempt we have seen to publicly vindicate what we have always considered a silly and disgusting practice, and while we admire the frankness and candor of the writer we cannot forego the opportunity of making some criticisms upon her argument. While we hope we are not lacking in appreciation of the efforts of our fair friends to please the "sterner sex," we prefer that sensible ladies shall consult their own superior tastes, rather than bow in slavish devotion to the grosser whims of man. Regarding the case in point, we have yet to hear a representative of our sex express himself in terms of admiration of banged hair, and we fear our fair friends have only been deluded by the feigned admiration of those who, appreciating their efforts to please and not dreaming that their own tastes were being consulted—had not the manly courage to censure what their better judgement condemned. A bright eye beaming with mirth and pleasure, a noble brow indicating taste and refinement, and a forehead, full and high, that betraps a clear, sprightly intellect, are in our humble opinion, among the most lovely features of women, and candor compels us to say that it pains us to see these lovely natural adornments concealed or disguised with bangs, the verdict of our fair friend's mirror to the contrary notwithstanding. —Angola Herald.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
135 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana.
9-33-1y.

IF YOU WANT A
SILK HAT,
A soft or Stiff Hat,
A Street or Traveling Cap
A Youth's or Boy's Hat.
A Child's Turban,
Or anything in the line of
GENT S' FURNISHING GOODS!
Call On
K. B. Miller & Co.,
THE HATTERS,
34 Calhoun Street, Ft. Wayne.
SHIRTS MADE TO ORDER,
A SPECIALTY. 14-6m

For Sale at a Sacrifice.

A GEISER THRESHING MACHINE in good condition, offered for sale by Mr. D.D. Moody, at a very low price, and on time. This is an excellent opportunity to get a bargain. 37tf.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else. The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 29-1y

—Use Card's fever and ague cure and liver invigorator. For sale by F. E. Davenport and Casebeer & Matheny. 34-3m.

Read, Read.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please address G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county, who is authorized to sell the Singer Machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments furnished on short notice. 30-tf.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER AND SPECIAL FLAVORING EXTRACTS.
Trade Mark.
Eminent Chemists and Physicians cer'ify that these goods are free from adulteration, richer, more effective, produce better results than any others, and that they use them in their own families.
DR. PRICE'S UNIQUE PERFUMES are the Gems of All Odors.
TOOTHENE. An agreeable, healthful Liquid Dentifrice.
LEMON SUGAR. A Substitute for Lemons.
EXTRACT JAMAICA GINGER. From Pure Root.
STEELE & PRICE'S LUPULIN YEAST GEMS.
The Best Dry Hop Yeast in the World.
STEELE & PRICE, Manfrs., Chicago, St. Louis, and Cincinnati.

YOU CAN BUY A FINE
PARLOR SUIT!
With puffed edges and stuffed backs, including n mrble table, for FIFTY DOLLARS!
—AT—
F. FLIEGNER'S FURNITURE STORE
15 WEST WAYNE STREET
FORT WAYNE, IND

ISAAC HAGUE'S
NEW SHOE STORE!
A NEW STOCK OF
BOOTS AND SHOES
Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates syles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.
MR. CHARLES RAUT
Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen, w [illegible] d to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— first door east of McQuiston & Ralston' double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.
16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

FOR SALE
AT LOWEST PRICES AT
THE PHYSICIANS' DRUG STORE.
A full line of everything usually kept in a
FIRST-CLASS DRUG STORE,
—SUCH AS—
Pure Drugs, Patent Medicines,
Perfumery, Hair Oil, Fine Soaps,
Brushes, Lamp Chimneys, Coal Oil
And a complete line of
Toilet Articles.
Liver & Kidney Pads,
Trusses, Shoulder braces. A choice selection of pure wines and liquors, furnished for medicinal purposes only. A full line of Wall Paper and Window shades, with all the latest improved fixtures, will be sold at prices remarkably low. We ask a share of public patronage, feeling satisfied that we can offer inducements worthy of attention.
DAY'S KIDNEY PAD
THE GREAT DISCOVERY
FOR DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS, BLADDER AND URINARY ORGANS. A remedy that will positively cure DIABETES, GRAVEL, DROPSY, BRIGHTS DISEASE, HIGH COLORED URINE, INCONTINENCE, AND RETENTION OF URINE, NERVOUS DEBILITY and FEMALE COMPLAINTS when NOTHING ELSE CAN. Its success proves the efficacy of ABSORPTION. It saved the life of its discoverer and is saving the lives of thousands of others. For sale by Druggists or sent by mail on receipt of the price, ($2.00.)
DAY KIDNEY PAD CO.,
Sole Proprietors, Toledo, Ohio.
Send your address for our pamphlet, "How a Life was Saved."
CASEBEER & MATHENY,
First door South of First National Bank. Auburn, Ind.

SAVED!
TIME, PATIENCE & MONEY
By always taking the great
Wabash Route,
FOR ALL POINTS
orth, East, South or West
LIGHTNING TRAINS,
Invariably on Time, with Close and Sure Connections.
No changes of cars to St. Louis, Hannibal, Quincy, Keokuk, Peoria, Burlington, Kansas City, Atchison and St. Joe, and only one change to all points in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Arkansas and Texas, forming the SHORTEST AND QUICKEST
—AND—
Only Direct Route
From the West to all points in the East, including New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.
Through Sleepers from St. Louis to Boston, 1233 MILES,
The Longest Sleeping Car Line in the World.
A. L. HOPKINS, Gen'l Manager. R. ANDREWS, Gen'l Sup't.
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen'l Passenger Agent, Toledo, O.

JUSTRECEIV'D
—AT—
J. ABRIGHT'S
Fine Gold and Plated Jewelry,
Ladies Gold Watches,
American Watches,
Rogers & Bro. Silverware,
A splendid line of imported Vases
Watch Chains, magnificent
Holiday Gifts, Lockets,
Ladies Sets, Gents
GOLD & SILVER SETS
Sleeve and Collar Buttons, Jet
Shell and Horn Jewelry,
All at astonishingly
LOW PRICES.
Watches and Jewelry neatly repaired on short notice

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich SouthernR. B

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after sep. 29 1878, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm
Toledo	11 05 a m	12 01 a m	10 p m
Wauseon	12 16 "	1 08 "	"
Bryan	1 06 "	1 52 "	"
Butler	1 42 "	2 25 "	"
Waterloo	2 00 "	2 40 "	"
Sedan	2 10 "	2 50 "	"
Corunna	2 15 "	2 55 "	"
Kendallville	2 30 "	3 05 "	"
Ligonier	3 07 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	3 38 "	4 10 "	"
Elkhart	4 00 "	4 35 "	4 15 "

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	3 05 "
Goshen	1 29 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 56 "	10 42 "	"
Kendallville	2 30 "	11 18 "
Corunna	2 40 "	11 32 "
Sedan	2 47 "	11 36 "
Waterloo	2 55 "	11 45 "
Butler	3 10 "	12 01 a m
Bryan	3 45 "	12 30 "
Wauseon	4 27 "	1 27 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 30 "	9 30

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. E. CURTIS, Division Supt.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1878.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Nigh ex	No. 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 12	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 13	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7.00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Nig't ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 30 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 48	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 25 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 20	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 45	4 55	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 00	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 6	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15 pm	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Detroit Eel River & Illinois R R.

TAKE EFFECT DEC. 2, 1878.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	MAIL. No. 2.	ACCOM. No. 4.	LOCAL FT No. 8.
lv. Logansport	[illegible]	7 35pm	6 45am
Mexico	9 15	8 30	7 51
Denver	9 27	9 00	8 46
Chili	9 36	9 12	9 00
Roann	9 54	9 37	9 55
Laketon	10 12	10 00	10 25
N. Manchester	10 26	10 17	11 10
Liberty Mills	10 36	[illegible]	11 [illegible]
Collamer	10 51	10 50	12 27pm
S. Whitley	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Columbia City	11 26	11 21	1 50
Collin's	11 40	11 46	2 25
Churubusco	[illegible]	12 17am	2 56
La Otto	12 25pm	12 [illegible]	3 35
Cedar Creek	12 3	12 53	4 15
Auburn Junct'n	12 50	1 12	[illegible]
Auburn	12 54	1 17	5 05
Butler	1 20am	2 00am	6 30pm

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1.	No. 5.	No. 7.
Logansport ar	7 10pm	1 46pm	8 20pm
Mexico	6 35	11 15	2 55pm
Denver	6 23	11 30	2 30pm
Chili	6 17	11 17	2 10pm
Roann	6 00	11 00	2 00pm
Laketon	5 46	10 35	1 27pm
North Manchester	5 36	10 25	1 20pm
Liberty Mills	5 20	10 10	1 00pm
Collamar	5 15	9 53	12 40pm
South Whitley	5 11	9 40	12 30
Columbia City	4 46	9 12	11 25
Collin's	4 30	8 46	10 27
Churubusco	4 15	8 30	10 04
La Otto	3 55	7 57	9 08
Cedar Creek	3 40	7 45	8 42
Auburn Junction	3 25	7 25	8 00
Auburn	3 20	7 18	7 18
Butler lv	2 40pm	6 30am	6 00am

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

CHICAGO DIVISION.

TIME TABLE No. 4.

TO TAKE AFFECT MAY 18, 1879.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt	N. Y. Expr'ss	Chic'go Expr's
CHICAGO		10 05pm	9 10am
Walkerton Junction		1 05am	12 10pm
Milford Junction	2 20pm	2 14	1 20
Cromwell	3 20pm	2 45	1 46
Albion	4 25pm	3 10	2 08
Avilla	5 20pm	3 30	2 34
Garrett, ar	5 55pm	3 45	2 50
Garrett lv	4 15am	3 55	3 10
Auburn Junction	am	4 08	3 26
St. Joe	am	4 26	3 44
Hicksville	am	4 44	4 00
Defiance	8 40am	5 27	4 48
Fostoria	2 30pm	7 25	6 40
Tiffin	3 43pm	7 54	7 09
CHICAGO JUNCTION	6 00pm	9 00	8 10

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Expr'ss	Chic'go Expr's
CHICAGO JUNCTION	5 20am	8 15am	6 40pm
Tiffin	6 20	9 12	7 50
Fostoria	9 25	9 35	8 14
Defiance	4 45pm	11 30	10 38
Hicksville	6 18	12 14pm	11 26
St. Joe	6 50	12 30	11 41
Auburn Junction	7 25	12 50	12 05am
Garrett ar	8 00	12 58	12 10
Garrett lv		1 25	12 20
Avilla		1 40	12 33
Albion		2 08	12 56
Cromwell		2 31	1 28
Milford Junction		3 00	1 55
Walkerton Junction		4 02	3 20
CHICAGO		7	6 10

N. H. WOOD, Master of transportion Chicago Division, Garrett.
C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans, Ohio Division Chicago.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line

75 Miles Shortest to Indianapolis, Louisville and all points South. 52 Miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas Texas, and all points West. Direct Rout to Detroit and all Michigan and Canada points.

TIME CARD IN EFFECT MAY 25, '79.

SOUTH.	MAIL.	EX.	ACC.
Bay City	....	am	....
Saginaw	....	am	....
Lansing	....	am
Detroit		am	3 50pm
Ann Arbor		am	5 30pm
Jackson	6 00am	[illegible] am	6 50pm
Jonesville	7 10am	[illegible] pm	9 00am
Bankers	7 27am	[illegible] pm	9 40pm
Waterloo	9 12am	[illegible] pm	12 41am
Auburn	9 20am	[illegible] pm	1 06am
Auburn Junc.	9 28am	[illegible] pm	1 10am
Ft. Wayne	10 20am	[illegible] pm	2 25am
Indianapolis	6 25pm	pm	....
Cincinnati	7 00pm		....
Louisville	11 00pm	am	....
St. Louis	7 30am	am	....
Washington		5 00pm	....
Baltimore		9 20pm

NORTH.		EX.	ACC.
Baltimore		7 10am	....
Washington		8 35am	....
St. Louis	8 00am	7 00pm	....
Louisville	3 00pm	6 50pm	7 30am
Cincinnati			9 10am
Indianapolis	6 40pm	4 05am	11 50am
Ft. Wayne	5 00am	11 40am	5 00pm
Auburn Junc.	5 52pm	12 31pm	6 25pm
Auburn	5 55am	12 35pm	6 30pm
Waterloo	6 05am	12 46pm	7 03pm
Bankers	7 54am	2 22pm	10 20pm
Jonesville	8 10am	2 37pm	10 45pm
Jackson	9 20am	3 40pm	12 35am
Ann Arbor	10 35am	5 10pm	2 05am
Detroit	11 50am	6 30pm	3 35am
Lansing		5 24pm
Saginaw		8 57pm
Bay City		9 55pm

All trains daily except Sunday. Through tickets to all principal points. For information as to routes and connections apply to

P. B. LOOMIS, Pres't & Gen'l Mang'r.
S. K. HOOPER, Gen'l Ticket Ag't.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect November 10, 1878.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	5 40 pm	....
Bluffton	2 12 pm	[illegible] pm	....
Montpelier	2 52 pm	[illegible] pm	....
Hartford	3 37 pm	[illegible] pm	....
MUNCIE	4 08 pm	[illegible] pm	....
Newcastle	5 00 pm	....	....
Cambridge City	5 37 pm		....
Connersville	6 17 pm		....
Cincinnati	8 20 pm	....	....
INDIANAPOLIS	6 15 pm	10 55 pm	....
Louisville	11 00 pm	8 20 am	....
Terre Haute	....	1 32 am	....
St. Louis	....	7 30 am	....

STATIONS	GOING NORTH Mail.	Express	Accom.
St. Louis	....	8 00 am	7 00 pm
Terre Haute	....	3 27 pm	1 [illegible] am
Louisville	....	2 00 pm	6 50 pm
Indianapolis	.... am	6 40 pm	4 15 am
Cincinnati	8 00 am	....	....
Connersville	11 13 am	....	....
Cambridge City	11 48 am	....	....
New Castle	12 25 pm	....	....
Muncie	1 25 pm	9 20 pm	6 55 am
Hartford	2 13 pm	10 05 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	2 40 pm	10 31 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	3 15 pm	11 00 pm	9 15 am
Fort Wayne	4 25 pm	11 15 am	9 45 am

Trains Nos, 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.
Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.
All trains daily except Sunday.
Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 9. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, SEPTEMBER 25, 1879. Number 39.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be insertedunder this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 40 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills.

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

Thos.H. Sprott.

REAL ESTATE, COLLECTION AND INSURance Agent. Loans effected on improved farms. Kansas lands for sale or trade.
Auburn, Indiana

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners; two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

D. J. Swarts, M. D.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO DISEASEs of the Eye and Ear, Fistula in Ano, Hemorrhoids or Piles and Chronic Ulcers. Office on Main street, over Shaffer's Furniture Store, Auburn, Ind.

Drs. Caseboer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET. EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross. Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month; at Waterloo, the first and at Butler the second Saturday of every spring and fall month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.
W. H. MACKINTOSH,
Co. Sup't, of schools.

$66 A WEEK in your own town, and no capital risked. You can give the business a trial without expense. The best opportunity ever offered for those willing to work. You should try nothing else until you see for yourself what you can do at the business we offer. No room to explain here. You can devote all your time or only your spare time to the business, and make great pay for every hour that you work. Women make as much as men. Send for special private terms and particulars, which we mail free. $5 outfit free. Don't complain of hard times while you have such a chance. Address H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1y.

Sick Headache

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively Cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, &c. They regulate the Bowels, and prevent Constipation and Piles. The smallest and easiest to take. Only one pill a dose 40 in a vial. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 cents. Sold by all Druggists.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., Prop'rs, Erie, Pa.

Five Vials by mail for one dollar.

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $5 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1y.

A time to pay Debts.

(Indiana Farmer.)

The wise man declares that "to everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose." Among these times or seasons he mentions "A time to get, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away." He does not speak of a time to pay debts, for the reason probably that he did not know of a time when it was proper to contract them. But Solomon, or any other wise man, would agree with us in naming this as the time for farmers, who have made the mistake of getting into debt, to pay out and be free. It is hardly necessary to discuss the importance of keeping clear of indebtedness, of the hindrance and discomfort of debt, and the feeling of independence and self-respect enjoyed by the man who owes no man anything but good will, but which he who is in debt cannot know. The same wise man whom we have quoted puts the case tersely and truly when he says "the borrower is servant to the lender." It is unnecessary to enlarge upon this branch of the subject, however, nor need we say much upon another even more serious topic in connection with it, the duty that every man who has a family owes to those dependent upon him to rid himself of debt at the earliest opportunity. Every one who is at all familiar with matters about the courts and county offices well knows the difficulties, delays and expenses attending the settling up of estates in cases where decedents have left property encumbered with debt. In view of the uncertainty of human life, the duty is imperative on every head of a family to remove every embarrassment possible from his property, so as to leave no unnecessary difficulties to his widow and heirs in the settlement of the estate in case of his death.

But the point of our text is that now is the time to pay. The large wheat crop makes money plenty among farmers and the prospect for a good crop of corn and pork well nigh assures a continuance of the prosperous season to its close. It is a remarkably favorable year to the farming class; their financial condition has seldom been better and we cannot reasonably expect another such season for years. Probably few of us will ever again see a year when snow and sunshine, dry weather and rain will be meted out to us in just such proportions as during the nine or ten months between our last sowing time and harvest; and when, too, such a failure in the crop occurs in foreign countries to keep prices advanced. Surely then this is the time to pay debts and become independent. Let all in this condition take our advice and they will thank us for it. We are pleased to learn that many farmers in different parts of the state are taking up notes and lifting mortgages, but we occasionally hear of others who refrain from selling their wheat for fear of being called on to pay their debts, as soon as they do so. This is bad policy, not to say downright dishonesty. It certainly has the appearance of being the latter, for when a man has the means to pay a debt and makes no effort to do so, it seems as though he harbored bad intentions. We trust that no such charge can be brought against any of our readers.

American Morality.

[New York Sun.]

The official envelopes of all the departments at Washington have a printed notice on the front forbidding their use for any private purpose. The notice is in the following words, with the name of each particular office inserted, in lieu of "Treasurer of the United States:"

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.
To be returned to
TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES
If not delivered in ten days.
Official Business.

Any person using this envelope to avoid the payment of postage on private matter of any kind will be subject to a fine of three hundred dollars.

Thousands of copies of John Sherman's partisan speeches have been circulated in these envelopes all over the country in direct violation of the law, for which the sender might be prosecuted. When the head of a department thus openly prostitutes a public trust to a personal object, and makes his subordinates participants in the offense, it is easy to see what effect such an example must have on the clerks, and what the state of discipline must be under him.

This is only an illustration of the practices at Washington, where the whole public service is used to advance partisan and personal interests, and where hypocrisy is added to corruption that Grant bequeathed as a legacy to his successor.

Afraid of the Wabash.

[Detroit News.]

The heavy men of Detroit ought to come forward now, and, without waiting for the Wabash company to act, organize a company and proceed with the construction of the Eel River railroad extension to this city. Such policy would insure its being built, while there would be no risk at all of the Wabash ultimately taking it off their hands. The same go-ahead activeness that has been shown in the case of the Marquette & Mackinaw road would give to detroit her very best railroad outlet.

Don't Write with a Pencil.

[Boston Journal.]

Writing with a pencil on postal cards is attended with danger. A man recently wrote to his mother in Chicago in this way, and during its transit through the postoffice some rogue got possession of it, erased all the writing except the signature and filled it up with a request that the sum of $90 should be sent to J. Rogers, who had loaned him that amount. The mother, upon receiving the card, immediately sent a money order for the amount to the address mentioned, and wrote to her son what she had done. He immediately telegraphed to stop the order, and luckily the dispatch arrived in time to save the money. The rogue called at the office for the money, but was told that the order had been stopped, and hastily decamped.

The Thirst for Gold in Georgia.

[Special to the Courier-Journal.]

ATLANTA, GA., Sept. 12.—The growth in the gold-mining interests of Georgia has been remarkable in the past few years, and the yield of bullion now goes over $1,000,000 per annum, and is rapidly increasing. The history of these mines is curious. In 1847, nuggets of gold were discovered in the beds of branches all through the Blue Ridge region of north Georgia. Some of these "finds" were marvelous, nuggets reaching thousands of dollars in value being found. Silver and diamonds were also found. The story of these discoveries went abroad in the land, and miners flocked in by the thousands. The territory belonged to the Creeks, and the government warned the adventurers off. The rough-and-ready miners continued to pour in, and the Indians then organized to defend their lands. Several sanguinary encounters took place, and the whole history of the "intrusion," as it is called, was marked with blood. There was no system in the mining that followed; it was all surface work, the soil being dissolved in rocks and pans. After a heavy rain the hills would swarm with "swindlers," as the pan-miners were called, picking up the grains of gold washed up by the flood. There were scarcely any stamp-mills, and no scientific mining. The yield was so large, however, that a mint was established at Dahlonega, and a heavy work was done. The surface mines were worked out in ten or twelve years, and the gold-seekers left for new fields. The mint was dismantled and abandoned, and the mines sank to nominal prices. After the war, northern capital began to inspect these forsaken mines. It was discovered that the quartz was rich, was easily worked, that labor was cheap and water-powers abundant. Various companies, such as Hand & Co., of Cleveland, and the Blakes and Lambards, of New York, came in and invested heavily. The mines were bought at a trifle, but elaborate machinery was put up. The Yahoula company ran an aqueduct over forty miles in length. The yield was slow at first, but remunerative in all cases where the quartz was properly crushed. The business has grown immensely since. Six years ago the yield, as reported by the statistics in the geological bureau, was less than $100,000. This year the yield is over $1,000,000, and new mines are being constantly opened. The mountains are full of prospectors, and machinery is shipped over the roads daily. A railroad is being built into the heart of the gold region. There are valuable properties for sale, or that can be controlled by the advance of capital to fit them up. Many young men are going and fitting up ten-stamp mills at a cost of about $3,000. Dr. Little, state geologist, says that there are unoccupied mines enough to increase the yield to $10,000,000 per annum, without exhausting the quartz in a generation. The Georgia gold stands high at the mints, and is of the best quality.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
125 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana.
9-3-1y

A Tree With Ten Thousand Oranges.

Hillsborough county has the largest orange tree in south Florida. It measures 5 feet 1 inch in circumference, forks 8 feet 11 inches from the ground, each fork branches into four large limbs, and it is 35 feet high and 40 feet from limb to limb. This tree bears 10,000 oranges. William H. Holden, of Osage county, also has a very large orange tree, that measures 4 feet 9 inches in circumference.—Tampa (Fla.) Guardian.

A Horse's Jump.

During a recent horse show in England Mr. Leaman's hunter, Surrey, made such a splendid jump over the mimic brook as to set the great audience to applauding frantically. The horse, with wild excitement, went right on down the ring, and, rising at the barrier of the amphitheater with one tremendous bound, literally sailed over the bars and five rows of spectators, alighting in safety and injuring nobody. The distance was measured and proved to be thirty-seven feet, a jump even more surprising than that made on the steeplechase course, all things being taken into consideration.

The Maine Secret.

[New York Herald Letter.]

Beyond the arguments on the stump, distribution of political literature, bulldozing of employes and United States pensioners, the republicans employed a lever which was more powerful and effective than all the others combined, viz: money. They evidently had a large fund and they expended it judiciously and to the best advantage. It was raised at home and the national committee gave permission to the state committee to draw upon it for as large a sum as might be necessary to buy the state. All the republican state and national officials were assessed five per cent. on their salaries, while all the candidates were mercilessly bled to raise an immense corruption fund. One of the mail route agents on the train from Bangor to Portland was assessed $42.50 on his salary of $850, and I suppose he paid it, for he is still running on the train, and that would not be possible had he refused. A country postmaster in this district, with a salary of $45, was forced to disgorge $2.25 as his share of the fund. Voters were bought in this city like sheep in the shambles, and the same was true in the other cities and many of the larger towns in the state. The price paid for voters varied, and was somewhat smaller than in former years. I am told that $5, $10, $15 and $20 were paid, and in some instances $25 and $30 and even as high as $45 were paid for a single vote in the close districts. The buying was carried on to some extent on both sides, but the republicans had a fund fifty times as large as their opponents and easily outstripped them in this race.

A Republican Complaint.

"The south is as resolutely closed against the republican party now as it was in 1860. The election of a republican president in 1876 was resisted with the same violent threats of civil war that menaced the contest of 1860. It is apparent, therefore, that the conciliation has been all on one side. The ardent confederates at the south still boast that they occupy the same ground as when they fought against the Union troops."—Philadelphia North American.

Where is the evidence that the republicans have ever tried to work up their party interests in the south except at the point of the bayonet, by bulldozing, disfranchisement, fraudlying, forgery and robbery of votes? Why is it that such has always been the republican campaign method in the south? Why always advance either with bayonets, skeleton keys and incendiary threats? When did Blaine, Conkling, Cameron, Sherman, Garfield, Conger, Hoar, Edmunds, Chandler go down to the southern states to advocate republican principles openly, honestly and squarely on the stump as any honest party advocates would naturally do? Why is it that republicans in the north have always complained about the lapse of the southern republican vote, yet have taken no means, save those of the sneaking and disreputable kind, to build up their party? Again, who threatened civil war in 1876, save Ulysses Simpson Grant and the republican press? Who collected troops at Washington to bayonet democrats out of the house and put a fraud into the White House? And, lastly, give us your proof that "the ardent confederates at the south still boast that they occupy the same ground as when they fought against the Union troops?" Lying is a poor resort for an unpopular party, which, refusing to acquiesce in the result of the election of 1876, first threatened to plunge the country into civil war, but being too cowardly to attempt it, as shown by Senator Conkling in 1878, they resorted to the crime of stealing the presidency and thrusting a man who was never elected into the White House. If the the republican party is desirous of gaining a party in the southern states, they should resort to honest and decent methods, and not creep in, as is their habit, like burglars and cut-throats with dark lanterns.—Courier Journal.

The New Managers of the Wabash Railway.

The Chicago Tribune says: Since the announcement was made that Mr. John C. Gault, assistant general manager of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, would assume the position of general manager of the consolidated Wabash and St. Louis, and Kansas City and Northern lines, to be known as the St. Louis, Wabash and Pacific, there has been been much speculation as to who would assume the other leading positions on that line. Mr. Cyrus W. Field will be president; Mr. B. W. Lewis, at present president of the St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern, first vice-president; Mr. A. F. Hokins, at present vice-president and general manager of the Wabash, second vice-president; Mr. T. McKissock, at present general superintendent of the St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern, general superintendent, and Mr. David Dudley Field, general solicitor. The Tribune is now enabled to gratify public curiosity still further. Col. Robert Andrews will be general superintendent of the Ohio, Illinois and Indiana division, while Mr. McKissock will devote his general attention to the Missouri division. Mr. C. W. Bradley, at present traffic manager of the Wabash, will be transferred to Chicago to act as general agent at this point. The general passenger and general freight departments will be removed from Toledo to St. Louis, where the general headquarters will be. Mr. B. W. Lewis, first vice-president, with headquarters at St. Louis, will be virtually acting president, as Mr. Field will remain in New York, and not take active part in the management of the road. Mr. Hopkins, second vice-president, will remove to New York, and be continued fiscal agent, charged with funding the 13 series of bonds now outstanding against the Wabash and leased lines. Who will be the chief of the general freight and passenger departments has not yet been determined upon. It will be either Townsend or Lord for the former, or Bird or Osborne for the latter.

Wealthy Pastors

"Burleigh" writes to the Boston Journal: "A large number of the New York pastors are very wealthy men. This is almost always true of the Catholics, and has been true of nearly all the old pastors. Dr. Spring was a very rich man, and in old age married a very wealthy woman for a wife. The elder Tyng is a millionaire; Dr. William Adams has always been rich, since he has been in New York. Dr. Beveair, of Trinity church has an estate in litigation to-day. A large portion of the clergy are poor. Two or three denominations are rich. Nearly every successful doctor has a fortune. When the minister gets poor, as he does at the last of life, the lawyer and the doctor become rich. When he outlives his usefulness, as he does when he becomes old, the lawyer becomes a judge, and the doctor a professor. I asked an eminent physician the other day, Why is this? He replied: It results from the way we begin. Nearly every practicing physician and lawyer at the start is poor. He has his fame to get, and his fortune to win. He spends years in laying the foundation of his fame. He studies economy, and rigidly looks out for the coppers. He isn't required to entertain anybody, and nobody expects he will maintain the style of a successful merchant or rich lawyer. He travels little, and earns his money before he spends it. A minister takes his position at a bound. The younger he is, the more popular he is. He takes a rank with a lawyer, and merchant, and doctor, at the start. He is flush in funds, and imagines his bright day will always last. The money that he should lay up for his waning hours, he spends in trips to Europe, and visits the places of fashion and culture. When the pastor has got to the summit and looks down the western slope, he has spent his money, just as the lawyers and doctors have the foundations of their wealth laid, and fame and usefulness well secured. There is not a profession in New York in which it is so easy to lay up a competence for the future as the ministerial one. The average pay is larger than any other profession."

To the Old Settlers of DeKalb County.

I have just received the blank certificates that will entitle you who are seventy years old, and forty years a resident of the state, to free passage over certain railroads. They will be good from the 29th of September to October 4th. They must be signed by the pioneer, the president and secretary of the association, and certified by the county clerk. After being thus signed they must be sent to the superintendents of Fort Wayne, Jackson and Saginaw railroad and the Fort Wayne and Muncie railroad, who must endorse and return them. I am not informed that the Eel River will carry free. As I cannot call on our old people they must send and get them, sign them, return to me for signing, then I will send them to the two superintendents and have them returned again to me. If all this can be done in time you will be entitled to a pass, and not otherwise with safety.

W. H. DILLS, Sec'y,
DeKalb Co. P. A.

Auburn, Sept. 18th, 1879.

Dentistry at Waterloo.

Dr. Johnston, dentist at Waterloo, will fill teeth with the ordinary silver filling for 50 cents; with combination of gold and silver, 75 cents; gold filling as low as one dollar. New teeth on best rubber plate—best, $12.00; those generally used, $10.00; cheaper, $8.00. The doctor has no student and therefore does all the work himself, and makes this reduction so that every one will have [illegible] put in good order. 39tf.

40 Years Before the Public.

THE GENUINE

DR. C. McLANE'S

CELEBRATED

LIVER PILLS

FOR THE CURE OF

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR. C. MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. MCLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR. C. MCLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros., of Pittsburgh, Pa., the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 25, 1879.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

The Philadelphia Commercial Exchange has adopted the cental system as a basis for the purchase and sale of flour, grain and seeds, to take effect Jan. 1, 1880.

A Fall River (Mass.) dispatch reports a serious riot in that city. A number of Canadian operatives went to work in the mills, which so incensed the striking workmen that they attacked and stoned them. Several of the new-comers were painfully injured before the police came to their rescue.

A Boston dispatch reports the burning of a three-story tenement house on Gold street, by which some five or six people, mostly Germans, lost their lives.

James Redpath, the widely-known Lecture Bureau manager, has been missing from his home in Boston for several weeks. It is feared by his friends that he has drowned himself while temporarily insane.... Daniel Drew, the well-known financial and railroad speculator, died suddenly at his home in New York city, last week, in the 83d year of his age.... Gen. George B. Smith, for many years a prominent editor and leading Democratic politician of Wisconsin, died at his residence in Madison a few days ago, aged 56 years.

THE WEST.

W. W. Keene, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National Bank, of Minneapolis, Minn., is a defaulter to the amount of $125,000. He acknowledges his guilt.

President Hayes and family will spend two or three days in Springfield, Ill., as the guests of Gov. Cullom, about the 1st of October.... According to figures printed in the Chicago Inter-Ocean, Illinois last year manufactured $27,787,000 worth of agricultural implements, equal to about one-half of all the farm machinery turned out in the United States in that period.

The Chicago Church Choir Pinafore company is at home once more, after playing at a large number of places in the West, where they were uniformly received by large houses in an enthusiastic manner. Haverly's is crowded every evening to welcome Chicago's favorite "Pinafore" troupe, and they are receiving a cordial welcome home. Manager Haverly has returned to headquarters, after arranging for a great number of attractions for his popular house for the coming winter.

Seven soldiers, under command of a sergeant, were recently sent out with a herd of sixty-four mules from the military post of Ogocolinients, in Southern New Mexico, to allow the herd to graze in the bottom lands near the post. While thus engaged they were swooped down upon by a band of Coyotero Apaches under a Chief known as Victoria, and all murdered. The Indians escaped with the mules.

At Russellville, Brown county, Ohio, Geo. Collins and L. W. Cropper, members of a brass band, got into a quarrel about how a certain piece of music should be played. Cropper at last knocked Collins down, whereupon Collins drew a revolver and shot Cropper dead.

The Wisconsin Deaf and Dumb Asylum, at Delavan, was destroyed by fire last week. With the exertions of the citizens of Delavan all the property it contained was saved, including the library, safe, and [illegible] of all the [illegible]. The institute had just commenced its [illegible] session, with the attendance of 136 pupils, a larger number than have ever before been registered. The first building was erected in 1854, intended to be a wing to the main structure, [illegible] in 1866. This supplied the needs of the State until 1867, when the west wing was built. The estimated cost of the building is $250,000, upon which there is no insurance, the State having insured its own public buildings for [illegible].... The large distillery of Louis [illegible], near Milwaukee, has been burned.... [illegible], has been visited by a disastrous conflagration. Two hotels, one bank, the printing office, one elevator and nearly all the stores in the town were burned. The loss is estimated at $100,000; partly covered by insurance.

A dispatch from Westerville, Ohio, says that the Corbin Hotel, occupied by Henry Corbin, at that place, was blown up by gunpowder. [illegible] the building was occupied by a number of people, no one but Corbin was injured, and he not fatally. It is not known who placed the powder in the building, but Corbin asserts that it was done by some of the villagers, and is the outcome of his refusal to cease selling liquor in the village.

President Hayes and party journeyed from Cleveland to Youngstown, Ohio, Sept. 17, for the purpose of attending a reunion of the President's old regiment, Twenty-third Ohio. The reunion was held in a grove near the town, and, after an address of welcome by Dr. McCurdy, the President delivered a speech of considerable length, in which he defended the financial policy of his administration. He was followed by Gen. Sherman in one of his characteristic talks, after which the party returned to Cleveland.

Work on the Northern Pacific road, west of Bismarck, is progressing at the rate of a mile a day...."Hank" Adams, a well-known Chicago printer, and for many years foreman of the Evening Journal of that city, is dead.

Gov. Lew Wallace, of New Mexico, telegraphs to Secretary of War McCrary that the Indians are committing terrible atrocities in Grant county, New Mexico, and asks for Federal authority to put volunteers in the field.

President Hayes went to Detroit Sept. 16. He was present at the State Fair near that city, and delivered a lengthy speech, in which he reviewed the commercial and industrial situation, and dwelt at some length on the finances of the country. Gen. Sherman and Zach Chandler also made speeches.

THE SOUTH.

At DeKalb, Miss., the jury in the case of Henry J. Gully, charged with the murder of Miss Cornelia Chisolm, after a trial lasting seven days, returned a verdict of not guilty....A Sioux Indian named Pockett was executed at Huntsville, Texas, in the presence of 1,000 spectators, for the murder of Frank Edwards, a negro, in February, 1878. Pockett spoke from the gallows, warning young men against drink, and bade all farewell.... Robert Lancaster was hung at Batesville, Ark., for the murder of Thomas Johnson, in Stone county, Ark., Dec. 24, 1877, at a country frolic, while intoxicated. He asked the Sheriff, after the rope was adjusted, how he felt. The Sheriff's response was, "I feel worse, I expect, than you." Lancaster replied: "If you feel as good as I do, you are all right."

A man named Bailes was sentenced to be hanged at Athens, Ala., on the 12th inst., but the case was appealed to the Supreme Court, and the sentence was suspended. Three thousand people assembled at Athens on the 12th, broke into the jail, and took Bailes half a mile out of town for the purpose of hanging him, but no one would tie the knot. The Sheriff then jumped into the wagon, pistol in hand, and drove Bailes back to town and lodged him in jail. The crowd then slowly dispersed.

On the 12th and 13th of September there were forty-four new cases of yellow fever and eight deaths at Memphis. On the 14th, however, there was a gratifying falling off in the mortality figures, but one death and four new cases being reported on that day.

There were [illegible] deaths from yellow fever in Memphis, and forty-two new cases, for the two days, Sept. 15-16. Contributions to the [illegible] fund were coming in freely.... The Sanitary Inspector at Helena, Ark., reports a number of cases of yellow fever at Cayson's Landing, Miss., sixty miles below Helena. The fever has also broken out badly at Concordia, La., and all the surrounding country has quarantined against the afflicted town.

The State Treasurer of Georgia has sent his resignation to the Legislature in order to save himself from impeachment and removal for making an illegal use of the public moneys.

POLITICAL.

The State Convention of the Greenbackers of Massachusetts was held at Boston on the 13th inst. Gen. Horace Binney Sargent presided. After the adoption of a platform and the choosing of a State Central Committee the following ticket was nominated: For Governor, Benjamin F. Butler; Lieutenant Governor, Wendell Phillips; Secretary of State, Jonathan Arnold; Treasurer, Wilbur F. Whitney; Auditor, David J. King; Attorney General, Horace B. Sargent.... The Republicans of Maryland met

The Republicans of Maryland met in convention at Baltimore, Sept. 12. Milton G. Urner was chosen to preside. Ex-Postmaster General Creswell was nominated for Governor, but he declined, and named James A. Gray, of Howard county, for Governor. Mr. Gray was made the candidate for Governor by acclamation. Samuel Mollaber was nominated for Comptroller, Francis M. Darby for Attorney General, and J. L. McCullogh for Clerk of Court of Appeals.

The vote of California for Governor, with a few scattering returns yet to come in, is as follows: Perkins (Republican), 60,210; White (Workingman), 41,085; Glenn (Democrat), 37,678. The official majority for Kalloch in San Francisco is 1,528. Of the local officers the Republicans elect Tax Collector, County Clerk, Coroner, Superintendent of Streets, Superintendent of Schools, Recorder, and Police Judge. Of the Superior Judges, the Republicans elect five and the fusionists six. Of the Supervisors, two are Workingmen and ten are Republicans.... The official vote of Maine, with a few small towns to hear from, is as follows: Davis, Republican, 68,012; Smith, Greenbacker, 47,088; Garcelon, Democrat, 21,181. The Republican plurality over the Greenback ticket is 20,924; over the Democratic ticket, 46,831. The returns from the remaining towns will not essentially change the result.

Jeff Davis has written a letter declining the use of his name in connection with the Mississippi Senatorship.

The Massachusetts Republican State Convention was held at Worcester on the 16th inst. A. H. Bullock presided, and the convention was addressed by Senator Hoar. John D. Long, the present Lieutenant Governor, was nominated for Governor on the first ballot. The remainder of the ticket is as follows: For Lieutenant Governor, Byron Weston; Attorney General, George Marston; Auditor, Charles R. Ladd; Secretary of State, Henry B. Pierce; Treasurer and Receiver, Charles Endicott.

The State Convention of the Butler wing of the Massachusetts Democracy was held at Worcester, last week. Gen. B. F. Butler was nominated for Governor by acclamation. The remainder of the ticket is as follows: For Lieutenant Governor, A. C. Woodworth; Secretary of State, Michael T. Donohue; Treasurer, D. N. Stallings; Auditor, D. J. King; Attorney General, William D. Northend.

Ben. Butler has been nominated for Governor of Massachusetts by three different parties—the Greenbackers, the Democrats and the Independents.

GENERAL.

Jay Gould has contributed $5,000 more—making $10,000 in all—for the relief of the suffering Memphans.

A Wheeling dispatch announces a further advance in the price of nails. The manufacturers are now asking $3, and have all the orders they can attend to.

Advices from far-away Sitka report a much-improved condition of affairs, owing to the measures taken by Capt. Beardslee, of the corvette Jamestown, and the formation of a civil Government. Mining is being actively prosecuted. Several promising ledges have been discovered, and steps taken for their development.

WASHINGTON.

A Washington dispatch says that "a very considerable number of silver certificates are coming into circulation there. In paying out the 10 per cent. of silver dollars the creditors of the Government, especially the banks, immediately demand that the silver dollars be exchanged for silver certificates. These certificates are paid out over the bank counters the same as greenbacks. A silver certificate is about the size of a greenback, and, of course, is just as convenient, and, where it is known, passes as readily. Through this medium the silver dollar is obtaining of late considerable circulation."....Since the passage of the Arrears of Pensions act, the payments under it have reached $16,000,000. It is now expected that the payments will exhaust the appropriations by the 1st of November.

Figures showing the state of trade between the United States and Great Britain for the year ending June 30 have just been received at Washington, and the exhibit is a remarkable one. In specie and merchandise the total exportations to Great Britain for the year were more than three times the amount of importations from that country, the figures being, respectively, $363,013,646 and $111,071,766.

FOREIGN.

A London telegram of the 13th inst. says: "Dispatches to the Government confirm the apprehensions of an organized opposition by the population of Afghanistan. The Viceroy, however, is sanguine of speedy success. Reports from Mooltan state that Herat Badakshan and Balkh have all revolted against the Ameer. A holy war is being preached throughout Afghanistan. The Hindoo attached to Maj. Cavagnari's mission, who concealed himself during the attack by the mob, and who escaped at night, arrived at Kiratza. He reports that the embassy was attacked in the morning, and set on fire at noon, but that it held out until evening. He believes all the others connected with the mission were killed."

An African potentate of the name of Mtesa, reigning in the kingdom of Victoria Nyanza, has liberated 500,000 slaves by a proclamation of emancipation....Sabrille Morales, an actress well known and highly esteemed in Paris, has been murdered, with circumstances of singular brutality, by a lover whom she had jilted. The murderer almost immediately after committed suicide.

The Afghan rebellion: A telegram from Simla states that Gen. Roberts has telegraphed for four additional regiments. It is feared that the Ameer has decided to withdraw from the English alliance. A body of mutinous Afghans have gone to the Kurmat district, east of Ghuznee, hoping to incite the tribes there to attack the British flank in Shutargardan pass. A telegram from the home government approving of his method of carrying on the war was received by the Viceroy of India. A correspondent at Candahar speaks of a fanatical outbreak as possible there on the 15th of this month, which is the concluding day of the Mohammedan Ramadan fast.

The trouble among the cotton operatives in Lancashire, England, which was assuming serious proportions, has resolved itself into the question as to whether the hours of labor or rate of wages shall be reduced. The men are reported as willing to work less hours for less wages, and it is probable that the matter will soon be amicably adjusted. In fact, several of the larger companies have already decided to adopt the short-time principle.

An India dispatch gives the following account of the massacre of the British Legation at Cabul: Four thousand men attacked the residency in which the British embassy was quartered. The mutineers brought up artillery against it. Maj. Cavagnari was stabbed in several places, and all the bodies of the dead were mutilated. The Afghan loss exceeded 300. The Ameer had other troops who remained faithful, but made no effort to interfere, owing to intimidation by the priests. The Ameer begged for the lives of the members of the embassy.... Eastern Roumelia is in a state of anarchy, and several massacres are reported.... Scott, an English torpedo expert, has been captured by the Chilians, and [illegible] to Valparaiso. On his person was found a contract with a merchant of Peru by which the latter agreed to pay him $50,000 for each ironclad and $25,000 for each corvette of the Chilian navy blown out of water by his devilish submarine devices. The Chilians, without the fear of the British lion before their eyes, now announce their intention of hanging Scott.... Advices from India lead to the belief that the Ameer of Afghanistan has, either voluntarily or through fear of his own violent taking-off, abandoned his friendly attitude toward the English, and assumed one of open hostility. It is rumored that he has sent couriers to the most warlike tribes in his dominion for the purpose of rousing the entire country against the invaders.

A dispatch from Santiago de Cuba, in Cuba, announces that eighty insurgents belonging to the party headed by a brother of Gen. Maceo, have surrendered. The Governor of the province of Santiago de Cuba has published a proclamation offering pardon to all insurgents who surrender.

Advices from South Africa report the capture of Cetywayo, the fugitive King of the Zulus, in South Africa. The capture was effected by a company of dragoons....Switzerland and Austria are about to be connected with a subterranean railroad to be called the Alberg railway. It will be a tunnel through the Alps, about six miles in length..... The uneasiness arising from the relations between Russia, Germany and England is increasing, and it is believed both upon the Berlin and Paris Bourses that a war cloud is hanging over Europe.

Sir Garnet Wolseley telegraphs from South Africa that all the important Zulu chiefs have now submitted to the British authorities. When Cetywayo was captured he was utterly prostrated. The King was taken to Ulundi. During the march eleven of his followers tried to escape, and six were successful; the other five were shot. The King will be taken to Maritzburg, and from there to Greytown.

Scott, a British authority on agricultural matters, estimates that the surplus of wheat in America, Russia, and the East will be about 4,000,000 bushels less than the aggregate deficiency in the various countries whose crops this year wholly or partially failed.

Gen. Sherman and the South.

A dispatch from Salisbury, N. C., says: A grand reunion of the survivors of the Confederate and Federal armies has been arranged to take place here on the 3d of October. Invitations were sent to both armies. Lieut. Gen. Sheridan politely refused on account of pressing business engagements. He expressed his hope of the success of the movement. Gen. W. T. Sherman wrote a letter which has created no little excitement. The letter is as follows:

The time is too remote for me to make a promise, but I assure you that it would be most agreeable to me personally and socially to meet you on any suitable occasion—there is no use in my mincing terms—whenever and wherever the honest men of North Carolina seek to allay sectional and party animosities, and to cultivate feelings of fraternal respect for their fellow-citizens of the United States. It will be to me most tempting to come to Salisbury. I would far prefer to come alone than, as before, with a vast army, leaving desolation behind, but I must not be construed as assenting to the proposition that the Confederates and Union men were alike worthy of celebration for the terrible history of 1861-65. I would much prefer to come on some civic occasion, when all are absolutely equal—all alike interested in the present and future glory of our common country. There were few Union soldiers from North Carolina during the war, though we believe the people generally were opposed to secession, and I will say that your meeting, if confined to the surviving soldiers of North Carolina, will be, in fact, a Confederate reunion, where I would certainly be out of place. All soldiers, in their social reunions, glorify their deeds of heroism, and this reunion will hardly be an exception, and it would be a strange sight for Gen. Sherman to cheer the victories of his enemies and respond to the claim that, because the soldiers of North Carolina were brave and true to their State and section, their cause was as sacred as ours, which finally triumphed and made our Union more glorious and more resplendent than before. Were I present, and you should suppress this natural feeling, I would feel myself an intruder, marring the natural happiness of the festive occasion. I know that the soldier element was the first to lay aside the angry partisan feelings of the war, and are now leaders in the new epoch which is soon to add wealth and prosperity to our whole country; and when some occasion arises when we may all meet on common ground in North Carolina to celebrate some Revolutionary event, or to encourage some modern enterprise, it will give me great pleasure to come to Salisbury, to Raleigh, to Guilford Court House, or to any other place in the old North State.

W. T. Sherman.

Renewal of the Underwood War.

Dispatches from Grayson, Ky., state that "the Underwood war is raging more fearfully than even two years ago, when nothing but the State militia could finally check it, after four men had been killed. Until two months ago matters seemed to be quiet enough, but then one of the Underwoods was foully murdered by the opposing party. Strange to say, the Underwoods withheld from taking revenge. Two weeks ago George Lewis Underwood died from his wounds received in the war two years ago, and it seems that, in order to revenge his death, Squire Holbrook, the leader of the anti-Underwood party, was shot while going to his pasture Friday morning. Holbrook's sons and clan then turned themselves loose, and the next report was the killing of Will Underwood while peaceably at work in his field Monday morning. Now the news reaches us of the shooting of George Underwood, Sr., the father and chief of the Underwood party, who was killed at his home yesterday morning.

"The woods up in the Upper Tygart portion of Carter county are full of the men of the two opposing parties, who propose to fight it out among themselves without the interference of the officers of the law, who do not interfere in the least.

"Later reports from the Underwood war confirm the shooting of old George Underwood, who was literally riddled with rifle balls when he stepped out of the door of his house, known as Fort Underwood, yesterday morning. Sixteen shots were fired at him simultaneously, six of which penetrated his body, and one, entering his forehead, tore his skull all to pieces. Three balls pierced his breast and one of them his heart.

"This is the ninth murder enacted on the stage of the Underwood war, and the Lord only knows how many more will have to bite the grass."

Advance in Railway Freights.

Railroads running west from Chicago and St. Louis, and all the roads running to Missouri river points, have made an agreement to maintain freights. This is the result of an armistice in the war between the rival corporations. The following circular gives the rates which went into effect under the new arrangement:

Notice is given that the through rates from New York city to points on the Missouri, including Kansas City, Leavenworth, Atchison, St. Joseph, St. Louis, Chicago and Hannibal, shall be as follows: First class, $1.50, as against $1.19; second class, $1.26, as against [illegible] cents; third class, [illegible] cents, as against 80 cents; fourth class, 70 cents, as against 68 cents.

The Crops in Europe.

Mr. Dana, of the New York Sun, sends from London the following result of his observations of the crops in Great Britain and the continent of Europe:

This year nature is against the British farmer. The season has been disastrous from the beginning, and there is now no hope that it will end in anything but calamity. Rains have fallen incessantly. The crops, even the best of them, have nowhere attained more than a middling growth, and now the continued floods destroy all expectation of an average product in any part of the British Islands.

Ireland is much better off, yet even there, in many parts, the people are likely to suffer severely for want of food during the coming winter.

On the continent the situation is much less gloomy; but in France, in Western Switzerland, in Southern Germany, and in Holland it is still a bad season. The general state of the different crops may be summarily described as follows:

Hay—Inferior in Ireland, very bad indeed in England, poor in France, better in Switzerland, and in Southern Germany and Holland about the same as in France.

Oats—A wretched crop in every country where I have been. In Ireland and in England they are hardly worth harvesting; in France and the other parts of the continent to which I have referred, perhaps good enough to pay the expenses of harvesting.

Lucerne and millet—Poor everywhere.

Potatoes—Quite as poor as the oats—everywhere a bad crop. In Ireland especially, and in France, poorer than any other crop. A good potato will be a rarity in all these portions of Europe for a year to come. The failure of the potato is, in fact, as nearly complete as possible and leave any potatoes at all; and this is the case wherever my observation has extended.

Wheat—Poorest of all in England and Ireland, where I should say the yield cannot pay more than half its cost. In France there will be perhaps three-quarters of a good average, and that country will be able to furnish its own bread for the coming year. The same is true of Western Switzerland, Southern Germany, and Holland. But the United Kingdom will have to seek for its supplies elsewhere.

The only crop that seems to me at all satisfactory is that of vetches, of which, so far as I can judge, the yield is likely to be tolerable.

In Russia, on the other hand, an immense wheat crop is reported, and heavy purchases have been made there on Western account.

Yet one wheat harvest or a dozen of them will not ruin England.

THE MARK LANE EXPRESS' REVIEW.

The Mark Lane Express, of London, in its last review (Sept. 17) of the British grain trade, says:

The few samples of new wheat exhibited in Mark Lane have been wretchedly poor, both in quality and condition. A great deal of barley is also so stained as to be unavailable for malting. From two and one-half to three quarters per acre seems to be the average yield of wheat, with, perhaps, some reservation in favor of oats. All spring crops are, to a great extent, failures, and peas most especially, while the root-crops are but little better.

Trade has been quiet. Sellers have shown little desire to press sales, being encouraged by the certainty that the home crop is lamentably deficient, while the visible supply in America is diminished. Though a rise is hoped for by sellers before long, it is impossible to ignore the fact that America must control the prices for the present cereal year, although it is more than probable that the continental requirements will absorb a large proportion of the available surplus which at present threatens to glut the United Kingdom markets.

Shocking Disaster.

From the Boston papers we glean the following particulars of a heartrending accident, by which five people lost their lives: The occupants of the tenement 120 Gold street, which was burned last night, were: On the first floor, an aged couple whom no one in the vicinity seems to have known, and one Gillespie and wife. On the second floor, a German family, consisting of father, mother, and three children, named Pfaiffer. On the third floor, Ferdinand Meroth, wife and two children, and George Holdreid, wife and two children, making fifteen persons asleep in the house when the incendiary kindled the fire. When the fire was discovered by a policeman it was a quarter to 12, and the flames were breaking out on the first floor, having burned away the stairs, making them impassable. The smoke was rolling up the narrow staircases, and the awakened inmates, before the firemen could arrive with their ladders, had either leaped from the windows, gone to the roof in hope of safety, or dropped suffocated in the hall.

The old couple on the first floor made their escape, and were not heard of during the night. The Gillespie family escaped, with the exception of the wife and mother. The latter, 50 years old, might have escaped by walking six feet, but became bewildered and swooned in her room. She was found by the firemen in an apparently-dying condition, and was taken to the station with the other victims of the fire. Her injuries are terrible, the burns being both external and internal. Rosa Pfeiffer, aged 23, was found in the hall of the second floor. Mrs. Pfeiffer and two children jumped from a window and were but slightly hurt, but Pfeiffer's father was lost. Meroth, on the third floor, lifted his son, Charles, aged 14, out of the window and allowed him to drop to the ground, a distance of forty feet, and then instructed his wife and daughter, Rosie, to jump, which they did. Last of all he himself jumped to the ground, and in falling met instant death. Mrs. Meroth is at the City Hospital, with fractures of both legs and one arm, and her face is bruised beyond all recognition. The daughter Rosie sustained no serious injuries, but Charles is badly hurt. Holdreid took his wife to the roof, and then went down stairs, where he was caught by the flames and burned, probably fatally. Mrs. Holdreid's body, charred beyond recognition, was found on the roof. Charles Holdreid, the son, is at the hospital, internally injured from jumping to the ground, and with an arm broken.

A Trooper's Story of the Cabul Massacre.

A dispatch from Simla, in India, says: "One of the troopers of Maj. Cavagnari's escort has arrived at Laudi Khotal. He says that the roof of the British Residency at Cabul was commanded by other houses, and was consequently untenable by the besieged, who made a trench outside. At about 1 o'clock in the afternoon on the day of the massacre Maj. Cavagnari received a wound from a ricocheting bullet in his forehead. Mr. Jenkyns, Maj. Cavagnari's assistant, who arrived at the residency during the attack, wrote to the Ameer for help; the Ameer's reply was, "Good will. I am making arrangements." A previous request for aid from Maj. Cavagnari had met with the same reply. Mr. Jenkyns wrote again when Maj. Cavagnari was wounded, but the bearer of the letter was cut to pieces by the mutineers.

"The trooper then started, but was disarmed and imprisoned. He succeeded in escaping at daybreak on the 4th of September, and visited the residency, where he saw the corpse of Lieut. Hamilton, commanding the escort of the British mission, lying across a mountain gun. He says that Mr. Jenkyns was with a person called Yahyah Kahn, and was, therefore, presumably alive. The escaped trooper saw no troops on the road from Cabul to Jelallabad and Dakka, and, so far as he knew, none were coming. A comrade who was confined in Cabul informed him that Lieut. Hamilton shot three of the mutineers with his revolver, and killed two with his saber. Dr. Kelley, who was connected with the mission, was lying dead inside the residency. Maj. Cavagnari was in a room which was burnt, and which had fallen in. His body had not been found. Three native officers of the guides were burned to death near the residency."

Peppermint is the royal perfume of the Sandwich islands.

NAVAL ARCHITECTURE.

Leviathan and Wasp—The Day of Heavily-Armored Iron-Clads Gone By.

[From the New York Tribune.]

In naval warfare the leviathan now lies at the mercy of a swarm of wasps. It is an Englishman's idea caught up and put in practice by the oldest monarchy under the sun. A few years ago the Japanese Government commissioned a foreign shipbuilder to design and construct a fleet of heavily-armored vessels for offensive operations on the coast of China. The Chinese Government hit upon a scheme of defense devised by George Rendel. This was a fleet of small unarmored gunboats, armed with enormous guns. Iron-clad monitors such as the Hercules and the Thunderer were costing as much as £2,500,000. Mr. Rendel contended that for this sum a dozen floating carriages could be constructed for as many heavy guns, and that, aside from their manifest superiority for purposes of coast defense, they could take up advantageous positions in shallower water and direct a converging fire upon an iron-clad vessel, under which it would inevitably go down.

These conclusions were accepted by the Chinese Government, and four of these gunboats are now off the coast, while four more are on their way across the seas. As the series has been set afloat important modifications have been made in the models, and the armament has been doubled. The length of the vessel has been increased from 118 feet 6 inches to 127 feet; the draught from 7 feet 6 inches to 9 feet 6 inches; and the displacement from 319 to 440 tons. At the same time the 26½-ton gun which the Alpha carried has given place to a 35-ton muzzle-loading gun, which, owing to the powder-charge that is burned, has greater penetrative power than the most formidable artillery of the British fleet. This superiority is increased, furthermore, by the greater range which the guns of the mosquito fleet have at given elevations. So great is this advantage at the maximum range that the leading English journal admits that the Thunderer and Dreadnaught could be disabled before their turret-guns could be brought into use. The 35-ton gun is fired forward, but, as the vessel is doubled-ended, it becomes a stern-chaser when the engines are reversed. It is not mounted on carriages and slides, but lies flat upon the deck, and is worked, loaded and aimed by five men with the aid of hydraulic power. Not only has this wasp of the sea this terrible sting in its tail, but it can fly through the water either backward or forward at high speed. Nor need the wasps go in swarms against the leviathan. Each is strong enough to fight alone.

This Greek-letter series, if we mistake not, is destined to revolutionize naval architecture. The day of the heavily-armored iron-clads has gone by, and torpedo warfare and light-draught craft with heavy guns will be the main elements of coast defense in the future. A striking proof of this tendency is afforded by the new departure of the German Government. The Admiralty have decided to build thirteen gunboats in place of five heavy monitors which had been planned in 1873, and, furthermore, to abandon the construction of two iron-clad floating batteries, and to provide each war-ship with a small fleet of light torpedo-boats. This order shows how great a change has been wrought within a few years in the methods of marine warfare.

Good Advice.

Do not call a man a liar unless you have a lump in your throat and are quite sure he is a liar.

Much jewelry is vulgar.

Do not smack while eating.

Do not cut your nails in public.

Do not run after famous people.

Do not breathe hard while eating.

Feeing waiters is paying blackmail.

Serve vegetables on separate plates.

Cheese should be eaten with a fork.

Unsweetened coffee cures bad breath.

A man's dress should not be remarkable.

Do not give mere friends costly presents.

Short nails make the finger tips grow broad.

Girls who part their hair on the side look fast.

In going up and down stairs precede the lady.

A formal call is long if it last over half an hour.

Never take bits out of your mouth with your hands.

There is too much promiscuous kissing in this country.

A young lady should never stretch her feet out in company.

Some men unpleasantly comb their mustaches at the table.

A pink ribbon under the chin makes a pale woman look brighter.

Always take the last piece of everything—there is supposed to be more.

An Eastern Apologue.

Jesus, says the story, arrived one evening at the gates of a certain city, and He sent His disciples forward to prepare supper, while He himself, intent on doing good, walked through the streets into the market place. And He saw at the corner of the market some people gathered together looking at some object on the ground, and He drew near to see what it might be. It was a dead dog with a halter around his neck, by which he appeared to have been dragged through the dirt, and a viler, a more abject, a more unclean thing never met the eyes of man. And those who stood by looked on with abhorrence. "Faugh!" said one, stopping his nose; "it pollutes the air!" "How long," said another, "shall this foul beast offend our sight?" "Look at his torn hide," said a third; "one could not even cut a shoe out of it." "And his ears," said a fourth, "all draggled and bleeding." "No doubt," said a fifth, "he has been hanged for thieving." And Jesus heard them, and, looking down compassionately on the dead creature, He said: "Pearls are not equal to the whiteness of his teeth." Then the people turned to Him with amazement, and said among themselves: "Who is this? This must be Jesus of Nazareth; for only He could find something to pity and approve even in a dead dog." And being ashamed, they bowed their heads before Him and went each on his way.—Chambers' Journal.

Bob Ingersoll's Convention.

The "National Liberal League," organized at the instance of Col. Bob Ingersoll and other nonbelievers, met at Cincinnati, last week, about 200 delegates being in attendance.

A preliminary declaration and platform was adopted. It is very long, and resolves that the general motive of the National Liberal party is to realize more fully than has ever yet been done the main object of a government by the people as expressed in the declaration of independence and the preamble to the constitution of the United States; that to secure these purposes a new party is necessary to administer and reform the whole national and State governments. The principles enunciated are: Equal and exact justice to all men of whatever State or persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none; the support of the State governments in all their rights as the most competent administrators of our domestic concerns, and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies; the preservation of the General Government in its whole constitutional vigor; freedom of religion, of the press, of persons under the protection of habeas corpus, and trial by juries impartially selected; labor reforms of various kinds are asked for; legislation against tramps condemned; reforms in the currency; in the use and occupation of land; female emancipation; universal compulsory secular education; condemning creating corporations except for the public good, and present methods of legislation, advocating the election of all public officers directly by the people, and favoring the repeal of all Sabbath, sumptuary and temperance laws.

Kansas' Twenty-fifth Anniversary.

The recurrence of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the settlement of the State of Kansas was the occasion of an immense gathering of people at Lawrence Sept 15 and 16, among whom were a great many participants in the stirring events from 1854 to 1862. The first day's exercises were begun by an address by ex-Gov. Robinson, the President of the day, followed by addresses of welcome by C. K. Halliday on behalf of the old settlers, and by Gov. St. John for the State. Then came an address by John W. Forney, of Philadelphia. In the evening an old settlers' love-feast was held, at which brief remarks were made by Senators Ingalls and Plumb, ex-Senators Pomeroy, Ross, Harvey and other distinguished persons. The second day's exercises, at which over 30,000 people were in attendance, embraced a love-feast by the old settlers and addresses by Edward Everett Hale, of Boston; George W. Julian, of Indiana; Gov. St. John, of Kansas, and Gen. John Pope. The press of the State was largely represented, at least fifty editors being present.

September Crop Report.

The following is the last monthly report of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, showing the condition of the cotton, corn, and tobacco crops: Cotton returns to the department, Sept. 1, show a heavy decline during August. The general average is 85, against 91 the month previous. Corn—The average condition for the whole country, Sept. 1, was 95, against 93 in August. Tobacco—The average condition of this crop for the whole country, Sept. 1, was 87, an advance of 10 per cent. from the condition Aug. 1; an advance of 6 per cent. over the condition at the same time last year.

Allan Dinger was waylaid in Nevada by a highwayman, who offered the usual alternative of money or life. Dinger was mounted, but unarmed, and the robber had a revolver close to his head. Nevertheless he was cool and brave enough to say, "I don't believe you'd really shoot me and take the chance of hanging; so I'm off," and he spurred his horse away. He says that the ride was hardly enjoyable until he got out of range; but his reasoning had been correct, and the robber did not fire.

A negro lay on his back asleep at Salem, Ga., with his bare feet uplifted on a log. A hunter made a wager with a companion that he could, at twenty paces, put a bullet through one of the sleeper's big toes. He shot, and won; but the negro has sued for damages.

The expenses of a funeral of an English soldier in Zululand are deducted from arrears in the man's pay. Natal is an expensive place for a private to die in, for by the time the carpenter and sexton have completed their labors but little remains out of a £5 note.

Charles Reade says that he will never go through the drudgery of another novel. He is making a great deal of money from his play of "Drink," taken from "L'Assommoir."

The "Sons of the Iron Knot" is the name of a Jewish order.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$6 25	@	10 50
Hogs	3 50	@	4 40
Cotton	12	@	12¾
Flour—Superfine	4 00	@	4 50
Wheat—No. 2	1 10	@	1 16
Corn—Western Mixed	45	@	49
Oats—Mixed	33½	@	35
Rye—Western	69	@	70
Pork—Mess	8 90	@	9 00
Lard	6	@	6¼
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 85	@	5 25
Cows and Heifers	2 25	@	3 75
Medium to Fair	3 90	@	4 25
Hogs	3 15	@	3 65
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	4 50	@	5 50
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	4 00	@	4 75
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	94	@	95
No. 3 Spring	90	@	91
Corn—No. 2	34	@	35
Oats—No. 2	23	@	24
Rye—No. 2	52	@	53
Barley—No. 2	76	@	77
Butter—Choice Creamery	20	@	22
Eggs—Fresh	15	@	16
Pork—Mess	9 40	@	9 50
Lard	5¾	@	6
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	99½	@	1 04
No. 2	95	@	96
Corn—No. 2	34	@	35
Oats—No. 2	23	@	24
Rye—No. 1	53	@	54
Barley—No. 2	67	@	68
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red Fall	97½	@	99
Corn—Mixed	33	@	33
Oats—No. 2	24	@	25
Rye	48	@	49
Pork—Mess	8 75	@	8 85
Lard	5¾	@	6
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	98	@	1 02
Corn	37	@	38
Oats	25	@	29
Rye	56	@	57
Pork—Mess	9 50	@	8 75
Lard	5¾	@	6
TOLEDO.
Wheat—Amber Michigan	1 04	@	1 05
No. 2 Red	1 04	@	1 05
Corn—No. 2	37	@	38
Oats—No. 2	26	@	28
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	4 00	@	5 25
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 05	@	1 06
No. 1 Amber	1 03	@	1 04
Corn—No. 1	39	@	41
Oats—Mixed	25	@	26
Barley (per cental)	1 00	@	1 85
Pork—Mess	9 75	@	10 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	5 00	@	5 25
Fair	4 00	@	4 75
Common	3 25	@	3 75
Hogs	2 50	@	3 85
Sheep	3 00	@	4 00

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED,
ROB. J. LOWRY, } [illegible]

SPEECH

OF

GEN. THOMAS EWING

AT GALLIPOLIS, OHIO.

In Reply to the Speeches of Secretaries Sherman and Schurz.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: About ten days ago two of the heads of departments at Washington illustrated civil-service reform by taking the stump in Ohio for the administration candidate for Governor. They took my Lancaster speech as a text, and discussed such parts of it as they could most plausibly answer and dodged the rest. In the pauses between other and previous engagements in the campaign I have examined their speeches and now reply to them.

Mr. Schurz, who is relied on every year by the Ohio Republicans to shoo Democrats into Republican ranks by shouting "Inflation!" repeats with some variation his specious and extravagant speech of last year. He makes a frantic effort to prove that the success of the Ohio Democracy means abandonment of resumption and return to paper money not limited by redeemability in coin, and, therefore, unlimited in volume; and he thereupon proceeded to fight us on the ground on which he places us instead of on that which in fact we occupy. Our platform says not a word against resumption; not a word for irredeemable currency; not a word for any increase of the currency, except that which will come from the unlimited coinage of the old silver dollar and the issue of certificates for silver bullion.

But Mr. Schurz says, though a return to an irredeemable currency is not expressly declared for in the Democratic platform, it is necessarily involved in the proposition to substitute legal-tender notes for national-bank notes. He reasons thus: The United States now has the burden of redeeming only the greenbacks in coin—the national banks having to look after the redemption of their own paper. If we substitute treasury notes for bank notes, we shall thus double the burdens of resumption on the United States. That involves doubling the coin held for redemption purposes. But that coin reserve can not be doubled, because the coin can't be got; nor can it even be increased without increasing the public debt; and the Ohio Democracy declare against any increase of that debt. Hence, the substitution of treasury notes for bank notes necessarily involves the abandonment of resumption and a return to an irredeemable paper currency.

This reasoning is the warp and woof of the fabric of Mr. Schurz's speech. It is utterly fallacious, and betrays an astonishing ignorance either of the laws affecting resumption, or of the intelligence of the people sought to be influenced by his false and dazzling rhetoric. Listen, now, my fellow-citizens, to this provision of the act of Congress of June 20, 1874, now in force:

* * * * "When the circulating notes of any such [National Banking] Association, assorted or unassorted, shall be presented for redemption in sums of $1,000, or any multiple thereof, to the Treasurer of the United States, the same shall be redeemed in United States notes."

This is all the redemption there is, in fact, of national-bank notes, because each bank is only bound to redeem its own notes, and no man can collect out of the general circulation any considerable number of the notes of the bank of his immediate locality. Hence, the United States, in effect, alone redeems the bank notes, and the same officer who redeems greenbacks in coin redeems bank notes in greenbacks. Now, suppose you want $1,000 in gold; you can only get it by presenting to the Treasurer or Sub-Treasurer of the United States $1,000 in greenbacks or in national-bank notes. It makes no difference which you present. Suppose, if you present bank notes and demand coin, the Treasurer should say: "I am not bound to pay you in coin." Your answer will be: "Then pay me in greenbacks." And when he hands you the greenbacks you will hand them back and say: "Now pay me in coin." Does not the United States, therefore, in fact and effect redeem equally greenbacks and bank notes in coin? Is not the burden of furnishing the coin for the entire paper circulation wholly on the United States? Would that burden be increased a dollar by substituting greenbacks for bank notes? There is no school-boy in Ohio who, on reading that law, would not see that both Mr. Schurz and Mr. Sherman are falsifying the facts when they assert that the substitution of legal tenders for bank notes either increases the burden of resumption or impairs its stability. Yet on this shallow invention is built almost the whole structure of their arguments on the money question against the position of the Ohio Democracy.

The twin Secretaries make merry over my speeches in 1875 and 1877 against resumption, in which I declared that it was impracticable, and would result in "a general massacre of business." I can read those speeches now without being at all ashamed of the matter or the manner of them. They were spoken from conviction in view of the law and the situation as then existing, and in no spirit of extravagance or partisanship. Judging the law as it stood, my criticisms were sound. But subsequent legislation greatly changed the scheme of resumption. As it originally stood, it provided for the total destruction of the greenback currency. So Mr. Sherman admitted on the day he introduced the bill in the Senate. So Mr. Bristow declared in his report for 1875, saying that "the faith of the Government now stands pledged to the final redemption and removal from the currency of the country of the legal-tender notes as fast as they shall be presented for redemption." So Mr. Morrill declared in his report for 1876, in which he says that "by the Resumption law Congress declared in effect a monetary system composed of coin, and national-bank notes redeemable in coin." The scheme, too, not only involved the destruction of all the greenbacks, but also contemplated redemption in gold alone—silver having been stealthily demonetized in advance of the Resumption law.

This was the programme of resumption when I discussed it in the speeches now criticised and ridiculed by these gentlemen. But since then, and as a result of the agitation against the scheme by the Western and Southern Democracy, and in spite of all the opposition of Sherman, Schurz & Co., the destruction of the greenback money was stopped, and $346,000,000 of it saved from destruction. To the stoppage of this sweeping contraction of the currency the people owe the fact that their business was only maimed by the resumption scheme—not "massacred." Moreover, silver has been partially remonetized by the efforts of the Western and Southern Democracy since my predictions of the disastrous effect of the resumption scheme, and its certain failure—enough being coined to protect the gold in the treasury from being drained off after resumption day.

In a debate in the Senate on May 28, 1878, Mr. Blaine expressed the opinion common among the friends and the enemies of forced gold resumption when he said in the Senate: "Undoubtedly, the whole question of resumption has been changed by the coinage of the silver dollar. The Secretary of the Treasury may begin resumption to-morrow with $10,000,000 in silver, in my judgment, with perfect safety. For resumption in silver you have got plenty. For resumption in gold you have not got half enough." To this partial restoration of silver and to three enormous crops in the United States, accompanied by three failures of crops in Europe, which have turned the balance of trade largely in our favor, Mr. Sherman owes the fact that he has so far equaled his great prototype, Sir Robert Peel, in reaching and maintaining resumption; while he has far surpassed him in the miseries inflicted on the people in his march to his bad eminence.

Not only has the Resumption law been made by our efforts less disastrous by stopping the destruction of the greenback currency, and less impracticable by the remonetization of silver, and the unexampled succession of large crops at home and eager markets abroad, but it is also to be borne in mind that the result attained is not, in fact, resumption. We have equalization only, not resumption. Resumption, as promised by its advocates and understood by the people, was the free circulation of gold, silver and paper, and their interchange at all the bank counters in the United States. There will be no resumption in fact until every bank in the United States receives deposits of coin and paper without distinction, and pays demands in either form of money the holder may prefer. Such is not now the case. Gold is no more in general circulation now than it was five years ago. There is, in effect, none in the bank vaults. No man in Ohio can get a thousand dollars in gold without paying as a premium the cost of expressage to and from New York. A friend of mine the other day at Columbus—a city of 50,000 inhabitants, with a dozen banks—wanted to get two $10 gold pieces as presents for his daughters, and went from bank to bank in vain to find them.

Instead of resumption the people have merely equalization of paper and coin; that is, gold prices for their lands, labor and products; that is, $2.25 per 100 for their pork, 90 cents per bushel for their wheat, and 75 cents to $1 per day for their labor, with which to pay enormous and undiminishing taxes and debts, contracted when their products and labor were worth over 50 per cent. more than they are to-day. It is true the money earned by a day's labor will buy about as much as a day's earnings would have bought four years ago. It is true the money got for 100 pounds of pork or a bushel of grain will buy about as much as the money got for the same products four years ago. Here is neither gain nor loss. But it is also true that every man's debts and taxes cost him in labor or products 50 per cent. more to pay them now than four years ago.

The debts of the country, public, corporate and private, running from four years ago, amount to not less, as I have heretofore repeatedly shown, than $10,000,000,000. This shrinkage of values results in compelling the payment of debts with 50 per cent. more of labor and property, and in effect adds $5,000,000,000 to the weight of that vast debt burden. Our taxes, national and local, amount, in the aggregate, to $800,000,000 each year. This shrinkage of values increases the tax burden one-half, or $400,000,000 a year. That increase amounts to interest at 4 per cent. on $10,000,000,000, more than one-third of the present wealth of the country.

Messrs. Sherman and Schurz adroitly and elaborately attempt to convince the people that there is vast gain in increasing the purchasing power of their money. I deny it. The greenback of 1874 was precisely as good for all the purposes of business in the hands of the producers and exchangers of wealth as the greenback of 1879. It is true the greenback dollar now buys 50 per cent. more than it bought then, but it takes 50 per cent. more of wheat, pork, land or labor to get it now than then. There is no gain at all to the industrial classes by this appreciation of the dollar, which means merely the lowering of prices of land, labor and products. When we consider the vast distress inflicted upon the industrial classes in the process of forcing prices down to the low gold level, and the vast addition to debt and tax burdens which are necessary consequences of that reduction of values, the pretended advantage of adding 50 per cent. to the purchasing power of our paper currency is met by a set-off of losses a hundred times greater than the vaunted gain.

The two Secretaries think it fine sport to underrate and ridicule the industrial distresses and disasters which have strewn with the wrecks of lives and fortunes the pathway to resumption. The fiddling Nero was once delighted at a somewhat similar spectacle. I doubt if their fun will be shared by the masses of the people. The ore diggers, the furnace men, the coal miners, the day laborers, and mechanics and tradesmen, and mortgagers and other debtors throughout Ohio have not found the cup of resumption and demonetization a cheering one. Distressful days and sleepless nights, scanty food and ragged clothes, lost homes and broken hearts have been the price of resumption to them.

Mr. Sherman attempts to make me appear ridiculous by asserting that I attributed the panic of 1873 to the Resumption act of 1875. That is not a perversion of anything I ever said, but merely a pure invention. I have always attributed the panic of 1873 in chief part to the contraction of the currency which went on steadily after 1866, causing an expansion of credits to take the place of diminishing currency, which credits collapsed in the panic.

But Mr. Sherman says "the amount of paper money outstanding on the 30th of June, 1873, was more than it was on the 30th of June, 1865; the amount on the 30th of June, 1873, was $749,440,000; and on the 30th of June, 1865, was but $747,233,000." I answer this assertion by quoting from his own report, issued from the Treasury Department on the 1st of July last, giving the "total amount of currency outstanding" at various dates as follows:

June 30, 1865	$983,318,000
June 30, 1873	750,0[illegible]
Total contraction	$233,[illegible]

Showing a difference between Mr. Sherman's statement as Secretary on the 18th of July and his statements as stump-orator on the 20th of August of over $233,000,000.

But there are two kinds of contraction, both equally effective in shrinking values; one is by actual reduction of the currency; the other by the growth of business, the currency remaining stationary. The demand of business for currency may be assumed to increase approximately in proportion to increase of population. The actual currency in 1865, according to this treasury statement of Mr. Sherman, was $28 per capita, while the actual currency in 1873, by the same statement, was but $17.85 per capita, being a reduction of over one-third.

Before the contraction of our currency our people and our cities and our counties were very little in debt, as statistics and records and experience attest. With the contraction which followed up to 1873 came the expansion of credits to maintain business. The enormous grants by the Republican party of public lands to promote the premature construction of railways combined with this expansion of credits to bring on the collapse of 1873, from which the country, as Mr. Sherman stated in his speech in the Senate in 1874, had in effect recovered, when the demonetization of silver and forced resumption in gold set in motion the influences which have shrunk prices, paralyzed industry and confiscated the property of debtors and tax-payers.

Mr. Sherman asserts that not only had we more currency in 1873 than at the close of the war, but that we now have more than we ever had. In this Treasury Department statement of the 1st of July last he gives the total circulation at $743,301,000 on the 1st of July, 1879, which is about $14.87 per capita, as against $17.85 per capita on the same day in 1873, and $28 on the same day in 1865. This statement of the currency now outstanding includes $74,000,000 greenbacks withdrawn from circulation and hoarded in the treasury, and $125,000,000 which the Comptroller of the Currency in his speech to the national bankers at Saratoga last month says are hoarded by the national banks. Mr. Sherman attempts to sustain his assertion that the currency is greater now than ever by adding to the volume now afloat all the coin in the treasury held for redemption. He might just as reasonably count the gold in the mountains. The coin will stay in the treasury until the greenbacks are surrendered to take its place, and then the greenbacks will stay in until the coin comes back again. When one is circulating the other is hoarded, and both can't be counted as part of the circulation.

Mr. Sherman now asserts that the panic of 1873 was caused by an inflated and irredeemable currency. But here is his speech in the United States Senate, made on the 16th of January, 1874, in which he says: "Mr. President, the condition of our currency has no relation whatever to the panic that has passed over the country. * * * I never have charged the panic upon the currency. Indeed, I was the first in the midst of the panic to declare that the currency had no connection with it. Money was secure. Men hoarded it * * * These panics are but the ebb and flow of great enterprises. No action of ours can prevent them."

He now asserts that all the business distresses and blighted industries of the past four years were due to that panic, but in this same speech he declares that the effect of the panic was then past. I quote his language: "Confidence is restored, and every commodity is advanced to the price that it was before the panic."

He now asserts that "experience has shown that the Resumption act has not produced any distress;" but in his published examination before the Finance Committee of the Senate last year, which was carefully revised by him before it went to the Public Printer, he says: "We have now passed through all the agony and struggle for resumption."

To crown the display of his characteristic versatility of assertion, Mr. Sherman says: "Suffice it to say that every step under the Resumption act has had a tendency to produce easy times, restore confidence, reduce prices, advance the values of our currencies, and to lead us gently, slowly and surely to the specie standard." Could human ingenuity combine in one sentence a greater jumble of contradictions? It is perfectly true that every step toward resumption has tended to reduce prices, or, in other words, to advance the value or purchasing power of money; but the assertion that a reduction of prices causes or can be accompanied by "easy times" contradicts all human experience and all authority on the nature and office of money. Falling prices have everywhere inflicted, and must necessarily inflict, industrial distress. There never has been a period in the history of this or any other country of falling prices, or, what is the same thing, rising value of money, which has not been a period of distress of industries and oppression of debtors and tax-payers. The reason is obvious. When prices are falling the goods of the merchant shrink in value on his shelf; the stock of the trader is worth less when he gets it to market than when he bought it; the manufacturer when he turns out his goods finds they have cost more for raw material and labor than they will sell for; the farmer must pay debts and taxes in products constantly shrinking in value. Money loaned in productive enterprises is, therefore, withdrawn because the enterprises themselves become unprosperous and the loan hazardous; money flows from the veins and arteries of business and congests in the vaults of hoarders. It is true "that every step under the Resumption act has had a tendency to reduce prices, and to lead us thus slowly and surely to the specie standard;" and it is just this steady and protracted fall of prices, caused by the Resumption law, of which the people have complained. But to assert that it has produced "easy times" is preposterous, unless easy times are those in which money shrinks from all investment or loan in productive industry, while it seeks investment in 4-per-cent. Government bonds, or is loaned only on collaterals which can be converted into money on a day's notice.

The two Secretaries bring to the people of Ohio the intelligence that prosperous times have come again; that all labor is fully employed and well paid; every branch of manufacturing industry prosperous; trade flourishing, and that we all have reason to rejoice and be content with the present situation. I admit that some special branches of business are in better condition than before the Democracy stopped contraction and partially remonetized silver, but I cannot learn of any general revival of business. The iron industries are specially quoted as reviving rapidly, yet a Pittsburgh friend, who is manufacturing iron, told me the other day that wages have not increased at all, and that there is a very large surplus of labor. Hanging Rock mill and foundry iron sells this year lower than last, and sold last year lower than the year before.

I saw hundreds of ore-diggers in Lawrence county last week whose average wages don't exceed 50 cents a day. The coal mined in the Hocking valley—one-third of the whole product of the State—sells on the cars now at 65 to 75 cents a ton, against 90 cents last year, $1 the year before and $1.50 the year after the panic. The coal-diggers there now get 50 cents a ton and half work, as against 75 cents a ton and full work in 1874, the year after the panic, and the year before the industries of the country were put under the screw of preparation for gold resumption. Iron furnaces at Shawnee and Ogden, Steubenville and Ashland, rolling-mills at Steubenville, Marietta and Pomeroy, have recently been sold at from a fourth to a sixth of their cost. Salt, which sold at the furnace at an average of $1.26 per barrel in 1874, now sells at 82 cents per barrel. The iron, coal and salt industries of Ohio, so far as I can learn, are paying, where best managed, only the cost of production, and that based on starvation wages—counting their capital and investment as nothing. That is the extent of the boom which is always gotten up in speeches and newspapers by the Republican party in its important campaigns. I believe it to be true that business generally in Ohio is almost as unprosperous now as it was in 1876 or 1877; that the condition of debtors generally whose debts amount to one-fourth of the estimated value of their property four years ago is in effect hopeless; that the burden of taxes increased through fallen prices is almost intolerably oppressive; and I further believe that the people ought to and must have a rise of prices above the present low gold level before general prosperity can possibly return.

This relief is offered by the Democracy in the bill which passed the House of Representatives last session, and will unquestionably pass the Senate next session, for the unlimited coinage of the old silver dollar and the issue of certificates for silver bullion. That act would cause an easy increase of metallic money, or of paper representing and redeemable in metallic money, of from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000, followed by a yearly increase of $30,000,000 or $40,000,000. This would raise prices very nearly to the old bimetallic level, lightening the burdens of debts and taxes, stimulating industries and bringing into play all the productive energies of our people. It is a great, wholesome, indispensable measure of relief; open to no just criticism either in respect of its honesty or sound policy. It will bring down the purchasing power of gold, which has been dishonestly increased by the demonetization of silver—an act to which the American people never consented—done in the dark by some rascal for the purpose of robbing the masses and piling up the fortunes of the moneyed class.

The two parties are squarely at issue on this question. Mr. Sherman and Mr. Schurz both take ground in favor of stopping the coinage of the silver dollar when the amount under existing law shall reach a sum supposed to be the largest which will float at par with gold; or, on the other hand, adopting a new and more valuable silver dollar for the benefit of the creditor class. Either of these methods involves the perpetuation of the wrong inflicted upon the people by the secret and fraudulent act of demonetization. I thank these gentlemen for their frankness on this great question, and call on the people of Ohio to decide by their votes whether our great American money product shall be put on an even par with gold, and whether they will have the old dollar of the fathers or the new dollar of the Shylocks.

Mr. Sherman, who was the first to propose the demonetization of silver in the interest of the moneyed class, attempts to sustain it by the following statement: "Many causes contribute to reduce the relative value of silver, and now it requires eighteen ounces of silver to be equal to one ounce of gold; and, therefore, the chief commercial countries have either wholly or partially suspended the coinage of silver."

He here, with studied vagueness, asserts that silver at the old ratio of 16 to 1 had depreciated as compared with gold, and for that reason was demonetized; thus illustrating again his fluent disregard of facts. The truth is, the American silver dollar was always, since 1833, worth more than the American gold dollar down to the very date when it was demonetized, and at that date it stood at a premium of 3½ per cent. The depreciation of our silver, as compared with our gold dollar, was caused by the acts of demonetization, accomplished through a conspiracy of usurers. If Mr. Sherman does not know that fact, he is less informed on this subject than nine out of ten of his hearers. He ought to know why it was demonetized, for he introduced a bill for that purpose in the United States Senate in 1868, and advocated its demonetization before the congress of bondholders in Paris. The sole reason was that the insatiable avarice of the bondholders of Europe and America sought to appreciate the value of their bonds and depreciate the value of all property and labor in which their bonds were payable by striking out of existence one-half of the world's metallic money.

* * * * * *

Mr. Sherman has the amazing recklessness to assert that "the Republican administration has been marked by a uniform decrease of expenditures, as shown by the official table of net ordinary expenditures;" and "the Democrats have been rapidly increasing appropriations since they have had control of Congress."

He attempts to sustain these assertions by figures made up, not from published official reports, but from data of which the public has no information. I appeal from John Sherman on the stump to John Sherman in the treasury. I hold in my hand his own last report to Congress, in a volume entitled "Finance Report, 1878." On page 17 is given the net ordinary expenditure of the Government (exclusive of premiums, interest and public debt), in which it is stated that those expenditures since 1870 were each year as follows. I give the figures exactly as published by him:

1871	$157,[illegible]
1872	1[illegible],201,000
1873	1[illegible]
1874	[illegible],118,000
1875	171,[illegible]
1876	[illegible]
1877	144,[illegible]
1878	134,[illegible]

The appropriations from 1871 to 1876 inclusive were made by the Republican Congresses, and those of 1877 and 1878 by a Democratic House. The Republicans run up these expenditures from $150,000,000 in 1872 to an average of nearly $178,000,000 for each of the four years thereafter; while the Democrats reduced the expenditures for the two last years of the report to but little over $150,000,000 per year, making an annual saving of over $28,000,000. It is true that for 1879 the Democrats increased these appropriations to $157,000,000, and for 1880 to $160,000,000; a chief part of which increase was claimed by the administration to be necessary because the Democratic House had cut down too much of the appropriations for the preceding years. But take the whole average of appropriations and expenditures for the four years of Republican rule, from 1873 to 1876 inclusive, and the result is as follows: That the Republicans expended an average of $177,748,000 for the net ordinary expenditures of the Government, while the Democrats appropriated an average of $149,201,000, being a saving to the people by reason of Democratic economy of $28,547,000 per year, or $114,188,000 in the four years.

Mr. Sherman, in replying to my Lancaster speech, asserts that, so far from this economy being forced upon the administration by the Democratic Congress, we actually appropriated more than the departments asked for. Here the Finance Minister of our Government is equally at fault. For the year 1877 the administration asked a little over $200,125,000 for its ordinary expenditures; we gave it $145,182,000. For the year 1878 the administration asked $176,226,000; we gave it $157,213,000. For the year 1880 it asked $164,181,000; and we gave it $160,919,000. So that the Democratic Congress has in four years prevented the administration from spending over $120,000,000 more than was necessary for the ordinary expenses of the Government. I say more than was necessary, for Mr. Sherman says that, during the four years of Democratic control over appropriations, "the administration has felt no restraint from insufficient appropriations in the great branches of the Government."

Mr. Sherman, in explaining the enormous appropriation of $194,000,000 for the ordinary expenses of the Government in 1874, says that, "the appropriations for that year were purposely largely increased as a means of relief from the effect of the panic." Sympathetic Mr. Sherman! How good it was in you and your party to come to the relief of the struggling industries of the country! But the fact is, the appropriations for that year were made at the session of Congress which ended March 4, 1873—six months before the panic occurred. The excessive appropriation was due, therefore, to extravagance, and not to sympathy for the people.

Messrs. Sherman and Schurz are distressed with apprehensions of danger to the Government from the Confederate Brigadiers. They cry out against the caucus, as though it was an invention of those Southern men to control the Democratic party and thus rule the country. They have themselves sat in more caucuses than they have hairs on their heads. What danger is there from Confederate Brigadiers? Not one of them has proposed any measure in Congress to impair any settlements of the war. They have over and over again declared that they and their people accept those settlements as final and never to be disturbed.

What more is demanded? Nothing. The Republican party has not asked for more. The outcry against the Southern people for sending to Congress men who fought in the Confederate army is senseless and shameful. They have no other men of large experience and capacity to send. Would you force them to send only negroes and carpet-baggers? Would you undo the work of pacification which the President has done? Would you revoke the trade consummated by Mr. Foster, by which Packard, who got more votes in Louisiana for Governor than Hayes got for President, was counted out and Hayes counted in? Recollect, gentlemen of the Republican party, that the South has not the same large choice of non-combatants to select for high offices which the Republican party has. All her men and boys had to go into the Confederate army to meet our overwhelming numbers, while the North did not send a half of her men. In this respect the Republican party has the South at a big disadvantage. They can select such men as Messrs. Sherman and Foster, who quietly stayed at home, while the unfortunate South has no non-combatants to prefer over her soldiers for high public honors.

Mr. Updegraff and Mr. Garfield said in effect at the Soldiers' Reunion, at Steubenville the other day, that when the South will consent that the Government shall be conducted on the accepted fact that the North was right and the South was wrong on the great issues of the war, then sectional strife should cease. The Southern Representatives have admitted it. They do not admit, and we have no right to expect them to admit, that they were false to their convictions of duty in asserting and maintaining the alleged right of secession. But I assert that there is not one man from the South in either house of Congress who does not accept the decision of the war as the final settlement of that question, or who does not agree that all the amendments of the constitution made to give permanent effect to that settlement shall be respected and obeyed and executed by appropriate legislation. In view of this it is mean and unpatriotic in the Republican leaders to keep up the senseless clamor against the South, and prevent the restoration of harmony and good will, without which the sacrifices of the war were all in vain.

Neither Mr. Schurz nor Mr. Sherman has a word to say justifying the use of troops at the polls, for which they and the administration fought so vigorously. They know that it is a power that is an alien and a foe to our republican system of Government, and that the determination of the administration to retain that power will meet the disapprobation of the people.

But Mr. Schurz attempts to ridicule the stern demand of the Democracy to have that odious power wiped from our statute books. He says: "Does any sane man think this administration capable of sending the Federal soldiers to the ballot-box to overawe the freedom of the electors? * * * The President withdrew the Federal soldiers from the legislative halls of the Southern States."

Yes, sir; that was when the President was playing the role of conservative; that was when he had just been put into power by a truck and dicker arrangement, got up by Mr. Foster; that was when both of them were crying out against Federal interference with State Legislatures and State elections, and were anxious for "the flag to float over States, not provinces." But a change has come over the spirit of their dreams. Mr. Foster pleads the "baby act," and the President has taken up all the low fellows in the Southern States whom he tramped down in getting to power, and given them high stations and good salaries. He is a stalwart now; has made up with all whom he offended by "withdrawing Federal soldiers from the legislative halls of the Southern States;" and is as lion-mettled as Zach Chandler. But whether he would or would not abuse the power, as Grant did, is not the question. The question is whether any President can constitutionally be given, or should have, the power to send troops to keep the peace at the polls, or to, in any way, intermeddle with State elections.

Mr. Sherman does not attempt to justify the Marshals and Supervisors law as either constitutional or expedient. Its unconstitutionality is demonstrable to any man of common intelligence, whether lawyer or layman. When the constitution was framed the whole control of elections of members of Congress was reserved to the States; but Congress was given power to alter the State regulations as to the time, places and manner of holding such elections, because it was thought probable that it might be important to the General Government to have those elections all on one day or to have them held in single districts. Then it was suggested, at the very close of the debate, that possibly some States might refuse altogether to elect members of Congress; and in such event Congress ought to have power to make all necessary provisions for electing members of Congress in such States. Solely to provide for this contingency, as Mr. Madison says, the clause was finally amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. The times, places and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof, but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing Senators."

Now here is the constitution of Ohio. It provides that "every white male citizen of the United States of the age of 21 years who shall have been a resident of the State one year next preceding the election, and of the county, township or ward in which he resides such time as may be provided by law, shall have the qualifications of an elector and be entitled to vote at all elections."

Here is the Election law of the State providing for the election of members of Congress and other officers. It provides how long a person must be a resident of the county, township and ward prior to the election to have the right to vote; it provides how persons may gain or lose a residence, and what facts shall determine a residence; it provides for dividing the State into election districts, for furnishing ballot-boxes, fixing places of election, selecting judges from residents of the election precincts, and providing the whole manner of conducting the elections, and of making returns and proclaiming results. All the officers so authorized to conduct elections are State officers. They derive their authority under and are sworn to obey the State constitution and law. No one disputes the authority of the State to conduct these elections, or denies that this whole election machinery, thus conducted and managed by State officers, is valid and in full force and operation.

But the Republican party, by its Federal Election law, has provided that two Federal Supervisors may be appointed at each one of these election precincts, with power to inspect the ballots of electors and determine what votes shall be received and what votes rejected; and if any State election officer refuses to submit his judgment to that of the Federal Supervisors, the Supervisors may seize such election officer and drag him from the ballot-box to a Federal prison, to be indicted and tried for the felony of disobedience to these Federal interlopers. If a man's vote be challenged, and the State judges, in obedience to the State law, determine, on the facts presented, that he is entitled to vote, the Federal Supervisor may seize the elector before his ballot is put in and drag him off to a Federal prison, although the power to define qualifications of electors, and, consequently, to provide for a method in which a right to vote may be determined, is, by the constitution of the United States, expressly reserved to the States, absolutely and unconditionally.

Now, I believe there is not a lawyer of fair standing in Ohio who will risk his reputation on an opinion that the Federal Government has any power to thus prevent an elector from voting, or to in any manner supervise, control or direct, or meddle with the State election officers while conducting a Congressional election under this State law. Such interference is organized anarchy. No officer of a State Government can lawfully be directed or controlled by a Federal officer in the performance of his duties under valid State laws, for such Government is supreme in its sphere as defined by the constitution of the United States. This Federal Election law is, therefore, utterly and obviously unconstitutional.

Mr. Sherman makes a faint attempt to justify the Republican party in enacting this law by claiming that there were 30,000 illegal votes cast in the city of New York in 1868; but he does not pretend that experience has proved the law to have been a wise one, for he knows that wherever its power has been invoked the Deputies employed and paid out of the public treasury have been largely poor Democrats, bribed to desert their party for $5 a day, and still more largely the most dispicable scoundrels that could be raked from the hells of the big cities. The law has demonstrated itself everywhere to be the basest and corruptest instrument of partisanship ever seized upon to stay the downfall of a party in power.

Dodging the question of the constitutionality and expediency of the law, Mr. Sherman arraigns Gen. Rice and myself for having refused appropriations of money to hire these spies and Marshals to intermeddle with State elections. He says the "withholding of public money for this purpose is a more dangerous opposition than the attempted nullification of the Tariff laws by South Carolina, put down by Gen. Jackson, or even the attempted secession put down by civil war. By this doctrine nullification and secession are made easy by the refusal of a majority of either house to obey the law." He seems particularly sorry to find Gen. Rice and myself, after our "honorable record during the war," in this terrible attitude of nullification and rebellion. "If they were right during the war, they are wrong now. I have no disposition to arraign them, but I prefer to follow the old Republican flag that was hoisted in 1854." Stop there, Mr. Sherman! I want, in the midst of your patriotic peroration, to call your attention to the fact that in following the Republican flag in 1856 you, yourself, offered an amendment to the Army Appropriation bill to the effect that "no part of the military force of the United States herein provided for shall be employed in aid of the enforcement of the enactments of the alleged Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Kansas;" and, further, that your amendment was adopted; and, further, because the Senate refused to concur in your amendment, you filibustered and forced the adjournment of the first session of the Thirty-fourth Congress, leaving the army without a dollar of appropriations; and, further, that when the President called Congress together again you voted to adhere to your amendment, and undertook to force the adjournment of the second session without permitting the passage of the Army Appropriation bill, but were overruled by a few of your conservative Republican colleagues joining the Democrats and saving the army from disbandment for want of an appropriation.

As you seem to have forgotten this striking page in your political history, I refer you to the Congressional Globe, Thirty-fourth Congress, part second, 1855-'56, pages 1,754, 1,790, 1,794 and 2,240, and page 18 of the appendix. You will find the references handy, as they are all in one volume.

The difference between your position then and now is this: Then you were struggling against a bad use of Federal troops in a Territory, over which the Federal Government had supreme control; and now you are struggling for a bad use of Federal troops and Marshals to control State elections, with which the Federal Government has nothing whatever to do. You were willing to disband the whole army then rather than suffer the Federal Government to exercise its undoubted powers; and now you denounce as rebels and nullifiers men who served through the war for the Union, while you prospered in peace and comfort at home, for disbanding your hordes of partisans, paid from the common treasury of the people to wrest from them the control of their ballot-box.

I am not disposed, my fellow-citizens, to claim that in the ordinary exercise of its powers Congress is at liberty to withhold appropriations for purposes prescribed by law. We did not withhold any appropriations the failure of which is at all likely to interfere with any of the departments of the Government in the exercise of their ordinary and acknowledged powers. We merely forbade the use of any money appropriated for the army to transport or maintain troops at the polls; and we withheld no appropriations, except for the fees of Marshals and their deputies. We knew that all the Marshals would be patriotic enough to hold on to their offices and draw their regular salaries, and perform all their ordinary and useful duties, trusting to Congress to pay their fees for legitimate service. We merely resolved that the public treasure should not be wasted, nor the control of our State elections interfered with by hiring bummers and shoulder-hitters, or bribing needy men out of the common treasure of the people. And we now appeal from the advocates of Federal interference to the lovers of home rule to sustain our action. We will let the ballot-box itself declare whether it is safer in the hands and under the control of the officers of the election precincts, or of emissaries hired by the administration and backed by bayonets. This is not revolution nor nullification nor secession; but only an orderly, honest and patriotic appeal from Cæsar to the people.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY, the new Home Rule member, is Parlimentary leader writer on the London Daily News. He was born in 1830, in Cork, and began newspaper life as a reporter on the Cork Examiner under Mr. Maguire.

SARATOGA in the English language means "the region of the big hills." In plain English it means the region of big bills.

INDIANA NEWS.

MRS. KATE CHASE SPRAGUE owns a tract of land in Warrick county.

HON. J. W. SMITH, for several years County Clerk of Rush county, died recently.

EFFORTS are being made for the establishment of another extensive ship-yard at New Albany.

WILLIAM HANEY, aged 76 years, living in Brown county, lately dropped dead of heart disease while feeding his stock.

JOSEPH [illegible], of New Albany, died recently from stoppage of the bowels, caused by swallowing the seeds while eating water-melon.

W. C. DE PAUW, of New Albany, has made his tenth annual donation of $1,000 to the Preachers' Aid Society of the Indiana Conference.

RICHARD T. KNIGHTLY, ex-member of the Legislature, and a prominent member of the Masonic Lodge, died a few days ago, at his home in Acton.

THE residence of Hiram Hyatt, a banker, burned at Washington the other morning. Loss, $6,000; insured for $4,000. Origin of fire unknown.

MR. JOHN G. NEWKIRK has been elected Professor of History in the Indiana State University. Prof. Newkirk is a graduate of the Union Law School at Albany.

THE Eighty-fourth regiment Indiana volunteer infantry reunion will be held at Newcastle on the 29th inst., the seventeenth anniversary of the battle of Chickamauga.

SCARLET FEVER is so prevalent that the City Council of Indianapolis has ordered a white flag to be placed in a conspicuous place at every house where the fever rages.

A NEW election is to be called in those townships in Crawford and Pike counties that recently refused to vote aid to the completion of the New Albany and St. Louis Air-line railroad.

KINDER FERGUSON, the Scott county centenarian, aged 108 years, died at the residence of his son-in-law, W. Goben, near Holman. He was the oldest man in Northern Indiana, if not in the State.

THE State House contractors will begin laying 2,000,000 brick next week. They are also employing 300 men on the building and in the quarries, the latter furnishing twenty-five car-loads of stone per day.

A NIGHT or two since, during the absence of Sheriff Hay, of Monticello, some person, as yet unknown, became possessed of the keys of the county jail, which had been left in charge of the Sheriff's wife, and a general jail delivery was the result.

A PARTY of two girls and two young men while crossing White river at Morgan's ferry, twenty miles south of Vincennes, were thrown into the river by the horses attached to the wagon in which they were seated becoming scared and backing off the boat. Alice Cottrell, aged 17, Ellen Dellenger, aged 16, and John Summit, aged 22, were drowned, together with the horses. The other young man succeeded in regaining the boat.

Conference Appointments.

The following are the appointments made at the recent session of the Southeast Indiana Conference of the M. E. Church, held at Lawrenceburg:

Indianapolis District.—T. H. Lynch, P. E. Indianapolis—Roberts Park, S. M. Vernon; Fletcher place, G. L. Curtis; Central Avenue, R. Andrus; Grace, J. W. Duncan; Third Street, J. K. Pye; Patterson, J. S. Reager; Coburn Street, V. W. Tevis; Edwin Ray, G. H. Young; City Missions, P. S. Cook; Cleona, Alex. Campbell; Bean Blossom, A. E. Walker; Malott Park and Sugar Grove, J. W. Early; Southport, F. S. Potts; Greenwood, Jesse Miller; Franklin, R. D. Black; Waldron, J. C. Gullett; Nineveh, J. S. Alley; Acton, Wm. Nicols; Hope, W. M. Grubbs; Hartsville, A. Murphy; Palestine, G. W. Winchester; Fairland, G. Clouds; Castleton and Lawrence, A. Jamison; Brightwood, A. Hanway. P. McNutt, Professor Indiana Asbury University; J. A. Maxwell, instructor of Latin and history, Purdue University.

Connersville District.—F. C. Holliday, P. E. Connersville, E. L. Dolph; Rushville, A. N. Marlatt; Glenwood, E. A. Campbell and Charles Houstis; Brookville, T. B. McClain; New Trenton, D. T. Hedges; Fairfield, G. S. Conner; Mt. Carmel, J. C. White; Shelbyville, J. G. Chafee; Milroy, W. H. Wydman and J. W. Turner; Liberty and College Corner, R. R. Baldwin; Brownsville, Everton, S. H. Whitmore; Brownsville, Boston, to be supplied; Abington, C. W. Hargitt; Milton, W. S. Hamlin; Carthage, G. L. Alder; Laurel, B. F. Morgan; Metamora, G. E. Neville; Milford, J. W. Dashiel; St. Paul, James McCaw; Manilla, W. B. Clancy; Arlington, S. C. Noble.

Madison District.—L. G. Adkinson, P. E. Madison, Trinity, R. Roberts; Madison, Wesley, C. C. Edwards; Madison Circuit, J. W. Mellender; Canaan, A. Scott; Moorefield, S. A. Bright; Vevay, S. S. McMahan; Sugar Branch, J. W. Allen; Patriot, B. W. Cooper; Manchester, H. Harris; Lawrenceburg, M. L. Wells; Lawrenceburg Circuit, C. W. Lee; Rising Sun, W. Harrison; Hartford, J. D. Pierce; Dillsborough, Geo. Cochran; Versailles and Osgood, W. R. Lathrop; Delaware, E. G. Wood; Moore's Hill, A. W. Adkinson; Wilmington, B. Rawls; Aurora, D. A. Robertson; Greensburg, First Church, S. Tincher; Greensburg Centenary, W. S. Falkenburg; Greensburg Circuit, A. M. Lowdon. J. H. Doddridge, President of Moore's Hill College and member of Moore's Hill Quarterly Conference.

Jeffersonville District.—F. A. Hester, P. E. Jeffersonville, Wall Street, J. S. Tevis; Utica, G. P. Jenkins; Port Fulton, supply; Charlestown, J. A. Sargent; New Washington, D. C. Benjamin; Edinburg, E. H. Wood; Flat Rock, H. Morrow; Taylorsville, L. T. Fisher; Columbus, C. Tinsley; South Bethany, J. W. Mendell; Asbury, A. B. Chukner; Henryville, J. T. O'Neal; Vernon, W. W. Reynolds; Butlerville, T. W. Conner; Seymour, J. Cotton; Crothersville, R. L. Kinnear; Vienna, S. Tinker; Holman, J. R. T. Lathrop; Kent, W. W. Snyder; Paris, W. M. Baxton; Brownstown, B. F. Owens; Freetown, to be supplied by T. S. Brooks and B. Weakley; Elizabethtown, A. S. Wade; Hardenburg, supply.

J. H. Bayliss transferred to Detroit Conference.

R. F. Brewington transferred to North Indiana Conference.

M. Y. Boyard transferred to South Indiana Conference.

C. W. Gullett transferred to South Kansas Conference.

THE capital invested in British railways in 1878 was $3,500,000,000; the number of miles open, 17,333; the capital per mile, $201,505; the proportion of working expenses to gross receipts was 53 per cent.; the proportion of net revenue to capital, 4.25 per cent. The most profitable year since 1860 was 1872, when the return upon capital reached 4.74 per cent.—¼ of 1 per cent. on the entire capital more than last year. The returns for the current year are expected to be more adverse.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, SEP. 25, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

List of Soldiers Who Registered their Names During the Re-union.

12TH INDIANA INFANTRY.

C Isbell B 12 Huntertown
J W Cleveland B Albion
W S Hays B "
J C Maguire K Fort Wayne
C L Thomas F

13TH INDIANA.

I Shearer, B, Auburn, Ind
B F Holt A Spencerville Ind.
H Hull B St Joe
H L Carnahan A Auburn
J H Hight A New Era
H C Lord K Ray
G Rhodenbaugh B, Auburn
P Noel B Butler
D Broose A
J Speer A Auburn
A Smith C Waterloo,
H D Hathaway A Newville
N Johnson A Auburn
N Wyatt C Spencerville
D Bruce A Altona
G H Hoffman A Auburn

152D INDIANA,

Dewit Williams, Co. K,
Jos DeBruder D
J W Shore H Angola
J DeLong C
C H Milk B Milford
A J Crooks H Butler
R F Rhodes K
J. w. Whitaker, Colonel, New Haven
L Zimmerman C Lisbon, Ind
Z T Garrett, Cederville
G W Scott G Flint
John Baughman C Albion
D Jennings, C Butler
G E Young, Adgt., Pleasant Lake
H C Chilcoat C Corunna
M Holopeter G Cederville
W Clark G Auburn
G Miller K Pleasant Lake
J Farranger, E Albion
John Hart C Angola
G R Wickwire K Angola
J M Chamberlain, Surgeon, Waterloo
C P Houser H Auburn
G H K Moss H Auburn
W M Kist D Butler

74TH INDIANA,

W C Sheek D Corunna
D S Witmer E Millersburg
T J Tarney Auburn
W Vaughan H Garrett "
J Walcott H
N Knisely H
G C Gilbert D Butler
S R Mosier D
W Baker I
Geo Rummell H
D DeLong D Newville
J F McNear B Cherubusco
Nat Gray C "
C M Summerlin H Lagrange
John Creidler C Turky Creek
N J Letts H Fremont
E Letts A Albion
L Gates Captain H Angola
J Stettler H Pleasant Lake
Wm Moore H Pleasant Lake
John B Lemmon H "
I A Gardner H "
C Hoffman H "
A F Hoffman F "
Geo Vose " "
M R Knapp H "
R T Perkins F "
I D Abby H "
S B George Capt H "
D Stettler H "
John Snyder D Butler

100TH INDIANA,

A J Rimmond, G Ripley O
John Davis A Spencerville
L Farver A "
B F McGloce A Waterloo
S Parker B "
S Guthrie A "
A A Waters A "
C T Rodgers A Auburn
J Pifer A "
H Wolf A "
H Pimer A "
Geo Simons K "
W H Fair A "
W Likins A "
J D Swartz, Surgeon, Auburn
J Uhlm, A Blair
W K Coveland C Butler
J K Morrow, Captain C Angola
N Squires A
C C Browand E Kendallville
W C Letts B Fremont
A A Clark, A Butler,
A Robbins A Auburn
J S Ollinger A "
S Willson A "
J C Prosser A "
W H Fair A "
E D Hartman Captain A Auburn
T Brown C Lagrange
C F Rodgers A
T J Cox E
S Denman D
J C Vaugh E
R Walburn E Alma
J R Robb A
L B Powell A
Thos Dowell I
M M Beals K Fort Wayne
G Buchanan A Corunna
A Miles D Wakarusa
W A Clark F Auburn
John Haines B Flint

30TH INDIANA.

A Preston G Lagrange
P P Last F Kendallville
W H Stafford H Auburn
W A Coen F Albion
Jas Dolan F "
C DeLong A Waterloo
W B Johnson C Ligonier
E F Coats F Albion
A Gannett F Ripley O
C W Ludwick A Ft Wayne
Geo Hannon A Churubusco
J Lawrence H Auburn
Enos Vian H Waterloo
S Ferney A "
W V Todd D Aburn
M A Critchett D Fort Wayne
J C Wysong H Hudson
P Hull H Butler
D S Irish G Hudson
J V VanFerson F Avilla
T F Weldon D Pleasant Lake
G I Patterson H Auburn
N Wilson E Cherubusco
W Elson H Auburn
W A Feagler H "
H A Coe F Green Center
Sam'l Fritz E
G W Hamilton H
R H Johnson, Adgt.
J A Province H Spencerville
Pat Doole C
J Lobdell F
J J Lightner C
E DeLong C
J A Miller H
L Hathaway H
Thos Meeds D
Joseph Fisher C Butler
J W Bixler D Kendallville
N B Moore C Marion
J A Braton C Ligonier, soldier Mexican war
I Watson H
J T Pollock, D "
H M Stoner H Syracuse
J W Milks G Kendallville
L Winn F Avilla
L N Southworth F Kendallville
G W VanHorn D Butler
C A Floyd C Newville
A B Mathews, A Fairfield Centre
D Fretty H Summit
D Barnhart C Butler
W A Beard H Waterloo
J Markum H Hamilton
J F Johnson H Auburn.
J W McKay H "
S M George H "
J D Likins C "
W A Feagler H "

INDIANA CAVALRY.

W C McGonigal 2nd Newville Ind
E L Lewis B 7th Fort Wayne "
E Irvin M 2nd "
I J McFadden D 2nd Waterloo "
O T Prichard 2nd Litchfield Mich.
Wm Edgington 4th Auburn "
John McClellan K 2nd "

OHIO ARTILLERY.

J F Scott D bat 1
T W Haines 23
Peter Bryan 2d
A R Walter 6th Fort wayne
A Hoff 19th Salem centre
N H Miller 1st A art Alliance Ohio

N. B.—In all cases where the state is omitted after name of town Indiana should be written.

INDIANA INFANTRY—NOT CLASSIFIED.

John Welch H 31 Auburn Indiana
H E Altenberg G 19 " "
H C Peterson I 89 " "
John Ober G 17. " "
G W Wade A 12 " "
E W Shull D 18 " "
J Provines K 137 " "
Peter Ditmar 59 " "
D Freagh K 139 " "
Peter Graham F 155 " "
W Sheffer D 137 " "
J W Bowman D 142 Butler "
J E Fisher 40 " "
J N Veely A 9 " "
T W Harwood C 53 " "
G Mustfelt H 35 " "
L J Diehl F 118 " "
A Ross I 177 Waterloo "
J Brown G 128 " "
John Day F 142 " "
F J Staltsgiver B 12 Albion "
N Wineberger A 142 " "
Alex Winebrenner H 12 " "
C T Darrows C 12 Angola "
G Work C 152 " "
Jos Kock C 35
J Valentine D 142
G W Davis G 21
J R Howey E 142 Newville "
T F McDougall New Haven "
R H Ross F 20 Altona "
J M Miller 127 Wolf Lake "
C Freese F 155 Spencerville "
John Isbell B 12 Avilla "
F LaDow A 21 Salem Centre "
Geo Gaff F 36 Altona "
L Grate I 35
J D Champion F 61
S Shade G 38
F Shaffstoll A 21
R G Baily 112 Mount Hope
S Strauss K 35
J V Baber C 130 DeKalb
S Sansbaugh C 111 West Unity O
Walter Krise H 75 Roanoke Ind
J Gattswood D 137 Albion
W R Tustison E 9 Blair
J Hiss C 42 Fairfield Centre
L W Treesh A 142 Sedan
J P Wagoner C 53 Franklin Center
G R Koontz F 33 Huntington
J S Conley D 142 Lisbon
J W Geiger E 17 Columbia City
O VanPelt H 53 Salem Centre
D H Renner D 9 Pleasant Lake
Robert Henry 11 Va Inf Avilla Ind
W H Merritt K 11th Mich. Inf Angola
C L Mann C 4 Mich Inf
H Petre K Hamilton
G W McConnell Q M 2 Ind Inf Angola
S Ballengar H 8 Mich St Joe Mich
L S Goodwin, scout Waterloo
J Carter I 6 U S A Pleasant Lake
G E Young B 4th Mich Inf Pleasasant Lake
John Palmer 4 N Y Art
Isaac Crutzner Fenton's Regt war of 1812
D Denman D 6 Ill cav Newville
F C Waterman A 2 Wis
J S Havens D 2 Mich Inf.
C Eckhart A 101 Pa. Inf Auburn
Chas Schrader E 44 Ill Inf
J D DeWit E 9 Wis cav
J Williamson G 11 Pa Inf
H E VanDuzen A 2 R I Bat Butler
I N Veeley A 9 Ind "
J H Smith 8 cav N Y.
W D Myranda A 32 N Y Newville
D Benden B 4 Mich Inf. Kendallville
J Richardson B 4 M " "
H Smither D 3d U S
G Fusselman D 5 Pa cav
L Hazzard, A 19 Reg Fort Wayne
S Barnes B 12 Ill Inf Newville
J J Mason K 205 Pa Inf
H J Martin K 24 N Y cav waterloo
J H Carpenter U S M Angola
John Coons F 3 Mich cav Waterloo
P Locke A 31 Wis Summit
S W Dickinson A 12 Wis California Mich
J P Bolton A 21 Wis Avilla
Wm Almnritter 1st N Y Bat Garrett
D M Eveland 119 Pa Cherubusco
R S Robinson Col 93 N Y Fort Wayne
S Eddy D 1st Ill bat Albion
J Swift D 3 Mich cav Alvarado
C Dunn K 73 N Y Pittsburg
T Berger B 5 N Y Auburn
J Gattswood D 137 Ind Inf albion
J Anderson 23 N Y Auburn
P Gill G 15 U S waterloo
A Bullard I 42 Ill Ray
R H Weamer E 2d Ky Inf Auburn Ind
W H McIntosh F 32 wis "
D S Ober A 124 Pa "
H C Miller G 44 Ill "
R B Romanus 102 N Y Farmer's Centre O.
J D Ward M 3 N Y Cav Auburn
M W Maybee G 13 V Inf Gilead Mich
Jos McKegg F 64 Iowa
L Bozer 1st Ill bat
G W Reese F 101 O V I
W Messer I "
T Hudson K " Avilla
W S Messer E " Auburn
G McNabb K 103 O Inf waterloo
J B Casebeer Surgeon 100 O Inf Auburn
Jas Wells A 101 Ohio Inf
A Chubb F " Newville
J O Davidson G " Fairfield Centre
A M Dawson I " Pleasant Lake
S B Johnson F " waterloo
J Carr F " Butler
J B Taylor 1st Mich bat
H Hackathorn 4th Mich Bat
H E Quanto "

OHIO INFANTRY REGIMENTS

The following are the soldiers representing Ohio Regiments of Infantry not classified:

Jos Haler E 28 Concord, Ind
G W Swanton D 43 Waterloo "
J H Weaver K 35 " "
W Hiler G 24 " "
G Spaght E 115 Butler "
A Sternberger C 105 Butler "
I D Dailly B 177 " "
J Ulim A 191 " "
G H McNabb K 182 " "
J H Klink 3 " "
S H Meek 23 " "
S Klink I 71 " "
J McKlintock K 9 " "
J W Wyland F 64 " "
W W Mathena B 152 " "
W F Smith E 4 Auburn "
A Florida A 60 " "
H J Norris E 73 " "
Phil Myers I 161 " "
T C Mays B 65 " "
W Oller I 57 " "
E Somerlott C 14 Waterloo "
J A Booth A 90 " "
G W Clutser C 21 " "
E Squiers I 47 " "
J A Price C 128 Angola "
S Burght H 105 " "
M Flint D 38 " "
W Reed D 38 " "
R Young E 151
H Mennigh D 107
K Otto C 120
S P Stroh I 49
Asa Johns K 131
A Hopkins E 21 Milford Indiana
F M Sherman, F 133 Garrett "
B Brown B 66 Summit "
G White H 38 Kendallville "
F R Kiblinger A 11 Albion "
R A Kiblinger A 131 " "
J Wafford D 80 Newville "
W H Bender A 104 Leo "
F Stagley 123 Ray "
J Valentine E 31 Garrett "
Jas May I 38 St Joe "
D A Miller C 35 " "
S Waterstone H 38 Bridgewater "
L Wilderson C 84 DeKalb "
J Q Knox C 128 Albion "
P Powelson I 122 Fremont "
S Hackenberger F 55 Summit "
A Aulbert F 111 Cisero "
G W Strause D 38 Metz "
W A Shreve A 120 Ray "
J Beerbower E 21 Milford. "
W D Grogg F 48
D M Webb H 19
G white H 38 Kendallville "
C Shaff D 024
J Betts D 116
O Zimmerman I. 15
F D Paulus D 64
W H Bender A 104 Leo "
J Rushnell F 121 North Vernon Ohio.
W Croslett F 182 West Unity "
A Bush F 38 Edon "
John Temple K 68 Mt Pelier "
R Barcus G 113 Cromwell "

12TH INDIANA CAVALRY.

I C Dirrim C Hamilton
J Tuttle C Angola
F Hilkert B Swan
S H Smith B Albion
John Pyron Kendallville
J W Cleveland B Albion
Henry Gurtner C

OHIO CAVALRY.

P S Chaub K 9th
W Hoffman F 8 Auburn
S Saliday M 12 Fort wayne
J H Bennett M 1st Auburn
T R Grant E 8 Garrett
S R Hanta C 10 waterloo
L Walter C 66 Albion
R Wes McBride Union Light Gu's waterloo
A P Foltz B 13 Auburn
D R Wissel B 13

INDIANA ARTILLERY

Leonard McClain 1st
S Culver 5th Auburn
D Culver A 9th "
B F Culbertson 9 "
D Muller 23 Spencerville
A Keesler 23 "
G L Rowe I 15
H W Caldwell 11 Garrett
W J Rydnauer 21 Butler
W Murphy 1st H Art Auburn
Jas Draggoo 4th bat Concord
W Simmons 5th Angola

11th INDIANA INFANTRY

John wilson E Auburn Ind
J F Hollopeter E Leo "
D W Steward E Auburn "
A L Hollopeter E " "
H H Cupp E " "
Oscar F whitney E Bryan Ohio

29TH INDIANA INFANTRY.

W S Hanes company K
J L Bunch K Auburn Ind
W B Sargeant A Garrett Ind
A Somerlott A
S S Butler K.
Frank Somerlott A.
Jared Spooner D Auburn Ind.
O Filley B Newville "
Geo Temple B Turkey Creek Ind.
E D Gumsaulus K Salem Center Ind.
M B Hershey A Fremont "
D Lutman K Corunna "
J F Studebaker B Corunna " R G Renner B Hamilton "
P Gushwa B Corunna "
G W Hill A Garrett "
Peter Gonser B Sedan "
I Rose I Waterloo "
W Jenkins Angola " E Rinehart A Angola " Frank Bennett D Summit " Samuel Maurer I Auburn "
C Cley B Auburn "
Cyrus Wyland D Auburn Ind

44TH INDIANA INFANTRY.

Maj W B Bingham Lagrange Ind. Co D 4th O Mexican war
Surgeon J H Rerrick Lagrange Ind
Otis F Blood F Newville "
G W Palmer F " "
I H Abel F Spencerville "
H J Abel F Newville "
T C Kinmont F Hicksville Ohio
L Hoodlemier K
Geo Hopkins F Logan Ohio
L Beard F Newville Ind.
D Andress F Spencerville Ind
T O Leslie K Albion "
E D Smith H Ligonier "
S B Sweet C Ft Wayne "
John Lower D LaGrange "
Wm McKee G Albion " Jas Pierce K Auburn "
Henry Slentz F Butler "
S Oberlin F " "
J C Slentz F Hamilton "
W W Young F Newville "
A C Huffman F Butler "
W H Stoy H Hamilton "
H Milliman F Blair "
O D Scovill I Pleasant Lake "
G W Slentz F Waterloo "
R R Denham F Hamilton "
J H VanAuken A Pleasant Lake Ind
J S Potts B Auburn "
Jas Miller K Wrterloo "
E S Aldrch K Pleasant Lake "
S Bullard K Angola "
Isaac Ditmar F Auburn "
J J Grumlich G Mariam "
H L Walers F Auburn "
Henry Luce D
F W Willis K Waterloo " Mike Ryan A "
John Ryan A " "
J H Gaff G
W H H Cornell K
F S Chandler F
T Griffith (captain) A
S N Cox A
C C Simons K
Reuben Lockwood K
E Dickinson F
Caleb Clark K
J G Casebeer F Crooked Creek Ind
W H Boran K Auburn "
H Crampton A Pleasant Lake "
L Lockwood K Auburn. "
A Harwood F Butler "
P Parnell K Waterloo "
D N Hart F Columbia City " W T Kimsey Waterloo "
J M Kimsey Waterloo "
N P Lewis K Angola "
B F Cornell K Herdland Mo
J Craig F Waterloo "
Jacob Link K Auburn "
Alex Kinmont F " "
Nick Ensley K " "
I Ditmars F " "
W A Rose F " "
Moses Willis K " "
H Gunsenhouser H Butler "
M V Heffelfinger K " "
C Huffman F " "
David Gaff F " "
J M Lawnsbury D " "
F Gender F " "
J Ravett F " "
C Staley A Angola "
C Klink A Pleasant Lake "
J F Housel K DeKalb "
J Crampton A Pleasant Lake "
W A Greenameyer K Hudson "
G W Gordon K Auburn "
J N Chilcote K
N H Mathews F
N Fuller F Newville Ind. Quartermaster in Mexican war.
Chas Lockwood K Garrett Ind

88th INDIANA INFANTRY.

Gen'l L J Blair Waterloo Ind
Colonel C A Bryan Huntington Ind
Colonel Geo Humphrey Fort Wayne Ind
Adjutant A H Dougal Fort Wayne "
Surgeon J S Gregg Fort Wayne "
F N Bidler A Waterloo
Isaac Smith D
W S Stnair C Auburn Ind
Daniel Pressler K Columbia City Ind
Jos Hyndman E
Martin Boggs F
L L Brown A
Chas Bowman A
T R Willard A
E D White H
L D Gibson H
Wm Johnson D
J H Franks A
Geo DeLong H
J Stafford D
John H Cook C
R L Freeman E
Isaac Moses H
Jacob Pressler E
N E Griswold C
Henry Wyatt D Churubusco Ind
J Hamilton F Newville "
Wm Yeagley H Farmers Center Ohio
Thos Krise H Auburn Ind
N Wyatt D Churubusco Ind
Phil Smith H Newville "
J C Stafford D Orland "
W F Roop C Pulaski Ohio
G W Burns A Butler Ind
A C Brown E Fort Wayne Ind
M Bruand B Kendallville "
O M Widney H Blair "
W O Hollopeter E Leo "
C W McKee D Sidney Ohio
Josh Parker D Fort Wayne Ind
G W Sanders A Wolcottville Ind
J Ginther D Monroeville "
J Winebruner B Ft. Wayne "
Wm Krontz A Butler "
E M Smurr H Butler "
S Gunther D Monroeville " L H Miller D Churubusco " David Halter D Cedarville " Richard Williams G Albion "
Walter Watkins H Gillmore Iowa
E L Teegarden D Kendallville Ind
Elmore Wyatt H Newville "
J W Swasgood H Butler "
W Snyder E Auburn "
T H Tomlinson A Waterloo "
B F Kenedy A Waterloo "
John Steward Spencerville Ind
Geo Brown D Harlan "
W H Browand D Kendallville "
N W Bowman G Wolcottville " D Goodrich A Sedan "
W H Fisher A Waterloo "
O Mooney E Lewanda Kansas
John Bills H Butler Ind
D Simon C LaOtto "
J Pennick H Summit Ind
John Pennick H Summit Ind
Levi Stoy Hamilton "
J Rainier H Auburn "
T R Brown A " "
P W Silvers C " "
C Beugnot D " "
J Stafford D " "
Lewis Imhof H Butler "
Samuel Headley H Butler "
Noah Miller A " "
Daniel McNabb H " "
J Showalter H " "
Wm Deems H " "
J Freeman H " "
J Haslett H " "
F Hammond A Waterloo "
G C DeLong A " "
Park Seberts A Sedan " D D Delhi H Butler "
Henry Bidler A Waterloo "
Josiah King F Fort Wayne Ind
Joseph Hood E Eel River Ind
Chas R Reed C

129th INDIANA INFANTRY.

Colonel C A Zollinger Fort Wayne Ind
Major W H Cole
Adjutant E G Melendy Fremont Ind
J C Staley A
H B Kelley A
I N Keller H
John Hosler F
W Wert F
Wm Brubaker H
D B Chilcote F Sedan Ind
W A Musser H
J W Leitrich B
J B Bixler I Kendallville Ind
S G Shook F Corunna "
A Lower A
Gustin Flint F Newville Ind
W S Headley F Newville Ind
C W Griffith F Corunna " D Loomis F Fremont "
A Richey A Hamilton "
J H Houser F Garrett "
Ira Nelson A Hamilton "
John Berlin H Angola "
Andrew Hart H " "
John Fry I Lisbon "
C Petty A Metz "
J H VanAuken A Pleasant Lake Ind
T A Clark D Auburn "

J Mooney E Butler Ind
J Greenameyer A Hamilton "
L E Tricket A Bronson "
A Flentz H Hamilton " Geo Somerlott H Angola "
Wm Fenton I Ligonier "
Geo Casebeer A Butler "
J K Slentz H Hamilton "
M Letts A Fremont "
C Fike B Fort Wayne "
W R Culp E Wakarusa "
J Hosack I Churubusco "
Jas Harper B Fort wayne "
J Clinger B Albion "
B F Nelson F Hicksville Ohio
N Fusselman F Newville "
J Nelson F Hicksville "
J P Benner A Hamilton "
J Housler F Corunna "
L T Bourie B Fort wayne "
Jas Myres A Butler " Lewis Dunn A " L T Crane A Hamilton "
M L Duck E Auburn "
A F Pinchin H Butler "
J B Veeley A " "
A Clay E Hudson "
W Pinney D Auburn "
W M Abel F Blair "
Geo Bennett A
Josiah Bennett A

18th OHIO INFANTRY.

John Springer Auburn Ind
E L Casebeer E " "
R Elson C " "
Wm Searight H Butler "
B Saughman E waterloo "
Joseph Culler E " Theo. Reed E Auburn "
F M Anderson I Butler "
Thos Carr I " "

INDIANA INFANTRY—NOT CLASSIFIED.

G T Johns D 26th Butler "
J McConnell A 34th Monroeville "
J Kessler D 155th Spencerville "
J S Robinson G 53d Hamilton "
W Gindlesparger A 142nd Kendallville "
J T Husselman C 42nd Fairfield Center "
G L Thomas I 48th Waterloo "
J S Haven A 151st Fremont "
A Palmer D 142nd Garrett "
H H Meek A 112nd Waterloo "
J W Beams E 55th Spencerville "
J Adams B 9th Ripley "
Joel Hartman H 53d Fairfield Center "
J S Money G 128h Huntertown "
C W Widney C 35th Blair "
S H Ritchie K 81st Pleasant Lake "
D Whitney E 35th Angola "
W Frederick B 53d Waterloo "
F Houser H 35th Garrett "
D Pilgrim A 35th Avilla "
J C Ault C 47th Auburn "
Henry Funk I 48th Butler "
G Miller G 53d "
J Horn C 31st
M Shreve G 142nd
B F James F 51st
A Weaver D 8th Churubusco "
B T Campbell G 19 h
D Beaver G 122nd
Geo Lovine K 153d
Elza Spear A 142nd Auburn "
D K Houghton K 129th " "
M Karen K 139th " "
W Kraig K 53d
B Seward E 53d Kendallville "
B Dunfield G 28d Auburn "
W A Geiger E 17th Churubusco "
C K Baxter G 19th Waterloo "
H Hackathorn I 53d Hudson "
J A Cowan 89th Auburn "
S H Cowan I 89th Decatur "
O T Waters C 128th Fort Wayne "
Wm Werust I 42nd Auburn "
Robert Stratton E 129th Fort Wayne "
A Morrison G 53d Sedan "
Wm Marie I 35th Mariam "
A G Meese D 142nd Moore's Station " Isaac Farver C 35th Auburn "
Seth Hill B 35th

OHIO INFANTRY—NOT CLASSIFIED.

J Soliday M 12th Fort Wayne "
D Death I 134th St. Paris Ohio
C Enaman A 9th Fort Wayne "
E L Ward G 43d Albion "
W L Houlton K 82nd Hamilton "
W Bowersox F 67th Edon Ohio
J W Click D 3d Butler "
C A Rhoaes G 64th Spencerville "
Theo Hunt B 58th Hamilton "
J G Johnson G 121st Waterloo "
W H Wickard H 49th Butler "
Henry Brown H 185th Moore's Station "
O G Powell A 144th Garrett "
J W Patterson 186th Waterloo "
C Hart B 78th Angola "
W Kiemmohn G 11th Spencerville "
O Ross E 38th Hicksville Ohio.
W J Frederick I 1st Garrett "
R J Jameson H 14th California Michigan
P Hallam K 82nd Auburn "
Jos Hirsh D 52nd
M Simonton G 23d
Alex Forest K 21st
F P Lourdy H 123d Churubusco "
G N Olinger E 19th
B W Powell C 47th

G W Kinkle A 44th Huntertown Ind
J Hoffman F 111th
J A Parr F 21st
J H Rowland K 166th
O S Webb F 182nd
P Romedgh G 23d
John Hamilton H 8th
J A Brin H 128th
S E Parson C 79th Auburn "
S J Wood G 121st "
Thos Culver F 182nd Metz "
G W Beck C 126th Auburn "
A Metegard G 55th Flint "
W Stough Col. 9th Bryan O "
G W Powell C 14th Fairfield Center "
Horace Swift F 182 Montpelier O "
J Garrett A 88th Auburn "
J Gidding D 167th " "
S A West G 66th California Mich "
F Fisher I 19th Waterloo "
E T Perow F 67 " "
R S Grimm B 24th Garrett "
E Patterson C 42nd Hudson "
I O Bachtel E 61st Corunna "
S C Stoy E 9th Butler "
John Knavel F 14th Butler "
C W Carrell D 189th Butler "
C A Likins A 3d " "
M Richardson G 68th Salem Center "
H H Hoslngton D 44th Auburn "
J W White B 86th Kendallville "
Joe Spitter C 111 Spencerville "
W E Shreve 129th Auburn "
Jas Hughs C 164th Garrett "
E Fales E 32nd Angola "

INDIANA ARTILLERY

John Otte 11th Auburn "
J K Culbertson 1st H " "
D Culver 5th " "
John Ehlers 11th " "
Levi Bowser 16th Academy "
I Baughman 1st H Waterloo "
W F Hersh A 1st H Albion "
Henry Grim 5th Swan "
Geo Hough 11th Pleasant Lake "
Jacob Grim 1st H "
A Shaffstall 1st H "
Henry C Triplet 23d "
Stephen Hughey 1st H "
J W Jones A 1st H Waterloo "
Geo Selmmon 5th Hudson "
C N Gillett 23d Fort Wayne "
Wm Wrench L 1st H Hamilton "

MISCELLANEOUS.

John Hobaugh G 1st W V A
John Knepw E 2nd M J C
L E Mills A 11th Mich I Butler Ind.
J N. McBride 2nd O H A
R H Daggett D 2nd Mich I
J Barber A 184th Pa I
A J Kain D 75th N Y I
J Jones H 1st Marines U S A
P Montabor Loomis' Mich battery
N Seabring A 3d C U S A
C Porter A 94th Ill I
M J Warner H 17th Ill C
James Henry K 11th Ill C
I B McDonald Col 6th W V C Columbia City Ind
W Rodgers H 28th Mich I Reading Mich
M Curry H 32nd Ill I Edgerton Ind
D S Pifer K 46th Penn I Corunna Ind
Henry Hammon K 38th Wis I Lisbon Ind
L Stansbury E 105th Ill I Garrett "
R L Simpson H 22d N Y I " "
J J Littlefield S 18th Mich I Jackson Mich
H M Deihl C 132nd Pa I Fort Wayne Ind
C H Allen B 4th Mich I Angola "
J Hamlin U S S Choctaw "
C B Allyn 30th Mich I Auburn "
B Wescott 2nd Wis A " "
G I Walters 3d Iowa A Ripley "
S H Rhodenbaugh H 1st Mo A Waterloo Ind
J Jager E 4th Mich I Angola "
J Ocher B 1st Ill A Butler "
D Overarcher H 18th Mich I Angola "
J May E 2nd Mich C Newville "
J Slippy E 2nd Pa I Garrett "
J Carson I 42nd Ill I Angola "
A R Stevens H 117th N Y I Waterloo "
C A Shackford F 61st Ill I Pleasant Lake "
D Maylim 4th Md C Garrett "
W H Smith B 8th Mich I Freemon "
R Furngs K 4th Mich I Waterloo "
S Kenedy M 9th Ill C " "
O Carver B 4th Mich I Angola "
M Howard H 9th Mich I Waterloo "
D Denman D 6th Ill I Auburn "
T Q Ball Maj 31st Wis I Chicago Ill
M Casey B 12th Mich I Garrett. "
J M Rohrbaugh D 1st Ill A Butler "
L A Coolidge Fife Maj 13th Mass I Chicago Ill
R A Hendershot B 8th Mich I Englewood Ill The drummer boy of the Rappahannoc.

Care in Selecting Food.

The first conditions of healthfulness are secured when care is taken in selecting the articles which enter into our daily food. Let all the articles used be as pure, wholesome and easy of digestion as Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder, and we warrant that the health of the family will not be likely to suffer.

DRY-GOODS, CLOTHING, HATS AND CAPS, GROCERIES, &c., &c.

HERE WE ARE AGAIN!

WITH THE LARGEST STOCK OF

DRY-GOODS, CLOTHING, HATS AND CAPS

EVER BROUGHT TO DeKALB COUNTY.

$12,000.00

Worth of new dry-goods, clothing, hats, caps, notions and novelties, which will be sold without any regard to the advance in the east, and a great many cheaper than ever before.

Knowing that all cotton and woolen goods must advance this fall, owing to the scarcity of raw material, we concluded that it would pay our customers as well as ourselves to buy our goods before any advance, and we are happy to say that we are now enabled to sell goods cheaper than ever before. We would advise all our friends and customers that are in need of any goods to buy them soon; by so doing they will certainly save money.

DRY-GOODS DEPARTMENT.

We have everything in both staple and fancy dry-goods, prints, muslins, denims, ducks, flannels, jeans and tickings, in endless variety, and at prices below all competition. We have the best of dress-goods, alpacas, cashmeres, dusters and waterproofs in large quantities and the best selections—in fact the largest stock to select from ever brought to this county.

CLOTHING: CLOTHING.

In this department we have taken particular pains, and can say we have the best and only well selected stock of clothing in the county.

$6,000 (SIX THOUSAND) $6,000

Worth of clothing to be sold cheaper than the same kind of goods have ever been sold in Northern Indiana. Suits from $4.00 up to the finest trecots and imported worsteds. Over-coats from $3.00 up to the very best of all wool beaver. We guarantee as good a fit as any tailor can make, or no sale.

HATS AND CAPS!

In this department we have everything pertaining to a first class hat store, from the cheapest wool to the very finest fur hats—as good an assortment as has ever been offered in DeKalb county, and at prices below all competition.

GROCERIES! GROCERIES!

We are now selling choice family groceries as cheap as they can be bought in any house in Northern Indiana. Best coffee A sugar 9c., best coffee C sugar 8c.; good rio coffee 12c.; splendid rio coffee 15c.; best rio coffee 18c.; best black pepper 20c. per lb.; best Carolina rice 3 pounds for 25c.; the very best roasted coffees, also all kinds of canned fruits, dried fruits, prunes, raisins, apples, as low as the same can be bought anywhere in the state.

Thanking the public for past favors, and asking the continuance of the same, we ask of the people of DeKalb and surrounding counties to come and examine our goods and get prices, and we are sure they will be convinced that they can save 20 percent, by buying their dry-goods, clothing, hats and caps, groceries and notions of

SCHAAB, BEUGNOT & CO.,
West side of public square, Auburn, Ind.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—MORTGAGES,
—WARRANTEE DEEDS,
—QUIT CLAIM DEEDS,
—GUARDIAN'S RECEIPTS, (bound),
—ADMINISTRATOR'S RECEIPTS (bound),
—For sale in large or small quantities at the COURIER office. tf.

—Hair nets for five cents at Mrs. A. J. Little's.

—Mr. E. D. Hartman visited Toledo on business, the beginning of the week

—Our esteemed friend, Wm. Carr, of Columbia City, dropped in to see us last Tuesday.

—Preaching at the Baptist church next Sabbath morning and evening, by Rev. R. C. Ray.

—The C. O. D. stock of goods has been sold to Mr. N. B. Rowe, and removed to Garrett.

—Mrs. A. J. Little returned yesterday with a large stock of new goods. Call and see them.

—If you have scrofula, don't fail to use "Dr. Lindsey's Blood Searcher." Sold by all druggists.

—Miss Lizzie Williams, of Falls City, Pa., is visiting with her sister, Mrs. L. Johnson, of this place.

—Mr. J. Abright and wife, and Mr. D. D. Snyder and wife are attending the exposition in Chicago.

—Ask for "Sellers' Liver Pills." No others posses half their virtue. 25c. per box. Sold by all druggists.

—Some person appropriated Dave Snyder's riding-bridle during the reunion. His horse is missing also.

—Mrs. H. C. Bell and daughter Ida, and Miss Louie Henry, gave the COURIER office a pleasant call a few days since.

—Misses Celia and Mary Rank, of Butler, in company with Miss May Bell of this place, favored the COURIER boys with a call.

—The father and mother of Capt. Silvers, came from Bluffton to attend the re-union, and spend a few days with the Captain and his family.

—Charley Beugnot met a stave-bolt yesterday morning and surrendered without a protest. He has more check now than he ever had before.

—MARRIED—At the M. E. parsonage, in Auburn, on Thursday, Sept. 18th, by Rev. H. J. Norris, Mr. Oliver Weller and Miss Ida Preston, both of Noble county.

—"Put away my playthings mamma" is the title of a new song and chorus by Prof. G. A Fike, who is the author of both, words and music. Secure a copy at Willis' book store.

—Bro. R. H. Weamer of the Republican, has just been informed of his heirship to a large estate of a deceased relative in Indiana county, Penn. He has our congratulations.

—List of unclaimed letters in the postoffice at Auburn, Ind. Sep. 20, 1879. L. Ashley, Sopha Dammon, T. F. Goodwin & Co, Mary E. Lockwood, Frank Paney, Mrs. Frank Sitle, Gussie Young.
JOS. RAINIER, Postmaster.

—The sixth annual exhibition of the Whitley County Joint Stock agricultural association, will be held at Columbia City, next week, commencing on Tuesday and continuing four days. The secretary has our thanks for complimentaries.

—The best made and best finished lot of Cincinnati buggies ever brought to DeKalb county, can now be seen at F. D. Ryan's headquarters opposite the postoffice, in Auburn. You that want a stylish buggy with foot mat and all, call on Mr. Ryan.

—Mr. Nicholas Ensley and wife, and Miss Lydia Hogue left for Chicago last Monday night, to attend the exposition. While in the city Mr. Ensley will select with great care, one of the most complete stocks of dry-goods, notions and millinery goods ever brought to Auburn.

—Mr. McQuiston of the firm of McQuiston & Ralston is now in New York buying goods for the fall and winter trade. The new stock will consist of dry-goods, clothing, carpets, groceries, notions, etc. All bought at rock-bottom prices, for cash. Wait and examine the stock.

—Susan B Anthony has been secured to deliver her lecture "Woman wants Bread, not the Ballot," on Wednesday evening, Oct. 1st, 1879, at Columbia City, Indiana. Those of our citizens who desire to hear her, can go down on the afternoon train and return the same night.

—About a half dozen overgrown louts, while trying to get on the north bound train at the Saginaw depot Saturday evening, knocked down and ran over a helpless woman as she was about to get on the cars, and had it not been for a member of the Waterloo military company, who indulged in a little wholesome rib-punching with his rifle, the lady might have been severely injured.

—The Pinafore company has broken up, and T. C. Mays has again entered into private life at Auburn.—Garrett Herald.

The Herald should be careful how it copies items entire from the Fort Wayne Sentinel, as they are often far from correct. The Pinafore company is not broken up, but is delighting the people of Ohio with their fine rendition of the opera.

—Geo Hazzard is still on the war path. When Mr. Nicholas Ensley of this place arrived in Chicago on Tuesday morning last, he was arrested on an indictment for attempting to kidnap Hazzard in Chicago a year ago. Mr. Ensley had no trouble in giving bail. The charge of kidnapping is trumped up, there is nothing of it, but if ever our citizens do kidnap Hazzard, he will be a gone gosling.

—Our faithful Newville correspondent, in company with several other old line democrats attended the Voorhees rally at Defiance, O., last week. He says Voorhees' speech was one of the best he ever listened to, and he has heard a great many since 1840. The Ohio democracy feel certain of electing Ewing and Rice, with a majority of at least 20,000. Hon. A. P Edgerton is expected to address the people of Newville and Butler at an early day, on the subject of the proposed narrow-guage railroad. Alpha has our thanks for a rifle-ball taken from the heart of a locust tree on the ground where the old fort stood near Defiance. The ball was taken out last Saturday, and is supposed to be a relic of the Indian war.

DIED.—On last Monday afternoon, Mr. Russell Bumpus, of this place, in the sixty-eighth year of his age.

Mr. Bumpus had been employed for some time in Goshen, and a few days ago returned, complaining of a pain in his head. From this he lingered on until his death on Monday. He leaves a wife and five children, four of whom are married. Mr. Bumpus was a quiet, industrious citizen, somewhat unsocial, but very exemplary in his habits. He came here in 1857 and was regarded as one of our most skilled mechanics. Mrs. Bumpus has the sympathy of many friends.

RE-UNION NOTES.

—Flags were quite numerous.

—Sam Sweet is the best Scotch linguist in the state.

—The Auburn glee-club furnished excellent music, during the re-union.

—With the exception of one or two brawlers, drunkeness was not a feature of the re-union.

—Some of our business houses did a large business during the re-union, one house took in $500 cash.

—The officers in the court-house should have credit for the arch across Main street, as they paid for it.

—One of the boys got so liberal Saturday night that he divided his over coat with a comrade. It was large enough.

—If General Haskell could have known of the fine display at the depot to receive him he would have made an effort to be present.

—The Fort Wayne boys come to the re-union to have a jolly good time, and they had it. They understand the commissary business to a dot.

—The Fort Wayne delegation had charge of the Swineford house, during last Friday night. Mr. Swineford has assumed charge of the hotel again.

—The Toledo battery under command of Capt. Hopkins is a most splendid organization. It gave most excellent satisfaction, and his boys are capital fellows.

—The Butler and Waterloo cornet bands deserve great credit for the manner in which they acquitted themselves; their music was splendid and their deportment excellent.

—The Fort Wayne boys came up in good force, and added to the attractions of the re-union. They are a jolly set of boys and Auburn will long remember them. They stopped with Swineford.

—The Waterloo rifles under command of Capt. McBride, made a fine appearance and behaved nobly. With a little more drilling, the company will be able to compete with any company in the state. Success to the Rifles.

—Capt. Pinchin came over with his company in true military style. He camped out on the tented field, bringing his tents and grub with him. He entered into the spirit of the thing, rather than let the spirit enter him.

—Capt. Stratton referred to the confederate brigaders in his toast, and Col. McDonald who spoke afterwards, referred to the murderer of Union soldiers, the guerilla Mosby, who is drawing $7,500 in gold from the government as minister to Hong Kong. Bob did'nt forge ahead very far.

—A team belonging to some farmer, started from the Eel-River elevator last Saturday morning, and came up Main street as swift as the wind, dashing through the crowd, turned west on Seventh street, and was caught soon after making the turn by Mr. Morris Widney, without injury to the team, or the large crowd of people on the streets. It was reported that the owner rewarded Mr Widney for his hazardous undertaking, by presenting him with a $5 greenback; having some doubts about the amount, we waited upon the young man and learned that the amount donated was fifty cents.

—An eight year old son of Mr Stephen Hall, of Churubusco, fell from a tree while gathering nuts, last Saturday, and died from concussion of the brain, after lying in an unconscious state about twelve hours.

—During the re-union Mitch Houston sold 3300 pounds of meat, and a pile of bologna as large as a hay-stack, (a small hay-stack).

—Since the re-union Marshal Scott answers to Fatty.

THE SOLDIER BOYS.

A GRAND RE-UNION!

AN IMMENSE ATTENDANCE,

Estimated at 12,000 to 15,000

An Enjoyable Occasion, and a Fine Display.

ITS MAIN FEATURES AND INCIDENTS.

NOT AN ACCIDENT.

Did you hear the boom of the loud-mouthed cannon, the neigh of the prancing steed, the shout of the multitude, as hand clasped hand, and the beaming eye shone responsive to the throbbing heart? The grandest occasion ever witnessed in Auburn, an occasion teeming with pleasant memories, and one that will long be remembered as a superb, a wonderful success. Hundreds of teams were parked upon cross-streets and alleys, every available nook was made a depository for vehicles and even adjoining fields were lined with stamping steeds. Long lines of wagons and buggies kept pouring in until the town was jammed, and never has Auburn seen such a happy, jovial, good-natured crowd upon her streets. Look out upon the crowd and see the great mass of humanity jostling back and forth like the great billows upon the ocean. The honest old farmer with hardened hands was there in the full tide of enjoyment. The good old dame with her modest bow string and best hat and tucker was there. He with the heavy boots from the fresh plowed fields, shoulder to shoulder with the gaudily dressed dandy, checkered the scene with their various garbs. The modest school girl passed slowly along absorbed in the scenery, followed by the dainty footsteps of the dashing belle. Every profession and calling contributed to this sea of humanity, while in and around and above all, ubiquitous and omni present stood the soldier, with his badge of honor fastened to his bosom, swelling with pride and filled with enthusiasm that comes of brave deeds and noble actions. The occasion was his, the hour was his, and with a light heart and gladsome face he entered into his enjoyment. A thousand flags waiving in the breeze attested the result of his bravery, and the music-ladened air bore to him the honor accorded him.

Friday morning opened with a few threatening clouds, but in a short time the clear blue specks began to brighten and broaden. Doubt was dispelled as the leaden canopy disappeared and the clear sun-light fell upon the scene, and from that time until the close the weather was all that could be desired.

During Friday forenoon the time was spent in receiving delegations from various points by the soldiers present. In the afternoon a grand parade was made upon our streets, under the command of Col. Zollinger, of Fort Wayne, after which the exercises at the stand were held. Col. I. B. McDonald having been appointed president of the day, called the meeting to order, and Rev. J. H. Norris opened with prayer. Hon. J. H. Baker was then introduced for the purpose of delivering the welcome address; he took advantage of the occasion by going beyond the bounds of propriety, and indulging in partisan remarks unbecoming an occasion of that kind. The glee club, under the direction of Prof. Lane, furnished the music for the occasion.

During these exercises, a beautiful flag was presented to the soldiers' association of Auburn by the ladies, through Mrs. Enos Casebeer, in her usual graceful manner, which was responded to by President Gordon. In the evening an entertainment was given at which Mr. Robert Hendershot, the drummer boy of the Rappahannoc, appeared in an excellent performance on the snare drum, assisted by Maj. Cooledge with the fife. The glee club of Auburn also contributed largely to the entertainment by their excellent music. The Fort Wayne boys with their glee club were also present, and sang "Marching through Georgia" with a spirit and a will that has made them famous. Short jolly speeches were made by Capt. Stratton, Cols. Humphrey and Robertson, Corporal Sweet and others, after which all adjourned.

The last day opened clear and beautiful, and as the salute was being given by Capt. Hopkins' splendid battery from Toledo, teams began to arrive. So large was the attendance of soldiers that two regiments had to be formed in order to make the grand parade. At ten o'clock the column started, marching through the principal streets, making as fine a display as ever was seen in northern Indiana. On the arrival at the stand, Col. Robertson, of Ft. Wayne and others delivered short addresses, mostly in response to toasts, all the speakers observing the nonpartisan rule, except Col. Robertson and Capt Stratton whom we notice elsewhere. The Fort Wayne glee club then sang "Marching through Georgia," Tom. Mays kindly assisting in the place of a member who was enrapport. Then followed a kind of love feast among the soldiers, brief remarks being made by a number present. Then came dinner, to be followed by the grand feature of the occasion,

THE SHAM BATTLE.

It was evident that everybody wanted to see this, from the way all rushed to the "battle field." The grade on Ninth street and the bridge was literally alive with people, while the woods and adjoining fields held their quota. As half past one the rebel flag was run up in the fort, the artilery was planted, and the forces divided for the conflict. Capt. McBride with his rifle company was in the advance of the Union forces, while Capt. Pinchin held the fort with his company, assisted by a strong flanking force. During this time the batteries opened fire and kept up their music until the end. In a few moments a line of skirmishers from the Union army was seen approaching, and the picket line of the rebs was driven in. The skirmish line was rallied on a line with the advancing forces, which moved out some distance in the open field when they were repulsed, with considerable loss, to judge from the number of stretchers used on the occasion. As yet but two had been wounded in the fort. Retreating, the Union line again formed in full view of the fort and made another dash, but were forced to fall back from a destructive fire, which greeted them from the front. The Union battery now limbered up and moved close up to the fort, and almost silenced their battery. The general commanding, after a hasty consultation determined to make a flank movement, convinced that the fort could not be taken by a regular assault. Soon a large force of blue coats was seen moving on the right of the fort through the smoke, with fixed bayonets, at double quick, and as the long line came gleaming on, a cheer rose from the immense throng that fairly made the hair stand. Disappearing in the woods below for a few moments, their line of skirmishers appeared, and pop, pop, here and there went a gun, faster and faster came the shots, and soon their movements were revealed. Capt. Pinchin promptly disposed of his forces so as to counteract this movement, and the battery in the fort was brought to bear upon the line of blues. Advancing slowly but surely to within a short distance of the works, Capt. McBride's company, armed with breech-loaders, opened a heavy fire upon the exposed rebels, which was responded to in a gallant manner by the Johnnies, until the roar of musketry was incessant. But above the din was heard the voice of the Union commander, and "forward double quick" was no sooner given than the blues started forward, and as that old, old terrible yell broke from the line, striking dismay to the rebs, they stormed the fort and carried the day. It was a beautiful sight, and well repaid all who took the trouble to witness it. The whole arrangement was handsomely executed and without a single accident. It should be regarded as a grand success, to plan and carry out a programme of this kind without the least accident. The boys acted splendidly, though it was intensely exciting for a sham battle. There is no doubt that all were well satisfied with this representation of a battle, and all may congratulate themselves upon its splendid achievement. This ended the programme as far as the re-union was concerned. There were many other features, however, that were contributed by our citizens for the enjoyment of the people. In the evening the bowery dance held full sway, but if there is a place in this wide, wide world where bowery dances don't flourish, it is in Auburn. The provision made for the accommodation of the large crowd was ample and complete. Booths lined nearly all the principal streets, and vacant rooms were brought into use in which to meet the demands of hunger and thirst. The crowd was so thoroughly good-natured and peaceful that no arrests were made, and very little disturbance took place. Thus closed one of the grandest events ever occuring in this place. The crowd was perhaps the largest ever gathered in this county, estimated at from twelve to fifteen thousand. Many prominent soldiers from other points regarded it as the most successful re-union they ever attended, and all are loud in their praise of the way they were received and entertained.

The several committees having in charge the arrangements for the re-union, are entitled to credit for having endeavored to conduct the affair on a nonpartisan basis, and had it not been for Baker, Robertson and Stratton, more particularly the two last named, the meeting would have been a success in every particular. Baker's duty was to deliver the address of welcome, and nothing more, (and it occurs to us that a citizen of DeKalb would have been more appropriate for that duty), his remarks should have been, and were expected to be, brief; he was neither asked or expected to express his narrow contracted views upon national supremacy and state rights, or any other questions that constitute the issues of the political parties of to-day. His limited knowledge of soldiery was probably the cause of his breach of trust. Col. Robertson was an eastern soldier, and is just as willing to insult western soldiers now, as the eastern band-box fellows were during the war. It may be that eastern men volunteered to fight for the freedom of the negro, (as he intimated,) western soldiers were fighting for the preservation of the Union, and would consider it an insult to be charged with intentional sacrifice of life for one or all the slaves owned in the United States. Robertson favors a nation with a capital N, he said so in his nonpartisan (?) speech, he also favors an empire with a capital E, he thought so while speaking, but was too cowardly to say it. Windy Bob Stratton's frequent visits to the commissary department of the Fort Wayne delegation, fixed him up in good shape to follow Robertson with the same line of argument, which he did between verses of "Marching through Georgia." Robertson and Stratton both deserve the condemnation of all soldiers, for their inappropriate and uncalled for remarks. Let the blame rest where it belongs.

Notice To Contractors

Notice is hereby given that the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Ind., will at the times and places hereinafter named, let to the lowest responsible bidder, certain work in the construction of ditches and embankments on roads, in separate jobs.

MONDAY, SEPT. 29th, 1879,

at 11 o'clock a. m., at Auburn, to let building of sidewalk on court yard square. Same day at 2 o'clock p. m. in Butler township, on Rowley ditch.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 30th, 1879,

at 10½ o'clock a. m., at county allotment of John Carper drain, in Jackson township. Same day at 3 o'clock p. m., embankment on highway near John Jenkins, in Concord township.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 1st, 1879,

at 10½ o'clock a. m., at county allotment of John Crouse drain in Wilmington township. Same day at 2 and 3 o'clock p. m., at county allotment on Fisher and Fink drains, in Troy township.

THURSDAY, OCT. 2nd, 1879,

at 10½ o'clock a. m., at county allotment on Lockhart drain, in Franklin township. Same day at 3 o'clck p. m., at county allotment on Lawhead drain, in Franklin township.

Plans and specifications and profile of work can be seen and examined at time and place of letting.

The lettings will be made by public outcry, and the board reserve the right to reject any and all bids. Persons to whom contracts shall be awarded, will be required to give bond for the performance of, and payment for, all labor, board and material used in the construction of said work.

B. F. BLAIR,
Pres't of Board.

Auburn, Sept. 2, 1879.

[Auburn Republican and Waterloo Press authorized to copy.]

Dr. Price's Flavorings.

Have grown rapidly in popular favor, as it is known that they are natural flavors, obtained by a new process which gives the most delicate and grateful taste. We conscientiously commend Dr. Price's flavors as being all that is desired.

CAUTION

Should be used to find our store as misrepresentations are often made by Dealers claiming that their Store is the

C. O. D.

CLOTHING HOUSE. Our number is 9 East Main Street, and exactly opposite the North Door of the Court House. WE DO A STRICTLY

ONE PRICE BUSINESS!

And show the Largest Stock of Men's Boys' and Children's Clothing, Men's Furnishing Goods, Hats and Caps in Fort Wayne

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.,
Opposite North Door Court House.

$50,000! $50,000!
$50,000
WORTH OF CLOTHING!

Which was manufactured for southern trade, is now offered at

Sixty Cents on the Dollar.

We bought these goods of a large New York house, which manufactures for, and depends principally on southern trade. Owing to the fever raging so furiously south, they could neither sell nor ship their goods, and were obliged, therefore, to dispose of their entire stock to northern dealers at a big sacrifice.

We took advantage of this rare chance by buying only for cash, and therefore are enabled to sell these entire new goods at 65 cents on the dollar.

SAVE MONEY BY FAVORING US WITH A CALL.
SAM, PETE & MAX, Managers
Star Clothing House, FORT WAYNE, IND.,

Excelsior Hardware,
Auburn, Ind.

SURE THING!
We buy goods to sell and not to keep.

Cooking Stoves, Box Stoves,
Flat Stoves, Heating Stoves,
Parlor Stoves, Elevated Stoves,
Coal Stoves, Oil Stoves,

And stoves of every in d. We have the largest stoc of stoves in the county, and will sell cheaper than the cheapest. Farmers, mechanics, merchants, traders and everybody, when you want a call on us, we will sell you a first-class stove for less money than it takes to tell it.

STOVE!

Call and see what a pile of iron and tinware you can buy for a FEW CENTS. Our stoves are all fully warranted in every respect.

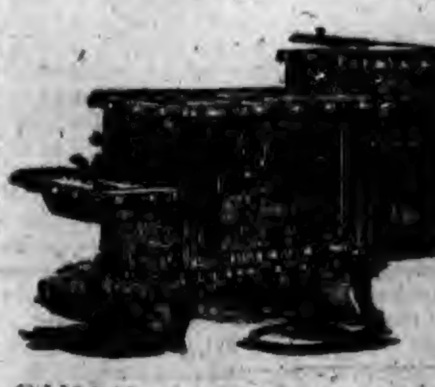
Our stoves have been submitted to the

SEVEREST TESTS

for years. They have become and are recognized as the

STANDARD COOKING STOVES

of America, and the fact that 420,000 are now in daily use, is positive proof of their great superiority over all others. Our large sales enable us to sell stoves at very low prices.



"SMALL PROFITS AND QUICK SALES" IS OUR MOTTO.

W. H. KIBLINGER & COMPANY,
North of court house, 1st door west of McQuiston & Ralston's double store.

THE JOLLY OLD PEDAGOGUE.

BY GEORGE ARNOLD.

'Twas a jolly old pedagogue, long ago,
Tall and slender, and sallow and dry;
His form was bent and his gait was slow,
His long, thin hair was as white as snow,
But a wonderful twinkle shone in his eye;
And he sang every night as he went to bed,
"Let us be happy down here below;
The living should live, though the dead be dead,"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

He taught his scholars the rule of three,
Writing, and reading, and history, too;
He took the little ones upon his knee,
For a kind old heart in his breast had he,
And the wants of the littlest child he knew:
"Learn while you're young," he often said,
"There is much to enjoy down here below;
Life for the living, and rest for the dead,"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

With the stupidest boys he was kind and cool,
Speaking only in gentlest tones;
The rod was hardly known in his school—
Whipping to him was a barbarous rule,
And too hard work for the old bones;
Besides it was painful, he sometimes said:
"We should make life pleasant down here below
The living need charity more than the dead,"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

He lived in the house by the hawthorn lane,
With roses and woodbine over the door;
His rooms were quiet, and neat and plain,
But a spirit of comfort there held reign,
And made him forget he was old and poor;
"I need so little," he often said,
"And my friends and relatives here below
Won't litigate over me when I am dead,"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

But the pleasantest times that he had, of all,
Were the sociable hours he used to pass,
With his chair tipped back to a neighbor's wall,
Making an unceremonious call,
Over a pipe and friendly glass.
This was the finest pleasure, he said,
Of the many he tasted here below;
"Who has no cronies had better be dead!"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

Then the jolly old pedagogue's wrinkled face
Melted all over in sunshiny smiles;
He stirred his glass with an old-school grace,
Chuckled and sipped, and prattled apace,
Till the house grew merry, from cellar to tiles;
"I'm a pretty old man," he gently said,
"I have lingered long while here below;
But my heart is fresh if my youth is fled!"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

He smoked his pipe in the balmy air,
Every night when the sun went down,
While the soft wind played in his silvery hair,
Leaving its tender kisses there
On the jolly old pedagogue's jolly old crown;
And, feeling the kisses, he smiled, and said,
"'Twas a glorious world down here below;
Why wait for happiness till we are dead?"
Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

He sat at the door one midsummer night,
After the sun had sunk in the west,
And the lingering beams of golden light
Made his kindly old face look warm and bright,
While the odorous night-wind whispered "rest!"
Gently, gently he bowed his head:
There were angels waiting for him, I know;
He was sure of happiness, living or dead,
This jolly old pedagogue, long ago!

THE NEAR-SIGHTED LOVER.

An Interesting Story from the French.

Examples of amusing contretemps from near-sightedness being very plentiful in Madrid, I find that my only difficulty will be in selecting a hero from among the many poor wights who are suffering from the infirmity, but, upon due reflection, I think, perhaps, that the misadventures of my friend, Don Felipe R——, will be as entertaining as any that I could lay before my fair readers. Now, methinks I hear it asked, "Who's Don Felipe R——?"

He is a charming youth of 23, whose pale complexion and expressive countenance give him the air of a perfect hero of romance, added to which, an ardent temperament and consequent aptitude to fall in love, cause him to find especial favor with the fair sex, and to meet with many agreeable adventures in his peregrinations about Madrid. Unfortunately, these advantages are in some measure counterbalanced by his extreme shortness of sight, which not only gets him into many scrapes with husbands and duennas, but prevents his noticing the smiles and glances which more than one dark-eyed senorita bestows upon him. But why, you say, does he not remedy this defect by wearing spectacles? Now, let me just ask you—where is the pretty girl who would like to go through the mazes of polka and mazourka with a spectacled cavalier? And at 23 Don Felipe cannot summon resolution to renounce his favorite pastime. An eye-glass might be suggested as another remedy; yet this also has its inconveniences, for, unless constantly used, much would escape observation. But to my tale.

One night, at a ball given by the Marchioness of D——, our hero danced with the pretty Matilda de Laincy, and was so much struck with her charms that he lost no time in making a passionate declaration of his love to her. The young lady, on whom Don Felipe's sentimental air had not been lost, in no way reproved his temerity; but, however that may have been, Don Felipe soon had reason to be convinced that his love was returned. Already had three rigadoons and one polka given the lovers an opportunity for much conversation, thereby adding fuel to the newly-awakened flame; but, before the termination of the ball, Don Felipe renewed his protestations, and found out not only the exact hour and minute at which Matilda showed herself on the balcony, but also the church where she went, the promenades and Tertullias which she frequented, as well as her mamma's favorite operas. One essential, however, did escape him, which was that of making himself acquainted with the persons of her father (a Colonel of cavalry), her mother, and an elderly sister, who were all present, and he also forgot to inform his lady love of the unfortunate circumstance of his extreme shortness of sight; this he afterward found to have been almost a fatal error.

The appointed hour had scarcely arrived on the following morning when off he posted to the street where the donna resided, carefully examining the numbers of the houses as he went along. Matilda had told him that their number was 12, and that the house was situated at the corner of a certain street; now the opposite corner being 72, our hero, in his blindness, mistook the latter for the former number, and there took up his post. Matilda, who, with feminine quickness, had seen him arrive, took out her cushion, and, hastening to the balcony, there displayed all the graces of her person in her morning attire. But it was in vain; Don Felipe kept his eyes continually fixed on the balcony of the opposite house, scarcely deigning to notice the beauty whom he had appointed to see. This unexpected insult (for what else could she consider it?) piqued the self-love of our heroine; she coughed three or four times, fluttered her handkerchief and began to hum a tune, but all to no purpose, for the disappointed lover, after casting a rapid glance at her, turned again quickly round to watch the opposite house. This scene had lasted more than an hour, when the desperate youth, thinking himself sported with, determined (though not without a pang) to get up an episode, and make acquaintance with her opposite neighbor. Full of this intention, he crossed the street, walked with a firm step underneath the balcony of Matilda, and raised his head to speak to her; when, at the same moment, she passed her handkerchief across her face, dropped it, and, without a syllable, rushed in, shutting the window violently as she did so. On opening the handkerchief, Don Felipe at once recognized the same border and initials as on that which Matilda carried the evening of the ball. He next examined the house, and, to his horror, discovered his mistake.

It would be impossible to describe the rage which his own stupidity caused him. For three days and three nights he paced up and down the street in an agony of suspense. In vain did he watch; the balcony remained closed. On the fourth evening one of the mamma's favorite operas was to be performed at the theater, and he took courage as he bethought himself of then endeavoring once more to get a glimpse of his beloved and explaining the matter. Seated in his stall, and with the aid of a double opera-glass, he looked all around for some time without discovering the object of his search. At length he was sure he saw her with her mother in one of the boxes, whereupon he lost no time in going up stairs and stationing himself at the box door. Don Felipe here commenced making a series of telegraphic signs, which were unheeded by the young lady, and at length, when the opera was over, he joined them at the darkest part of the stairs, saying to the younger one as he did so:

"Senorita, pardon my mistakes; if you will again appear at the balcony I shall explain all. In the meantime, permit me to return your handkerchief."

"To whom do you address your conversation, Caballero?" replied a strange voice, while at the same moment a dim lamp revealed to him that he had made some mistake, although the person whom he addressed resembled his idol very much.

"Senorita—"

"Here is some strange mistake," added the lady, "although the handkerchief is my sister's"

These words reached the ear of the mamma, who eagerly inquired what they meant.

"Nothing, dear mamma," replied the young lady; "only this gentleman has given me a handkerchief of Matilda's."

"And, pray, how came the gentleman with Matilda's handkerchief?"

"Madam—I—"

"Explain yourself, sir."

"The other day—that is, I meant the other night, at the ball of the Marchioness of D——"

"Oh, yes, mamma, that is true," interposed the young lady; "this Caballero danced with my sister, who must have forgotten her handkerchief."

"Exactly so, Senorita, it was forgotten."

"In truth, this is passing strange," added the mamma; "yet, Sir Caballero, we proffer you our thanks."

Had a thunderbolt fallen at his feet Don Felipe could not have felt more surprise; and that which annoyed him most was that he had put a note into the corner of the handkerchief entreating an interview—and what was likely now to be the fate of such a paper?

Trembling and undecided as to what course to take, he followed the footsteps of the ladies until they reached their own door, and then remained watching in the darkest corner of the street. In vain did he listen to hear if any angry discussion took place; no sound met his ear, save the clear bell of the neighboring clock, which struck 12. At length, when quite tired waiting, he retired to his own house, there to lie awake and lament his misfortunes.

We must now take a peep inside the house, to see what happened there during this interval. The senora, who had taken the handkerchief with the intention of scolding her daughter, soon discovered the note; and, after her first burst of anger had subsided, she retired to her own room, there to meditate on what was to be done. She soon decided on saying nothing to Matilda, and writing a laconic reply, as if coming from her, in which she would dismiss the lover. Having written and sealed this note, she went to bed, feeling quite certain that, on the following morning, an opportunity would offer of dropping it into the hands of the Caballero; nor was she mistaken, for no sooner had the clock struck 8 than she discovered him at his post underneath the balcony. A few minutes after, the window was opened, and a delicate white hand threw out a small paper, which he eagerly caught; but, on looking up, the window was shut, and the momentary hopes of his heart faded away.

It were vain to attempt to describe the effect of such an accumulation of mishaps on Don Felipe. Suffice it to say that among other wild resolves the thought of blowing out his brains dashed across him; but, on getting more calm, he decided on renouncing the tender passion forever. A fortnight, however, had scarcely elapsed ere he began to waver in his determination, and he set forth one day to the Prado, with a friend, to beguile his melancholy, and—must I admit it?—quite ready to undertake a fresh adventure. So much for the constancy of 23.

It was one of those soft and peaceful evenings in July, when it is so delightful to breathe the balmy air under the shady trees that the friends sat down; and, after a little general conversation and a few remarks upon the passers-by, each proposed relating his last love-adventure. With his natural frankness, Don Felipe commenced his tale, and, after narrating all the incidents which had occurred, he concluded by announcing his resolution of giving it up forever. No sooner had he ceased speaking than he fancied he heard a rapid movement in the neighboring trees; and upon looking round he perceived, among other persons, a military man, accompanied by a young lady, seated at a little distance. On approaching nearer and putting up his glass, he there discovered his lovely Matilda, and was soon convinced that she heard all his previous conversation.

"Ingrate" was the only word which he could articulate; while at the same moment her father called a little boy to light his cigar.

"You wrong me, Don Felipe; I did not write that note," said the trembling Matilda, hurriedly.

"Who, then, wrote it?"

A quarter of an hour elapsed ere she would venture a reply.

"I do not know," said she, at length, "but you had better go away, and at 12 I shall be on the balcony."

Hope once more shed its bright rays on the heart of Don Felipe, and, full of the happiest thoughts and the most pleasing anticipations, he waited for the appointed hour. On hastening to the spot he beheld Matilda already at her post, and could not but gaze with renewed admiration on her bright eyes and lovely countenance, but his troubles were not yet destined to end, as we shall soon see.

Contrary to his usual custom, on this evening Matilda's father had taken it into his head to breathe the fresh air after supper, and there he lay stretched in an easy chair, on the balustrade, much to her annoyance. It was in vain that she begged him to retire lest he should take cold. Our hero's defective vision prevented his seeing the old man, and, with tender accents, he commenced a conversation with his beloved.

"Matilda," said her father, softly, "is any one speaking to you?"

"To me, papa? No, certainly not."

"Then it must be to your sister?"

"Listen to me, dearest," continued the lover. "You see I had good reason to be angry; here is the note."

"Let me see it this moment, you deceitful girl!" said the Colonel, jumping up. "Away with you and bring hither a light, in order that I may read it."

He entered the room, scowling at poor Matilda as he opened the note and read as follows:

"'Caballero, if on the evening of the Marchioness' ball my indiscretion caused you to conceive foolish hopes—'

"Death and fury! What do I see? This letter is from my wife!"

"Alas! papa—"

"Infamous wretch! At her age to make any one conceive hopes!"

"But, papa—"

"Begone, child! Let me pass until I awaken her and arouse the house."

He soon accomplished this, and the neighbors were lost in conjecture as to the probable cause of such disturbance at so wanton an hour. This desperate state of affairs caused the greatest anxiety to the disappointed lover, who remained like a phantom below, listening to this unheard-of quid pro quo.

His open character, together with a delicate sense of honor, prevented Don Felipe from allowing this mistake to remain long unexplained. Accordingly he summoned courage and knocked at the door in a determined manner. The Colonel looked over the balcony.

"Caballero," said our friend, "be so good as to listen for a moment to an explanation of my conduct."

The old man seized his pistols, and, rushing down stairs, opened the door.

"Do you listen to these?" said he, addressing our hero, at the same moment pointing a pistol at him.

"Calm yourself," replied Don Felipe, "and listen to me. My name is Don Felipe R——; my house and family are well known. An unfortunate series of mistakes has caused me to disturb the tranquillity of your house, and I cannot permit these to remain longer unexplained."

Hereupon he commenced a faithful account of all that happened, which was fully corroborated by both mother and daughters, and he thus succeeded in calming the agitation of the jealous Colonel.

On the following morning Don Felipe was presented in due form by the Marchioness, and when the old man was made acquainted with his rank and fortune he had no opposition to offer to the match.

* * * * * *

For the benefit of such of my readers as may wish to know the subsequent history of the lovers, I must inform them that the marriage was solemnized very shortly after the above events had taken place, but truth obliges me to whisper that, when Don Felipe scrutinized his fair partner, with the assistance of a pair of spectacles and a clear light, he discovered that her beauty was somewhat impaired by sundry small-pox marks, and a few other slight defects. Her amiable qualities doubtless more than counterbalanced those spots on the sun; so that only one thing remained for Don Felipe to do in order to forget them, and that was to take off his spectacles.

Three Golden Balls.

It may not be generally known that the game of billiards originated in a pawnbroker's shop. In the latter part of the sixteenth century a London pawnbroker, William Kerr, was in the habit of amusing himself in wet weather, when there were no customers, with pushing about three balls on the counter with a yard measure. This suggested a board with side pockets. An old manuscript says: "Master William Kerr did make one board whereby a game is played with three balls; and all the young men were greatly recreated thereat, chiefly the young clergymen from St. Paul's; hence one of ye strokes was named a 'cannon,' having been by one of ye said clergymen invented. The game is now known by the name of 'bill-yard,' because William or Bill Kerr did first play with the yard measure. The stick is now called a 'kew,' or 'kue.'" The bill-yard is modernized into billiard, and kew into cue.

Justice Clifford, though very old, is hale enough to stand waist-deep in the water up among the Maine lakes and catch seventeen fine trout.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Edison's Triumph—Platinum in Abundance.

A certain society that used to send out missionaries to India, says a New York paper, decided that only married ones would answer the purpose. On one occasion a bachelor presented himself for the service, and said he was ready to marry if the society would provide a wife. They issued a circular announcing that a lady was wanted as the wife of a missionary. Within a few days they were overrun with applicants, and a mate for the missionary was quickly found. During the present year, Edison, the inventor, has put the efficacy of circulars to a severer test, with equally good results. He wanted platinum. A rough calculation had convinced him that the entire yield of that metal from all known mines was not enough to supply this city alone, if it was to be lighted by his newly-devised electric lamp. So he sent a circular to the proprietors of several gold and silver mines in the Rocky mountain region, asking them to search for platinum. This was a new idea to them, and, indeed, to everybody. As a result, large quantities of the rare metal were found in various localities. The gravel-heap of a single mine will, it is said, yield more platinum than all the rest of the world does now. Specimens from several of the new sources of supply were exhibited at Saratoga last week. It is easy to be wise after the fact, and it was remembered that iridium is usually found with California gold, and hence other metals of that class were likely to be found in association.

But there were other surprises in store. Very few of the many investigators who have studied the subject of electric lighting believed that the experiments at Menlo Park would prove important. Edison, it was supposed, had walked into a cul de sac, where others had preceded him and found no thoroughfare. A considerable amount of pity, both here and in England, was wasted on the ingenious man who had gone beyond his depth. Not having been properly educated in early life, he was ignorant, so they said, of the properties of matter. He was trying to obtain the electric light by incandescence. Poor fellow! Some well-informed friend ought to have apprised him of the hopelessness of the attempt. Everybody knows, or ought to, that if you connect the terminals of a powerful electric current by a slender wire, that wire will become hot and give out light. But everybody should also know that when the wire gets hot enough to yield plenty of light it melts, and there is an end of its brightness.

When it was currently reported that Edison was experimenting with a carbon lamp, all the wiseacres raised their eyebrows and said, "I told you so! He has found that the incandescent light is an ignis fatuus." What they did not know was that Edison has discovered a property of matter, and especially of platinum, hitherto unsuspected. He examined with a microscope the wire that had been nearly melted, and found it penetrated with fine cracks. These, he assumed, were made by the rapid escape of air that had been imprisoned in the pores of the metal. It struck him that if the air could be removed during a very slow process of heating, the metal might not crack. The wire was put under the receiver of an air pump, the air was exhausted, and the heat of the wire slowly raised, the experiment lasting several hours. By this operation he obtained a wire of singularly dense metal, which would not melt or change when heated to vivid incandescence. The insuperable obstacle was overcome, and Edison's electric light blazed out of the chaos of uncertainty.

All else that may yet obstruct the path of this invention is only matter of detail. Doubtless, there are mechanical difficulties in registering the flow of electricity, in the construction of lamps, and the like; but these can be managed, if they have not been already. As a specimen of the ingenuity brought to bear on the subject, there has been devised a method of coating the wire so that it can be used in spiral form, and the current cannot leap across the threads of the helix. By such means the light can be concentrated and the wire used be no thicker than the human hair. Newspaper interviews have latterly brought this inventor into some discredit. He has unbosomed himself too freely to reporters, and they have bespattered him in print with praise and prophecy. Electricity may never be wholly substituted for street gas, and will not be, probably, to any very great extent for several years. The incandescent light promises to take its place in the front rank of illuminators. Time will develop its good and bad points. It should be cheaper, purer, more convenient, more wholesome, and less dangerous as regards fire than gas or oil. If these promises are fulfilled, its inventor will be a benefactor of the human race.

Twain, Halstead and a Clean Shirt.

"You sailed on the same ship with Murat Halstead, of Cincinnati, did you not, Mr. Twain?"

"The same craft, all honor to her (Mr. Twain lifted his hat reverently) carried us."

"It was said at the time that you inveigled Mr. Halstead into making the voyage by promising him free use of your linen?"

"Well"—Mr. Twain spoke leisurely—"I did tell Murat that I'd lend him a clean shirt. You see, he didn't expect to go. His wife was going and he'd sort of come down to see her safely launched. You remember the ship ran away with a party of excursionists who had got aboard to bid poor Mr. Taylor good-by, and was obliged to anchor off the Hook all night. During the evening Murat sort of got his sea-legs on and says he, 'Clemens' (he always calls me Clemens), says he, 'Clemens, if you'll lend me a shirt I believe I'll go across.' 'All right,' says I, 'I'll do it.' So Murat he fixed things with the Captain and stayed aboard. We got along pretty well with winds a-middling, about nor-norwest by sou, till we come to latitude 86, longitude 49½, and then Murat wanted his clean shirt—that is, he wanted mine. It was about three bells from noon when I took that garment to the door of Murat's state-room. 'Here,' says I, 'clothe yourself like a Prince of the realm.' At eight bells Mr. Halstead came out of his apartment with his coat buttoned up to his chin and his face as red as a red, red rose. He wore his coat buttoned up to his chin all the rest of the voyage, and I never so much as got a glimpse of my shirt. There was a kind of rumor on the ship that Murat never wore that shirt or any other shirt. I don't know how true it was, but when I came to study the thing it did look to me as if I'd put a rather tough problem to the editor of the Cincinnati Commercial, for his neck measures 18 inches, while mine never footed up more than 15, even when I had the mumps."—Interview in New York World.

The Law of Matrimony.

Yesterday morning an old negro man arrived in the city from St. Louis in search of his before-the-war wife. The old man went off into the war with his master, but, undergoing a change politically, deserted him and embraced the emancipation cause, and now, after so long a time, he comes back to the scenes of his childhood. After making a great many inquiries he learned that his wife had married again and that she and her husband were living down on Second street. Arriving at the designated house the old man, stiff with rheumatism, hobbled up the narrow steps and fell against the door, which, yielding to the weight of his body, opened. Sitting near the window was a tall, bony woman. Near the fireplace, rubbing a fiddle with a greasy woolen rag, sat a man.

"It seems ter me like," said the visitor, dropping down on a trunk, "that you useter be my wife afore de wah."

"Bless de Lord!" exclaimed the woman, "it's beginnin' to hitch onto me in de same direction."

"What does dis prankin' mean?" said the last husband, dropping the rag and throwing the fiddle on the bed. "Splain yourselves."

"Dis 'oman useter be my nat'ral wife, and I've come heah ter see if we can't make some sorter 'rangements in regards to it."

"Ole man," said the last edition of matrimony, "de bes' and mos' p'lite thing is for yer to go 'way an' ten' ter yer business. Dis 'oman ant myself understands each oder putty tolerable well, an' de bes' thing is fer yer ter love us."

"Daniel," said the woman, "when yer was young yer was a pretty squar sort of feller, but now de rheumatis have cotch yer, and fore God I doan' wanter rheumatized man. Dan, you's bow-laigged at de bes'. 'Sides all dat, I'se changed my 'ligion."

"Let me sight yer to a parable in de law, 'cording to Blackstone," said the second husband. "De firs' deed and de las' will am de mos' powerful. De firs' deed am subject to 'de las' will. Wasn't it a deed when you married dis 'oman? Wan't de ack of marryin' her a deed?"

"Tibber shoah," said the first husband, reflectingly.

"Wan't our marriage a will? Wan't it de 'oman's will dat she married me? Answer de question squarly."

"Yes."

"Well, den, 'cordin' to de law, de 'oman's mine."

"Dat's a fac', Dan," said the woman.

"Ain't yer gwine to give me no allum money?" asked Dan.

"De law don't mention that," said the victorious husband.

Dan arose from the trunk and looked around the room. A tear stood in his eye. Suddenly his face brightened.

"Gin' me dat catfish over dar, an' I'll leave you."

"De law don't mention de fish, but I'll gin' it ter you."

Daniel picked up the fish, ran his finger through its gills, and passed out into the street.—Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette.

Whistling in England.

There is much less whistling among farmers' men than forty or fifty years ago, and less singing also. When I was a boy most of the men sang at plow and with their teams. Their voices, borne over the hills by the breeze, were one of the charms of a country ramble. They mostly sang love songs or sentimental ditties. I remember "The Mistletoe Bough" was a great favorite with one of my father's men. Some time ago I remarked to the rector of a neighboring parish how very seldom I heard men singing at the plow compared to when I was a boy. He replied "That is because you were bred among the hills, and now live in a flat country; men don't sing in flat countries." I felt this was correct. Milkmaids sang to their cows, without which it was believed they would not "give their milk down." If you meet a country girl now-a-days and ask her, "Where are you going to, pretty maid?" you can never say the reply was, "A-milking, sir," for maids no longer milk, but leave it to be done by men called "garthmen." At the "clippins" all the men are expected to sing, but those who could not might whistle, as I have heard them more than once. Like milkmaids, "clippins" have all vanished. Those kindly gatherings, where the master and his neighbors and his men all made merry together, have all gone, and we have steam plows and reaping machines and laborers' unions instead. Although there is yet more singing in hilly than in flat countries, it is certain that farmers' men neither sing nor whistle half as much as they used to do. As far back as I remember our middle classes considered whistling vulgar (as boys were not allowed to whistle). It is possible the laborers have now got to think so too. Railway trips, and more ready access to towns, are bringing everything to a dead level, and gradually effacing the old-fashioned country ways.—Notes and Queries.

It has come out through a lawsuit between the managers that "Pinafore" at first failed to draw well in London—the receipts averaging for weeks only about $200 a night, while the expenses were $350. But the contract stipulated that it should be performed at least 100 times consecutively, and before that period had expired the profit was $2,500 a week.

DEAD.

BY [illegible]

Dead! one less of the household number!
Stricken down in the glow of manhood's strength;
And [illegible] hearts left to mourn and wait
Our sorrows [illegible] by breath nor length;
But naught can disturb the peaceful slumber
Of the dear one sleeping down in the vale.

Dead, dead! one home in desolation,
[illegible] mourners for its kindred gone,
For the pair had neither kith nor kin,
And the old house stands like one forlorn,
And it seems not far from desecration
For strangers to set their feet therein.

Dead, dead! but the house not forsaken,
The old couple gone, the new in their places;
In the corner stand their vacant chairs,
And we see no more their smiling faces;
But need we mourn that God has taken
Their troubled spirits from this life of care?

Dead, dead! ah me, the friends loved and dear
Are ever passing from our mortal view,
A fond clasp of the hand, a last farewell,
And they're gone forever, the loyal and true;
And what avails the sorrowing wail,
They listen not to the griefs we would tell.

Sometimes I think, as I see friends weeping
O'er the remains of the dear departed,
'Twere better to save their tears for the living,
For the poor, the lost, the broken-hearted;
So our Savior taught us, and 'twould be in keeping
With the precepts He once on earth was giving.

Yet 'tis hard to part from those we love,
To see them torn forever from our embrace,
And then laid down 'neath the grave's dark mold,
And feel that no others can fill their place;
But, blessed thought, there'll be gathered above,
The ransomed souls into the Master's fold.
PITTSFIELD, Mass.

PITH AND POINT.

Remark of the oyster Sept. 1, "Here we R again."

A man cares little for his wrongs when getting his funeral rites.

A short negro resembles a white man because he is not a tall black.

The mule is of an even disposition; he always behaves according to his wont.

Counsel (to witness)—"You're a nice sort of a fellow, you are!" Witness—"I'd say the same of you, sir, only I'm on my oath."

A physician has discovered yellow-fever germs in ice. The safest way is to boil your ice before using it. This kills the germ.

The man who was slightly bitten by a shark at Long Branch on Thursday will lecture. Thus the shark is taught the folly of slighting his work.

A man sometimes parts his name in the middle for euphony and beauty. Even Jacob has a good effect on a card when placed as J. Cobb Smith.

An Irishman who had on a very ragged coat was asked of what stuff it was made. "Bedad, I don't know; I think the most of it is made of fresh air."

Professor in law recitation—"Mr. ——, what is excusable homicide?" Senior, promptly—"Excusable homicide is when a man kills himself in self-defense."

"Is it possible, miss, that you do not know the names of some of your best friends?" "Certainly, I do not even know what my own may be in a year from now."

The papers say "jailed," "suicided," "excourted," and "laudanumed;" but, when some one ventures on "processed," the people will rise and a printing office will be gutted.

Teacher, to boy who has to be corrected frequently—"Can you tell me where the Blue Ridge is?" Boy (rubbing his shoulder)—"No, but I can tell where the black-and-blue ridge is." He is treated more ridgerously than ever now.

"What is your name?" asked a teacher of a boy. "My name is Jule," was the reply; whereupon the teacher impressively said, "You should have said, 'Julius, sir.' And now, my lad," turning to another boy, "what is your name?" "Billious, sir."

To the Khedive of Egypt—Respected Sir: Having learned that, in consequence of your recent dethronement, you are troubled about a place to live, we hasten to offer you the freedom of Cincinnati. Rents are very low here, the Theodore Thomas concerts are in full blast, and you can get a schooner of beer for five cents.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Boston Post has evidently had it severely, otherwise how could it have produced the following melancholy—melon-choly—strain:

Those midnight yells—those midnight yells—
How sad a tale their music tells
Of melons green, of apples hard,
Of peaches that should be debarred!
What touching accents they produce,
More mellow than the melon juice.
The human stomach little knows
Of greater ills than colic woes,
And to the world its anguish tells
By midnight yells, shrill midnight yells.

Yesterday a policeman saw a young man sitting on a dry-goods box with his head tied up and one arm in a sling. Some of his ear was gone, and his nose needed sending to a repair-shop. "Did a loaded wagon run over you?" asked the policeman. "No; we were only celebrating my birthday last night. We had a glorious old time. You ought to have been there." The policeman merely said that, judging by the looks of the celebrant, the whole force ought to have been there.—Galveston News.

A clergyman of my acquaintance told me that he once visited a lady in his parish who had just lost her husband; in order to offer consolation, and upon her earnest inquiries as to the reunion of families in heaven, he strongly asserted his belief in that fact; and, when she asked with anxiety whether any time must elapse before friends would be able to find each other in the next world, he emphatically said: "No! they will be united at once." He was thinking of the happiness of being able to offer the relief of such faith when she broke in upon such meditation by exclaiming sadly: "Well, his first wife has got him, then, by this time."

The forest near Dillon, Kan., has an uncommon hermit in the person of a young and not-ugly woman, who lodges in a rude hut, eats vegetables and game of her own getting, and will not say a word to persons who intrude upon her. It is conjectured that she is insane; but, aside from her lonely mode of life, there is nothing in her conduct to sustain that belief.

At the Jackson (Tenn.) fair there is to be a foot-race run by nine widowers. It is to be a mile dash, and the prize is to be widow.

SABBATH READING.

The Tongue Disciplined.

Guard well thy lips; none, none can know — Prov. xiii. 3.
What evils from the tongue may flow; — James iii. 5, 6.
What guilt, what grief may be incurred, — Judges xi. 35.
By one incautious, hasty word. — Mark vi. 22-28.
Be "slow to speak," look well within, — Prov. x. 19.
To check what there may lead to sin; — James i. 26.
And pray unceasingly for aid, — Col. iv. 2.
Lest unawares, thou be betrayed. — Luke xxi. 34.
"Condemn not, judge not"—not to man — James iv. 12.
Is given his brother's faults to scan; — 1 Cor. iv. 5.
The task is thine, and one alone— Matt. vii. 5.
To search out and subdue thine own. — John viii. 7.
Indulge no murmuring; oh, restrain — 1 Cor. x. 10.
Those lips, so ready to complain; — Lam. iii. 39.
And, if they can be numbered, count — Ps. ciii. 2.
Of one day's mercies the amount. — Lam. iii. 23.
Shun vain discussions, trifling themes; — Titus iii. 9.
Dwell not on earthly hopes and schemes; — Deut. vi. 4-7.
Let words of wisdom, meekness, love, — James iii. 13.
Thy heart's true renovation prove. — Luke vi. 45.
God is before thee; every word — Gen. xvii. 1.
Thy lips pronounce by Him is heard; — Ps. cxxxix. 4.
Oh, couldst thou realize this thought, — Matt. xii. 36.
What care, what caution would be taught! — Luke xii. 3.
"The time is short," this day may be — 1 Cor. vii. 29.
The very last assigned to thee; — Eph. v. 16.
So speak, that shouldst thou ne'er speak more, — Col. iv. 6.
Thou may'st not this day's words deplore. — Rom. xiv. 13.

Rink Religion.

The advent of Mr. Moody gave a great impetus to a kind of observance which was already prevailing in this country, and which has sometimes been styled rink religion. It is a well-known fact that religious services held in theaters, "colosseums," rinks and such-like places have a strong attraction for a certain class of persons; and it is equally true that there is a class of Christian "workers" who have a penchant for carrying on services in these places.

The reasons why the "masses," as they are called, are fond of congregating in these places are not far to seek. In the first place, the unfitness of the place is attractive to many minds. A religious service in a church is a seemly and decorous thing; but a religious service in a rink or a circus-tent is something out of the common; there is a pleasing incongruity about it which to many persons is highly amusing. They attend such a service for the same reason that they go to see the five-legged calf or the two-headed nightingale.

These places are haunted not only by worshipers of the incongruous, but also by that large class of persons who have been happily described as "the camp-stool congregation"—those who always go where the newest sensation is, and who are never truly happy except when they are in a crowd.

Of these two classes there are enough in any considerable community to crowd the largest assembly room that can be found in the neighborhood. And, when the crowd is gathered, it is easy to stir up a considerable amount of feeling. The persons who compose such an auditory are generally excitable; the lively music, the vigorous and pathetic appeals of the preachers readily affect them, and we often seem to see large numbers of them entering upon the religious life.

Such services, however, come to an end before many weeks, and then these new disciples find themselves suddenly set adrift. All their religious experience has been connected with the rink or the tabernacle; when that is closed they are not drawn in any other direction. The influence of locality upon the religious life is a great deal stronger than some persons think; the place where prayer is wont to be made is the place to which those who have learned to pray love to betake themselves; the less cultivated the worshiper is, the less inclined is he to worship in a strange place; the more is he dependent for his religious enjoyment upon local associations. Though the churches all open their doors for these converts of the rink, very many of them will fail to enter the churches; or, if they do go a few times, all the surroundings are strange to them, and they soon cease to appear in the places where they would be welcome.

It was the observation of this fact that led Mr. Moody, during the last winter, to seek to connect his work more directly with the churches. He has come to feel that it is far better to make use of the church as the instrument of evangelization than to create other machinery, simply because the results of his work are in this way so much more fully harvested and secured. The method which he followed last winter in Baltimore is less spectacular and striking than that which he had followed previously; but in the long run he thinks it will be more productive; and the adoption of it does great credit to his head and his heart. It shows that he possesses sound sense, and that he is not a selfish seeker after notoriety.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Moody's conclusion will be adopted by those who have been hitherto his most ardent disciples, and who have been inclined to do their Christian work almost wholly outside of the churches. It is true that there are destitute neighborhoods, in which there are no churches, and in which religious service of some kind ought to be held. For this kind of missionary work there is room and reason. But the practice of carrying on outside religious services of an intermittent character in the immediate neighborhood of churches is a practice which in a majority of cases ought to be discouraged. The people who are gathered into these places ought to be gathered into the churches; their religious life is likely to have a healthier and more fruitful development if it is "planted in the courts of the Lord" than if it springs up in connection with some sporadic religious revival. It may be said that the people who attend these outside services think that they are not wanted in the churches, and will not enter them. If this is the case then the first thing to do is to disabuse their minds of this error, and make them believe that the churches are the very places where they are wanted. And if this is not altogether an error of theirs, and if there are some features of the church administration which are calculated to discourage their attendance, the first thing to be done is to reform the church, so that it shall offer a hearty and emphatic welcome to those who most need the gospel. To one or the other of these labors those zealous Christians who are now devoting themselves to the propagation of rink religion might well turn their energies. If the time and money and zeal and tact that they now expend in keeping up religious meetings of one kind or other outside the churches in their neighborhood were expended in gathering these outsiders into the churches and making the churches places into which all the people would delight to go, the results of their labors would be larger and more permanent.—Sunday Afternoon.

Eastern, Central and Western Texas.

Texas may be, for convenience' sake, divided into eastern, central and western sections. The first, or timbered portion, has the Trinity river as a western boundary. This region exceeds the area of the State of New York. Central Texas may be defined as including all of the vast prairie lands from the Trinity to the Colorado, leaving beyond a territory larger than both of the former, and exceeding the size of any four of our ordinary States, as the western portion. The first-named is the oldest in point of Anglo-Saxon civilization. The prairie loam lands are in a condition of evolution or progression, and, being the most fecund, the great centers of population which multiplied generations will produce will be located within the boundaries given. Much of the far western lands is arid and uncultivable. The Staked Plains are the most notable example. Western Texas will be invaded in time by the miner; for its mineral wealth, as already revealed, is considerable. The tide of immigration to this section will doubtless reverse the general order of things, and move eastward through Arizona. Railway communication, hereafter spoken of, from the Pacific, will materially contribute to this result. At present the extreme point of eastern encroachment is the city of San Antonio, which is only a city of the Anglo-Saxon by virtue of conquest, and marks the limit of a daring, brilliant and intellectual civilization, whose impulse was eastward, and which built a garden in the plain about the time that the French took root in Indiana, and the good people of New England were exercising themselves about the Salem witchcraft delusion. It is reasonable to assume that history may repeat itself in this instance.

The wooded country of Eastern Texas yields a rich variety of useful woods—yellow pine, cypress, red and white oak, live oak, hickory, pecan and cedar predominating. The Trinity, Sabine, Neches, Angelina, San Jacinto, and other rivers afford rafting facilities and water power at times, although water is an uncertain commodity in the State, and nearly all mills have steam-engines. A new road will soon bisect the lumber districts, springing from Denison, near the Red river, and traversing the State to Sabine Pass, which is sixty miles east of Galveston, and already an important lumbering point.

The transcontinental division of the Texas and Pacific, as well as its main line from Marshall westward, affords an outlet for the northern section, while the International and Great Northern road passes through its western tier of counties, and a road toward New Orleans connects Orange, on the Sabine, with Houston. Before the construction of the railroads one of the greatest difficulties which the prairie settler had to encounter was the scarcity and extreme cost of lumber. It sold as high as $60 and $70 per 1,000 feet, and was often hauled hundreds of miles by ox teams. The Texan lumberman finds his market toward each of the cardinal points of the compass. The cleared lands in the valleys yield a good quality of cotton, to the extent of a bale of 500 pounds to the acre. Some rice is grown upon the lowlands bordering the gulf, as well as the staple known as Sea Island cotton.—Frank H. Taylor, in Harper's Magazine.

Pirates of the Chinese Coast.

Of all the dangers that beset the mariner, whether it be from storm, fire or the hidden reef, none have such terrors for vessels trading in the Pacific ocean as the pirates that infest the Chinese coast. With ordinary skill and vigilance the former dangers may be guarded against, and it is seldom that some one does not survive to tell the tale, but an attack by these pirates is conducted with such cunning, treachery and skill that, if it is successful, it leaves a mystery far harder to bear than a known misfortune for those who watch and wait for the ship that never returns to port. Every year adds to the list of stately vessels and gallant crews that leave port forever, and are eventually placed among the "missing." How many of these are captured and destroyed on the China coast can never be known; their assailants have no mercy, and the ocean "tells no tales."

The quaint junks that leave the Chinese ports at nightfall are to all appearances the peaceful traders that they profess to be; but if an unprotected vessel comes in view the scene changes as if by magic; deck-loads of merchandise are thrown into the holds, and cannon take their place; the crews are marvelously reinforced by men who have been hidden below, and the former lazy coasters glide swiftly along, propelled by not only their sails but the long and powerful oars.

The doomed vessel is quickly surrounded by the pirates, and a cannonade soon brings her masts and yards crashing to the deck. Her crew may defend themselves as well as they can, but they are outnumbered fifty to one. Nearer close the pirates, who throw rockets and "jingals" that leave an unquenchable fire and a stupefying smell wherever they fall; the defense grows more feeble, and now, running alongside, the pirates board, and slay all of the crew that may survive. By the busy hands of the plunderers the cargo is soon removed, a hole is bored under the water-line of the captured ship, and, as the pirates sail away, the scuttled vessel slowly sinks from view, and, after weary months of waiting, her name is placed on the list of "missing."

The pirate coasters repair their damages, send the guns below, divide the booty and disperse. If the battle has been heard by a cruiser, she hastens in its direction and meets with two or three easy-going traders who are apparently unconscious of any such thing as piracy near them. If any sign of the conflict remains about them, and an explanation is required, some plausible story is always ready in which they are represented as the real sufferers. Complaints against all robbers are intermixed with cunningly invented directions to the man-of-war, which is soon in hot chase of an imaginary foe.

If caught, these pirates meet with prompt punishment, which is always death. Knowing this, they will fight fiercely, if discovered by a man-of-war while attacking a vessel, and many instances are recorded where all the members of a pirate crew have destroyed themselves in preference to an ignominious death which they knew they would meet if captured.

A voyager on the waters of the East often finds it difficult, when he sees the Chinese trading vessels sailing peacefully around him, with their gay streamers and picturesque sails, and their gongs sounding a salute as his vessel passes them, to imagine that many of them are pirates, and that, if a suitable opportunity were offered them to make an attack, the vessel he is on would never see port again. But if he should happen to imagine such a thing, his fears would probably be well founded, for the records of the Chinese coast service are filled with accounts of vessels which have been attacked and destroyed by pirates, that were cruising about in the guise of just such harmless-looking traders as he sees about him.—St. Nicholas.

A Drenched Buttercup.

There was a scene on "Her Majesty's Ship Pinafore" at the "Zoo," last night, that was not down on the bills, and that came within an ace of converting that charming musical burlesque into a real tragedy. The gallant craft is built on piles and planked up from the water's edge. On the port side a broad platform projects from the side of the vessel on a level with the water. This platform is used as an "entrance" by Sir Joseph Porter, his cousins, and his sisters, and his aunts, and by Buttercup also. These parties are brought to the ship in a small boat, which last night moored rather carelessly. When the "cue" for Miss Estelle Mortimer's (who plays Buttercup as she only can play it) entrance was given, she stepped on the platform and began saying, "Hail! Men-of-war's-men." She had hardly got in the sight of the audience when her foot tripped on the rope of the boat, and the next moment she stepped into the water of the lake, which just there is full fifteen feet deep. As she disappeared from sight she threw her basket on the deck of the ship and then clutched wildly at the board from which she had stepped. In her sudden descent her arms were cruelly scraped and her skin abraded, but, though her head went clear under the water, she did not lose her presence of mind, and as soon as she came to the surface she caught the board firmly with both hands. The audience and her fellow performers were terribly excited, but a half-dozen gallant foretopmen drew her from the water into the small boat, from which she was taken into the cabin of the "Pinafore." The plucky little lady, who is as nervy as she is beautiful and talented, wished to go on with her part all dripping as she was, but better counsel prevailed. Of course it was necessary for her to exchange her wet garments for dry raiment, but here a difficulty arose. Her trunks were at the Burnet House, and so were those of those of the other ladies of the troupe. However, a costume must be "faked," and by dint of borrowing a skirt from one lady and what-do-you-call-'em, etc., etc., from the others, she soon contrived to look the part she had to play, and it is needless to say that the reception accorded her when she stepped on the deck was warm enough to drive from her mind all thoughts of her chilly bath of a few moments before, and she finished her part the heroine of the night.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Treasure-Trove in London Cabs.

It seems that on an average of 100 articles are received every day from cabmen whose honesty is sufficiently active to induce them to comply with that stipulation in their license which requires them to convey to the nearest police station any stray goods or chattels found in their vehicles. Not that virtue is left to be altogether its own reward; for, if the property be claimed, the owner has to pay 2s. 6d., or 3s. in the pound, which is handed over to the law-abiding coachman; and, if no satisfactory application be made within the three months, cabby becomes the legitimate possessor of the "treasure-trove." It is said that the men, as a rule, prefer to receive the reward rather than the article itself. And certainly when it came to be the fourth umbrella or walking-stick, or the third pair of spectacles, a smart young cabman might be excused for murmuring at the monotony of chance. But when it is a case of £500 in bank-notes, £600 worth of watches, 476 American gold eagles, or £4,000 in valuable securities, the requisite three months must seem to be a very long time to wait for a careless owner to come and put in an appearance. If the value of the property exceed £10 the reward takes the shape of a lump sum fixed by the Commissioner of Police, in accordance with the particular circumstances of the case, and in a few instances ranging as high as £100. Within the last twelve months cabmen who are now plying for hire have received amounts in this way of £25, £50 and £100.—Chambers' Journal.

ALL SORTS.

A young woman was knocked down at Rossville, Ohio, and robbed of her long and heavy hair.

Machinery has been put up at Fernandina, Fla., to experiment in making paper from palmetto fiber.

This year is specially productive of fires, and the drains on insurance companies are correspondingly large.

Ironclad gunboats, armed with 100-ton guns, have been condemned by the English and Italian naval authorities.

A Montgomery (Ala.) man was choked to death, the other day, by a negro woman with whom he had a fight about his washing.

Ex-Gov. Brown, of Georgia, who was accused some time ago of being a millionaire, says there isn't a single millionaire in that State.

The expenditure of the London School Board this year is estimated at $3,000,000, involving a rate of 5¼ per cent. on the pound sterling.

The bankruptcies in the "wholesale trade" in Great Britain and Ireland were 2,172 in 1877, 2,642 in 1878, and 1,553 in the first half of 1879.

Joseph W. Drexel, of New York, a philanthropic gentleman, is supplying the poor of that city with coal in small quantities at the actual cost.

Two great nationalities, as unlike as possible, furnish about four-fifths of the foreign-born population of the country—Germany and Ireland.

Rachael Yent worked at blacksmithing until her death, a few days ago. She was robustly handsome, but habitually smoked a clay pipe.

This is what comes of it: The Boston Transcript states that William R. Barker, of Cambridge, who is known as the champion checker-player of New England, has been declared insane.

Formerly the Turkish Government allowed only 300 Jews to dwell in Jerusalem. Within the last ten years restrictions have been removed, and now over 13,000 inhabit their ancient capital.

At the Saratoga science meeting Maj. J. W. Powell said the two great subjects for contention among savants in the next few years would be the theory of life and the laws of gravitation.

The Democrat says a citizen of Fleming, Ky., fired at a rat, struck a keg of powder, blew his house to pieces, and had to jump into the river to keep from burning up. The rat remains unhurt.

The millionaire Roman Catholic—Marquis of Bute has been married seven years, but has no son and only one daughter, born in 1875. His heir is his first cousin, a Protestant, aged 55. Lord Bute is 32.

The deaths from violence—by murder, accident, etc.—are four times greater in England than in Italy, although the latter has a larger population. This is due to the number killed in mines in England.

The Methodist pastor at Oconto, Wis., has informed his congregation, officially, that he will not preach again until they pay him enough of his past-due salary to buy him a suit of clothes to wear in the pulpit.

At a recent liquor trial in Winsted, Ct., an irate dealer broke out as follows: "Judge, there's no use of your trying to stop liquor-selling. Just as long as there is 8 cents profit on a 10-cent drink, rum will be sold, and no one can stop it!"

The handsome Boston Globe Theater is owned in sections by several persons, and one of them, disgusted by failure to agree with the others, is putting up a wall at the edge of his portion. This cuts off a third of the stage and part of the auditorium.

The country folk of Germany are a little primitive, but an honest farmer of Weiden, near Ryensburg, deserves the first prize for simplicity. He recently inquired of a notary in the city after a railway engineer who had disappeared. It turned out that he had lent money to the engineer on the security of the locomotive run by him, supposing it to be his personal property, and that he now wished to seize this collateral.

A Declined Challenge.

The recent centennial celebration of the capture of Stony Point recalls an anecdote of one of the storming party, Col. Scott, afterward Governor of Kentucky. He was a brave man and acquired a reputation in his adopted State of a skillful Indian fighter.

While he was Governor, some fellow sent him a challenge, on account of an offense which he imagined Scott had committed against his (the challenger's) honor. The old soldier did not notice it. The fellow, who had given public notice of his intention to "call out" the Governor, was much annoyed at his silent contempt. After waiting several days he sought the Governor for an explanation, and the following conversation took place:

"Gov. Scott, you received a challenge from me?"

"Your challenge was delivered, sir."

"But I have received neither an acknowledgment nor an acceptance of it."

"I presume not, sir, as I have sent neither."

"But of course you intend to accept?"

"Of course I do not."

"What! Not accept my challenge? Is it possible that you, Gov. Scott, brought up in the army, decline a combat?"

"I do, with you."

"Then I have no means of satisfaction left but to post you a coward."

"Post me a coward!" exclaimed the Governor, bursting into a hearty laugh. "Post away, and you'll only post yourself a liar, and everybody else will say so."

And that was the end of it.

FARM NOTES.

Fall Work on the Farm.

[From the American Agriculturist for September.]

Apples.—It does not pay to market inferior specimens; but, in this season of scarcity, it will pay to send smaller fruit, if fair and sound, than in years of abundance. Assort and pack with unusual care.

Turnips.—The cultivation of turnips and rutabagas consists of keeping free from weeds, and thinning out to a proper distance. One good root at every 9 inches is far better than two or three poor ones in that space. To have good sound roots of any kind, sufficient room must be given.

Buckwheat.—This crop, being easily injured, should be cut after the first light frost. Low grounds should be cleared first; upon high ground the crop will not be touched by light frosts, and here it may be left later. The grain shells so easily that it should be harvested early in the morning, when moist with dew. After lying a few days to cure, it should be raked up when it is moist.

Smut and Rust.—These troublesome diseases of wheat and rye may be prevented by pickling the seed. The pickle may be made of strong brine, or of a solution of four ounces sulphate of copper in one gallon of water. Sprinkle the seed grain, stir thoroughly to wet every kernel, and spread to dry. Either of these will destroy the spores, which are the seed of the parasitic fungi, known by the above names.

Beets and Mangels.—Early-sown beets and mangels may be harvested late this month. If left later, the roots may become hollow and stringy. An overgrown root may be large, but its size is no indication of its value. We harvest our early-sown mangels as soon as the larger ones become hollow, and find they ripen in the pits as well or better than if left in the ground later. The tops may be fed to cows or sheep with benefit.

Cider.—While the best cider is made from late-ripening fruit, and in cool weather, the inferior apples and windfalls may be made profitable by making them into cider for vinegar. Even those who have a cider-house, furnished with a mill and press worked by power, find it profitable to keep a hand-mill and press for the purpose of working up windfalls and inferior early fruit, before the cider-making season, on a large scale, begins.

Drying Fruit.—The primitive way of drying apples, peaches, etc., exposed to the sun and air, also exposes it to insects. Excellent dryers are now to be had, and at a cost which the increased value of the dried fruit will meet in a single season. These dry with artificial heat rapidly, turning out a handsome light-colored product. In drying in the old way for home use, protect the fruit from insects by netting, and provide some arrangement to dry by the heat of the stove in a rainy day.

Smut in Corn.—Smut is poisonous, or at least very injurious, and care should be taken to prevent its being eaten with fodder. It is becoming very common in corn. It might be well to pass through the corn-fields with a sharp knife and a basket, and cut off all the bunches of smut and smutty ears and carry them out where they may be burned. As one square inch of surface may contain 4,000,000 spores of smut, and every spore is capable of producing a smutty plant, it is important to carefully destroy every ball of smut.

Pitting Mangels.—In pitting mangels lifted this month, care must be taken to manage them so that they will not heat. If a cool and well-ventilated root-cellar is provided, there can be no safer place for them. In pitting them in the field, we gather twenty rows together, which makes a long heap, not large enough to cause heating. The roots may be covered with the tops, or with straw, held down by a few rails. Afterward these rows may be gathered together into pits and prepared for winter.

The Use of Lime.—An application of lime will be found useful upon any kind of soil, at least once in five or six years. It is generally used at this season, with a fall-grain crop. But where lime is employed it will be useless to apply superphosphate, as this combines with the lime, and becomes simple phosphate of lime, which is insoluble. Many farmers who have applied superphosphate without effect may find the explanation in the fact that their soils were filled with lime, which rendered it inert.

Late Sowing for Spring Fodder.—It has been usual to sow rye as late as October or November for green fodder in the spring. This is not a profitable practice. The rye comes up very thin and poor, and makes but a light crop. In the writer's experience, it has been found better to plow the ground in the fall, top-dress through the winter with fine manure, and as early in the spring as possible harrow in four bushels per acre of spring rye, spreading the manure at the same time with the disk harrow. Unless there is some good reason for the late sowing of rye, it should be avoided.

Fall Grain.—This month is the time for sowing wheat and rye. From the 10th to the 15th is the most popular time, but it is a question if it is not better to sow earlier. On any but very rich soils, it takes some time for the crop to get thoroughly well rooted and tillered, and, if tillering is not effected before winter, it will rarely take place to any great extent in the spring. As the yield depends on the tillering, the promise of an early-sown crop is better than that of a late one. Exceptions to this rule occur with very rich soils, where an excessively-long growth may be looked for, and the attacks of the Hessian fly must be considered. These hints, it is obvious, cannot be made to meet every case in a wide range of localities; we give general information, which the intelligent reader will adapt to his own circumstances.

Fertilizer for Wheat.—Every year's experience proves the value of superphosphate of lime as a special fertilizer for wheat. An experienced wheat grower informs us that he has used 500 pounds to the acre, and that the crop this year has paid handsomely for the outlay. Where a smaller quantity was used, the yield was unsatisfactory. A frequent mistake is made in supposing that, if a certain quantity of fertilizer will have a certain effect, this effect will be doubled by doubling the quantity of the fertilizer. This has led to much waste and loss. The greatest possible effect is produced with a certain quantity, varying according to circumstances; and each one must discover for himself what this quantity is. In the case above quoted, 500 pounds per acre is the most useful quantity. Others have found it best to use 600 pounds, and others again use only 300 pounds. As a rule, the largest applications may be most safely made on soils well filled with barn-yard manure, or vegetable matter.

A Quiet, Influential Life.

States owe much of their prosperity to such men and women as are set forth in Gray's lines:

> Along the cool, sequestered vale of life,
> They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

One of these "noiseless" men was Joshua Fry, an early settler of Kentucky. He possessed considerable means and much benevolence, and was thoroughly educated.

Seeing that the sons and daughters of his neighbors were growing up in ignorance, through the imperfect education afforded them, he opened a school in his own house.

Those who were able to pay he charged a small sum, and those who could not were taught gratuitously. He became noted for his success in managing refractory boys.

One day, a bare-footed and bare-headed boy presented himself at Mr. Fry's house. He was the son of a brick-maker, and worked in his father's yard. All efforts to keep him at school had failed. His wild habits had caused him, again and again, to be sent home as an incorrigibly bad boy.

Somehow, the notion had entered the boy's head that if he could get into Mr. Fry's school he would learn something and become somebody. So that day, he had left the brick-yard to go over to the schoolmaster's house.

He frankly told Mr. Fry that he was bad and had been expelled several times from the log-cabin school, because the teacher could not manage him.

"But, Mr. Fry," he added, "I want to come to your school, for I think you can manage me."

"I think I can," said Mr. Fry; "come in."

"Bob" went in, and the teacher so managed him that he became the Hon. Robert P. Letcher, member of Congress and Governor of Kentucky.

One day another boy came to Mr. Fry's house. He was poor, he said, but he wished to be fitted for college. If Mr. Fry would take him, he would pay him some day for his board and tuition.

"Come in and make yourself at home," said the kind-hearted teacher. The poor boy became Chief Justice Robertson, one of the most popular and useful of Kentucky's great men.

Before Mr. Fry died he had the satisfaction of seeing many of his pupils numbered among the distinguished public men of the State. Thus, quietly but distinctly, he had impressed himself by doing all the good he could and making no fuss about it.

Their First Peep Into a Mirror.

Possibly we should not all be as frank to own our deformities as these poor heathen were, even if we could > See ourselves as others see us.

A Christian lady in Siam relates the following in "Children's Work for Children:"

A few weeks ago a company of Siamese women came to see me and to look at my house. They consider it a great treat if I invite them through my rooms and let them look at my bed, my tables, my chairs, my pictures and nick-nacks, and especially if they can get a look at themselves in the mirror on the bureau.

One or two of those who came had been here before, and they were telling of how they looked in the glass till the others were all anxious to see, too, so they gathered in a crowd and stood before the mirror.

One quick look, and then a surprised, startled cry, and some of them hid their faces, others jumped away, and some looked about to see who was really there. They had never seen themselves before, and did not know how miserable they looked, with their black teeth and half-naked bodies. They drew their scarfs over their breasts, and tried to hide from the sight of themselves.

One turned to me and said: "We are very hateful-looking; don't you think so?" I did not tell them I had always thought so, but I said: "Now, since you know how you look, is it any wonder that we always tell you to wear more clothes and quit chewing betel?"

Raised His Salary.

During one of his rounds through his palatial hotel, the landlord of the Palmer House, Chicago, entered a room suddenly and discovered a window-washer leisurely engaged in reading a newspaper. Being very active himself, he had no use for a lazy man, or one who slights his work. He discharged his washer on the spot, and ordered him to go to the office for his pay. The man obeyed, got his money, went to his room on the upper floor, arrayed himself in his Sunday suit, packed up his duds and descended to the servants' apartment to take leave of his former associates. About this time Mr. Palmer entered, but did not recognize his quondam employe in his store clothes.

"Here, my man, you look as though there was good work in you; do you want a job?"

The ex-washer, somewhat surprised, admitted that he stood in need of one.

"Can you wash windows?"

The man allowed that he could.

"Well," said Mr. Palmer, "I've just discharged a man who has been doing that sort of work. I paid him only $20 a month, but if you take the place and go right to work, I'll pay you $22."

The proposition was quietly accepted and in half an hour the discharged employe was scrubbing away in the same old room.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, SEP. 25, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

Chapter on Flies.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

You can sometimes catch a base ball on the fly.

The most irritating fly is the Spanish fly.

The Latin name for a certain kind of fly is tempus fugit.

The fly is an author. See "Flies on Horses."

You can always, at this season of the year, find flies on toast at the restaurants.

Flies are always on hand early in the morning.

You have all seen a kite fly.

Some flies are always in jail.

Longfellow speaks of a fly as a bird when he says, "Fly, proud bird of freedom."

Some people employ the blind to keep flies from the room.

You can draw a fly with a drop of molasses better than with a crayon.

I have often seen flies hand-cuffed.

The spider is the only creature which invites the fly into his parlor.

The only popular fly—"Shoo-fly."

Flies are like rivers. They are often damned.

A conjugal quarrel is a promoter of hair flies.

Stage flies are painted.

A fly is conservative in his reading; he always sticks to his own paper.

Butchers and grocers exhibit flies in their windows.

You can't drown a fly in the milk of human kindness.

Although flies don't stay long in one place, they always cary a trunk.

There are musical flies. People often speak of that base fly.

Instructing Pupils in the Mysteries of Animated Nature.

[Burlington Hawkeye.]

They were sitting in the office of Engineer DeHass yesterday afternoon, that is, a few of Burlington's most worthy officials, when a Hawkeye reporter intruded upon them in search of news. There was a positive declaration from each individual that he knew nothing. After a few moments common-place remarks, one of the gentlemen told a story. This reminded another official of a little incident in his experience as a school-teacher. He said: "I had a small microscope in the school, and I thought I would entertain the children with it one afternoon. I had heard that a louse was a wonderful thing under a magnifying glass, so just before school was dismissed at noon I told the children that I wanted a big, fat louse, and that for the finest and fattest one I would give fifteen cents. Well, sirs, I dismissed that school, took my dinner and went over to a corner to eat it. I had my lunch nicely laid out, and had just got started, when I noticed a little six-year old come in the doorway, and start toward me with his right hand extended and a triumphant expression lighting up his little countenance from ear to eye and back again. He marched right up to me, and as he got within reaching distance, unclosed his hand and said: 'There, teacher; there, I got him.' and with that he deposited a fine, fat gray-back alongside of the lunch. He was about to start off, when in came a little girl in the same manner, walked up with her head down, her thumb in her mouth, and laid down two. Well, they began to come in then right along, until about seventy-five were crawling around before me. I told the children to take them out, and save me two of the best of them. Then they gathered them up and took them away; but, gentlemen, I ate no more dinner. It took a week's salary to pay off the various fifteen cents I had promised, and when the debts were all paid, the study of animated nature in that direction was suspended for the present." Here the official paused and looked around for the "next," but not one offered to go one better, and soon the news-seeker quietly withdrew.

Keeping Boarders.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Another boarding-house busted up, I see," sighed a venerable Detroit landlady, as she laid down her paper. "Well, it must have been extravagance on the table. That's what bankrupts seven out of ten, and even then the boarders are crying 'hash!' and complaining of poor meals. Now I run a boarding house for twenty-two years, and I made money and heard no complaints. How did I do it? Why, it's all in planning. For instance, a neck piece of mutton can be cut to look like a rib roast, and a little extra fire makes it just as tender. Lawd save you! I've been complimented a thousand times on my selection of choice spring lamb when the meat was mutton four years' old, and the toughest part at that! The idea of spring chicken on a boarding-house table is absurd—aye! almost wicked. In my palmy days I could take a tough old hen, pound the body with a potato masher for ten minutes, and set before my boarders a feast to make every heart glad. Now I'll venture that there aren't ten landladies in the city that can bake a pigs head and slice off the meat in a manner to make everybody believe that he has the choicest cut in a pig's body, and it's a wonder to me that there aren't more failures. Lots of landladies buy nice, fresh butter, and thus tempt a man to eat five or six biscuits or half a loaf of bread. What economy! I always had my nice butter on the table at breakfast, when we had little but toast, and the boarders got along on old butter the other two meals. It is all in planning—all in planning. I used to have beefsteak every morning. Three mornings in the week I bought sirloin, which is very nice, you know, and the other four mornings I bought neck-pieces and rubbed the case-knives over the grindstone. Give a boarder a sharp knife and a tough steak and he'll never make a complaint—never. He'll put the blame on his teeth, and the more steak he leaves on his plate the more rabbit pie you have for dinner."

Hyacinth.

Any person acquainted with the fine odor of this delicate flower should get a bottle of Dr. Price's Extract of Hyacinth, and they will readily see that it gives as natural and as powerful an odor as the flower itself. We think that Dr. Price's Unique Perfumes are the best and most persistent odors that are made.

The English Language.

"The other day," writes Eli Perkins, "I met a French gentleman at Saratoga, who thought he had mastered the English language."

"How do you do?" I said on accosting him,

"Do vat?" he asked in a puzzled manner.

"I mean how do you find yourself?"

"Saire! I never lose myself."

"But how do you feel? I mean."

"How I feels? Oh, I feels smoothe—you just feel me."

A Puzzled Postmaster.

Luckily Postmaster General Key is a man of family, and will be able to suggest a rational solution of the problem presented by a Tennessee Postmaster, who writes: "There is in my office two things that it seems some ladies wear for breasts. They were very badly put up, and addressed to Macon, Fayette county, Tenn. I wrote to the name (Sarah Lenhart). Macon P. O., Fayette county, Tenn., but did not get any answer. They are fine goods, and sorter like a woman's breast, but with no nub. Now, I don't know how to get them to the dead-letter ffice owithout spoiling them. They came here loosely wrapped in paper. I await your instructions, if you please."

The Language of Postage Stamps.

It seems that postage stamps as well as flowers, have a language. Thus, when a postage stamp has been placed upside down on the left corner of the letter, it means "I love you;" in the same crosswise, "My heart is another's" straight up and down, "Good-bye, sweetheart, good-bye;" upside down in the right-hand corner, "Write no more;" in the center, at the top, 'Yes;" on the right-hand corner, at a right angle, "Do you love me?" in the left-hand, "I wish your friendship;" bottom corner, on the left, "I seek your acquaintance;" on a line with the surname, "Accept my love;" the same, upside down, "I am engaged;" at a right angle, in the same place, "I long to see you;" in the middle, at the right-hand edge, "Write immediately." While this is all very good as far as it goes, those who put a postage stamp on any but the upper right-hand corner of an envelope must hold themselves responsible for all the swearing of the postoffice clerks.—Albany Times.

IF YOU WANT A

SILK HAT,
A Soft or Stiff Hat,
A Street or Traveling Cap
A Youth's or Boy's Hat.
A Child's Turban,
Or anything in the line of

GE NTS' FURNISHING GOODS!

Call On

K. B. Miller & Co.,

THE HATTERS,

34 Calhoun Street, Ft. Wayne.

SHIRTS MADE TO ORDER,
A SPECIALTY. 14-6m

PROF. RICE'S NATIONAL MUSIC CHART An Astonishing Invention! [illegible] JOHN ROSS & CO., General Agents, [illegible] Street, St. Louis, Mo.

RUPTURE Can be RELIEVED and generally CURED! by our appliance. Send address on postal card to Rupture Relief Co., Box [illegible], St. Louis, Mo.

WANTED AGENTS TO SELL TEA, Coffee and Baking Powder to families. PROFITS FIRST RATE. Outfit free. People's Tea Co., Box [illegible], St. Louis, Mo.

LADIES [illegible]

Seminal Pastille An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency [illegible] HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Book a Million [illegible]

For Sale a a Sacrifice.

A GEISER THRESHING MACHINE in good condition, offered for sale by Mr. D.D. Moody, at a very low price, and on time. This is an excellent opportunity to get a bargain. 37tf.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else. The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 33-1y

—Use Card's fever and ague cure and liver invigorator. For sale by F. E. Davenport and Casebeer & Matheny. 34-3m.

Read. Read.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please address G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county, who is authorized to sell the Singer Machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments furnished on short notice. 30-tf.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER AND SPECIAL FLAVORING EXTRACTS.

Eminent Chemists and Physicians certify that these goods are free from adulteration, richer, more effective, produce better results than any others, and that they use them in their own families.

DR. PRICE'S UNIQUE PERFUMES are the Gems of All Odors. TOOTHENE. An agreeable, healthful Liquid Dentifrice. LEMON SUGAR. A Substitute for Lemons. EXTRACT JAMAICA GINGER. From Pure Root.

STEELE & PRICE'S LUPULIN YEAST GEMS.
The Best Dry Hop Yeast in the World.

STEELE & PRICE, Manfrs., Chicago, St. Louis, and Cincinnati.

YOU CAN BUY A FINE

PARLOR SUIT!

With puffed edges and stuffed nk s, including mrble table, for

FIFTY DOLLARS!

—AT—

FLIEGNER'S FURNITURE STORE

15 WEST WAYNE STREET

FORT WAYNE, IND

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen, w to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— first door east of McQuiston & Ralston' double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16–tf. ISAAC HAGUE

FOR SALE

AT LOWEST PRICES AT

THE PHYSICIANS' DRUG STORE.

A full line of everything usually kept in a

FIRST-CLASS DRUG STORE,

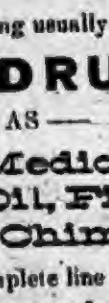
—SUCH AS—

Pure Drugs, Patent Medicines,
Perfumery, Hair Oil, Fine Soaps,
Brushes, Lamp Chimneys, Coal Oil

And a complete line of

Toilet Articles.
Liver & Kidney Pads,

Trusses, Shoulder braces. A choice selection of pure wines and liquors, furnished for medicinal purposes only. A full line of Wall Paper and Window shades, with all the latest improved fixtures, will be sold at prices remarkably low. We ask a share of public patronage, feeling satisfied that we can offer inducements worthy of attention.



DAY'S KIDNEY PAD

THE GREAT DISCOVERY

FOR DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS, BLADDER AND URINARY ORGANS. A remedy that will positively cure DIABETES, GRAVEL, DROPSY, BRIGHT'S DISEASE, HIGH COLORED URINE, INCONTINENCE AND RETENTION OF URINE, NERVOUS DEBILITY and FEMALE COMPLAINTS when NOTHING ELSE CAN. Its success proves the efficacy of ABSORPTION. [illegible] For sale by Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price. DAY KIDNEY PAD CO., Sole Proprietors, Toledo, Ohio.

Send your address for our pamphlet, "How a Life was Saved."

CASEBEER & MATHENY,
First door South of First National Bank. Auburn, Ind.

SAVED!

TIME, PATIENCE & MONEY

By always taking the great

Wabash Route,

FOR ALL POINTS

orth, East, South or West

LIGHTNING TRAINS,

Invariably on Time, with Close and Sure Connections.

No changes of cars to St. Louis, Hannibal, Quincy, Keokuk, Peoria, Burlington, Kansas City, Atchison and St. Joe, and only one change to all points in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Arkansas and Texas, forming the

SHORTEST AND QUICKEST
—AND—
Only Direct Route

From the West to all points in the East, including New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

Through Sleepers from St. Louis to Boston, 1223 MILES,

The Longest Sleeping Car Line in the World.

A. L. HOPKINS, Gen'l Manager. R. ANDREWS, Gen'l Sup't.
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen'l Passenger Agent, Toledo, O.

JUSTRECEIV'D

—AT—

J. ABRIGHT'S

Fine Gold and Plated Jewelry.
Ladies Gold Watches,
American Watches,

Rogers & Bro. Silverware,

A splendid line of imported Vases
Watch Chains, magnificent
Holiday Gifts, Lockets,
Ladies Sets, Gents

GOLD & SILVER SETS

Sleeve and Collar Buttons, Jet
Shell and Horn Jewelry,
All at astonishingly

LOW PRICES.

Watches and Jewelry neatly repaired on short notice

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Southern R. R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Sep. 29 1878, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm
Toledo	11 05 a m	12 01 a m	10 p m
Wauseon	12 16 "	1 08 "	"
Bryan	1 05 "	1 52 "	"
Butler	1 42 "	2 28 "	"
Waterloo	2 00 "	2 40 "	"
Sedan	2 10 "	2 50 "	"
Corunna	2 15 "	2 55 "	"
Kendallville	2 30 "	3 05 "	"
Ligonier	3 07 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	3 38 "	4 10 "	"
Elkhart	4 00 "	4 35 "	4 15 "

GOING EAST.

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm
Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	3 05 "
Goshen	1 29 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 56 "	10 42 "	"
Kendallville	2 30 "	11 15 "
Corunna	2 40 "	11 32 "
Sedan	2 47 "	11 36 "
Waterloo	2 55 "	11 46 "
Butler	3 10 "	12 01 a m
Bryan	3 45 "	12 40 "
Wauseon	4 27 "	1 27 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 40 "	9 50

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. R. CURTIS, Division Supt.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1878.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Night ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 12	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 13	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 30 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 48	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 25 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 20	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05am
Mansfield	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	6 55
Orrville	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Alliance	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Rochester	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Pittsburgh	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No. 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agt.

Detroit Eel River & Illinois R. R.

TAKE EFFECT DEC. 2, 1878.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	MAIL No. 2.	ACCOM. No. 4.	LOCAL FR No. 6.
lv. Logansport	8 30am	7 30pm	6 45am
Mexico	8 18	[illegible]	7 [illegible]
Denver	9 27	9 [illegible]	8 45
Chili	9 [illegible]	9 12	9 [illegible]
Roann	9 45	9 27	9 55
Laketon	10 15	10 00	10 37
N. Manchester	10 26	10 11	11 10
Liberty Mills	10 35	10 20	11 57
Collamer	10 51	10 36	12 30pm
S. Whitley	10 55	10 45	12 [illegible]
Columbia City	11 25	11 21	1 40
Collin's	11 46	11 36	2 35
Churubusco	12 00	12 11am	2 55
La Otto	12 20pm	12 46	3 45
Cedar Creek	12 3[illegible]	12 52	4 15
Auburn Junct'n	12 50	1 12	4 55
Auburn	12 54	1 17	5 05
Butler	1 30am	2 00am	6 30pm

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1.	No. 3.	No. 5.
Logansport ar	7 10pm	1 44pm	5 20pm
Mexico	6 37	11 55	3 46pm
Denver	6 25	11 38	3 30pm
Chili	6 17	11 27	3 10pm
Roann	6 05	11 05	2 20pm
Laketon	5 46	10 38	1 50pm
North Manchester	5 38	10 25	1 25pm
Liberty Mills	5 28	10 15	1 00pm
Collamer	5 15	9 55	12 40pm
South Whitley	5 11	9 40	12 20
Columbia City	4 45	9 12	11 28
Collin's	4 30	8 46	10 37
Churubusco	4 18	8 28	10 04
La Otto	3 55	7 57	9 08
Cedar Creek	3 45	7 45	8 42
Auburn Junction	3 25	7 23	8 00
Auburn	3 20	7 18	7 16
Butler lv	2 45pm	6 30am	6 00am

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

CHICAGO DIVISION.

TIME TABLE No. 4.

TO TAKE AFFECT MAY 18, 1879.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Expr'ss	[illegible]
CHICAGO		10 00pm	9 10am
Walkerton Junction		1 05am	12 10pm
Milford Junction	2 20pm	2 14	1 20
Cromwell	3 30pm	2 45	1 45
Albion	4 25pm	3 10	2 08
Avilla	5 20pm	3 30	2 34
Garrett, ar.	5 55pm	3 45	2 50
Garrett lv	6 15am	3 55	3 10
Auburn Junction	am	4 05	3 18
St. Joe	am	4 25	3 40
Hicksville	am	[illegible]	4 00
Defiance	5 40am	5 27	4 45
Fostoria	2 30pm	7 25	6 48
Tiffin	3 45pm	7 54	7 03
CHICAGO JUNCTION	6 00pm	9 00	8 30

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Expr'ss	Chic'g'o Expr'ss
CHICAGO JUNCTION	5 20am	8 15am	6 40pm
Tiffin	6 20	9 12	7 56
Fostoria	9 25	9 35	8 34
Defiance	4 45pm	11 20	10 30
Hicksville	6 10	12 14pm	11 24
St. Joe	6 50	12 30	11 41
Auburn Junction	7 35	12 50	12 05am
Garrett ar	8 00	12 58	12 10
Garrett lv		1 18	12 20
Avilla		1 40	12 35
Albion		2 00	12 56
Cromwell		2 24	1 22
Milford Junction		3 00	1 35
Walkerton Junction		4 [illegible]	3 20
CHICAGO		7	6 10

N. H. WOOD, Master of transportion Chicago Division, Garrett.
C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans, Ohio Division Chicago.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line

75 Miles Shortest to Indianapolis, Louisville and all points South. 58 Miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas, Texas, and all points West. Direct Route to Detroit and all Michigan and Canada points.

TIME CARD IN EFFECT MAY 25, '79.

SOUTH.	MAIL.	EX.	ACC.
Bay City	....	am	....
Saginaw	....	am	....
Lansing	....	am	....
Detroit	....	am	3 55pm
Ann Arbor		am	5 20pm
Jackson	6 00am	[illegible] am	6 50pm
Jonesville	7 10am	[illegible] pm	9 00am
Bankers	7 17am	[illegible] pm	9 40pm
Waterloo	9 18am	[illegible] pm	12 [illegible]
Auburn	9 25am	[illegible] pm	1 00am
Auburn Junc.	9 28am	[illegible] pm	1 10am
Ft. Wayne	10 20am	[illegible] pm	2 35am
Indianapolis	5 25pm	pm	....
Cincinnati	7 00pm		....
Louisville	11 00pm	am	....
St. Louis	7 30am	am	....
Washington		8 40pm	....
Baltimore		9 20pm	....

NORTH.		EX.	ACC.
Baltimore		7 10am	....
Washington		8 35am	....
St. Louis	8 00am	7 00pm	....
Louisville	2 00pm	6 50pm	7 30am
Cincinnati			9 00am
Indianapolis	6 40pm	4 05am	11 50am
Ft. Wayne	5 00am	11 40am	5 00pm
Auburn Junc.	5 52pm	12 20pm	5 25pm
Auburn	5 58am	12 35pm	6 30pm
Waterloo	6 05am	12 46pm	7 05pm
Bankers	7 54am	2 22pm	10 20pm
Jonesville	8 10am	2 37pm	10 45pm
Jackson	9 20am	3 40pm	12 [illegible]am
Ann Arbor	10 35am	5 10pm	2 05am
Detroit	11 50am	6 30pm	3 35am
Lansing		5 24pm
Saginaw		8 57pm
Bay City		9 55pm

All trains daily except Sunday. Through tickets to all principal points. For information as to routes and connections apply to

P. B. LOOMIS, Pres't & Gen'l Manag'r. S. K. HOOPER, Gen'l Ticket Ag't.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect November 10, 1878.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1. Mail.	3 Express.	....
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	5 40 pm	....
Bluffton	2 12 pm	53 pm	....
Montpelier	2 52 pm	38 pm	....
Hartford	3 17 pm	58 pm	....
MUNCIE	4 05 pm	[illegible] pm	....
Newcastle	5 00 pm	....	....
Cambridge City	5 37 pm	....	....
Connersville	6 17 pm	....	....
Cincinnati	9 30 pm	....	....
INDIANAPOLIS	6 15 pm	10 55 pm	....
Louisville	11 00 pm	8 20 am	....
Terre Haute	....	1 32 am	....
St. Louis	....	7 30 am	....

STATIONS	GOING NORTH Mail.	Express	Accom.
St. Louis	....	8 00 am	7 00 pm
Terre Haute	....	3 27 pm	1 32 am
Louisville	....	2 00 pm	6 50 pm
Indianapolis	....	6 40 pm	4 15 am
Cincinnati	8 00 am	....	....
Connersville	11 13 am	....	....
Cambridge City	11 45 am	....	....
New Castle	12 25 pm	....	....
Muncie	1 26 pm	9 20 pm	6 50 am
Hartford	2 13 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	2 40 pm	10 31 pm	9 10 am
Bluffton	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fort Wayne	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change. Through cars are attached to trains [illegible] and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie. All trains daily except Sunday. Trains run on Columbus time.

Geo. W. Mullen, Ass't Gen. Tick. Ag't. W. W. Worthington, Gen. Supt.

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 9. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, OCTOBER 2, 1879. Number 40.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y,

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills,

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

Thos. H. Sprott.

REAL ESTATE, COLLECTION AND INSURance Agent. Loans effected on Improved farms. Kansas lands for sale or trade. Auburn, Indiana

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Drs. Cowail & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gonsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

D. J. Swartz, M. D.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO DISEASEs of the Eye and Ear. Fistula in Ano, Hemorrhoids or Piles and Chronic Ulcers. Office on Main street, over Shaffer's Furniture Store, Auburn, Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET, EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates. T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month; at Waterloo, the first and at Butler the second Saturday of every spring and fall month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACKINTOSH,
Co. Sup't, of schools.

$66 A WEEK in your own town, and no capital risked. You can give the business a trial without expense. The best opportunity ever offered for those willing to work. You should try nothing else until you see for yourself what you can do at the business we offer. No room to explain here. You can devote all your time or only your spare time to the business, and make great pay for every hour that you work. Women make as much as men. Send for special private terms and particulars, which we mail free. $5 outfit free. Don't complain of hard times while you have such a chance. Address H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine. 21-ly.

Sick Headache

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Positively Cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, &c. They regulate the Bowels and prevent Constipation and Piles. The smallest and easiest to take. Only one pill a dose. 40 in a vial. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 cents. Sold by all Druggists.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., Prop'rs, Erie, Pa.
Five Vials by mail for one dollar.

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $5 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-ly.

REPUBLICANISM.

FROM THE LEMARS (IOWA) SENTINEL.

The only way to make secession impossible is to wipe out state lines and proclaim the Nation.

Maine and California rolled up republican majorities the other day. How do you like that, you rebel Yahoos?

The semi-savage southerners ought to be the serfs of the enlightened north until they have learned the duties of freemen.

Let the stalwarts now make their grand attack on the United States Senate—which is the great bulwark of state rights and state sovereignty.

The great plantations and estates of southern rebels ought to have been distributed among the conquering armies from the invincible northland.

Having settled matters in Europe, Asia, and Africa, Gen. Grant set sail from Japan a few days ago to take charge of America. And it makes the rebels wriggle.

The land pirates who inhabit the states north of the Gulf of Mexico, have no more idea of civil and religious liberty, than had the water pirates that formerly swarmed on the seas to the south of the same Gulf.

On what principle of justice should that little tater patch, Delaware, have two United States senators, and the great metropolitan, wealthy and populous state of New York only have two? It is impossible to have a Nation worth talking about till the absurdity is removed.

New York has told the Paul Prys and Mrs. Grundys of America that it is none of their business how Conkling, the stalwart, and Kate Sprague, the pretty swop sweetness, and her broad-shouldered republican friends have everlastingly indorsed him as a stalwart and this republic as a Nation.

The constitution of the United States has been little besides a curse and a hindrance;

It is so to-day as much as it has been at any time since it was framed.

It is the barrier now in the pathway of the Nation;

It is in league with treason, and is the bulwark of secession,

To it the baffled brigadiers appeal,
And by it they swear;

But the stalwarts do not care a fig for the constitution, and will trample it under foot to-day as did Lincoln and the patriot hosts from '61 to '67.

We of to-day know what we need better than did the men of ,76 and '98.

We thank the fathers for their rich heritage of wisdom.

But we have no special use for their ignorance.

We are wiser than they were; for we have all their wisdom and more than a century's experience besides.

They had their revolution in '76—we had ours in '61;

They founded a confederacy, we founded a Nation.

Good Talkers.

[Dr Holland, in Scribner for October.]

The first requisite of a good talker is genuine social sympathy. A man may not say, out of some selfish motive, or some motive of personal policy, "Go to! I will become a good talker." He must enjoy society, and have a genuine desire to serve and please. We have all seen the talker who talks for his own purpose, or talks to please himself. He is the well-known character—the talking bore. The talker who gets himself up for show, who plans his conversations for an evening, and crams for them, becomes intolerable. He lectures; he does not converse; for there is no power of a talker so delightful as that of exciting others to talk, and listening to what his own inspiring and suggestive utterances have called forth. Genuine social sympathy and a hearty desire to please others are necessary to produce such a talker as this, and no other is tolerable. Social sympathy is a natural gift, and there is a combination of other gifts which constitute what may be called esprit, that are very essential to a good talker. This combination includes individuality, tact and wit—the talents, aptitudes, and peculiar characteristic charm which enable a man to use the materials of conversation in an engaging way, entirely his own; for every good talker has his own way of saying good things, as well as managing conversation based on this esprit.

Yet it is true that there are no good talkers who depend upon their natural gifts and such material as they get in their usual interchange of society. For the materials of conversation we must draw upon knowledge. No man can be a thoroughly good talker who does not know a great deal. Social sympathy and the "gift of gab" go but a short way toward producing good conversation, though we hear a great deal of this kind of talk among the young. Sound and exact knowledge is the very basis of good conversation. To know a great many things well is to have in hand the best and most reliable materials of good conversation. There is nothing like abundance and exactness of knowledge with which to furnish a talker. Next to this, perhaps, is familiarity with polite literature. The faculty of quoting from the best authors is a very desirable one. Facts are valuable, and thoughts, perhaps, are quite as valuable, especially as they are stimulating to the conversation of a groupe. The talker who deals alone in facts is quite likely to have the talk all to himself, while the man who is familiar with thoughts and ideas, as he has found them embodied in literature, becomes a stimular of thought and conversation in those around him. Familiarity with knowledge and with the products of literary art cannot be too much insisted on as the furniture of good conversation.

Beyond this, the good talker must be familiar with the current thought and events of his time. There should be no movement in politics, religion and society that the good talker is not familiar with. Indeed, the man who undertakes to talk at all must know what is uppermost in men's minds, and be able to add to the general fund of thought and knowledge, and respond to the popular inquiry and the popular disposition for discussion. The man who undertakes to be a good talker should never be caught napping, concerning any current topic of immediate public interest.

How to carry and convey superiority of knowledge and culture without appearing to be pedantic, how to talk out of abundant stores of information and familiarity with opinion without seemto preach, as Coleridge was accused of doing, belongs, with the ability to talk well, to "the art of conversation." It has seemed to us that if young people could only see how shallow and silly very much of their talk is, and must necessarily be, so long as they lack the materials of conversation, they would take more pains with their study, would devote themselves more to the best books, and that, at least, they would acquire and maintain more familiarity with important current events. To know something is the best cure for neighborhood gossip, for talk about dress, and for ten thousand frivolities and sillinesses of society. Besides a good talker needs an audience to understand and respond to him, and where is he to find one if there is no abundant culture around him?

The Sunday That is Gone—A Plea for a New One.

The Puritan Sabbath is gone; not theatened, not going, but gone. We are not writing to commend nor to condemn the change so rapidly taking place in the American Sabbath, only to describe it and to emphasize the fact that whether the Puritan Sabbath shall be retained is no longer a practical question. It does not exist. The Sabbath of the future will not be the Sabbath of the past; whether there shall be any Sabbath, and what it shall be, depends upon the Christian people of the United States. Retained it cannot be, preserved it may be, modified it must be. Sunday newspapers can not be suppressed, though they may be elevated; Sunday trains cannot be stopped, though their number may be reduced; Sunday excursions cannot be prevented though they may be regulated by law. We cannot go back if we would; it only remains to determine in what direction we shall go forward. No nation ever needed a day of sacred rest more than this hurrying, bustling, over-stimulated over-excited American people; what that rest shall be, and how secured, is not to be determined by men who lived before railroads, telegraphs and newspapers were dreamed of. To protest mildly against Sunday newspapers and buy them, to condemn Sunday markets and patronize them, to laud cold dinners and eat hot ones, will only destroy what little reverence is left for the day. To preach one Sabbath and practice another is to despise the day and demoralize the conscience. Far better his course who refuses to read the Sunday newspaper, to ride in the Sunday car, to trade in the Sunday market, or to eat the Sunday dinner, for he has the merit of an honorable consistency; but his influence in molding the social Sabbath of the future is infinitessimal. He is consistent, but he falls under the condemnation of Christ; "Ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?" He only really aids in forming the Sabbath of the future who practices the Sabbath which he preaches, and therefore preaches a Sabbath which he can practice. He who cares only for a Sabbath for himself, can, perhaps, make it what he will. But he who desires a Sabbath for his children and his community may profitably consider whether he had best waste his strength in endeavoring to retain a Sabbath observance which no longer really exists, or employ it in the endeavor to maintain a Sabbath observance which shall be neither Puritan nor Parisian, but American; not borrowed from the conventicles of the sixteenth century, or the beer-gardens of the nineteenth, but from the teachings and practices of Christ and his immediate followers, and adapted to the exigencies of the life of to day. —Christian Union.

Louis Guetig Hanged.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 19.—Louis Guetig was hanged at noon to-day. He murdered Mary McGlen just one year ago to-day, because she refused to renew a marriage engagement with him which she had previously broken off on account of his habits of dissipation. He had two trials, and was sentenced to death both times. He became seemingly indifferent to his fate, and only last night would he consent to the ministrations of the clergy. At 11:50 in mounting the scaffold and during all the proceedings, he maintained wonderful nerve. He spoke a few words asking forgiveness of any he had wronged, and announced himself ready. He then turned and walked about the scaffold, shaking hands and bidding good-by to his acquaintances, while he nodded and smiled to those he could not reach. Again turning he took his place on the trap, seemingly with [illegible] than those who were looking at him. As the bells were striking 12 the drop fell, and in 16 minutes he was pronounced dead. He was under 20 years of age.

Guetig was formerly a clerk in the Spencer house in this city. For three years previous to the murder he had been paying court to Mary McGlen. On the evening of Sept. 19, 1878, as Mary and Miss Ada Mack started from the latter's residence, they were met by Guetig, who demanded that Mary accompany him to the hotel for an interview with his mother. She refused to go, and he then threatened her life, as he had it seems once or twice before; but she stuck to her resolution until persuaded by Ada, who feared that Guetig really meant murder. Upon their arrival at the hotel, Mary declined to go up stairs, and Guetig shot her. She fell to the ground, then rose to her feet, only to receive another bullet, which crushed through her skull. Speechless and dying, she had strength to rise upon her knees and raise her hands, as though beseeching for mercy, but Guetig advanced with his revolver until the muzzel almost rested against her face, and pulled the trigger again. The bullet entered on the left side, the powder burning the skin. She fell back and expired.

Things to Think About.

A cent isn't much if it stands a lonely, solitary cent, it is the aggregation of cents that count.

Science shows that all that is necessary to the human body can be supplied by the vegetable kingdom solely, and in fact that the world's population is actually mainly supported by vegetable products.

Man has the power of imitating almost every motion but that of flight. To effect this he has in maturity and health 60 bones in his head, 60 in his thighs and legs, 62 in his arms and hands, and 67 in his trunk. He has also 434 muscles. His heart makes 64 pulsations in a minute, and therefore 3,830 in an hour, and 92,160 in a day. As to speed of animated beings, size and construction seem to have little influence. The sloth is by no means a small animal, and yet it can travel only fifty paces in a day; a worm crawls only five inches in fifty seconds, but a lady bird can fly twenty million times its own length in less than an hour. An elk can run a mile and a half in seven minutes, and antelope a minute; the wild mule of Tartary has a speed even greater than that. An eagle can fly eighteen leagues in an hour. A violent wind travels 60 to 70 miles an hour. The reader who doubts the correctness of any one or all of these assertions is at perfect liberty to demonstrate by count, measurement, or observation how much they vary from the stirct line of exactness.

The greatest cataract in the world is the Falls of Niagara; the largest cavern, the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky; the largest river, the Mississippi—4,000 miles in extent; the largest valley, that of the Mississippi—its area 5,000,000 square miles; the greatest city park, that of Philadelphia, containing 2,700 acres; the greatest grain port, Chicago; the biggest lake, Lake Superior; the largest railroad, the Pacific railroad—over 3,000 miles in extent. The most huge mass of solid iron is Pilot Knob of Missouri—height 250 feet, circumference two miles; the best specimen of Grecian architecture, Girard College, Philadelphia; the largest aqueduct, the Croton, of New York—length, forty and one-half miles, cost $12,500,000; the longest bridge, the elevated railroad in Third avenue, New York; it extends from the Battery to the Harlem river—the whole length of the eastern side of Manhattan Island—7 miles long, or nearly 40,000 feet. The longest bridge over water, however, will be that now being constructed in Russia over the Volga, at a point where the river is nearly four miles wide. The most extensive deposits of the anthracite coal in the world are in Pennsylvania.

Why People Are Poor.

It is stated on very excellent authority that "the poor have ye with you always." The remark was true when uttered, and has been true ever since, and from appearances always will be. There are those who have no disposition to save; who take no thought for to-morrow. Having enough for the present hour, they are content, and leave the future to take care of itself. If property were to be equally divided among the people Monday morning, before Saturday night the majority would be in destitute circumstances, dead broke, while the prudent and saving would be on the road to pecuniary independence. One class of people spend what ever money they get hold of, and as fast as they get it, while others save means that come into their hands, judiciously invest the same, and become rich. There are those who not only do not know how to save, but they do not know how to spend. If they get anything it goes for what they do not need; for articles that could be dispensed with. Those who are destitute of the comforts of life, as a rule, may blame themselves therefor. If they have anything they do not take care of it. They buy articles that people in better circumstances would think they could not afford. So they are always poor. Relieve their wants to-day, and they are no better off to-morrow. They are bound not to save—to have nothing, and are generally bound to be in debt if they can find anybody to trust them. Of course, we understand that people are sometimes unfortunate. They get sick, or those dependent on them become so. We know that people are sometimes overtaken by misfortune; but where there is one case of this kind there are fifty in which the entire trouble may be found in the indisposition to save.

Keep The Mouth Shut.

The influence of nasal respiration on the ear is illustrated by Mr. George Catlin, in his history of "The North American Indians." Among two million Indians he found not one who was deaf or breathed through the mouth, except three or four deaf-mutes; and in the memory of the chiefs of 150 tribes, not one case of deafness could be remembered to have occurred. This is explained by the mother always closing the mouth of the child whenever it attempted to breathe through it.

Tape Worms in Eggs.

Various instances have been recorded of the discovery in hens' eggs of minute specimens of the distoma ovatum. They appear like a small speck, the size of a millet seed or a pin's head. It is believed by helminthologists that these will develop into one of the varieties of tape worm, and it is wise therefore, to take eggs hard boiled or otherwise well cooked. A writer in one of the late numbers of Nature cites several instances where these parasitic bodies have been found.

Enterprise in Leadville.

[Ernest Ingersoll, in the October Scribner.]

Among the first in Leadville there happened to be a merchant who once handled a wholesale business of three millions a year as a grocer in New York City. Failing there, he came to Leadville penniless. But his sagacity seized upon this opportunity, and getting together sufficient funds, he built a vast shed of slabs and filled it with rows of bunks, two tiers high, capable of accommodating 500 sleepers nightly. His mattresses were thick and soft, his sheets clean, his coverings warm, the place well ventilated through the thousand cracks that gaped between the unseasoned boards. The proprietor was a man of large size and severe mien. He furnished a bed for fifty cents, and posted his rules: No talking or laughing, or singing, or drinking. If a man cared to sleep himself and let others sleep, he was sure of a good night's rest; if he made a noise he was soon ejected and without redress. Of course the Mammoth Sleeping Palace made money, as it deserved to.

The Cost of Railway Cars.

Under examination by the State committee on railway affairs, a leading member of one of our largest car building companies, Mr Gilbert, testified that the average price of box cars is grom $400 to $450. In 1873 they were as high as $1,200. A milk car costs about $100 more than an ordinary box freight car, that is, when the box is not changed. A baggage car truck and a passenger car truck are about the same The price of a baggage car varies from $2,000 to $2,500. The cheapest style of Wagner's drawing room cars can be made for $8,000; the usual price is $12,000. This includes all the furnishing. The cheaper drawing room cars, four wheels, are made for $10,000. The ordinary mail car costs from $2,000 to $3,000; distributing cars, more. Cars for the New York Elevated road cost from $2,500 to $3,000. The last ordinary passenger cars built cost $4,200; the last built for the Hudson River road cost $5,400, including a heater and some extra fixtures. Small cars for carrying ore cost $200. Mr. Gilbert had never made coal cars or tank cars for oil.

The South and the Presidency.

Numerous Southern politicians by trade, here and there, will be clamoring for certain named candidates, trusting that they will be remembered and rewarded if the statesman named by them should be nominated and elected. We advise Northern Democrats to pay no attention to them at all, but to go forward and plan for themselves the battle which they will be obliged to fight under leaders of their own choice. We take it for granted that Northern Democrats know best how to win New York, Pennsylvania or Ohio, and know best under what standard-bearer to go into the fight. It will therefore be wise in Southern democrats to take good care not to embarrass our Northern friends. The campaign before them will tax their utmost powers, and it is only fair, right and just that they should have the choice of the Champion democrat who is to lead them through a fierce struggle to a brilliant victory. Our southern states will surely ratify any nomination the northern democracy may agree upon.—New Orleans Picayune.

—Use Card's fever and ague cure and liver invigorator. For sale by F. E. Davenport and Casebeer & Matheny. 34-3m.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen, we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— first door east of McQuiston & Ralston's double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, OCT. 2, 1879.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

The grain and breadstuffs exports from New York for the past week, ending Sept. 28, were almost unprecedented. They included 2,490,023 bushels of wheat, 907,636 bushels of corn, 120,516 bushels of rye, and 109,667 barrels of flour.

During a fire in West Fortieth street, New York, Mrs. Schwab and son were probably fatally injured by jumping from a window. ....A strange case of kidnapping is reported from Buffalo, N. Y. A scoundrel called a little girl from school, pretending that her father had been injured and wished her to come to him. On arriving at the building where he was represented as lying, she was locked in a room, and made to write a note to her parents asking them to give the bearer $500, in order that no harm might befall her. Before finishing the letter she begged for freedom, promising on oath to get the money herself and return with it. The scoundrel thereupon released her, but when she reached home she related the history of the affair, and her abductor was easily apprehended.

THE WEST.

Hon. William B. Allen, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second Illinois District, died recently at his home in Aurora, Ill., aged 65 years.... Louis Guetig was hanged at Indianapolis on the 19th of September, for the murder of Mary McGlew a year ago.

President Hayes and party arrived at Chicago, over the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad, on the evening of Sept. 20 and were quartered at the Grand Pacific Hotel. After a private reception and a night's rest at that hostelry, the distinguished party continued their journey westward over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road.

The tug-boat, Charles W. Parker, while towing a vessel into the harbor of Chicago, the other day, exploded one of her boilers with terribly-fatal effect. There were on board at the time five persons—the Captain, steward, engineer, fireman and a deck-hand. Four of them were instantly killed, their bodies being blown to fragments. The only one to escape was the deck-hand, and he only by a miracle. He was blown nearly a hundred yards and was picked up in a drowning condition. His injuries are very severe, but he will probably recover. The boat went to the bottom almost the same instant that the explosion occurred.

A horrible tragedy was recently enacted at Macon City, Mo. A man named Raus, while laboring under a fit of temporary insanity, produced by physical illness, killed his wife and child and then blew his own brains out.

Two negroes, Washy Arnold and Prior Ward, locked arms and deliberately walked into the Missouri river at St. Joseph. They were swept away by the current and drowned.

One hundred and fifty negro emigrants passed through St. Louis last week. They were bound for Kansas.

A horrible murder was recently committed on the farm of Alexander White, near Edgerton, Rock county, Wis. Mrs. White missed her little boy, aged 3 years, and after a protracted search he was found in the manger of a cow-stable with his throat cut and a rip from the breast bone clear down, which let the bowels out. A rope was hanging from a beam, all bloody, with the noose partially cut, which indicated that the little fellow was hung up and then cut open in the manner described. The horrible deed was committed by George Bumgartner, one of Mr. White's farm laborers, who was missing, together with one of the best horses on the place.... A shocking murder and suicide is reported from Bucyrus, Ohio. George Schwab, a young farmer, fell desperately in love with Mary Klinch, and, because she would not marry him, assassinated the poor girl, firing a load of buckshot into her body while sleeping in bed. The wretch then walked off and ended his own miserable existence by hanging himself to a tree.

There was a sharp reaction in the Chicago grain and provision market on Sept. 24. Wheat, which had been steadily advancing for several days, fell 5 cents and corn about 2 cents a bushel; pork tumbled from 20 to 30 cents and lard 15 cents per 100 pounds. Considerable excitement prevailed and several dealers were badly squeezed, but there were no failures.

George Baumgarten, the young monster who murdered Mr. White's little 3-year-old boy near Janesville, Wis., has been arrested. He is only 17 years old. He is unable to give the motive for his crime. He says a strange "spell" came over him, and remembers little or nothing of what followed.

The trip of President Hayes westward from Chicago was marked by hearty greetings at all the stopping points along the line. The party arrived at Neosho Falls, Kansas, on the 25th of September. About 12,000 people had gathered there to attend the District Fair and to welcome the President and Gen. Sherman, whose coming had been extensively advertised. Hon. John R. Goodin delivered an address of welcome, Gov. St. John followed with a brief speech, after which President Hayes addressed the multitude at some length. His remarks related chiefly to the financial policy of his administration, being a repetition of his Cincinnati and Detroit speeches. Gen. Sherman then made one of his characteristic talks.

Nearly the whole of the business part of Carroll, in Carroll county, Iowa, has been destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

WASHINGTON.

The following statement of outstanding called bonds, amounting to $30,806,450, the last of which matured and ceased to bear interest on the 17th of July last, has been prepared from the books of the loan division: 20s of 1862, act Feb 25, 1862, $400,300; do 1864, act June 30, 1864, $70,450; do 1865, M & N., do March 31, 1865, $125,500; consols of 1865, March 31, 1865, $161,850; do 1867 do, $8,179,000; do 1868 do, $2,860,750; 10-40s, March 3, 1864, $18,188,600; total outstanding, $30,806,450.

The Treasury Department is in receipt of letters from the West complaining of the scarcity of notes of small denominations, and asking that a supply of such notes be sent to the several sub-treasuries with directions to pay them out in exchange for notes of larger denominations. The Assistant Treasurers, with their limited clerical force, cannot undertake to exchange one denomination of notes for another, but the Treasurer of the United States will furnish new notes of such denominations as may be desired in return for bankers' drafts in New York, and will transmit them as the applicant may indicate, but without risk or expense to the Government.... The Treasury Department has received an unusual demand for the one-cent bronze pieces, and as soon as possible the Philadelphia mint will turn out a sufficient amount of them to fill the many orders received.

THE SOUTH.

The following is from Fort Smith, Ark.: Jacob Irwin and James Hazel were waylaid and killed by unknown parties near Boggy depot, Choctaw Nation. The murdered men are accused of extensive larcenies, and this is the supposed cause of the killing. Vigilance committees are being organized in various parts of the Indian Nation.

There were fifteen deaths from yellow fever at Memphis and thirty new cases for the three days ending on the evening of Sept. 19. A dispatch from that city says a review of the situation reveals the following condition of affairs: There are two hundred and twenty-five people sick with yellow fever in and adjacent to Memphis, nearly all of whom are being attended and cared for by the Howards. Their physicians and visitors are abroad seeking new victims for relief. They have 180 nurses on duty and are working under an expense of about $700 per diem. The Masons, Odd-Fellows, Knights of Honor and other benevolent associations are laboring hand-in-hand with the Howards in the noble work of relieving the sick and distressed.

There were only three deaths from yellow fever in Memphis during the two days Sept. 20—21, twenty new cases being reported in the same time.

An injunction has been sued out at Memphis, restraining the city and State Boards of Health and the Quarantine Commission from excluding cotton from the quarantine limits, or in any manner cutting off the cotton trade.

There were eleven deaths from yellow fever and twenty-nine new cases at Memphis for the two days Sept. 22-23. There was no abatement of the fever at Concordia, Miss., five new cases being reported.

At Memphis the injunction asked against the State Board of Health, to prevent interference with the receipt and shipment of cotton in the quarantine district, has been granted by the local court. The decision in the case practically denies the right of the board to interfere with the transportation of cotton.

A slight shock of earthquake was felt at Memphis on Sept. 25. The course was from northwest to southeast.

The yellow fever is gradually abating at Memphis. For the two days, Sept. 24-25, there were only seventeen new cases and the deaths.

POLITICAL.

The Colorado Republican Convention, in session at Denver last week, nominated William E. Beck for Supreme Judge. Congressman Belford offered a resolution, which was carried with great enthusiasm and cheering, that, on Grant's return, should he decide to become a candidate for the Presidency, Colorado will pledge him her votes. The Convention was addressed by Carl Schurz.

Alexander Mitchell having declined the nomination for Governor of Wisconsin, tendered him by the Democratic State Convention, the name of James G. Jenkins, of Milwaukee, has been placed at the head of the Democratic ticket by the State Central Committee of the party.

The Prohibitionists of Pennsylvania held a State Convention at Altoona last week, adopted a platform and nominated William L. Richardson, of Bloomsburg, for State Treasurer.

The Democratic Convention of Colorado, in session at Denver last week, nominated George Q. Richmond for Supreme Judge.... The Massachusetts Prohibitionists met in convention at Boston last week and nominated a full ticket for State officers, headed by Rev. D. A. Eddy, a Baptist minister, for Governor.

The Minnesota Democratic State Convention was held at St. Paul, on the 25th of September. Resolutions were adopted declaring the United States an indissoluble union of indestructible States; demanding a revision of the tariff; declaring gold and silver the money of the constitution; favoring reform in civil service, and denouncing the presence of the army at the polls. The financial plank of the platform was the occasion of a long debate, and a resolution demanding the substitution of greenbacks for national-bank notes and the free coinage of silver was finally adopted. The following ticket was nominated: Governor, Edmund Rice, of St. Paul; Lieutenant Governor, E. P. Barnum, of Stearns county; Secretary of State, Felix A. Borer, of Le Sueur; State Treasurer, Lyman B. Cowdry, of Olmsted; Attorney General, P. M. Babcock, of Hennepin county; Railroad Commissioner, William Colville, of Goodhue county.

GENERAL.

The dimensions attained by the petroleum trade are indicated by the figures reported by telegraph, which show that the total export from the United States for the month of July was over 50,000,000 gallons, of the aggregate value of $4,283,461.

News from Cuba is to the effect that the slaves of Cienfuegos have risen in rebellion against the Spaniards, and joined the patriots, taking with them a large proportion of their masters' cattle. A decree is published by authority of the Home Government, declaring the Province of Santiago de Cuba in a state of war. Persons engaged in rebellion or sedition will be tried according to the law of March 23, 1870. There is great indignation in the island over the massacre of about seventeen officers who served in the last Cuban insurrection on the patriot side, but have of late been residing in different places and following their different avocations.

The Free-thinkers Convention at Chautauqua, N. Y., indorsed the platform of Col. Ingersoll's Liberal League Convention.... A Washington telegram announces that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has so far modified the regulations as to the transportation of spirits for export as to allow the railroad companies to become sureties for the payment of the tax, provided the spirits be not exported. This is a modification long sought by Western distillers, and does away with troublesome restrictions upon the export trade.

Canada had her first snow-storm of the season on the 25th of September. It was two inches in depth.

FOREIGN.

News comes from Afghanistan that the native troops mutinied and murdered their commander, and subsequently fell upon and slew all the English and military authorities at Herat. The news has caused the greatest excitement in England.

Emperor William, of Germany, was received in Strasbourg, on the occasion of his recent visit, with closed shops and barred shutters. Only the official buildings were decorated. The lapse of time has not rendered the memories of the late war less bitter, nor in any degree diminished the hostility of the French-speaking inhabitants of Alsace-Lorraine toward the Germans.

Cruelties continue to be perpetrated by the King of Burmah.... A Constantinople dispatch says the insurrection in Kurdistan has not yet been quelled. Two powerful tribes have joined Abdullah, with 12,000 men. The Commanders of Erzeroum and Bagdad have been ordered to send all available troops to Mosul. It is feared that the Persian Turkomans will join the insurgents.... A dispatch from India states that a holy war is being preached in the Khost valley and among the Mongols. Great preparations are being made by rebels, and vigorous resistance may be expected at Cabul.... A London dispatch says the surplus wheat in America, Russia and the East is 5,150,000 quarters less than the aggregate deficiency in the various countries.

It is stated in a St. Petersburg dispatch that Prince Gortschakoff will be continued as Chancellor for life, but that there will probably be a Vice Chancellor appointed at an early day, which is equivalent to the announcement that Gortschakoff, who is growing superannuated, will be superseded except in name.... A late cable dispatch gives further particulars of the recent terrible fire in Kieff, Russia. While a furious storm was raging, the fire broke out in seven different places. The offices of the fire brigade and Chief of Police station, a gunpowder magazine, and four petroleum stores were simultaneously set on fire. The whole city was wrapped in a black cloud of smoke, and every now and then people were terrified by series of detonations and loud explosions. The fire raged two days, and many lives were lost.... A Calcutta dispatch says the Ameer of Afghanistan has caused the execution of the commander of the Cabul mutineers.... Gen. Wolseley has concluded a treaty of peace with the Zulus which it is hoped in England is sufficiently comprehensive to make future wars in that quarter unnecessary. In order to draw the fangs of the African monster with whom he has had to deal, the British commander inserted in the compact an article providing that the native military system, by which a young warrior was not permitted to marry until he had distinguished himself in battle, should be abolished.... When Col. Browne, the British Resident at Mandalay, escaped from that city he left in charge of the official residence a deputy, who it is now thought may be in danger of losing his life during one of King Thebaw's fits of alcoholic insanity. Instructions have, therefore, been sent him that he leave town as soon as possible.... The interest of the people of Ireland in the discussion of the land question may be judged by the attendance at a meeting in Limerick on Sunday night. Although rain was pouring in torrents, 50,000 people assembled, of whom at least 20,000 remained until the close of the speaking.

The cablegrams, this morning, indicate how the complications are thickening in European politics. While at Vienna Bismarck and Andrassy confer as to the late alterations in the map of the continent, Disraeli, at London, conveys a quiet assurance to the French Ambassador that Great Britain will take no action in the present crisis in European affairs without first agreeing with France upon a definite policy to be conjointly pursued by the two nations. The little game at which Germany and Austria are engaged is evidently one which they will not be allowed to play out alone.... The Russian expedition to Central Asia has sustained a serious set-back at the hands of the Turcomans, whom the advance column encountered in heavy force, and in the battle that followed the Russians were defeated with a loss of 700 killed and forced to retreat in great haste.

Three Cuban planters have emancipated their slaves, 6,000 in number, contracting with them for their services for five years. Other proprietors will follow their example. This course is pursued because the Spanish Government has long refused to take the initiative in the matter, and because the spirit of revolt among the slaves themselves had assumed such proportions as to threaten an open and destructive rebellion.... The bicycle riders of England and France, including the champions of both countries, are coming to the United States.

A cable dispatch says that Stanley, the explorer, started for the River Congo on the 3d of September from Sierra Leone. When Stanley arrived at Sierra Leone he gave his name as Swinburne, and invested his expedition with so much mystery and secrecy that the steamer [illegible], on which he and his party arrived, [illegible] in danger of being stopped by the [illegible] authorities. Stanley then declared [illegible] and his purpose.... The Belgian Bishops have added to the intensity of the struggle between church and state by instructing the priests to refuse absolution to parents whose children attend the public schools.... A celebration has just been held at Pompeii to commemorate the destruction of that city 1,800 years ago.

Gen. Grant's Arrival in San Francisco.

Ex-President Grant arrived at San Francisco on Saturday, the 20th day of September, thus completing his tour around the world, after an absence of two years and four months. We glean from the Associated Press report the following account of his arrival and reception at San Francisco: Darkness had fallen, and it was 20 minutes past 7 when the lights of the ferry-boat were seen approaching the slip. She moved slowly into position. The platform was lowered, the band struck up "Home Again," and, amid the roars of applause from the waiting crowd outside, who realized that the moment had arrived, Gen. Grant stepped once more upon the shore of his native land. After a welcoming speech by Mayor Bryant and a brief response by Gen. Grant, the latter was conducted to his carriage, Mayor Bryant accompanying him, while the various committee and other gentlemen in attendance repaired to their own carriages. The gates of the dock were then thrown open, and the vehicles moved forward and took their places in line. As the carriage containing Gen. Grant made its appearance cheer after cheer went up from thousands of throats, while the surging crowd pressed forward and swayed from side to side in efforts to obtain a passing glance of the familiar lineaments of the great captain. With the greatest difficulty a passage was opened, the procession formed, and the line of march taken up. The procession moved rapidly along Market street to Montgomery, passing through Montgomery, up Montgomery avenue to Kearney, along Kearney to Market, along Market, countermarching to the Palace Hotel, which was reached at a late hour. Rockets and blue lights were fired along the route, and bonfires and torches abounded.

All the streets leading to the Palace Hotel were packed with dense throngs, through which the procession forced its way with great difficulty. Thousands were clamoring for admittance, but cordons of police at all the entrances denied ingress to all but those holding special permits to enter.

Within, the immense court presented a scene of surpassing beauty. Electric lights and 500 gas jets lit up the vast interior with a brilliant glow, and the dense throng that packed the court and filled the spacious balconies and corridors surged to and fro in anxious expectation of the coming guest, whom the packed streets had detained.

At 10 o'clock the wide doors were thrown open, and the barouche containing Gen. Grant was driven within the building. He immediately dismounted, and, crowded his way through the packed mass of human beings, was hurried to his room.

As he alighted, Madame Fabbri, and a chorus of 500 voices opened from one of the balconies with the "Ode of Welcome."

The crowd rushed after Gen. Grant when he dismounted, leaving the singers for a moment almost without an audience, but, being stopped by the force of police who blocked the way, they returned to the court, being reassured by the announcement that the General would appear on one of the balconies after he had had time to lay off his overcoat.

In a few minutes Gen. Grant appeared, amid deafening and long-continued shouts.

Mayor Bryant called the crowd to order, and the General, mounting a chair which was passed over the heads of the surrounding crowd, was again greeted with a succession of cheers. When the noise subsided he addressed them as follows:

"Fellow-Citizens of San Francisco: After twenty-five years' absence, I am glad to meet you, and assure you of my cordial thanks for the kind greeting you have given me. I shall stay in your city long enough to greet you more fully."

The General then withdrew, amid prolonged and tremendous cheering, and the crowd at length reluctantly scattered.

Grant looks exceedingly well, but has lost twenty-eight pounds in weight since leaving Philadelphia. He expressed his great gratification at the reception awarded him, saying it surpassed all his expectations. He spoke of his pleasure at returning home, and his satisfaction that his acceptance of the Nicaragua canal Presidency had been received favorably here.

Secretary Sherman's Coin Disbursement Order.

Treasury Department,
Washington, D. C., Sept. 19.

Gold coin beyond the needs of the Government having accumulated in the treasury of the United States by deposit in the several public assay offices of fine bars and foreign-coin, for which depositors have been paid, at their option, in United States notes, the Treasurer of the United States and the several Assistant Treasurers at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans and San Francisco are hereby authorized to pay out gold coin as well as silver coin and notes upon current obligations of the Government and upon advances to disbursing officers as may be convenient and practicable. Transfers of coin for this purpose will be made to any Assistant Treasurer, when necessary, by the Treasurer of the United States by application to him. The Treasurer of the United States in this city, on receipt by him of a certificate of deposit issued by the Assistant Treasurer at New York, stating that there has been deposited with him legal-tender notes in the sum of $100, or multiples thereof, will also cause to be shipped from the mint at Philadelphia to the depositor, at his risk and expense, a like amount of gold coin.

Standard silver dollars may also be obtained as heretofore. The exchange of gold for United States notes at the several sub-treasury offices, except at New York, appears to be prohibited by section 3,651, Revised Statutes of the United States, but it is believed that payments of coin, as above authorized, will enable persons to secure all that may be desired.

John Sherman,
Secretary of the Treasury.

The Nicaragua Canal—Gen. Grant's Letter.

The following is the text of Gen. Grant's reply to Admiral Ammen's letter asking him to co-operate in an American canal project:

Tokio, Japan, Aug. 7, 1879.

My Dear Admiral: Your letter of the 2d of July reached me a few days since. After two days' reflection on your suggestion of the part I should take—or consent to take, if offered—in the matter of the interoceanic canal via Nicaragua, I telegraphed to the Secretary of the Navy at Washington: "Tell Ammen I approve. Grant." I hope you received the dispatch. On the 27th, two weeks after this leaves Yokohama, we sail for San Francisco. I do not feel half as anxious to get home as I did eighteen months ago. There is no country which I have visited, however, this side of Europe, except Japan, where I would care to stay longer than to see the points of greatest interest. But Japan is a most interesting country, and the people are quite as much so. The changes that have taken place here are more like a dream than reality. They have a public-school system extending over the entire empire, and affording facilities for a common-school education to every child, male and female. They have a Military and Naval Academy which compare well with ours in the course taught, the discipline and the attainments of the students. They have colleges at several places in the empire on the same basis of instruction as our best institutions. They have a school of science which I do not believe can be surpassed in any country. Already the great majority of their professors—even those engaged in teaching European languages—are natives, most of them educated in the very institutions where they are now teaching.

But I hope to meet you soon, and then I will say more on this subject than I care to write in the limit of a letter.

Mrs. Grant sends her love to Mrs. Ammen and the children. Please remember me kindly also. Yours truly. U. S. Grant.

Where Our Immigrants Come From.

Our total immigration for the eight calendar years from 1871 to 1878, inclusive, amounted to 2,100,451 souls. Where they came from and how they are classified is shown by this transcript from the records of the Bureau of Statistics, at Washington:

Countries.	Total.	Countries.	Total.
England	335,775	France	64,341
Ireland	332,129	Italy	36,370
Scotland	75,801	Sicily	619
Wales	4,735	Sardinia	18
Jersey Island	23	Corsica	3
Guernsey Island	2	Malta	28
Channel Islands	9	Greece	167
Isle of Man	51	Spain	4,333
Great Britain, not specified	7,815	Portugal	3,740
		Gibraltar	41
		Russia in Europe	31,905
Total British Isles	746,303	Poland	10,135
		Finland	286
		Lapland	1
Germany	580,139	Heligoland	6
Austria	45,046	Turkey in Europe	284
Hungary	5,289
Sweden	64,176
Norway	66,385	Total Europe, not British Isles	974,365
Denmark	22,267
Netherlands	12,307
Belgium	5,041
Switzerland	19,390	Total Europe	1,720,668

SUMMARY.

From Europe	1,720,668	From America	254,027
From Asia	105,748	From all other, not specified	9,194
From Africa	306
From the Pacific Islands	9,457	Aggregate	2,100,451

Killed by Wolves.

Intelligence has just been received from Stafford county, Kan., of the sad fate that recently befell Henry Frack, Jr., and his four oldest sons. The five started on a gunning expedition one morning, leaving the wife and younger children alone, promising to return in the evening. That evening and several others came without the hunters. The country is but sparsely settled, and some days elapsed before a search-party was secured. In a dense forest were found the remains of the five men, about them every evidence of an intense struggle with the wolves and wildcats that devoured them. The bodies were horribly mutilated, and it was found that the last cartridge had been exhausted in the fight. Mrs. Frack, in giving these shocking particulars, asked her father, Mr. Charles Newhard, residing near Hokendaqua, this county, to send her money to enable her to return home.—Allentown (Pa.) Chronicle.

Grant and the Ex-Confederates.

Gen. Grant was tendered a big reception at the City Hall, in San Francisco, which was attended by a number of ex-Confederate soldiers. To them the General spoke as follows:

"Gentlemen: It has afforded me great satisfaction and pleasure to observe the very cordial reception I have received here, and especially the welcome coming from the gentlemen you represented. If you had traveled around the world, as I have for several years past, you would appreciate, like me, the value of our common country more completely than any man can who stays at home. You would be everywhere gratified to see that we are recognized by all the nations of the earth in a higher light than our own people imagine. Abroad our resources are considered unlimited. When one gets to see the nations of the world, he begins to appreciate the inestimable value of our broad acres and the great energy of our people that is forever upbuilding in State, city, and town. It affords me very great satisfaction and pleasure to receive the gentlemen who were, long ago, opposed to us, and I hope, if this country ever sees another war, we shall all be together, under one flag, fighting a common enemy."

Cure for Sleeplessness.

Wet half a towel, apply it to the back of the neck, pressing it upward toward the base of the brain, and fasten the dry half of the towel over so as to prevent the too-rapid exhalation. The effect is prompt and charming, cooling the brain and inducing calmer, sweeter sleep than any narcotic. Warm water may be used, though most persons will prefer it cold. To those suffering from over-excitement of the brain, whether the result of brainwork or pressing anxiety, this simple remedy is an especial boon.

An agricultural society offered a premium for "the best mode of irrigation," which was printed "irritation" by mistake, whereupon an honest farmer sent his wife to claim the prize.

THE NATIONAL REVENUE.

What It Costs to Collect It.

A Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune says: "The popular theory is, that the bulk of our revenue, for the maintenance of the Government and the payment of the public debt, is collected through customs sources. An examination, however, of the amounts of revenue collected through customs and internal-revenue sources from 1863 to 1878, according to the returns in the office of the Register of the Treasury, shows that the excess of customs revenue over internal revenue is less than is often supposed. Indeed, during five years of the period named the collections from internal revenue considerably exceeded those from customs. These were the war years, and the year immediately succeeding the cessation of hostilities. Since 1877, however, the internal-revenue collections have been less than those from customs. The expenses of collecting these two classes of revenue, however, are very disproportionate to the amounts collected. The Register of the Treasury makes for the years named the following exhibit:

INTERNAL REVENUE.

Year ended June 30.	Revenue.	Expenses of collecting.	Expenses of collecting, per cent.
1863	$37,640,787	$108,685	0.29
1864	109,741,134	253,372	0.23
1865	209,464,215	385,390	0.18
1866	309,226,813	5,783,128	1.87
1867	266,027,537	7,335,029	2.77
1868	191,087,589	8,705,366	4.55
1869	158,356,460	7,257,176	4.59
1870	184,899,756	7,253,439	3.92
1871	143,098,153	7,593,714	5.30
1872	130,642,177	5,844,110	4.38
1873	113,729,314	5,340,230	4.69
1874	102,409,784	4,509,976	4.40
1875	110,007,493	4,289,442	3.89
1876	116,700,732	3,942,613	3.38
1877	118,630,407	3,556,944	2.99
1878	110,581,624	3,280,162	2.96

CUSTOMS REVENUE.

Year ended June 30.	Revenue.	Expenses of collecting.	Expenses of collecting, per cent.
1863	$69,059,642	$3,181,026	4.60
1864	102,316,152	4,192,582	4.09
1865	84,928,260	5,415,449	6.39
1866	179,046,651	5,342,469	2.98
1867	176,417,810	5,763,986	3.26
1868	164,464,599	7,641,116	4.65
1869	180,048,426	5,388,082	2.99
1870	194,538,374	6,233,747	3.20
1871	206,270,408	6,568,350	3.18
1872	216,370,286	6,950,173	3.21
1873	188,089,522	7,077,864	3.76
1874	163,103,833	7,321,469	4.49
1875	157,167,722	7,028,521	4.47
1876	148,071,984	6,704,858	4.53
1877	130,956,493	6,501,037	4.96
1878	130,170,680	5,826,974	4.47

At a Holy Well in Ireland.

For several miles our road was bounded by bog on one side and rocks on the other. There were no evidences of human habitation, yet here and there we passed a peasant—some crippled, all plunged in profound misery. I inquired the errand of these poor creatures, and was informed that it was St. Somebody's day, and they were going to her well near by to be healed.

"It's there beyond," said a trembling old woman, pointing her skinny finger to a clump of trees and a stone wall a few hundred yards distant. I alighted, and walked down the valley to a small inclosure which surrounded a well and a withered tree. Near by was a rude stone altar, upon which were numerous offerings of toys, bits of broken ware, and shreds of many-colored rags tied to sticks, and kneeling beside it was a group of cripples; some moved slowly round the circle on their knees, muttering prayers, some were telling their beads, others partook of the water, while a priest stood by the tree reading. This, then, was one of the holy wells so numerous in Ireland, to which visits are still frequently made, in some cases as works of penance, either voluntary or enjoined, but generally for obtaining health, under the auspices of the saint, by drinking the waters of the well. Of course the day of the patron saint of each well is the one chosen for these visits; and some years ago, and even now in many parts of the country, crowds were attracted, not only for religious motives, but for love of gossip and meeting with distant friends. These wells have kept their reputation for centuries, the fame of some being coeval with Christianity, while that of others probably preceded it, the early Christian teachers having merely changed the object of worship, leaving the altars of idolatry undisturbed.—Harper's Magazine.

Mad-Stones.

The superstition in regard to mad-stones is well-rooted in the popular imagination, and has the right to be. It is very ancient. Pliny gives its history, for it was old even in his day, and it has hardly shown any diminution since. The men recently bitten by a dog supposed to be rabid, in this city, have been anxious to get at a mad-stone. One of them has gone to Indiana for the purpose, and the others would be glad to do so if they had the means. Now, it is as capable of demonstration as anything can be that no stone, "mad," or otherwise, can have power to heal in a genuine case of rabies. Poison cannot be extracted from the system by such simple means. But it may well be that belief in the efficacy of the remedy accomplishes the cure. The imagination often plays an important part in causing or preventing disease, as Dr. William Hammond has lately shown; and there is no reason in the nature of things why an imaginary case of hydrophobia should not be relieved by the application of imaginary remedies. It is an odd fact that stones, taken from the stomachs of deer, are supposed to be especially powerful in extracting poisons, and were so in ancient times, though it is difficult to conceive why this beast, in preference to any other, should be opposed to poison.—Chicago Tribune.

One Eye That Was Always Drunk.

An Allegheny physician, who, in his way, is a great wag, tells a story of a North Side gentleman who for years has suffered from periodical attacks of what in medical parlance is known as superorbital neuralgia. Quinine proved of no effect, and the sufferer was almost crazed with pain. A kind-hearted old lady living in the neighborhood of the patient informed him that if he would cut the affected nerve with a pair of scissors or a knife it would give him no further trouble. It so happens that the superorbital nerve is the one which controls the action of the eyelid, and it further happens that, when a man is in liquor, this nerve becomes paralyzed, and it is this that gives a drunken person such a comical expression about the eyes. The neuralgic patient no sooner heard what he supposed the welcome news from the old lady than he repaired to his closet and, with a jack-knife, parted in twain the offending nerve, and he now greets his friends with his right eye as sober as a Quaker in a quarterly meeting, and the left in a highly-intoxicated condition. It now only costs half as much as it formerly did to go on a bender.—Pittsburgh Leader.

Blood, Yearge, Blood!

When the editors of the Okolona States and Lemare Sentinel were introduced, the other day, they each took three steps backward, and for some minutes glared upon each other like fierce Numidian lions. The Okolona howler was the first to find words, and said:

"What!
And is't thou!
Come, then, dastard.
Let me have at thee,
And by the gods
That roost on high Olympus,
I'll eat ye up
In a holy second!
Ugh!
Big Injun, me!"

The Royal Bengal Badger of the Sentinel displayed his fangs and rejoined with his native ferocity:

"I thank the gods
For this opportunity
To call thee
To thy TEETH,
Liar!
Hippograff!
Hippopotamus!
Snide!
Shyster!
And baldheaded snipe of the valley!
O, come and see me,
And I'll mop the ground
With your miserable carcass—
Thou—thou—thou—
Three-ply
And doubly dyed
Horse-thief,
And son of a gun!"

But the Okolona howler didn't come. A by stander had seized the hem of his coat-tail between the tips of his thumb and finger and held him securely. So thankful was the Iowa man that things turned out as they did, that he went out and breathed a silent prayer to Heaven.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Swiftest Ship in the World.

A new British war steamer, called the Mercury, built of steel, has just been completed and successfully tried at Portsmouth, England. The vessel is 300 feet long, 46 feet beam, 16 feet 8 inches hold. Displacement, 3,750 tons. On her late trial trip the engines developed 7,795 horse-power, and the speed attained was within a trifle of twenty-two miles an hour. These are remarkable results for a vessel of the dimensions given. The Mercury has twin screws, driven by separate engines arranged in separate engine-rooms. Her machinery nearly fills the hull. There are 12 boilers, 4 high-pressure cylinders, each 41 inches diameter, and 4 low-pressure cylinders, 75 inches diameter. Stroke, 3 feet; boiler pressure, 60 to 65 pounds; coal consumption, 2.35 pounds per hour per horse-power. One man governs the rudder, which is worked by steam. The vessel's armament will consist of ten 64-pounders.

A Horse's Jump.

During a recent horse show in England Mr. Leaman's hunter, Surrey, made such a splendid jump over the mimic brook as to set the great audience to applauding frantically. The horse, wild with excitement, went right on down the ring, and, rising at the barrier of the amphitheater, with one tremendous bound literally sailed over the bars and five rows of spectators, alighting in safety and injuring nobody. The distance was measured and proved to be thirty-seven feet, a jump even more surprising than that made on the steeple-chase course, all things being taken into consideration.

It is absurd to vaccinate the police; they never catch anything.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$6 50	@ $10 25
Hogs	3 70	@ 4 25
Cotton	11½	@ 11¾
Flour—Superfine	4 40	@ 4 75
Wheat—No. 2	1 17	@ 1 26
Corn—Western Mixed	51	@ 54
Oats—Mixed	37½	@ 38½
Rye—Western	77	@ 78
Pork—Mess	9 00	@ 9 10
Lard	6¼	@ 6½
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 50	@ 5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 25	@ 3 50
Medium to Fair	3 60	@ 3 90
Hogs	3 25	@ 3 70
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	4 50	@ 5 75
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	4 00	@ 5 00
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	1 01	@ 1 03
No. 3 Spring	94	@ 95
Corn—No. 2	37	@ 39
Oats—No. 2	26	@ 27
Rye—No. 2	56	@ 59
Barley—No. 2	77	@ 78
Butter—Choice Creamery	28	@ 25
Eggs—Fresh	14	@ 15
Pork—Mess	8 80	@ 9 00
Lard	6	@ 6¼
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	1 06	@ 1 09
No. 2	1 04	@ 1 05
Corn—No. 2	37	@ 39
Oats—No. 2	26	@ 27
Rye—No. 1	60	@ 61
Barley—No. 2	70	@ 71
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red Fall	1 06	@ 1 07
Corn—Mixed	34	@ 35
Oats—No. 2	25	@ 27
Rye	56	@ 57
Pork—Mess	9 15	@ 9 25
Lard	6	@ 6¼
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	1 00	@ 1 06
Corn	40	@ 41
Oats	27	@ 30
Rye	62	@ 68
Pork—Mess	9 25	@ 9 50
Lard	5¾	@ 6
TOLEDO.
Wheat—Amber Michigan	1 13	@ 1 18
No. 2 Red	1 11	@ 1 12¼
Corn—No. 2	41	@ 42
Oats—No. 2	27	@ 28
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	5 10	@ 6 25
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 11	@ 1 12
No. 1 Amber	1 06	@ 1 10
Corn—No. 1	30	@ 41
Oats—Mixed	26	@ 30
Barley (per cental)	1 10	@ 1 40
Pork—Mess	9 75	@ 10 00
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	4 75	@ 5 00
Fair	4 25	@ 4 75
Common	3 50	@ 4 00
Hogs	3 80	@ 4 15
Sheep	3 00	@ 4 00

AUBURN COURIER.

[illegible]

THAT a great many people have been to Europe this year is a fact patent enough to have impressed itself upon the most casual newspaper reader, and the records of the leading steamship lines fully confirm the popular impression. It is already plain that the number of passengers of 1879 will exceed the total of any previous year except 1878, when the Paris Exhibition carried the figures up higher than had ever before been known.

AT the social science meeting in Saratoga, President Barnard, of Columbia College, read a paper on "Monometalism, Bimetalism and International Coinage." He proposed a metric weight of gold coin, one grain in the weight of which would be the nearest assimilate in value to the various coins now used in the United States, England, France and Germany. He would have the smallest international coins of ten grains, equal to $6 less 2 cents. A committee was appointed to consider the subject of weights, measures and coinage.

THE wheat crop of the State of Illinois, which foots up this year to 45,000,000 bushels, is by far the largest wheat harvest ever garnered in the State. Of this all but about 3,000,000 bushels is winter wheat, the growing of spring wheat having fallen off very greatly within the past two years, a change which may be due to the improved methods of manufacturing flour. In order to show how great the increase in yield is, it is only necessary to compare this year's production with that of 1870, when the total wheat crop was only 27,000,000.

THE particular fabrics that women persist in wearing cost their husbands and fathers enormously. The imports of silk manufactures at the port of New York during August, 1879, amounted in value to $2,331,007, an increase of $50,129 over the same month last year, and a decrease of $65,941 from the imports of August, 1877. The principal articles included in the August list are as follows: Silks, $1,295,247; satins, $35,191; crapes, $39,977; velvets, $109,102; ribbons, $247,305; laces, $98,149; braid and bindings, $171,627; silk and cotton, $235,499.

FREDERICK CULL, on trial in Sussex county, N. J., for the murder of his daughter, is an eccentric individual, who always wears, both summer and winter, a heavy overcoat with a muffler enveloping his face. He has lived for years on a mess composed of bread, molasses, vinegar and fat pork, all mixed up in a large bowl. In his confinement he demands and receives, by the consideration of the jailer, this impressive dish; and he also continues to wear the overcoat and muffler. He amuses himself by sitting in one corner of his cell and picking his clothes to pieces; and, altogether, for a promising plea of insanity, a prettier case is seldom heard of.

THE British Co-operative Associations make a very fair showing for the time they have been in existence. They now number about 700 working societies. There is $17,000,000 invested by the wages class alone. There are not less than 10,500 benefit societies, with a membership of 1,500,000. The reserved capital is over $125,000,000. Two-thirds of this amount is the savings of the wages-earning class, the balance being the accumulations of the small shopkeepers. These latter generally monopolize the directories of the friendly societies. The progress made in co-operation during the past few years is very marked, and is now exciting the jealousy of the small shopkeepers, especially in the large cities.

THE asphaltum pavements, which were being extensively laid in London six years ago, have been mostly taken up in the business section, and wood pavements are substituted. The greater portion of the Strand, it is said, is now laid in wood, and various other thoroughfares are being similarly treated, as also some of the suburban streets. A bed of asphaltum is at first laid and allowed to harden, and on this the blocks are laid; they are of hard, seasoned wood and are first kyanized. After being thus laid, coal tar is poured into all the crevices, and, when open for travel, the pavement has a solid and enduring appearance. It has been in use for a couple of years in the neighborhood of Charing Cross, and it is said to be as solid and perfect as when first laid. The asphaltum, however, producing slipperiness, had to be removed.

THE Emperor of China is allowed three wives, the chief of whom is the Empress, while the other two are Queens. He has the right, under certain restrictions, of choosing his own successor. When the Emperor Hien Fung died, in 1861, he left the throne to his son Toung-che, who was only 5 years old. The Empress and the boy's mother, one of the two Queens, were made co-regents. They reigned very successfully until 1873, when Toung-che took the Government into his own hands, and removed them from power. In 1875 he died of small-pox, without naming a successor. His wife was a feeble girl, with a young baby, for whose rights she had not the strength of character to fight. She soon died, and the old Empress and Queen seized the opportunity to get back upon the throne. They chose a 3-year-old nephew of Hien Fung, and appointed themselves to reign until he became a man. The scheme was carried out, and the two women are now seemingly firmly re-established. Among the first statesman of the empire was Wo Ko-tu, at the head of the Civil Service Department. He brooded over the wrong done to the infant son of Toung-che, and at last resolved to speak out against it. This was a serious matter, for ancient usage in China decrees that whoever utters treason shall at once commit suicide. Wo Ko-tu wrote and published, in the most respectful language, a demand that the Empress and Queen should abdicate. Then he killed himself with a knife.

INDIANA NEWS.

Preaching Appointments for Next Year.

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

Indianapolis District.—J. S. Woods, Presiding Elder. Meridian Street, W. C. Webb; California Street, T. G. Beharrell; Ames Church, J. V. R. Miller; Blackford Street, W. Megennis; Putnamville, M. Woods; Mourovia, J. V. Moore; Mooreville, H. Hays; Brooklyn, J. Wharton; Green Castle, Locust Street, W. H. Grim; Waverly, C. W. Woods; Martinsville, H. J. Talbott; Morgantown, J. D. Crane; Bellville, A. F. Briggs; West Newton, C. Lee.

Bloomington District.—T. D. Welker, P. E. Bloomington, J. W. Webb; Bloomington Circuit, supplied by G. N. Puett; Gosport, F. A. Eller; Spencer, J. W. Culmer; Worthington, L. S. Knotts; Bloomfield, R. B. Martin; Newark, John Laverty; Linton, T. W. Jones; Pleasantville, John Bruner; Ellettsville, S. C. Kennedy; Bowling Green, supplied by J. McLaughlin; Center Point, J. M. Baxter; Lockport, supplied by John T. Smith; Harrodsburg, J. L. Cooper; Lancaster, A. R. Julian. H. B. Hibben, Chaplain of the United States army.

Vincennes District.—B. F. Rawlins, P. E.; Vincennes, F. A. Friedley; Bruceville, T. H. Willis; Carlisle, E. Gaskins; Sullivan, J. A. Ward; New Lebanon, F. A. Hutcherson; Graysville, G. W. Stafford; Ascension, J. F. Sinclair; Prairieton, W. E. Davis; Washington, W. M. Hester; Washington Circuit, R. A. Kemp; Alfordsville, S. O. Dorsey; Wheatland, J. M. Harbin; Symser, W. H. Cornelius; Freelandsville, M. Rose; Deckertown, J. H. Maddox.

Evansville District.—J. E. Brant, P. E.; Trinity, F. Iglehart; Kingsley, J. N. Thompson; Ingle Street, J. A. Scammahorn; Pennsylvania Street and ridge, Wm. Telfer; Mt. Vernon, M. M. C. Hobbs; Mt. Vernon Circuit, B. Carter; Newburgh, G. H. Heavenridge; Blue Grass, T. C. Danks; Fort Branch, John Tansy; Oakland City, J. M. Hilliard; Owensville, W. T. Davis; Pakota, E. Hawes; Princeton, W. M. Zarring; New Harmony, G. F. Culmer; Springfield, J. W. Kincaid; West Franklin, Joseph Rawlins.

Rockport District.—A. Turner, P. E. Rockport, John Poucher; Rockport Circuit, D. T. Davis; Boonville, H. N. King; Center, W. H. Davidson. Lynnville, Dayton Harvey; Augusta, supplied by Geo. Whitman; Yankeetown, F. A. Lester; Taylorsville, B. F. Julian; Petersburg, J. W. Julian; Union, J. McGregor; Atwell, A. A. Godley; Huntingburg, J. T. Woods; Gentryville, W. F. F. Smith; Grandview, W. W. Ramsey; Troy, S. W. Troyer; Cannelton, W. B. Collins; Rome, supplied by J. Turner; Newtonville, J. F. Woodruff; Oil Creek, L. E. Mann.

New Albany District.—John Kiger, P. E.; Wesley Chapel, J. L. Pitner; Centenary, G. D. Watson; John Street, E. T. Curnick; Main Street, S. W. McNaughton; New Albany Circuit, F. Walker; Lanesville, G. W. Fansler; Elizabeth, J. B. Holloway; Corydon, N. V. Moore; Mauckport, W. H. Davidson; Hardinsburg, to be supplied; Marengo, supplied by F. M. Hedden; Fredericksburg, Walter Underwood; Salem, J. W. Asbury; Leavenworth, J. H. Reed; Greenville, J. M. Watson; New Philadelphia, supplied by A. N. Etrod; Little York, to be supplied; N. E. Boring, Chaplain to State Prison South; W. R. Halsted, President De Pauw College.

Mitchell District.—John Walls, P. E. Mitchell, J. H. Ketcham; Bedford, W. W. Webb; Springfield, L. Johnson; Paoli, M. H. Heavenridge; Orleans, John Spears; Erie, E. P. F. Wells; Tunnelton, J. T. Allen; Shoals, J. B. Hamilton; Loogootee, H. J. Barr; Dover Hill, D. Morden; French Lick, supplied by W. W. Rundell; Clark's Prairie, J. W. Payne; Wickliffe, O. H. Taney; Bartlettsville, supplied by G. Payne; Campbellsburg, H. O. Chapman; Rush Creek, Robert J. Easly; Orangeville, W. H. Wright.

NORTHWEST INDIANA CONFERENCE.

Lafayette District.—A. A. Gee, P. E. Lafayette Trinity, J. Stephens; Ninth Street, J. W. T. McMullen; Congress street and Chauncy, A. Kummer; Wea, to be supplied; Shawnee Mound, H. A. Merrill; Newton D. Handley; Attica, J. C. Reed; Williamsport, H. N. Ogden; West Lebanon, T. Mason; Marshfield, Wm. Buck; State Line, J. B. Combs; Pine Village, R. B. Beatty; Montmorency, T. B. McManis; Oxford and Templeton, C. B. Mock; Boswell, to be supplied; Lafayette Circuit, W. Crapp; Battle Ground, C. E. Lewis; Brookston, to be supplied. C. E. Lambert, professor in Willamette University, member of Salem (Ore.) Quarterly Conference; L. Taylor, agent Preachers' Aid Society, and member of Congress Street and Chauncy Quarterly Conference; B. W. Smith, agent Indiana Asbury University, and member of Trinity Quarterly Conference.

Frankfort District.—S. Beck, P. E.; Frankfort, Wm. Graham; Michigantown, J. M. Stafford; Burlington, A. Lewis; Rossville, S. B. Town; Bringhurst, T. F. Drake; Camden, J. A. Cullen; Delphi, W. H. Hickman; Pittsburg, J. C. Martin; Transitville, to be supplied; Dayton, to be supplied; Romney, E. W. Lawhon; Stockwell, J. L. Boyd; Colfax, E. A. Andrew and J. Matthews, supernumerary; Thorntown, L. C. Buckles; Lebanon, F. M. Pavey; Lebanon Circuit, E. Mason; Whitestown, H. F. Whitcett; Zionsville, J. E. Newhouse; A. Wood, moral instructor Soldiers' Home, Knightstown, Ind., and member of Thorntown Quarterly Conference.

Greencastle District.—College Avenue, I. W. Joyce; Bainbridge, W. A. Smith; Ladoga, J. H. Siddall; Morton, to be supplied; Clermont, D. W. Risher; Pittsboro, I. P. Patch; Jamestown, W. F. Clark; Mace, E. R. Johnson; Crawfordsville, J. W. Greene; Crawfordsville Circuit, J. E. Steele; Yountsville, W. W. Jones; Pleasant Hill, J. Harrison; Hillsboro, C. B. Heath; Covington, J. W. Harris; Plainfield, N. Greene; Danville, J. H. Claypool; Coatsville, Jesse Hill; Carbon, to be supplied. P. Wiley, Professor Indiana Asbury University, W. C. Davison, T. Wakiyama, K. Kosaka, missionaries to Japan, all members of College Avenue Quarterly Conference, Greencastle; T. B. Wood and J. R. Wood, missionaries to South America and members of Crawfordsville Quarterly Conference.

Terre Haute District.—C. A. Brooke, P. E. Terre Haute—Asbury, W. McK. Darwood; Centenary, J. N. Beard; Montrose and Third Streets, to be supplied; Sandford, J. H. Hollingsworth; Clinton, J. E. Wright; Summit Grove, J. F. McDaniel; Newport, M. L. Green; Perrysville, I. Dale; Terre Haute Circuit, D. S. Morrison; Catlin, J. B. DeMotte; Rockville, T. Meredith; Bellmore, T. C. Webster; Annapolis and Montezuma, D. P. McClain; Harveysburg, S. M. Hays; Waveland, J. Johnson; Russellville, H. C. Neal; Brazil, W. R. Mikels; Harmony and Knightsville, T. M. Guild.

La Porte District.—J. H. Cissel, P. E.; La Porte, H. A. Chamberlain; La Porte Circuit, T. C. Stringer; Door Village, G. R. Streeter; Westville, D. M. Wood; Union Mills, J. T. Stafford; Rolling Prairie, H. M. Middleton; New Carlisle, W. P. McKinsey; South Bend, First Church, H. A. Gobin; Michigan Street, R. D. Utter; North Liberty, O. R. Beebe; Walkerton, R. H. Sanders; Plymouth, G. W. Bower; North Judson, J. M. Jackson; Argos, R. B. Wooden; Rochester, F. M. Bale; Kewana, E. H. Bruner; Marmont, W. R. Mahaffie; Winamac and Star City, A. J. Clifton; Logansport Circuit, F. Cox.

Valparaiso District.—S. Godfrey, P. E. Valparaiso, N. L. Brakeman; Michigan City, G. M. Boyd; Chesterton, J. B. Smith; Wheeler and Hobart, G. J. Vaught; Crown Point, O. C. Haskell; Lowell, Henry Venell; Hebron, L. S. Buckels; Kouts, supernumerary by G. W. Wesselius; Medaryville, J. J. Thompson; Rensselaer, A. W. Wood; Beaver Lake, supernumerary by S. B. Shaw; Morocco, to be supplied; Brooks, H. B. Ball; Bradford, W. Hall; Wolcott, J. N. Harmon; Goodland and Remington, J. A. Clearwaters; Kentland and Brook, W. G. Vessels; Fowler and Earl Park, D. G. Le Sourd; Monticello, C. S. Burgner; Burnettsville, R. H. Calvert.

State Items.

JOSEPH V. HILL, an old Indiana pioneer, died recently at Vincennes.

THE Grand Lodge of Colored Masons, in session last week at the capital, elected Charles E. Bailey Grand Master.

A NEW shoe-peg factory will be started at Richmond in a few weeks. It already has orders for 100,000 bushels of pegs to be delivered inside of a year.

THE large ice-house at Cambridge City, owned by the Talmage Ice Company, was totally destroyed by fire the other night. Loss about $5,200.

A VICTIM of whisky at Richmond applied to the town trustee the other day, and asked that officer to issue an order forbidding saloon-keepers from selling him strong drink.

GEO. W. HELM, living two miles east of Edwardsport, while going home under the influence of whisky, fell under a passing freight train and was instantly killed.

JACOB STEINBERG, of Lafayette, was handling a revolver, when the weapon went off, the ball striking Airon Hulj-kriffer in the right breast, inflicting a probably fatal wound.

A DIRECTOR of the State Prison South states that every convict in the prison is now employed—495 to contractors, and the balance by the State on the new building now being erected, and that the prison is now self-supporting.

THE State surveying party have discovered up to date over 35,000 acres of land belonging to the State, some of which is among the most valuable in the State. A number of parties are awaiting a chance to make purchases as soon as the lands are put in the market.

A WONDERFUL cave has just been discovered near Palmyra, Harrison county, and explored to a great distance. It has many grand chambers, towering ceilings, singularly-shaped apartments, stalactites, stalagmites, etc. Prof. Goss, of Floyd county, is the discoverer of this subterranean wonder.

A NEW disease has broken out among the horses in Shelby county, and several have died. When they are attacked the body becomes stiff, the joints are rigid and the muscles relax, the animals fall, and in most cases die. So far it has baffled all treatment. One man has had five sick at one time.

A SHOCKING accident and death occurred in Jackson township, Shelby county, a few days ago. Mrs. William Mitchell, during the absence of the household, took an epileptic fit and fell into an open fire-place. When discovered her eyes were burned out, and her body was burned to a crisp. About a year ago, while in a fit, she fell upon her infant child, killing it instantly.

JUDGE JOSEPH RISTINE died last week in Fountain county. Judge Ristine, at the time of his death, was Trustee of the State Blind Asylum. He had also served one term as Auditor of State, from 1862 to 1864, but was defeated for re-election. He was elected Judge of the Probate Court in 1868, and held the office until it was abolished by legislative enactment. Mr. Ristine was 71 years of age, and, to within a short period of his death, was mentally and physically vigorous.

A YOUNG man named Thompson, living near the Shelby county line, committed suicide last week by forcing his body through a sixteen-inch opening in an unused well, and then suffocating himself by placing his face in the water, leaning over his knees for that purpose. He had been paying attentions to a widow, Mrs. Hannah Norvell, and because he got drunk just before the marriage day she sent him off. For this he killed himself. He was 30 years old, and not an intemperate man, it is said.

Tortoise Shell.

Think of the following, ladies, when you handle your tortoise-shell combs: What is called the tortoise shell is not, as is generally supposed, the bony covering or shield of the turtle, but only the scales which cover it. These are thirteen in number; eight of them flat and five a little curved. Of the flat ones four are large, being sometimes one foot long and seven inches wide, semi-transparent, elegantly variegated with white, red, yellow, and dark brown clouds, which are fully brought out when the shell is prepared and polished. The laminæ, as we have said, constitute the external coating of the solid or bony part of the shell, and a large turtle affords about eight pounds of them, the plates varying from an eighth to a quarter of an inch in thickness. The fishers do not kill the turtles; did they do so, they would in a few years exterminate them. When a turtle is caught they fasten him, and cover his back with dry leaves or grass, to which they set fire. The heat causes the plates to separate at their joints; a large knife is then carefully inserted horizontally beneath them, and the laminæ lifted from the back—care being taken not to injure the shell by too much heat, nor to force it off until heat has fully prepared it for separation. Many turtles die under this cruel operation; but instances are numerous in which they have been caught a second time, with the outer coating reproduced. But, in these cases, instead of thirteen pieces, it is a single piece.

REPUBLICANISM ARRAIGNED.

SPEECH OF

HON. DANIEL W. VOORHEES,

At Hamilton, Ohio.

You all heard the furious outcry of the Republican press on the subject of the recent extra session of Congress. There was a simultaneous, prolonged, agonized, hysterical scream from Republican sources all over the country against the Democratic party, because we asserted our faith in the capacity of the people to govern themselves, and our determination that they should do so without let or hindrance from military power. This was the head and front of our offending, no more and no less. We were true, absolutely true, to the bed-rock principles of the constitution, while the leaders of the Republican party, as all the world knows, proclaimed on the floor of both branches of Congress doctrines so subversive of the very life of civil liberty that the Tories of the Revolution would have been ashamed to own them. Does this sound to some of you as an exaggerated statement made merely for political effect? If so, let us examine for a few moments the extent to which the Federal Government has already arrogated to itself the right by law to seize upon every species of local elections, control them by force, and manufacture majorities out of minorities. Are you aware that there is now a law of Congress, enacted by the Republican party, in full force at this hour, which asserts the control of the Federal Government and the jurisdiction of the United States courts over every election of every description that can possibly occur in any State or Territory, in any district, county, city, parish, township, school district, municipality, or other territorial subdivision, if any other can be found? Such is the fact. Federal power has clutched control of every voting precinct in the States and Territories. In proof of this allow me to read in your hearing section 5,5 6 of the Revised Statutes of the United States:

> Every person who, by any unlawful means, hinders, delays, prevents or obstructs, or combines and confederates with others to hinder, delay, prevent or obstruct, any citizen doing any act required to be done to qualify him to vote, or from voting in any State, Territory or district, county, city, parish, township, school district, municipality or other territorial subdivision, shall be fined not less than $500, or be imprisoned not less than one month, nor more than one year, or be punished by both such fine and imprisonment.

What kind of an election escapes the provision of this section?

It has been asserted over and over again, in Congress and elsewhere, by the Republican leaders and newspapers, that the power of the Federal Government has been applied only at times and places where members and delegates in Congress were chosen. This is all false, as the section just read conclusively proves. If you were holding an election for Mayor of this city, or for Councilmen in its various wards, and one person should by any unlawful means, such, for instance, as a quarrel on the street, hinder or delay another in voting, the person so offending is, by express terms of this section, made liable to a fine of not less than $500, or to imprisonment not less than one month nor more than one year, or to both such fine and imprisonment. If you were engaged in electing a Clerk, an Auditor, or Sheriff, or any other county officer of Butler county, the same insolent interference by the Federal Government is provided for by this law. You are not free from its aggressive and inquisitive power, even in the humblest details of your local affairs. In the language of the law itself, an election in a township or a school district is subject to the domination of Federal rule, Federal Marshals, Federal arrests and the monstrous and disproportionate punishments of Federal courts. Are you in favor of this law? Are you so poor and contemptible in your own view of yourselves that you feel the need of the restraining and penal influences of such an enactment as this? Are you willing to admit that you can not trust yourselves; that you cannot even elect the Justices of the Peace, or the trustees of your townships, or the officers of your school districts unless the supervision and threatening authority of the Federal Government is extended over you? Have the American people, in fact, sunk so low as this? Have the people of Ohio consented to this servile doctrine? The leaders of the Republican party say you have; Charles Foster says you have; John Sherman says you have. They say that this usurpation against local self-government shall stand; that this legislative insult to you, this enactment of distrust of your virtue and intelligence, shall remain permanently in the statutes of your country. I say it ought to be repealed, expunged, torn from the pages of the law with every circumstance of indignation and abhorrence. What do you say? Do you believe in yourselves, or do you want a master?

That is the exact issue. It is a very old one, and yet it sounds new in our times. Those of you who think you are not competent to manage your local affairs, unless the club of the Federal Government is wielded over your heads by United States Marshals, District Attorneys, and partisan Judges on the Federal bench, will, of course, and with entire consistency, vote the Republican ticket—vote for Foster, who has the same opinion of you that you have of yourselves. Who do you suppose would vote with you if they were here? Every Tory of the Revolution. Not one of them believed in the natural rights of man to govern himself without a master. The odious Lord North, Prime Minister to George III., would be a stalwart Republican in this contest, and the old imbecile King himself, if alive and a citizen of Ohio, would, on the well-known principles of his long and tyrannical reign, be for Foster, and a strong centralized Government. If you could resurrect from their infamous graves all those who sided with Great Britain against the principles of Jefferson in the days of the Revolution, not one would fail to sustain the high prerogative of the Government in stamping out local and popular sovereignty. If every perfidious Stuart who ever sat upon the Scottish or English throne could be exhumed to-day, they would, on this issue, zealously support the Republican party. All such, in all ages, as have disbelieved in human freedom, and individual responsibility; all the blood-stained monsters who have cursed the earth with war to crush the aspirations of the people for home rule and civil liberty, would, if here, contribute to the campaign fund of the Republican party, subscribe for its newspapers and vote for its candidates. All this and more would follow in the logical order of things. It was reported not long ago that a very rich man of New York, by the name of Jay Gould, blurted out his willingness and desire to pay millions for a Government of high centralized powers; a Government not dependent upon the popular will; a Government which would govern, coerce and hold in subjection the people, instead of allowing them, according to the constitution of their fathers, to govern themselves. This was simply a somewhat indiscreet but very accurate proclamation of the spirit and purposes of the Republican party. It has the sanction of all such leaders of that party as are without faith in man's capacity and right to govern himself; of all such as are rich and prosperous, and desire no possibility of a change; of all retired capitalists, whose investments are eating up the mortgaged lands and labor of the people, like incurable cancers wrecking the human body.

There was a hard struggle at the very beginning of our Government over this very question. There was a party then very formidable in talents, and very considerable in numbers, which had no faith in the people, and boldly declared its infidelity to popular institutions. The Republican party, with its Supervisors, its Marshals, its Commissioners, its spies, its Federal courts, and its deep distrust of the American people everywhere, in township, county and State, is the revival of the old despotic Federal party under a different name, but with similar ideas. The circle is almost complete, and the enemies of free government in this country have almost reached the point at which they began their nefarious schemes nearly a hundred years ago. We more frequently see and hear Alexander Hamilton now quoted as an acceptable authority on the principles of government than ever before. If he could arise from his premature and bloody grave to-day he would have a following such as he never had in his lifetime. How refreshing his doctrines would now be to Jay Gould, Charles Foster and John Sherman! They are all afraid to trust the people. Hamilton was a delegate from the State of New York to the Constitutional Convention at Philadelphia in 1787. He drew up the plan of a constitution in all its details and presented it to the convention. By its provisions the Chief Executive of the United States, by whatever title known, was to hold office for life. How regal and permanent that sounds! Nine-tenths of the holders of interest-bearing Government securities, national bankers and capitalists, out of trade generally, will indorse that position now—not all of them openly—rather than risk their investments to a change of administration. They are fixed comfortably, and what they want is permanency. They are on top, and they want to stay there. They have the advantage of the millions below them, and they want to keep it. By the plan presented by Hamilton the Senators were also to hold office for life. This was intended to create an aristocracy in the management of the Government similar to the House of Lords in England. As to the States, and the people of the States, they were to be trusted with nothing. The National Executive Committee, with the President, was to appoint the Governors of the various States; the Legislatures of the States were to be permitted to enact laws, subject, however, to revision and entire repeal by Congress; and all the courts of the State, "for the determination of all matters of general concern," were to be created by act of Congress. And even this vast scheme of consolidation fell short of the wishes of Hamilton and his followers, as it does now, perhaps, of the more advanced and stalwart leaders of the Republican party. Hamilton boldly stated that it by no means came up to his conception of a model Government. In discussing the proper executive head of a Government he said: "The English model is the only good one on this subject. The hereditary interest of the King were so interwoven with those of the nation, and his personal emoluments so great, that he was placed above the danger of being corrupted from abroad, and at the same time was sufficiently independent and sufficiently controlled to answer the purpose of the institution at home." In presenting his draft of a constitution, he also said, speaking of the American Senate, that it should be on the same model as the House of Lords in England, and that no temporary Senate would have "firmness to carry out its proper functions."

These principles of Alexander Hamilton, and of the Federal party at the formation of our Government, show the fountain from which have descended the principles of the so-called Republican party of our times; principles monarchical in their tendencies, repugnant to the self-respect of the people, offensive to every sentiment of manhood, and in opposition to the spirit and the letter of the constitution. I have heretofore foretold some things in the political world which have come to pass. I predict now that the coming issue in the near future is to be between the broad principles of Jefferson on the one hand, and the monarchical doctrines of Hamilton on the other; the latter supported by all the monopolies, banks and hoarded interest-gathering wealth in the land. Jefferson announced that he who feared to trust the people was a Tory by nature. That was his mode of describing an enemy to free government, and we are rapidly finding out now who are Tories, or enemies of free government, by the same rule.

The leaders of the Republican party insist that you ought to surrender the principle of self-government, and of free elections in the North, in order that the bayonet may be used, according to the forms of law, at the polls in the South. For every piece of wicked and villainous legislation, inspired by the hearts of designing men, who believed in despotism and not in the people, the South is held up and railed at as an all-sufficient cause. If the people are to be shorn of their most sacred rights; curtailed of their freedom, and insulted in their homes, you are told that something in the South imperatively demands it. If, indeed, it was true that to govern the South we had to give up the constitution, deprive ourselves and our posterity of its protection, our condition would be most deplorable; but I deny that any such necessity exists. We cannot, nor are we called on to, govern one part of this country one way and the other part another way. A Southern State is in this Union exactly as Ohio is. Whenever distinctions are made between States, or the people of States, the Union and the constitution are both destroyed. But you are told by the great political Pharisees of the times that the people of the different Southern States are not conducting themselves properly on certain subjects, and therefore you should cast away your own liberties in order to regulate by force their domestic affairs. You are also stimulated to this course by a constant stream of slander poured out on an entirely helpless and submissive people, a people who have submitted to every constitutional amendment, and to every other condition of reconstruction which the Government has imposed upon them. It is to the interest of the Republican party to slander them. Every fault they have is not only set down in malice and conned by rote, but it is magnified and multiplied by all the lens power of party machinery. An actual offense against the laws in the South, such as have happened every day and every hour since the human race began, is a sweet morsel, a delicious item, a savory paragraph, over which the Republican editor rubs his hands in keen enjoyment. A thousand murders may and do occur in the Northern States, but how flat and insipid they appear when dished up in our morning papers at breakfast in comparison with any act of crime, however commonplace its motive, that comes to us, hot and sensational, upon the breezes of the South! You live in a law-abiding State, as much so as any other in the Union, and more so than some of the loud-pretending States of New England; yet I doubt if there is a county in Ohio in which blood has not been unlawfully shed in the last twelve months. The same may be said of the great State of Indiana, and perhaps of every other Northern State. Crime is inherent in the heart of man, and it prevails everywhere. It is without quarantine. It penetrates every latitude, every longitude, and every climate. I hold that the people of the North, and the people of the South, on the average of conduct and motive, are neither better nor worse than each other; and, in this opinion, the statistics of crime, in proportion to population, will amply sustain me. The trouble, however, is that the leaders and newspapers of a powerful party in the North are deeply interested in making you believe the Southern people are worse than they are. When actual offenses do not occur frequently enough to answer the purposes of an approaching election, fictitious ones are manufactured for the occasion. Recently two prominent Democrats in Mississippi, both candidates for office, became involved in trouble and Mr. Dixon was shot and killed by Mr. Barksdale. This is a deplorable event, and I sincerely hope that the survivor will be punished, if he took the life of his adversary without cause. But is a homicide of this kind so great a novelty to the Northern mind that we are to be thrown into convulsions on its account? About three-quarters of a century ago there was a very noted homicide in the streets of Boston. It grew out of a political quarrel in which Mr. Selfridge, a Federalist, killed Mr. Austin, a Democrat, and from that time to this more than twice ten thousand cases of killing have been occasioned in the Northern States alone by political feeling and animosity. There is hardly a man in my presence who can not recall one in his own recollection. Yet such events have caused but brief comment, for the reason that heretofore no political party has been so debased as to thrive on crime, fatten on murder, and hence been interested in proclaiming its prevalence where it did exist, and in forging its calendar where it did not. But a few days since I saw in a leading Republican paper of your State the following jubilant announcement: "The best Republican speech of the campaign thus far—the shooting of Dixon, in Mississippi." That editor wants any number more such Republican speeches made in this and subsequent campaigns. He wants more killings to take place in the Southern States. It matters not on what provocation a man is killed south of the Potomac and the Ohio rivers, every such item will be so much party capital to that editor; he will make suicide from financial embarrassment a political murder. And when actual murder runs short he will supply the political market; he will meet the demand; he will kill them himself; he will transform himself into a monster of murder on paper, for the sake of party success at the approaching elections. I once heard it said that in whatever direction a man's interests lay there you ought to look for his tracks. This is certainly a safe rule by which to judge a political party. The Republican party is the only party on earth whose interests are advanced by riot, violence, disorder, resistance to law, bloodshed, and murder in the South, and I therefore charge that now, as heretofore, in the supremacy of [illegible] every plan, scheme, prayer, hope, and purpose of that party is on the side of lawlessness and crime in the South; on the side of their own manifest gain, if they can thus inflame the Northern mind. Would you believe a witness under oath in one of your courts on a question of contractor damage, if he was as much interested on one side of the case as the Republican leaders and newspapers are in making you believe that the people of the South are a horde of savages, who need military force constantly at their throats? I do not think you would.

John Sherman and the Democrats.

In his speeches in Ohio, John Sherman, not content with revamping the old stuff, distinctly charged that the Democrats, after starting out well in the Forty-fourth Congress, had latterly increased the appropriations, while he and his associates were engaged in reducing expenditures.

There is no possible excuse for this falsification of the record. A comparison of the appropriations for the same objects, taking the last four years of Republican ascendency in Congress, with the four past years when the Democrats had possession of the House of Representatives, will effectually expose this misrepresentation. Here are the figures, taken from the statutes at large:

FOUR YEARS OF REPUBLICAN CONGRESS.

1873—Regular appropriations for support of Government	$180,[illegible],174.10
1874	18[illegible],798.04
1875	184,304,767.06
1876	177,870,[illegible].51
Total	$731,0[illegible]

The Democrats came into a majority in the House in the Forty-fourth Congress, but in accordance with law the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1876, had already been made. Therefore they began with that of 1877, as follows:

FOUR YEARS OF DEMOCRATIC HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

1877—Regular appropriation for support of Government	$154,090,942.58
1878	153,544,745.56
1879	16[illegible],750.59
1880	160,919,095.53
Total	$[illegible]

RECAPITULATION.

Four years Republican Congress	$731,0[illegible]
Four years Democratic House	[illegible]
Excess in favor of Democrats	$109,161,349.54

There was an appropriation of $26,867,200 for arrears of pension made for 1880 which is not included in the foregoing, because it was an exceptional item and had no connection with the regular expenditures. It is thus seen that the difference between the four last fiscal years under the Democratic House and the four preceding years under Republican Congresses exceeded $102,000,000—a retrenchment of more than $25,500,000 a year. The appropriations for the years 1879 and 1880 are larger than those for 1877 and 1878 by several millions; but this difference is partially explained by the wiping out of old deficiencies in the navy and other branches of the public service that the Republicans had bequeathed us legacies, by the payment of the fishery award for $5,500,000, and by other items.

While this record is creditable to the Democrats, as far as it goes, it might have been far better. They have not gone to the root of the evil by any means, either in the civil branches or in the army and navy, and they will deserve to be held to account, if, with both branches of Congress, they fail to make a thorough retrenchment in the public expenditures.

The increase in the cost of carrying on the Government has been out of all proportion to the increase of population. In 1860 the civil and miscellaneous expenses were about $28,000,000 in round numbers. In 1876, the last year of complete Republican rule in Congress, they were $73,000,000. In 1867, at the beginning of reconstruction, when the Republicans had full swing, the cost of the United States courts was $1,629,536 for Marshals, District Attorneys, United States Commissioners, Clerks of Courts and miscellaneous expenses. In 1878 the cost reached $2,870,754 for the same service, except that the Marshals under the Davenport law for carrying elections had risen from $1,208,214.74 in 1867 to $1,931,244 in 1878.

This extravagance, this plunder of the people's taxes, is found wherever the surface is scratched. It is organized plunder protected by law, and the party which tolerates it, votes for it by indirection, or refuses to abolish it, deserves to go under in defeat and disgrace, whether it be called the Democratic or the Republican party.

Not a Woman's Horse.

A well-known Bostonian was trying a horse one day, in company with the owner, a professional "jockey." Having driven him a mile or two, the gentleman, who noticed that he pulled pretty hard and showed a good deal of spirit, requiring constant watching and a steady rein, said, "Do you think that is just the horse for a woman to drive?" "Well, sir," answered the jockey, "I must say that I shouldn't want to marry the woman that could drive that horse."

Rats.

A pair of rats produce, as a rule, thirteen litters of eight young ones each in three years, and the young ones do the same after becoming 6 months old. The grand total from a single pair at the end of three years is 656,808. Rats have migrated to all parts of the world. They are found eating turtle on the Island of Ascension. They have reached India, China, and abound in Japan.

A CURIOUS happy family is now amusing the Russians at the Zoological Garden of St. Petersburg. There are in a large cage two young lions, two young bears, and two large dogs. The members of this family live in perfect peace, playing heartily together. It is proposed to add to the family a pair of young hyenas and a couple of young wolves. The managers hold that the peace of the happy family will remain undisturbed, even after it is thus enlarged.

IN the middle week of August England had seventeen hours and a half of sunshine.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, OCT. 2, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

The Fort Wayne Sentinel has a daily circulation of 4000 copies.

Hon. T. A. Hendricks speaks at Tiffin, Ohio, to-day. How we would love to hear him.

* * *

The grand "blow-out" in honor of Hayes and party takes place at Indianapolis to-day.

* * *

The "Fair Extra" issued by Bro. Rerrick of the Lagrange Standard, indicates enterprise and prosperity.

* * *

The Kelly movement in New York will be offset to some extent by the anti-Cornell movement among the republicans.

* * *

A little effort on the part of the Ft. Wayne daily Sentinel, might secure a handsome list along the Saginaw road, for delivery in the evening.

* * *

To-morrow Grant will attend the Santa Clara Valley agricultural fair, and will open his presidential campaign in the latest improved style.

* * *

According to the Fort Wayne News 40,000 people visited the fair last week, and according to reports from other sources, the Fort Wayne fair was a fizzle—a snide.

* * *

Senator McDonald has just returned from Ohio, where he has been making democratic speeches, and gives it as his opinion that the democrats have the decided advantage now, though they did not have ten days ago.

* * *

The season of strikes has arrived again. In Cincinnati about 2000 cabinet makers, coopers and shoemakers are demanding an increase of 15 per cent on the present wages. Some of the eastern cities are also having trouble.

* * *

The St. Louis Times-Journal and the Kansas City Times are advocating with great zeal and ability, Gov. Hendricks' nomination to the presidency.—Fort Wayne Sentinel.

To the great shame of Indiana newspapers that are too timid to do likewise.

* * *

The Valparaiso Messenger presents the name of Hon. T. J. Merrifield of that city, as a candidate for supreme judge to succeed Hon. Horace P. Biddle. Three other prominent democrats have been named in connection with the same position, viz. Judge E. V. Long, of Warsaw, Capt. Mitchell, of Goshen, and Judge Ross, of Logansport.

* * *

The Fort Wayne Sentinel, after naming the favorites for president and governor, as indicated by a number of its democratic exchanges, says: "About three-fourths of our exchanges have no politics, or else don't know what they are." It failed to mention that the COURIER is the "red-hottest" Hendricks paper in the state.

* * *

The treasury department has decided to recoin the foreign gold coin received at the New York assay office into $5 and $10. pieces, in order to meet the demand upon the treasury for small coin. In recoining foreign gold nothing less than $5 pieces will be turned out, as it is desired to get as large a number of standard silver dollars as possible into circulation.

* * *

Thee Washington Post aptly suggests concerning Hayes, that "there isn't a bull, which the fraudulent executive inspects in his visits to the rural fairs, that hasn't a higher sense of honor and does'nt stand higher in the estimation of honest men, nor a pumpkin that does'nt give shelter to more originality than the sickly, shambling, sentimental cut-purse of the American Republic who signs himself 'President'."

* * *

Mr. R. M. Lockhart, general superintendent of the state fair has incurred the illwill of the Indianapolis germans by refusing to allow beer to be sold on the grounds during the fair. The brewers, butchers and gardeners refuse to participate in the grand parade, and Lockhart is dubbed a "prejudiced blockhead" for thus jeopardizing the reputation of the city. Lockhart will will probably survive the shock.

* * *

Next Tuesday will decide the fate of Ewing and Foster in Ohio. There is no telling which will carry the state until after the ballots are counted out, each party claims a majority. The total vote is large, and so equally divided between the two leading parties, that it is impossible to calculate the results. The democrats hope to carry both the state ticket and the legislature, but we will not be surprised to see them lose the former.

* * *

A destructive fire broke out at Deadwood, D. T. on the morning of the 26th ult., and destroyed nearly the entire city. All along its course terrific explosions of gunpowder, petroleum, liquor etc. were of frequent occurrence, blowing many buildings into atoms. The wildest excitement prevailed, and the people thought of saving nothing but their lives. 2000 people are left homeless, and many destitute. Loss estimated at from one and a half to two millions.

If the self-proclaimed friends of Tom Hendricks had half the nerve, grit and energy, that the friends of presidential candidates of other states seem to possess, he would be far in the lead to-day. A little less hollow friendship and a good deal more earnest work, will have the effect to present next year, for the suffrages of the people, a candidate whose honesty, ability and availability will not be questioned. A little more unity of action and a little less toadying to outside influences, will accomplish a good deal for the man who has fought for Indiana.

* * *

The Cherubusco Herald speaks creditably of the re-union here, makes its criticisms, gives Col. McDonald a stab for saying something about Mosby, the guerrilla chief, but has no word of censure for Stratton, who attacked the confederate brigadiers. While Mosby was hanging up Union soldiers, and mutilating their bodies in a most barbarous manner, the brigadiers were fighting in a courageous, manly way. Mosby is now in high place under republican administration, while the brigadiers are cursed because they desire to stop the wanton extravagance and corruption of the republican party.

* * *

The copy of the Warsaw Union received by us last week, was so pale that we were only able to recognize two COURIER editorals without credit. Keep your eye on the eighth commandment, Bro. Zimmerman.—Auburn Courier.

The above shows that honesty is the best policy. The two "Courier editorials" we had in our drawer fully one week before they appeared in the Courier. We confess to the violation of the eighth commandment, but cannot account for the similarity of language in the Courier editorials and our eastern exchange. What's the damage, Bro. Reed?—Warsaw Union.

Did your "eastern exchange" say anything about swindlers in Allen and Wells counties? Did it say anything about what kind of tickets are be used in voting upon the constitutional amendments in Indiana? Your graceful confession of the violation of the eighth commandment loses its effect by an immediate violation of the ninth. Place your own estimate on the damages.

* * *

Gen. Grant's manner of addressing ex-confederate soldiers, is quite different from that of the average home-guard republican, and radical northern disorganizer. Here is what he said to the ex-confederate soldiers at City Hall in San Francisco on the 23d ult.

"Gentlemen—It has afforded me great satisfaction and pleasure to observe the very cordial reception I have received here, and especially the welcome coming from the gentlemen you represented. If you had traveled around the world as I have, for several years past, you would appreciate, like me, the value of our common country more completely than any man can who stays at home. You would be everywhere gratified to see that we are recognized by all the nations of the earth in a higher light than our own people imagine. Abroad our resources are considered unlimited. When one gets to see the nations of the world, he begins to appreciate the inestimable value of our broad acres and the great energy of our people that is forever upbuilding in state, city and town. It affords me very great satisfaction and pleasure to receive the gentlemen who were, long ago, opposed to us, and I hope if this country ever sees another war we shall all be together, under one flag, fighting a common enemy."

And again at Oakland, on the 25th ult, he said to the ex-soldiers of both armies and navies:

"Gentleman of the two armies and navies: I am very proud of the welcome you have given me to-day; I am particularly happy to see the good will and cordiality existing between soldiers of the two armies, and I have an abiding faith that this good feeling will always exist. Thus united, we have nothing to fear from any nation in the world. I am satisfied, from travels in foreign lands, that no country will wish to meet us as a united people: they will be perfectly willing to do us justice without appeal to arms, and that is all that Americans want. I am confident that our country has a long career of peace and prosperity before her."

Sale of the Fort Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw—A Project for its Extension to Detroit.

[Detroit Free Press, Sept. 30.]

The sale of the Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw railroad, and by an amicable arrangement with the bondholders, will take place soon. It is supposed that the road will be bought in by the same parties that now control it. The road was originally built in 1869 and 1870, and has been managed in the interest of Jackson. It has good connections and amicable relations with the Wabash, Baltimore & Ohio and Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne & Chicago railroads. Its tonnage for 1877 was 176,536, and its grain and flour freights the same year were 40,143 tons. Its net earnings for '77 were $75,048.97. The bondholders have nearly all assented to a plan of reorganization by which they are to receive preferred stock for their bonds and cupons. In connection with the recognization of the road is a project to extend it through Jackson and the southern part of Livingston county to Green Oak station, on the Detroit, Lansing & Northern railroad, there to connect for Detroit and the east. A survey of this route, made formerly for the "Air Line Road" shows the distance from Jackson to Detroit to be seventy-five miles, one mile less than by the Michigan Central. Ultimately, if the local aid can be procured, the projectors will look to an extension of the line to Pontiac. Meantime they think there is enough of merit in the proposed line to commend it to the people of Detroit and of the section through which it is to pass, because it affords a direct connection with the Eel River railroad.

Still For Hendricks.

In a recent issue of the Warsaw Union, Bro. Zimmerman took exception to our charge of cowardice on the part of editors who "pretend to feel anxious for the success of Mr. Hendricks." He falls back upon his experience in the newspaper business, as though none but editors are capable of judging as to the political situation; and as we are young in the profession he considers us worthy of a curtain lecture. We acknowledge him our senior, editorially, but when we want political advice we will seek those who know more about it than we do ourself. As to making presidential or other candidates, we admit that we have no desire in that direction, but when candidates are made and in the field, as Mr. Hendricks is, we regard it the absolute duty of every democratic Indianian who is friendly to Mr. Hendricks to urge his claims, just as the friends of candidates from other states are doing. If, as he says, "the political sky is somewhat clouded if not actually befogged," then we should work the harder to get the first glimpse of a clear horizon, and be ready when the fog clears away to sail into the national convention with flying colors and hopeful hearts. Our worthy friend says, "many of us don't see our way clear," does he mean by that that he is on the fence, patiently viewing the struggles of Tilden and his army of workers, ready to fall on that side if successful, or on the side of Hendricks and his own state if he is successful, and in either case claim a share of the honors? If that is "fashionable" politics, (and it seems to be with some), then we admit that we are out of fashion. With the permission of the editor of the Union we desire to say that we are still for Hendricks as a first choice, but would prefer any democratic statesman to Samuel J. Tilden. In this connection we publish the following from the St. Louis Times-Journal, which coincides with our views concerning the candidacy of Mr. Hendricks, every word of which we heartily indorse:

"It has pleased the Times Journal to offer a free and earnest support to the proposition to make Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, the next candidate for president of the United States. We have been prompted to this course by the belief, honestly entertained, that we would get nearer to the popular heart and please the largest number of people in the west. We believe so still. We think no other man named as a possible democratic candidate for the presidency has near so many warm friends among the democratic masses as Mr. Hendricks. No other man since the death of Stephen A. Douglas is so nearly a representative democrat, or would inspire so enthusiastic a campaign; and for the very good reason that no man among them all has a more unsullied record for honesty and fidelity in every public trust, and not one has so strong a hold on the admiration and affection of the masses by reason of his kindly manners and his genuine sympathy with all good men, however poor and humble. It has seemed to us that everything in the democratic heart that is loyal, warm and ennobling would be called into excessive play and be found a prodigious power among the masses if one so purely and honestly a democrat and man of the people as Thomas A. Hendricks should be put up for the popular suffrages.

It is true we recognized great discouragement in espousing the cause of Mr. Hendricks when we did. The distinguished son of Indiana, feeling no doubt the indignity put upon him by Tilden's money at the St. Louis convention in 1876, had declared that he would under no circumstances, again take the second place on the ticket. In saying this Mr. Hendricks grievously offended Mr. Tilden and Mr. Tilden's friends, whose chief argument for Mr. Tilden's renomination rested in asserting that the ticket elected in 1876, but counted out, must be re-elected in 1880 and counted in. That argument was very good if Mr. Tilden had fairly taken the first place in 1876; but the country now knows well that Tilden's money disbursed at St. Louis by Tilden's agents beat Mr. Hendricks and put Mr. Tilden above him. Believing this to be true, Mr. Hendricks would have been unmanly indeed to accept now the fraud of 1876, and condone it by lending himself and his friends to another national farce, or tragedy, as it might prove. Tilden is mighty in a caucus, and bold as a lion in a convention of his own party, where cash is trumps, but he is weak as a kitten in the presence of a desperate adversary ready to appeal to harsher arbitrament than ballots to settle the title to office.

Mr. Hendricks stands where he stood in 1876. He is a candidate for the presidency, and his name will be presented for that high honor by all that rallied to his support in 1876, and by many thousands more. And these earnest friends are not likely to be overborne by any sudden interruption of imported mercenaries, as happened in St. Louis. For daring to resume the place before the people that he occupied four years ago, it has pleased the Tilden organs, notably the Louisville Courier-Journal, to make the most bitter personal attacks on Mr. Hendricks. All the force of ridicule and invective have been brought to bear to break Mr. Hendricks down and discourage his friends. The ground of the abuse simply is that Mr. Hendricks has no right to be anything else but a tail to Mr. Tilden's kite, so long as Mr. Tilden has use for him in that capacity. Mr. Hendricks' friends mean to place him just where he stood when the democratic convention met in 1876. He is their candidate for the presidency now as then, and will remain so until fairly beaten.

Our words to the friends of Mr. Hendricks at the present time are these: Mr. Tilden is undoubtedly out of the contest. His nomination again is most improbable. His election, if nominated is impossible. The "solid south" is solid against him in the convention. The names of Hancock and Bayard are actively discussed in the south as possible successors for the Tilden vacancy. Mr. Hendricks' friends in the south are numerous. In the west they are multitudinous. Wherever they are—in townships, villages and cities—they should be up and doing, speaking their preferences loudly and fearlessly. As they arrest each other's attention north, south, east and west, their consciousness of numbers will inspire confidence and strength. They will find that instead of being isolated individuals and scattered groups, they constitute a compact mass, extending elbow to elbow, throughout all the states of the Mississippi valley. They have only to arouse themselves, immediately, earnestly, spontaneously everywhere, to challenge national attention, and crystalize national choice on the proper and invincible leader of the democratic hosts. Speak—speak, and the day is won."

The Northern Prison.

Several weeks ago we propounded the question to the editor of the Columbia City Commercial, who we believe, claims to be one of the bogus directors of the northern prison, why the board did not, if it had the power to elect any one to the wardenship, elect a republican? We ask the Commercial to give us the facts concerning the combination by which Charles Mayne, present warden, and who is said to be a democrat, was chosen to fill the position. There are many who believe that a great wrong has been done somewhere in the present management of that institution, and we insist that John W. Baker, a member of the board, should tell what he knows about it. We should like to know in what manner democrat Charley Mayne has bulldozed the republican board into his retention in office. The Commercial should not be backward about it, but let the blame rest where it will, give the public the correct version of the story. We have no desire to shield Mr. Mayne because he is a democrat. Unless Mr. Baker has a special interest in concealing the facts in the case, we believe that before long we shall be made acquainted with all that pertains to the peculiar relations the present warden of the northern prison holds to the board defacto.—Warsaw Union.

We are led to believe that there is political rascality mixed up in that job which will not reflect much credit upon the democratic party and for which the party in the district and state is to suffer shame and reproach. Notwithstanding this the sooner the festering sore connected with jobs about the state prison at Michigan City is probed to the bottom the better for the democratic party. It will be the duty of the next legislature to let daylight through all crooked transactions concerning the nullification of the acts of the last legislature in the election of a new board of prison directors and see what relation this high handed outrage sustains to the contracts for prison labor. The fact that warden Mayne is a democrat—the fact that he was able to baffle a republican board of directors by disobeying their orders and held his place in spite of them—the fact that as soon as a democratic board of directors was elected and selected another man for warden in the place of Mayne, that a job was put up against the democratic board of directors by procuring one of the members of the old republican board to vacate his place and filling it with one of the members of the new democratic board and then re-organizing it by the re-appointment of Mayne as warden and refusing possession to the newly elected board and its newly elected warden, affords presumptive evidence that there is something rotten about the management and contracts connected with that prison, in our opinion, in which leading democrats are as deep in the mud as these leading republicans are in the mire. For the credit of the state and for the purity of our politics we want these betrayers hunted out and thrown overboard.—South Bend Herald.

The day of reckoning has come, the supreme court has decided that the new democratic board of directors is entitled to possession, and the prison is now under control of the new management. The public will now demand an investigation. If crookedness is developed, the guilty parties should be exposed, whether they be democrats or republicans. If there is nothing "rotten about the management and contracts connected with that prison" it is due to the parties interested that they stand acquitted of the charges, though they may not be excusable for their action in retaining possession of the prison.

* * *

—Every Soldier his own claim agent, or the bounty, pay and pension hand book, is the title of a compendium of all the laws relating to these subjects, with full instructions by which every soldier or soldier's heir can understand what is due them, and collect their own claims, thus saving fees and trouble. The hand book is sent postpaid by mail for only 25 cents. Send for a copy of it to John Kirkpatrick, Boy in Blue Claim Office, Cambridge, Ohio. Clip this out. It will appear but once. The book may save you one hundred times its price.

NEW GOODS!

Received every week, at

MRS. A. J. LITTLE'S,

Second door north of the Auburn House, Auburn, Ind. Call and examine her stock before purchasing.

CAUTION

Should be used to find our STORE as misrepresentations are often made by Dealers claiming that their Store is the

C. O. D.

CLOTHING HOUSE. Our number is 9 East Main Street, and exactly opposite the North Door of the Court House. WE DO A STRICTLY

ONE PRICE BUSINESS!

And show the Largest Stock of Men's Boys' and Children's Clothing, Men's Furnishing Goods, Hats and Caps in Fort Wayne

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.,
Opposite North Door Court House.

SUBSCRIBE

FOR THE

AUBURN

Courier!

THE ONLY

DEMOCRATIC PAPER

IN DEKALB COUNTY.

JOB WORK!

NEATLY AND PROMPTLY EXECUTED AT LOW RATES.

PROF. RICE'S NATIONAL MUSIC CHART An Astonishing Invention! by which beginners, even, can in a few hours learn to play the pure harmony and sweetest accompaniment to any song or instrument, on the Piano or Organ. Full, thorough, and scientific, it commences and lays the foundation of all music, with full, thorough base, and an infallible key to transposition. A dozen songs on each chart, with the chords under each word, and teaching the fundamental laws of pure harmony. It is well worth $30. Sent, postpaid, for $1. Send for Circulars. JOHN ROSS & CO., General Agents, 313 Chestnut Street, ST. LOUIS, Mo.

RUPTURE Can be RELIEVED and generally CURED! by our appliance. Send address on postal card to Rupture Relief Co. Box 2431, St. Louis, Mo.

WANTED AGENTS TO SELL TEA, Coffee and Baking Powder to families. PROFITS FIRST RATE. Outfit free. People's Tea Co. Box 5019, St. Louis, Mo.

LADIES The Sole Agency in the U. S. for Mme. DE FONTAINE'S CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS is at Dr. Butts' Dispensary, 12 N. 8th Street, St. Louis, Mo. [illegible]

Seminal Pastille An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz., Direct Application to the principal Seat of the Disease. [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Book for the Million A new and complete GUIDE TO WEDLOCK, containing Chapters on A Competent Womanhood, Selection of wife, Evidences of Virginity, Temperaments, Sterility, Advice to Bridegroom, Husband & Wife, [illegible] It is also a "Private Medical Adviser" on diseases resulting from impure sexual associations, and self-abuse [illegible]

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY, No. 12 N. 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

For Sale at a Sacrifice.

A GEISER THRESHING MACHINE in good condition, offered for sale by Mr. D. D. Moody, at a very low price, and on time. This is an excellent opportunity to get a bargain. 27tf.

—For first-class job work, come to the COURIER office. Good work, good material and low prices guaranteed.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
125 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana.
v-18-1y.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else. The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 21-1y

Read. Read.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please address G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county, who is authorized to sell the Singer Machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments furnished on short notice. 30-1f.

Anticipating an unusually large trade this fall, the indications of which are unmistakable, and which, indeed, has already begun, we are now daily receiving large quantities of all kinds of SEASONABLE GOODS in our line, and shall soon be able to show the largest, best selected and most complete stock of

DRY-GOODS, CARPETS, NOTIONS, &C.

That we have ever before been able to offer to the people of Fort Wayne and vicinity. Our well-known LOW PRICES—to which the present extent of our business is mainly due—shall be strictly maintained in every department. The closest cash buyers will find it to their interest to look through our stock before purchasing.

ROOT & COMPANY, Calhoun Street, Fort Wayne.

$50,000! $50,000!
$50,000
WORTH OF CLOTHING!
Which was manufactured for southern trade, is now offered at
Sixty Cents on the Dollar.

We bought these goods of a large New York house, which manufactures for, and depends principally on southern trade. Owing to the fever raging so furiously south, they could neither sell nor ship their goods, and were obliged, therefore, to dispose of their entire stock to northern dealers at a big sacrifice.

We took advantage of this rare chance by buying only for cash, and therefore are enabled to sell these entire new goods at 65 cents on the dollar.

SAVE MONEY BY FAVORING US WITH A CALL.
SAM, PETE & MAX, Managers
Star Clothing House, FORT WAYNE, IND.,

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—MORTGAGES,
—WARRANTEE DEEDS,
—QUIT CLAIM DEEDS,
—GUARDIAN'S RECEIPTS, (bound),
—ADMINISTRATOR'S RECEIPTS (bound),
—For sale in large or small quantities at the COURIER office. tf.

—Bring in your wood.

—Donavin Tuesday night.

—Winter apples are scarce.

—Ask your neighbor to subscribe for the COURIER.

—We are sorry to learn that Jos. McKay is quite sick.

—Next year is leap year, girls, and don't you forget it.

—Davenport furnished the new blinds for the court room.

—The county commissioners will be in session to morrow.

—The forest trees are begining to show the yellow leaf.

—Potatoes are being brought to market in large quantities.

—Our merchants say that trade has doubled since last year.

—A number of attorneys from abroad are in the city this week.

—Remember that the Waterloo fair commences next Monday.

—Mr. F. E. Davenport is attending the exposition in Chicago.

—Consult the new dressmaker before having your cutting done.

—The boys report a "large time" at at the Angola fair last week.

—Mrs. Dr. Cowan and her daughter Annis, visited Leo this week.

—Our exchanges speak in complimentary terms of the re-union.

—The grand jury is now in session, with John W. Boyl as foreman.

—Hank Little traded horses Monday last, and now has the boss. Next.

—Last week it was Fatty Scott, this week it is Papa Scott. It's a girl.

—Don't fail to see the Tennesseeans, at Ensley's hall, Tuesday evening next.

—Services morning and evening at the Presbyterian church next Sabbath.

—Friends from abroad are visiting with the family of Mr. Bruce Miller, of this city.

—This being court week, the town presents more of a business-like appearance.

—A party of "bell ringers" tendered Frank P. Copper and wife a serenade last evening.

—Moshier moved to Waterloo this week, and again peace and quiet reigns on the avenue.

—Amos Miller, of Hicksville, Ohio, was in-Klined to visit our city several days this week.

—A number of our citizens are at Chicago this week, taking in the sights at the exposition.

—It is rumored that Dr. J. J. Littlefield, of Jackson, Michigan, will move back to this city.

—The circuit court room is furnished with new matting, new tables, and new chairs for the jury.

—Maj. S. W. Sprott has been quite sick for several days past, but is able to be around again.

—We notice a large amount of sugar cane coming in. Buckwheat's and molasses; pass 'em.

—The boys are talking up the dance question, and the Neoterics will "perform" at no distant day.

—The editor who loves to please everybody has altogether too lofty an ambition. He can't do it.

—With the assistance of a cow, Sim Tarney actually turned a somersault over a 6-foot picket fence.

—Our subscription list is still increasing, and yet there is room for more. Ask your neighbor to subscribe.

—Scrofula of thirty years' standing has been cured by Dr. Lindsey's blood searcher. Sold by all druggists.

—Johnny Schaab will probably not visit Cecil, O., again, for at least two weeks. He was there last Sunday.

—Ladies will please call at the next door to the postoffice, and see the latest styles for making dresses and wraps.

—How they do come in. Nearly every boy in town who is large enough to carry a bag, has more or less nuts in it.

—"Yank" Wallace, a jolly lad from Columbia City, run the machine at the Saginaw depot during Mr. Copper's absence.

—The Valparaiso Messenger will issue a daily during the fair to be held at that place, on the 8th, 9th and 10th of October.

—The new dress-maker in just from the east with all the newest designs for dress-making. First door north of the postoffice.

—Mr. John McClellan has bought the pea-nut stand on the corner, and will put in a fresh stock of candies, cigars, tobacco, etc.

—The county superintendent being unavoidably absent, no examination will be held at Waterloo and Butler during October.

—Struck, never to strike again—a clock, by a mad-cow, which clock was in the arms of a citizen, on Jackson street, Tuesday evening.

—The eighth annual fair at Waterloo promises to be the best ever held at that place. Every person should make arrangements to attend.

—Judge McClellan will probably adjourn court for two or three days next week, to allow those having business in court to attend the fair.

—Mr. Frank Copper, the gentlemanly agent of the Saginaw road at this place, returned yesterday from Fostoria, Ohio, with the lady of his choice. We smoke.

—C. P. Houser, gen'l. agent for C. E. Dickinson & Co., of Indianapolis, manufacturers of school furniture, called on us Wednesday.—Churubusco Herald.

—Half the ills of human life proceed from a torpid and disordered liver. Submit to them no longer while Sellers' Liver pills will cure you quickly. 25c per box.

—A individual of dark complexion who has been in the city for some time, had his finger broken last week by one of our fair sex, from whom he was trying to steal a kiss.

—Just received, the largest and most complete stock of milliners goods ever brought to the city. Call at Ensley & Co's., and leave your order for a new hat or bonnet.

—Ladies will do well to call at the store of Ensley & Co east of the court yard, and examine the large assortment of millinery goods of every description before making their fall purchases.

—William Showalter came near severing his thumb last Saturday, at New Era, while sawing wood with a machine Drs. Casebeer & Matheny dressed the wound, which is getting along nicely.

—Our former townsman, C. H. Hoyt, called in to see us during his visit to the city on Wednesday. We are glad to know that he has become the happy father of another son, since leaving this place.

—The wise farmer will attend to the cutting of his fire-wood and select his winter reading matter—by the way, how would the COURIER suit you? It contains about forty clumns each week of good, sound reading matter.

—The drygoods, millinery and fancy-goods store of Ensley & Co., on the east side of the public square is now filled with a full line of ladies' cloaks and fancy dress goods of every description. Call there when you want nice goods at low prices.

—An exchange says, "eat oysters only in the months that have an 'r' in their names, and drink whisky only in the months that have a 'k' in their names." If the above were strictly observed it would be a great benefit to society, especially the latter.

—Donavin's original Tennesseeans and slave cabin singers, who entertained a large audience here about 18 months ago, will visit the city next Tuesday evening, and give one of their concerts which the press and pulpit speak of in the most flattering terms.

—Quite a number of our farmer friends promised to bring us wood on subscription. To that class we want to say, this cold damp weather has made right now the accepted time to bring it, so the next time you come to town do not forget to throw on a load of wood.

—Frank Griswold came near getting his "baggage checked" while driving a hack at the Angola fair, last week. The horses become frightened and ran away turning the hack completely over, with "Botzer" under it, where he would have met with a horrible death, had not the traces broke.

—Geo. Hazzard, his backer E. Henderson, of Anderson, and his attorney Byfield, of Indianapolis, put in an appearance at court yesterday afternoon. They filed a cart load of affidavits to secure a change of venue from this county. The motion will be heard by the court to-morrow morning.

—Circuit court convened on Monday, with 227 civil, and 14 criminal cases on the docket. 85 of the civil cases will be tried before Judge Lowry, who is now on the bench. Judge McClellan is busily engaged in disposing of cases that do not require a jury. The business of the term will be rapidly disposed of.

—The engine hauling the B. & O. local freight train became disabled at Luman a day or two ago, and another engine was sent for to take the train into Chicago. When the engine came out the engineer negligently allowed his engine to collide with the disabled engine, and a general wreck was the result. Fortunately no person was injured.

—The readers of the COURIER are invited to call at the store of I. W. Martin, and examine the new stock of fall goods, consisting of cashmeres, alpacas and Manchester's dress goods; also a fine stock of prints, cottons, cottonades, jeans, cassimeres, notions, etc. bought low, and will be sold as low as the lowest. Everything in the grocery, crockery and glassware department is way down in price. Call and learn our prices and be convinced.

MARRIED:—At the residence of the bride's parents, in Fostoria, Ohio, on Thursday, Sept. 25th 1879, by Rev. J. Hughes, Mr. Frank P. Copper and Miss Tallie E. Ferris.

The happy couple arrived in Auburn yesterday, and Frank is now actively engaged in setting up the cigars. May their wedded life be a happy one, and may the little Coppers add greatly to their wealth.

—The Chicago Journal, in speaking of the Tennesseeans, says: "Such success, while it is eminently deserved, is entirely unprecedented in concert history in this city. It is estimated that they sung to 100,000 people in the last three months.

—The new dressmaker is able to talk styles to your full satisfaction.

Weston walked 550 miles in six days, and Rowell recently walked 530 miles in the same time. A reader of the New York Sun asks what owner of a horse would attempt to drive him 500 miles in a week, and says "any man trying it would be considered cruel or insane." Not cruel, but certainly insane, for the simple reason that there is no horse in the world that could accomplish the task if put to it; therefore, no one but a lunatic would make the trial. The feat of covering 500 miles in six days is almost beyond the ability of any two horses—250 miles each.

—Tuesday evening as butcher Tarney's boys were driving a bovine up Jackson street, en-route for the slaughter house, the animal, as the boys say, got "on its ear" and showed fight. After assisting Sim Tarney in getting over a picket fience, which he says he never touched, it rallied upon a gentleman unknown to us, who was carrying about seventeen feet of stove-pipe and a new clock. The man saw that the cow evidently meant business, and prepared himself for the conflict, in which the man came out second best, his pipe somewhat dilapidated and the clock stoped, never to go again—until repairs are made on it. He managed, however, to get over a fence in time to save his life. Not being satisfied with this, the cow attacked Mrs. H. C. Bell and her daughter May, who were walking up the walk, but fortunately they got a fence between them and the cow, which probably saved them from being badly gored. No lives were lost, but the clock was knocked badly out of "time"

—At a meeting of the officers of the Pioneers Association of DeKalb county, Indiana, Sept. 30, 1879, in accordance with a resolution adopted at the last annual meeting of the association, the 3rd Thursday of June last, the following persons were chosen the executive committee of said association for the coming year, to-wit:

Butler tp	Samuel M. Knott
Keyser tp	O. C. Clark
Jackson tp	Wm. Carr
Concord tp	Robert Culbertson
Newville tp	B. F. Blair
Stafford tp	C. R Waunemaker
Wilmington tp	E. W. Fosdick
Auburn precinct	T. D. Gross
Waterloo precinct	John Butt
Richland tp	N. Griffith
Fairfield tp	J. M. Brumback
Smithfield tp	R. G. Daniels
Franklin tp	John N. Clark
Troy tp	Wm. Emerson

W. H. DILLS, Sec'y.

[All the papers in the county are requested to publish the above.]

The great international leg tournament at New York last week, resulted in a victory for Rowell, the Englishman. The contest was for the Astley belt and the championship of the world, in a six days walk. The gate money amounted to $73000, of which the winner gets one half after all expenses are paid. The following is the distance walked by the four leading contestants;

Rowell, 530 miles.
Merritt 515 "
Hazael 500½ "
Hart 482½ "

The brief history of the Astley belt is as follows:

First contest, March 18 to 23, 1878, Agricultural Hall, London, Daniel O'Leary winner, 520 miles two laps.

Second contest, December 23 to 28, 1878, Gilmore's Garden, New York, Daniel O'Leary winner, 400 miles one lap.

Third contest, March 10 to 15, 1879, Gilmore's Garden, New York, Charles Rowell winner, 500 miles.

Fourth contest, June 16 to 21, 1879, Agricultural Hall, London, E. P. Weston winner, 550 miles.

Fifth contest, September 22 to 27, '79, Gilmore's Garden, New York, Charles Rowell winner; 530 miles.

Miraculous Escape.

During the storm last Saturday morning, Mr. H. L. Carnahan, living in Jackson township, about eight miles south of Auburn, was quietly enjoying the pleasures of his home; one son eighteen years old sitting in front of the cook stove, while two sons aged respectively eight and ten years were sitting on the hearth of the stove, the women of the household being at the barn milking at the time. While thus enjoying the pleasures of a happy home, terrific lightning struck the house, passing down the chimney and stove-pipe, striking the two boys sitting on the stove, each in the right hip, thence down the limb to the floor, one branch tearing up the boards, and the other striking the toe of a boot on the foot of the young man in front of the stove, tearing the boot into atoms, a small piece of which was forced through the skin on the forehead of one of the young boys. The pants of one of the small boys were literally torn to pieces, while a boot worn by the other was torn from the foot. The boys were all badly burned but not fatally injured, though it will be some time before they are able to leave the house, as the skin came off with the clothing and boots. No injury was done to either the house or the stove.

Corn Fodder.

The season has arrived, says the Indiana Farmer, for securing this important crop. We say, important crop, for we are convinced that western farmers do not properly appreciate the value of well-cured corn fodder as a winter food for farm stock. The New England farmer regards his "stover" as an important per cent. of the value of his corn crop. An essential difference, however, exists in the matter of availability between his stover and our fodder. His stalks are comparatively small and his cattle eat them nearly all, while the larger stalks of our crop prove unmanageable, and the cattle leave them on the ground. If it were thought necessary to economize, this could very readily be remedied by cutting the stalks with a proper machine so that cattle can chew them. Farmers who feed stock on a large scale will save money by erecting a power machine for cutting fodder and an apparatus for steaming it. It is really the cheapest food on which we can winter stock, and inferior to none in healthful qualities. A number of years ago I made an analysis of corn fodder cut in September and well cured, and was surprised to find that a given weight of it contained as much nutriment as a similar weight of timothy hay. The difficulty, however, is that we cannot make the nutriment of fodder available in our crude way of feeding it. A mill could very readily be constructed that would cut and grind stalk, ear and husk into fine feed so as to make it all available, and the proportions of grain and other provender will be about right. But even as we feed it, corn fodder, well cured, will amply pay for the labor of curing it. The prospects now are that hay will bear a fair price in the market this winter, and every shock of fodder put up now will be so much hay saved, and money made. But fodder, to be good, must be cut while the stalks and most of the blades are yet green. Healthy corn will show the fading in the husk while the blades are quite green. At this stage the grain has passed beyond the milk and is safe from shrinkage if carefully shocked. As soon as the ears are sufficiently dry to crib, every damp day should be devoted to husking corn from the shocks. After husking, the fodder is best saved by stacking it in long ricks, making your pile by alternate layers, changing the tops with each layer till your stack is about five feet high, then finish your rick with the tops all one way, keeping the buts even or a little overhanging. The tops being smallest will directly give the rick the proper slope to shed the water, and the fodder will keep in good condition even for years.

The Tennesseeans.

A NIGHT OF MIRTH AND MELODY.

The well-known and popular colored concert troupe the "Tennesseeans" gave one of their most delightful concerts at the Academy Tuesday night. If they pleased heretofore in this city, they more than pleased on this occasion. Many of the numbers were greeted with a perfect uproar of applause. Should the Tennesseeans ever come to Fort Wayne again, though it should rain ten times harder than it did Tuesday night, they will have as big an audience as the house will hold. They sang Wednesday night at Huntington.—Ft. Wayne Journal, Sept. 26th, '79.

Newville.

—The next thing in order is cider making and apple picking.

—The wheat looks well, at least all that is up, and the most of it is.

—The farmers are about through seeding and ready to attend the fairs.

—The weather is still fine, and we had a splendid rain on Friday night and Saturday forenoon.

—Once more the king of terrors has visited our neighborhood, and taken Mrs. Andrew Hanly, who lived on the road between Newville and Hicksville. She died last Saturday evening, of consumption.

—Now is a good time to subscribe for the COURIER, farmers, as wheat is $1.10 a bushel; donate at least the extra ten cents to the printer, as this is ten cents more than any of you expected to get. Hand it over and I will send it in free of cost.

—The Hicksville fair went off very nicely. The leading feature was the address delivered on the second day by the Hon. A. P. Edgerton, of Ft. Wayne. We have listened to a great many addresses on different subjects, and read still more, but the one delivered by Mr. Edgerton was the most practical that we ever heard or read. It is to be published, at his expense, and sold for the benefit of the society.

—The railroad fever has somewhat abated, but will break out again as soon as the Ohio election is over, and Ewing and Rice elected, as they undoubtedly will be. Then the Hicksvillians will have time to attend to it, and Judge Patten, the democratic candidate for representative, will assist us, as he is greatly interested in it, and the Hon. A. P. Edgerton will come over and talk to the people on the subject.

ALPHA.

The Daily Post, of Columbia City, is the best "fair daily" we have seen this year. We received the first copy yesterday. Thanks.

Our Political Civilization.

[State Sentinel.]

There is a wide difference between political and civil life. The one refers to governments, to men in their national organizations, and the other to their social and domestic life. Moral order is essential to both, as an element of power, as well as an evidence of civilization. What is termed the state refers to the organic character of the body politic, and that which rules society in its social order is constituted by the animus of the people in their domestic and fraternal life.

Our government, being republican in form and profession, makes personal freedom essential to all our people, as a matter of right as well as of national consistency. Hence, the claim to the largest liberty among all classes, and the right to act according to personal privileges, restrained only by the laws of the land.

In such a government the temptation to extravagance and licentiousness becomes prominent, as the devouring maelstrom of moral evil, and the danger is always imminent that excesses or recklessness will frequently occur, and demoralization, of the most irredeemable character, will, sooner or later, work the destruction of society of every class and order.

In the earlier years of the Republic, when the people were generally poor and but very moderately educated, there was a simplicity in their manners and a sterling integrity in their constitutional spirit which honored their patriotism and gave great prestige to their primitive piety. Men in those days were the habiliments of plain, unsophisticated honesty and modesty, and domestic life with them was generally a constant obligation of humble home privileges. Nature was the god of order with them, and sincerity distinguished their common intercourse.

Among such a people an unscrupulous regard for honesty, truth and humanity was everywhere looked for, and a corresponding devotion to public obligations made law and order of society universally respected.

Confidence was then held in public men, for the good reason that they were honored and distinguished for the highest integrity. Washington would not lie, Jefferson would not steal, Madison would not play the demagogue, and the statesmen of that day and age, with but few exceptions, were of the soundest probity. They were not hungry to grow rich, and they valued a good name above rubies.

In common life, virtue and humanity, rather than ambition and pride, were common attributes, and the genius of a high moral freedom reigned among them in almost undisputable authority, and general happiness was realized in every part of the country. That a sad and regretsul change has come over the spirit of our national and social life all will admit who have studied the animus of the times. Men have changed, and the standard of our political and social status have been lowered to a lamentable extent.

Our parties are more or less corrupt because our politicians, in large numbers are not men of truth or honesty. Too many of them aim to carry their selfish aspirations by falsehood and deceit. Many gain their points by cliques, organized by themselves in their own interest, and when they get into office and power they care nothing for the people; nothing for their oaths of office, and consequently they are not true to the people as public servants. They spend their money to get office and then steal it (and more too) back again after they get in.

Men of even the highest pretensions come out of their offices miserable defaulters and moral bankrupts of the lowest and basest character, and, what is worse than all, their party defends them, and by mild terms covers up their crimes for fear the party will be injured

Money buys offices, where citizens of competency and worth, if they are poor, are left out in the cold. Abilities are not so much wanting as honesty and integrity, for it is often the case that cunning artifice carries its point in cajoling the people, when sterling honesty would scorn to use such means for success. The bummer often wears the laurels of public favors as if he had eared them, and he trusts in his selfish pride as an honored official, when he is only a thief and a perjured villian. And yet he is not punished—not ignored—but often he is promoted because he is considered a successful man.

The pool of politics is called a "dirty one," and well it may be; for the tissue of abuse that is so freely heaped upon every good and honorable man in the conflicts for office give painful evidence of a deep and putrid corruption, which can not well be measured.

It may not seem true or charitable to tell the whole truth in regard to the political demoralization of the country; but we can not help it if we say anything. We follow facts. We are looking into the dark places. We are investigating the public cesspools of political life, to find out the corruption and vileness of the age; and to those who will make themselves acquainted with such an investigation, the facts of the times will astound them. Malignant elements commingle with the chief good, and the poisonous miasma infuses itself into every department of our civil government, until the entire body is sick with the vileness of their own corruption.

Even our superior school privileges and higher education do not remedy the matter. The higher our advantages, the lower we seem to sink in dishonesty, untruthfulness and duplicity. The picture is a terrible one to contemplate.

Union Township.

[Last week.]

—Autumn leaves are falling.

—Sam Miller is visiting in the Buckeye state.

—The wheat crop is turning out much better than expected.

—Waterloo is making big preparations for the fair. A new floral has been erected.

—Farmers have completed their seeding and the acreage is somewhat increased in this locality.

—A few days ago Miss Allie Henning was presented with a deed for eighty acres of land by her father.

—George Weley and Miss Cora Smith were married last Thursday, which they accomplished by eloping to Michigan. They are now back.

—Hog buyers are on the road again buying up lots here and there for shipment. The hog cholera did little damage in this neighborhood this season.

—Miss Ella Orros died last Sabbath, aged seventeen. She was engaged to a young man of high standing, but the king of terrors leaves him and many friends to mourn her loss.

SAM.

St. Joe.

[Last week.]

—Jake gets red-hot when asked how he likes courting.

—H. Jaggers has made arrangements to move to Angola on Tuesday.

—A goodly number of the St. Joeites attended the re-union on Saturday.

—The boys have it that the barrel performance on Saturday night by A. W. was excellent, so far as it went, but then it was pretty hard on the barrel.

—The excursion train was a grand fizzle, disappointing a good many on Friday, for which the railroad company receives censure in soldier language.

—St. Joe is in need of a good shoemaker, the only one in town removed to Angola on Tuesday. We think the opening a good one for a first-class workman.

—Some of the boys who visit the singing school for the purpose of having a big spree had better watch out. It cost some of the boys up north the little sum of $60.00 for a little fun. A word to the wise ought to be sufficient.

—The grain market at St. Joe for the last week has been just booming, on Friday the 19th inst, ninety-four wagons were unloaded at the elevators, the number of bushels being, of wheat, 3,162; of oats 120.

Auburn Schools.

Names of pupils neither absent or tardy during the month ending Sept. 26th, 1879.

HIGH SCHOOL.

Eliza Stahl
Amy Peterson
Rebecca Shull
Mattie Swihart
G. W. Becker
Franklin Teeters
Cory Shugars
Howard McCord
Ettie Tarney
W. S. Franks
Jennie Husselman
Sarah Tarney

SCHOOL OF MISS DANIELS.

Florence Hoffman
Willard Pipple
Rolla Teft
Ida Swihart
Henry McIntosh
Nellie Potter

SCHOOL OF MISS CLARK.

James Hoffman
John Zimmerman
Nannie Peterson
Neva Bell
Anna Mead
Minnie Lanning

SCHOOL OF MISS M'TIGH.

Willie Culberson
Maggie Silver
Alda Shaffer
Ida Gross
Lizzie Ashley
Jessie Weaver
Mary Beuret
Sarah Lilling
Fred Lobmiller
Harley Baker
Josie Ashley
Lizzie Turner
Ada Gross
Cora Culberson
Lena Cloy
Lena Korff
George Clark
Bertie Casebeer
George McClure.

SCHOOL OF MISS STAHL.

Hattie Berg
Emma Beuret
Eva Ensley
Ida Gebrett
Estella Hague
Bertha Henry
Mary Miller
Addie McCord
Laura Ober
Blanchie Peterson
Della Weaver
John Clark
Charlie Killing
Alda Barkley
Mary Baker
Callie Copp
Lillie Grosh
Mabel Hartman
Aggie Leas
Mattie McKay
Lucy Otto
Viola Prosser
Dessie Silvers
Sherman Craig
Elmore Foreman
Lewis Willis

SCHOOL OF MISS TRITCH.

Freddie Ashley
Frankie Baker
Frankie Beuret
Henry Cloy
Oscar Hoffman
Walter Hartman
Gurtie Harris
Earl Lawrence
Wessie Lanham
Johnie Ober
Georgia Wolf
Gertie Wilson
Darlie Clark
Daisy Davidson
Clara Hoffman
Hebe Houser
Della Ollinger
Jeannessie Peter
Winnie Potter
Sadie Shearer
Ina Teft
Iona Treesh

LIDA A. POWERS, Sept.

The oldest man that attended the meeting of the old settlers at Indianapolis yesterday, was Mr. W. F. Dewitt, of Steuben county, who is 104 years old. About 600 persons over 70 years old and residents of the state 40 years, attended the meeting.

THE END OF THE WORLD.

BY CARRIE V. SHAW.

I wish a thing could be that the sad wind's low monotone
Am hearing for the last time as I'm sitting here alone;
If this grand world should suddenly stand still and cold as stone,
What an awe-struck multitude would stand confronting the Unknown!

In the passion of the anguish of the moment drear and lone,
Should I find the icy barrier that pride has raised down-thrown?
Would the deep, despairing bitterness that tinged the dark years flown
Fade away when we were standing on the brink of time alone?

Oh! I journey me through darksome swamps where cypress leaves lie strown;
I could scale black cliffs, through jutting rocks left feet all bleeding, torn;
Though falling timbers blocked my way, o'er mounds of crumbling stone
I could journey through the darkness, 'neath the solemn skies, alone.

For the sake of the dear dream I dreamed, ere wisdom's glass had shown
All vanity and weakness, and the heart had bitter grown;
For that sweet illusion's sake I would forget the sad years flown,
And wander—fainting, dying—till I found him, all alone.

Oh! then, could I forget the cruel bond that pride has grown?
With the night of death around us and his dear face near my own,
Standing there amidst the ruins, where pale, weird lights, flickering, shone,
Then I need not fear to tell him how I worshiped him alone.

Shall I tell him how my nature, strange, the world had never known?
And, misjudged by those I loved, how I might stand or fall alone;
That I was not cold and haughty, that I reaped not as I had sown,
But that I was very weary and would smile death welcome home?

Or, shall I wait, as I have waited all my life, alone,
With the darkness of the shadows of death's orgies round me thrown,
With the Dead Sea fruit I cherished once to tasteless ashes grown?
Shall I wait, as I have waited all my weary life, alone,

With no one near in all the throng that I can call my own;
With the wreck of falling worlds about my helpless feet thick strown;
The heart's wild tumult blending the chill wind's surge and moan?
shall watch and wait, as I have watched and waited, all alone.

shall note with lonely eyes the changeless love to others shown,
While I shiver with the death-damp of the night dews, all alone,
While I feel my brow grow colder than the slab of marble stone,
On which I lean awaiting there the last great call, alone.

I shall note the tears of others, but my hapless tears have flown—
They were shed o'er those dear forms beneath this slab of marble stone.
Methinks I could not weep through all Death's mysteries now made known,
I have wept so much—while waiting through these dreary years alone.

I shall stand alone reclining 'gainst this piece of marble stone,
With the thundering, roaring, rushing of Death's billows nearer borne.
There amidst dissolving nature, with the final bugle blown,
I shall die as I have lived—misunderstood, unknown, alone.

SORELL CITY, MO.

KASPAR HAUSER.

A Strange but True Story.

On the evening of Whitmonday, some fifty years ago, a citizen of Nuremberg happened to be loitering near his door in an unfrequented part of the town, when he observed a short distance off an ungainly-looking young man standing in a singular posture, having the appearance of one intoxicated, and apparently making attempts to move forward without having the power either to stand upright or control the movements of his limbs.

The citizen approached the stranger, who immediately thrust into his hand a letter—a letter addressed to the Captain of one of the regiments then quartered in Nuremberg. The citizen attempted to question the strange youth; but in reply to his queries could only elicit a repetition of some unintelligible jargon, and therefore conducted him to the guard-room of the regiment. Here the Captain's orderly took charge of the unknown, and led him to his master's house. The Captain happened to be at hope at the time; and as the stranger could give no account of himself in answer to the numerous questions with which he was assailed, and as he did not appear to understand anything that was said to him, he was taken for a kind of savage, and, after much consultation on the part of the servants as to his disposal, he was shut up in a stable to await the return of the Captain. The contents of his pockets created the greatest surprise. They consisted of colored rags, a key, a paper of gold sand, a small horn rosary and a few religious tracts.

The poor fellow was so much fatigued that his attempts to walk resulted in an unsteady stagger; his feet were bruised and bleeding, and he appeared to be suffering intensely from the effects of hunger and thirst. Some meat was offered to him; but on tasting it he immediately spat it out in disgust. Beer, too, was given him; but on tasting a few drops of it he rejected it as he had done the meat. Some bread and a glass of water, however, afforded him much satisfaction, and he swallowed them eagerly. After refreshing himself in this manner, he threw himself on some straw in the stable, and instantly fell into a deep sleep. He was still asleep when the Captain returned home, although several hours had elapsed. Attempts were made to awake him, but for some time without success. They lifted him from the ground and tried to place him upon his feet; but, in spite of all their exertions, the youth slept on, and seemed more like one dead or in a trance than a living being merely asleep. At last, however, his eyes slowly opened, and, as if struck with the glittering color of the Captain's uniform, he immediately commenced to mutter the same jargon he had used to the bewilderment of the good citizen who had discovered him.

The Captain knew nothing of the stranger, and no particulars could be ascertained from the letter of which he was the bearer. This letter did not give any clew to the name or previous home of the youth. It was not even addressed to any person by name, and from its style and orthography, seemed to have been intended to pass for the production of some illiterate peasant. The writer merely stated that he was a poor workman with a large family, which he could ill support; that the mother of the stranger had placed him under his care when quite young; that the boy wished to be a soldier as his father had been. No name was signed at the end of the letter, which closed with this inhuman sentence: "If you do not keep him, you may kill him or hang him up in the chimney."

The Captain was in a great dilemma with regard to the disposal of the charge that had been imposed upon him in so sudden and unexpected a manner, but, at last, when every attempt at questioning had failed, the unknown was taken to the police station. Here they could make nothing of him. The usual interrogations as to who he was, whence he came, what was his business, etc., elicited no intelligible answer, and the authorities were much perplexed to know what to do with him. His tears, the state of his feet, and his childish and apparently harmless demeanor, excited the pity of those who saw him. Opinions as to his real nature were divided. Some considered him an idiot, others thought him a savage. Not a few affected to believe that under this appearance of simplicity some cunning deceit might be concealed.

At the suggestion of one of the officials, pen, ink, and paper were put before him, and signs were made that he should use them. At this the stranger manifested considerable pleasure, and, taking up the pen, to the indefinite astonishment, it must be confessed, of all present, he wrote, in bold, legible characters, the words "Kasper Hauser." Here, however, he stopped. All attempts to make him understand that they wanted him to write down the name of the place whence he came failed, and, as a last resource, he was committed to the prison where rogues and vagabonds were usually confined. On being conducted to his cell, he immediately sank on his straw bed in a deep sleep. Such was Kaspar Hauser's first introduction to the world.

At this time Kasper was about 16 or 17 years old, and 4 feet 9 inches in height. His chin and lips were thinly covered with down; his wisdom-teeth, as they are called, had not yet come, nor did they make their appearance until about three years later. His hair, which was of a light brown color, was very fine and curled in ringlets. The structure of his body, which was stout and broad-shouldered, showed perfect symmetry without any visible defect. His hands were small and beautifully shaped. The soles of his feet were as soft as the palms of his hands, and, from their appearance, had never before either been used for walking or confined in a shoe. His face, particularly when in a state of tranquillity, was almost without any expression whatever. He appeared to have little or no idea of the use of his limbs. His attempts at walking were most ludicrous, for they resembled the first toddlings of an infant. He was wholly destitute of words and ideas, and showed a complete ignorance of the most common objects of nature and the ordinary usages of daily life. In fact, the whole of the circumstances connected with the unfortunate youth were for some considerable time a dark mystery, that baffled even the wisest in their attempts to fathom. He appeared to resemble an inhabitant of some other planet, miraculously and suddenly transferred to the earth, rather than one belonging to the same race of men who now exist.

The only food he could be prevailed upon to take was bread and water. For all other kinds of meat and drink he showed the greatest aversion. Even the smell of them was sufficient to make him shudder; and the least drop of wine, or tea, or coffee occasioned him cold sweats, or caused him to be seized with vomiting or violent headache. Among the few intelligible words, to most of which he appeared to attach no meaning whatever, that now and then escaped his lips, the one most frequently used was "Ross" (horse); from this circumstance the idea of bringing him a wooden toy-horse occurred to some of the police officials. At the sight of this plaything Kaspar, who hitherto had treated everything and everyone with stolid indifference, suddenly roused up. He seated himself on the ground by the side of his toy, stroked it, patted it, kept his eye continually fixed on it, and finally endeavored to decorate it with all the various trifling presents which benevolent visitors from time to time had given him. For hours he would sit by the side of his horse playing with it, taking no notice of anything that was going on around him. Several toy-horses were now given to him, and for each of them he manifested the same affection he had shown for the first one he received. Even at meal-time he would not be separated from his favorites; and, before eating his bread or drinking his water, he tried hard to induce his horses to partake. His plan was to hold his bread to the mouth of each horse in turn, and after that to dip the mouth of each horse in the water. One of the horses happened to be made of plaster of Paris, and constant wetting had the effect of softening the lips, and by degrees part of the mouth crumbled off. This circumstance caused Kaspar the most intense sorrow, nor would he be comforted until one of the officials had mended his toy for him.

In a very short time after his arrival at the prison, Kaspar was no longer considered as an ordinary prisoner, but as a forsaken and neglected child, who needed only care and education to render him like other human beings. The Governor of the prison admitted him to his family table, where, although he would not yet eat the same food as the others had, he still learned to sit properly, and in some measure to conform to the ordinary rules of decent society. Kaspar was pleased to have the Governor's children as playmates, while they on their part were delighted at the idea of having a playfellow bigger than themselves, and yet with the gentleness and simplicity of a child.

About a fortnight after Kaspar's arrival in Nuremberg, he was providentially favored with a visit from a certain Prof. Daumer, an intelligent young scholar, who forthwith devoted himself to the peculiar and most interesting task of training the virgin mind of the unfortunate youth. The Burgomaster, Herr Binder, also took a very deep interest in Kaspar, and frequently had him brought to his house, where he was encouraged and assisted in his attempts to learn to converse; and where, by carefully avoiding all the puzzling restrictions of legal form and questionings, the young man was by degrees, as he advanced in his knowledge of words, induced to try and recall some of the incidents in his early life. At the same time the police were still busy with their investigations; but, the clew they had to work upon being so slight, they made but slow progress in unraveling the tangled thread of the mystery which surrounded this strange specimen of humanity.

Little by little, however, Kasper's mind became enlightened, and as his power of expression and his vocabulary increased he began putting together, bit by bit as it were, those of the incidents of his past life which struck him most forcibly. The account he gave of himself was as follows: "He neither knows who he is nor where his home is. It was only at Nuremberg that he came into the world. Here he learned for the first time that, besides himself and one man who had always had the care of him, there existed other men or other creatures. As long as he could recollect, he had lived in a hole (or small low room, which he sometimes calls a cage), where he had always sat upon the ground, with bare feet, and clothed only in a shirt and a pair of trousers. In his apartment he had never heard a sound, whether produced by a man, by an animal, or by anything else. He never saw the heavens, nor did there ever appear a brightening daylight such as at Nuremberg. Whenever he awoke from sleep he found a loaf of bread and a pitcher of water beside him. Sometimes this water had a bad taste; and whenever this was the case he could no longer keep his eyes open, but was compelled to fall asleep. When he awoke he found that he had a clean shirt on and that his nails had been cut. He never saw the face of the man who brought him his bread and water. In the room he had two wooden horses and some ribbons. With these he always amused himself, as long as he was awake. How long he lived in this state he knew not, for he had no knowledge of time. The man who acted as his keeper had, while he was in his little room, taught him to write, standing behind him during each lesson, in order that the face of the teacher might not be seen, and guiding his hand. In this manner he learned to write his name, and also some of the usual words and copies that are used in elementary instruction. After a time his keeper taught him to stand upright. The method employed for this purpose was very singular. The keeper caught him firmly round the breast from behind, placed his own feet behind his (Kaspar's) feet and lifted them as in stepping forward. Finally the man appeared once again, placed his (Kaspar's) hands over his shoulders, tied them fast, and carried him on his back out of the room. The journey must have lasted several days at least, for he remembered having eaten and slept several times. He never saw the face of his keeper even now, for as he either led or carried him along, the man directed him (Kaspar) to keep his face directed towards the ground. During this time the keeper attempted to teach him to walk, and also instructed him to say the same jargon he had used when he was first observed by the citizens of Nuremberg. Not long before he was discovered the keeper put on him the clothes in which he was found. Then, suddenly thrusting the letter into his hands, the keeper vanished. After this the citizens found him almost immediately, and conducted him to the guard-room."

This account, given almost in Kaspar's own words, will go far toward explaining how it was that the youth's mind was in such a dark state; but it helps very little to show who Kaspar Hauser really was, or whence he came, or in fact any real particulars of his actual history. That a great crime had been committed, by some one, was very evident. Many conjectures were hazarded; and it was only after very considerable and protracted search that it was possible to arrive at any satisfactory conclusions. Link by link the chain of evidence—circumstantial only, it must be admitted—was put together; and, finally, it was on all sides generally believed that Kaspar Hauser was the product of an illicit alliance. A clergyman, who is said to be his father, took care of the child from the moment of his birth, and in time shut him up in some out-of-the-way subterranean vault in the convent where he resided. Here it was that Kaspar, totally secluded from all human observation and knowledge save that of the clergyman, passed seventeen long years.

The incident mentioned by Kaspar in his account of himself relating to the bad taste in his water, causing him to fall into a deep sleep, was explained a short time after he had given the narrative to his friends. It occurred to one of them that the clergyman might have mixed a drop or two of laudanum with the water, with the view of inducing a stupor while the boy's clothes were being changed. One day a small dose of laudanum was put in his glass of water without Kaspar's knowledge. On tasting the water he recognized the flavor at once, and unhesitatingly affirmed that the glass contained some of the stuff he used to have given him during his imprisonment when a change of clothes became necessary. This circumstance clearly proved the truth of the conjecture.

The accounts that are recorded of the growth of Kaspar's mind are most interesting. Incidents that, to an ordinary person, would appear of no moment, had a strange and inexplicable effect on him. For instance, as an experiment, he was brought into contact with a female somnambulist. Her presence affected him in the most extraordinary manner. He was seized with violent pain and disgust. He describes the interview in his own words as follows: "As I came into the room and the door of the diseased person was opened, I felt a sudden dragging on both sides of my breast, as if some one wished to pull me into the room. As I went in and proceeded toward the sick person, a very strong breath blew upon me; and, when I had her at my back, it blew upon me from behind; and the pulling I felt before in my breast I now felt in my shoulders. The sick person seated herself and said that she was ill. I also said that I was unwell, and that I must sit down. Now a violent beating of my heart came on me, and there was a heat in all my body. This condition lasted until the next morning; then I had a headache again and a twittering in all my limbs; still not so violent." The somnambulist, curiously enough, was affected almost in the same manner.

On another occasion a spider let itself down from the ceiling on Kaspar's head. Directly it touched him he felt a chill and an excessive degree of cold on his forehead, without knowing the cause. Suddenly putting up his hand to his face he crushed the spider on his under lip. Hereupon he felt, for more than a quarter of an hour, a burning pain, which passed away with a tremor. When he retired to bed the burning sensation returned. During the night the lip swelled, and there rose on it several small bladders, out of which there was a discharge of white matter in the morning. The chill occasioned by the spider was of long continuance.

But it was not only by the sight of and contact with living creatures that Kaspar was visibly affected; for we are told that one day he happened to see a particularly fine flower, and on his attempting to pluck it the same feeling as that caused by the spider came upon him. On another occasion, after eating a ripe grape, he immediately became strangely affected, and was compelled to sleep off the effects of the, to him, potent juice.

Although for a long time Kaspar's body was considerably in advance of his mind, yet by degrees he began to overcome many of his peculiarities. Still he could never forget the hardships he had suffered, and the fact of his being inclined to brood over them tended to retard his mental progress.

About four years after his first appearance in Nuremberg Kaspar was fortunate enough to come under the notice of Lord Stanhope. This nobleman conceived the idea of adopting the strange youth, and, having prevailed upon the inhabitants of Nuremberg, who looked upon Kaspar as their adopted son, to give him up, he placed him under a tutor at Anspach, previous to removing him to England. But, unhappily, these benevolent intentions were frustrated, for the same mystery which shrouded his birth hung over his death. On the 14th of December, 1833, Kaspar Hauser, while returning from his official duties at mid-day, was accosted in the streets by a person who promised to impart to him the secret of his origin, if he would meet him in the park of Anspach Castle. Without informing his protectors of this circumstance, Hauser imprudently kept the appointment. The stranger was at his post; he took Kaspar aside, and, without speaking a word, plunged a dagger into his breast and immediately disappeared. Hauser had sufficient strength left to reach the residence of his new tutor, into whose apartment he rushed, and had just breath enough to utter two or three indistinct words, when he immediately fainted, and, after relating the circumstances of his assassination, died on the 17th of the same month. Every expedient which the police could invent was adopted to discover the murderer, but without success. The secret, which it cost so much crime to preserve, has never been divulged.

Detecting Crime.

A woman applied to a priest to recover a certain article which had been stolen from her. The priest, suspecting that the thief was a member of his congregation, adopted an original method to detect him.

After mass, he mentioned the theft, and his suspicion that the thief was then present. If so, he intended to find him out.

"Down on your knees, all of you," he said. The congregation knelt. "I shall throw this book," he continued, "and it will hit the thief."

He made the motion, and one man only ducked his head. "Come here, sir! You are the thief!" and he was.

An English magistrate in India once detected a thief by a method similar in spirit, though not in form, to the priest's.

He missed a large silver bracelet which he had left over night on his table. He suspected one of his servants, but said nothing about the loss, except to his valet. In his presence he placed on the table two marked rupees, powdered with nitrate of silver. The next morning the money had disappeared.

He ordered the drum to be beaten to summon all the servants. After they had been placed in line, he talked to them about the theft, and how wrong it was for a servant to rob his master. Not a face gave a sign of guilt.

Then he told them what he had done, and that the thief would have a caustic mark on his hand. Instantly one man looked at his hand. He saw the mark, turned and fled.

His fellow-servants pursued and caught him. He made a confession of his guilt, and restored both money and bracelet. Then he was drummed off he premises.

Chinese Proverbs.

Many of the Chinese proverbs have their counterparts in English; the difference of expression, however, being in many cases characteristic. Thus: "Throw a sprat to catch a whale," is rendered, "Throw a brick to allure a gem." "Not to cry stinking fish," is rendered in Chinese, "The melon-seller declares his melons sweet." "Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves," becomes, "Count cash as though they were gold"—cash being a coin of the smallest denomination. Again, "A rolling stone gathers no moss," is translated, "The swallow plastering its nest is labor lost"—this being a very happy allusion to the migratory habits of the bird. "Preparing is preventing," an old English expression, has its counterpart in, "Get the coffin ready and the man won't die," while "Too many cooks will spoil the broth" is rendered by the curious expression, "Seven hands and eight feet." "There is a black sheep in every flock" becomes, "Crows are black all the world over." And the oft-quoted saying of "Robbing Peter to pay Paul" assumes the form, "To pull down the western wall to repair the eastern." Speaking of the scarcity of good men, the Chinese say "There are two good men; one of them is dead, the other unborn."—Chambers' Journal.

Arrears of Pensions.

The last session of Congress appropriated $25,000,000 to pay arrears of pensions. More than two-thirds of this has already been paid out, and all will be paid by January next. The payments made and to be made have been pretty equally distributed over the Northern States, and more has gone South than is generally supposed. There were over 300,000 Southern white men in the Union army, and half as many colored. When the remaining $8,000,000 is paid, the $25,000,000 will have been distributed among the States about as follows:

Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine	$1,840,000
Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut	1,800,000
Eastern New York, New York city, and Long Island	1,880,000
Western and Northern New York	1,800,000
Eastern Pennsylvania	1,700,000
Western Pennsylvania	1,350,000
Ohio	2,400,000
Illinois	2,150,000
Indiana	1,750,000
Michigan	1,050,000
Nebraska and Iowa	1,000,000
Minnesota, Wisconsin, Dakota, and Montana	1,100,000
Colorado, Kansas, and Missouri	1,400,000
California, Oregon, Utah, Washington, New Mexico, and Arizona	850,000
Kentucky	690,000
Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and District of Columbia	1,800,000
Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, and Florida	1,400,000

This shows a large and unusual distribution of money over the country; for it is in addition to the regular pension payments, which amount to about $30,000,000 per annum. The regular pension-roll, however, will rapidly decrease hereafter, unless new classes of pensioners are added, or pensions increased, which is not likely. The natural decrease in the pension-roll is estimated at nearly $2,000,000 per annum. The arrears of pensions, when once paid, are paid forever, and can never return to vex the taxpayers.

Tennyson.

Alfred Tennyson, the English poet-laureate, has just passed his 70th year. He is third son of a clergyman in the established church, and was born in Somerby, Lincolnshire, Aug. 6, 1809. Receiving his early education from his father, he completed his studies at Trinity College, Cambridge.

While yet a boy he published a volume of poems, in connection with his brother Charles. During his college career he wrote a prize poem, and in 1830 published a volume of lyrical poems. In 1832 he published another volume.

Ten years later, in 1842, he attracted attention by means of two volumes containing the poems he had already published together with the "Mort d'Arthur," "Locksley Hall," and the "May Queen." Their author was given a front position among the poets of the time.

"The Princess" was published in 1847, and in 1850 "In Memoriam" was received with great favor. The poet's popularity was increased to such a degree that on the death of Wordsworth in 1851, he succeeded him as poet-laureate.

Since then he has given to the world, in addition to commemorative poems, "The Idylls of the King," published in 1858; "Enoch Arden," in 1864; "The Holy Grail," in 1869, and his dramatic poems.

Mr. Tennyson is well known in America by his writings, and in popular estimation holds a place with Longfellow, Whittier and Bryant.

The Perspiring Gentleman.

Just before the morning express on the Kansas Pacific reached Denver a man, who afterward registered at a Denver hotel as J. R. Mathers, leaned back in his seat and, mopping his face, exclaimed: "Oh, how I transpire!" A gentleman at his side first chuckled and then replied: "Perspire, you say?" "No, I said transpire, and I mean transpire," said Mr. Mathers. "You are not according to Webster." "Well, I'll just bet you $50 that I am right," said the perspiring gentleman, as he reached into his vest pocket after his roll. The other accepted the wager, put up his $50, and, a copy of Noah's little book having been procured, the definition of the word "transpire" was found to be: "To emit through the excretories of the skin; to send off in vapor." The bet was paid.

A Swan Guarding a Child's Grave.

Over the grave of a 3-year-old child buried near Milford, last year, a beautiful white swan has ever since kept constant watch, scarcely leaving the mound even to eat. Any one who attempts a near approach is greeted with the bird's shrill cries and preparation for an attack. The swan's mate endeavored for some time to induce her companion to return to the lake, but without success, and eventually died of grief. Hundreds of people visited the cemetery to witness the singular conduct of this self-stationed sentinel.—Waterbury (Ct.) American.

His Mother's Tombstone.

One of the most original and extreme cases of swindling ever recorded was brought to light in a San Francisco court the other day, where it was shown that the plaintiff had had the date on his mother's tombstone changed, in order to make it appear that she had died a year earlier than was the fact, as under the law then in force the mother's half of a piece of property went to the children. The date given as to the time of her death was six days prior to the time a change in the law was made.—Baltimore American.

THE German Government has dissolved the three gymnastic societies at Strasbourg because they took part in the fetes at Nancy on the occasion of the unveiling of the Thiers monument.

AT HOME FROM CHURCH.

The lilacs lift in generous bloom
  Their plumes of dear old-fashioned flowers;
Their fragrance fills the still old house,
  Where, left alone, I count the hours.

High in the apple-trees the bees
  Are humming, busy in the sun—
An idle robin cries for rain
  But once or twice, and then is done.

The Sunday-morning quiet holds
  In heavy slumbers all the street,
While from the church, just out of sight
  Behind the elms, comes slow and sweet

The organ's drone, the voices faint
  That sing the quaint long-meter hymn—
I somehow feel as if shut out
  From some mysterious temple, dim

And beautiful, with blue and red
  And golden lights from windows high,
Where angels in the shadows stand
  And earth seems very near the sky.

The day-dream fades—and so I try
  Again to catch the tune that brings
No thought of temple nor of priest,
  But only of one voice that sings.

—Sarah O. Jewett.

PITH AND POINT.

A FINANCIAL crash cannot be worked up into towels.

IT'S a game of bluff when you try to scale a precipice.

JONAH is reported to have been the man who struck oil.

A PAIR of ears that go on a head of civilization—Pioneers and frontiers.

IF a policeman's club were red, what city would it represent? Baton Rouge.

A MAN who declared himself to be intoxicated with music was considered air-tight.

THE latest figurative expression upon seeing a man bored is, "Throw him a rope." In other words, "Hang the fellow."

NO MATTER how handsome a family monument a man may have in the cemetery, he never wants to lie on his back and look up at it.

LITTLE boy at the opening of the proposed spelling-match—"Let's start fair, grandmother; you take Nebuchadnezzar and I'll take cat."

"MY pleasure is two-fold," said a heartless young man who was courting two girls at once. Two fooled, he meant.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

A FAITHFUL brother in a Fairfield (Ct.) church recently prayed for the absent members "who were prostrate on beds of sickness and chairs of wellness."

THE bell-punch is generally supposed to be a modern invention, but it was evidently in use in Macbeth's time, from the fact that he says, "Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready, she strike upon the bell."

"I WOULD rather," says the editor of the Okolona States, "be a living ass than a dead lion." Nature having gratified him in that particular, what in the world is he growling about?—Buffalo Express.

IF the sun were not boiling, and the sand didn't get into the salad, and the rocks were soft and smooth, and there were no hornets or mosquitoes, and one hadn't to go three-quarters of a mile for water, what a tame affair a picnic would be.

SOME folks wonder why it is that a man worth a quarter of a million will step off the sidewalk into the mud to pick up a lost cent. The reason is plain enough. He does it to prevent a man worth half a million from getting hold of the cash.—Detroit Free Press.

"NOW, MR. ROBINSON," said a fair young city visitor to the kind-hearted farmer, "won't you show us your watermelon orchard?" "I haven't a watermelon tree on the place this year, ma'am; they were all winter-killed;" and his questioner wondered why he smiled so pleasantly as he answered.

"I'VE a new thing—a big thing!" he said; "I'm going to get up a matrimonial agency!" "The scheme is venerable," said a cold-hearted bystander. "Not on my plan!" was his proud reply. "'All goods not satisfactory cheerfully and promptly exchanged.'"—Puck.

WE have observed that the papers of the country invariably print that tender poem beginning,

The melancholy days have come, at just the season of the year when the average wife returns from her summer trip.—St. Louis Times-Journal.

SAID old Mr. Wiseowl: "There is a passage in scriptur', brutherin, thet's impressed me much, very much; I've thought on 't and thought on 't, an' I'm allus thinking on 't. I disremember jest whar 't is and, ez fur thet matter, jest what it is; but you carn't tell how much uv a sollis it is to me on my journey through this vale o' tears."—Boston Transcript.

Speed of European Railway Trains.

The German Government, which intends developing its railway system, has made a collection of figures on this subject, giving not the average speed of all the railway trains, but the average speed of the fastest trains of that class. Taking the kilometer at five-eighths of a mile—it is in reality about twenty feet less—the table is as follows:

	Miles.
England (London to Dover)	50
Belgium	48
France (Paris to Bordeaux)	39½
Germany (Berlin to Cologne)	39½
Italy (Bologna to Brindisi)	31¼
Austria	30
Russia (Moscow to St. Petersburg)	27
Switzerland (Geneva to Lausanne)	27

Quite contrary to the usually received opinion, Mr. Jay Gould says that his recent trip abroad convinced him of the inferiority of English railroading when compared with American.

THE establishment of a system of horse passports is under consideration by the Russian Government. The measure is suggested, not in view of political danger from the equine race, but in order to prevent a misfortune that often happens to the horses themselves, namely, horse-stealing. According to this peculiar project, the birth, peculiar signs and death of every horse must be recorded, and the proprietor of a horse or horses is to be furnished with a horse passport that will entitle him to the legal possession of said horse or horses. Now, as a horse-thief cannot possibly steal both the horse and its passport, he cannot sustain his right to the possession of a stolen horse.

SABBATH READING.

Be Still.

(Psalms xlvi. 10.)

"Be still, and know that I am God."
The way is dark and wild
Through which thou goest, my child;
I cannot promise thee a stormless path,
For lightnings scath
And thunders roar the pilgrim's journey hath.

"Be still, and know that I am God."
The elements are Mine;
It is a hand divine
That quiets the whirlwind in its awful course;
The mystic force
Of hail and tempest find in Me their source.

"Be still, and know that I am God."
In danger's hour be calm;
This is thy secret balm:
To know that thou art safe when I command;
Then only stand,
And see deliverance by My mighty hand.

"Be still, and know that I am God."
Ask not the reason why
I weave such mystery
Through all the warp of thy frail life below;
For thou shalt know,
And read the plan in heaven's bright glow.

"Be still, and know that I am God."
Through storms and fears be still;
Only thy part fulfill;
And as thou walkest I will shelter thee;
Thy foes shall flee,
And thou shalt journey all the way with Me.

"Be still, and know that I am God."
'Twill be enough for thee,
Safe in My throne with Me—
Star-crowned thy head, within thy hand a palm—
To sing thy psalm,
When storms of earth end in eternal calm.

Constancy.

One of the most remarkable instances of feminine fortitude and Christian constancy ever found in human history is that of Perpetua, who suffered under the persecution of the Roman Emperor, Severus, at Carthage, in Africa, about the year 206 A. D.

Perpetua was a young widow of 22 years, wealthy, and of noble connections. Her infant, who was born after her husband's death, was her companion in her troubles.

She was arrested for doing divine honors to Christ, and not to the spirit of the Roman Emperor.

Her father, who was a heathen, urged her to renounce her faith. She asked him whether an urn, which stood near, could be called by any other than its proper name. He replied, "No." "Neither," said she, "can I call myself other than what I am—a Christian." After spending many days in prison, with her infant, during which time she was blessed and comforted with the most cheering and heavenly visions every time she fell asleep, her heathen friends asked her if she would not at last recant before the dreaded trial and execution.

She declared that, as for her sentence of death, God would carry her through that trial, and as for the prison, she said, "The prison all at once became like a palace to me, and I would have rather been there than anywhere else."

It was, no doubt, this expression which the Rev. John Newton, the converted slave-dealer, had in mind when he wrote in that familiar hymn—

When blessed with a sense of His love,
A palace a toy would appear;
And prisons would palaces prove,
If Jesus should dwell with me there.

Perpetua, with her faithful companions and her infant, were condemned to the amphitheater. The male victims were exposed to lions, bears and leopards; the women were tossed by a furious bull.

Perpetua appeared as if in a trance, insensible to the pain. On recovering her consciousness, she asked when she would be dispatched by the gladiator, for those who survived the wild beasts were subjected to the sword of the gladiator. The youth who was appointed to dispatch Perpetua was so overcome by her calmness that he bungled at his work, whereupon the resolute martyr guided his sword to a mortal part.

It was such lives and spectacles as these which gave power and vigor to the Christian church at Carthage—that very spot which Virgil had made so celebrated by the heathen sacrifice of Queen Dido.

And it is such events as these early martyrdoms which caused the historian, Gibbon, to wonder at the mysterious power which was lodged in the early Christians' breasts, as he himself has recorded these instances in his famous work, "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

An Orator's Last Words.

Brilliant and eloquent, S. S. Prentiss was the idolized lawyer of the Southwest.

He might have been their political leader, but a brief experience in Congress so disgusted him with practical politics that he refused its honors. A fortune awaited him, but he turned from it, because he could not abandon social pleasures, nor practice self-denial. At last he resolved to work himself out of debt, and provide for the education of his children.

"I must work!" he said to those who had advised rest, because they saw that his good resolution had come too late. The spirit was now willing, but the body, enfeebled by disease and dissipation, refused to obey his commands.

"Why, good sirs, a man cannot lie in bed and make his living," he answered to friends who bade him leave New Orleans and rest on a plantation.

Nerving himself, he appeared in a case which drew out the culture of the city to hear him. Never was he more brilliant in wit and eloquence. He did not know, but his friends did, that it was the swan's death-song. They shaded their eyes, for they saw that the vigor of the intellect made more apparent the decay of the body.

"Take me home," he whispered to a friend, when recovering from the prostration in which his eloquent plea had left him. He was borne home on a river-boat—to die.

On the night of the arrival, the family smiled mournfully to see his old self return.

"Gather me half a bushel of roses with the dew on," he said to a relative. "Put them in a basin and stand it by my bed," was the remark, as the roses were brought in.

During his illness, the thought that he was leaving his family destitute made him talk much of suits and raising money. Now and then the great orator became a boy again, and wandered to his Maine home.

"Dear mother, do you love me?" repeated again and again, showed that her teachings and prayers were in his mind.

In the hours of consciousness he was much distressed at the idea of death. Mary, his pious wife, urged him to trust in the Savior.

"You do not know how wicked I have been. God will never forgive me," he replied.

"'Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow,'" replied his wife, "if you will but turn to the Lord."

"Pray, dear. Won't you pray? Don't you remember the prayers your mother taught you?" she continued.

"Oh, yes, but I want you to pray with me."

She repeated the Lord's prayer, he responding at each petition, "Amen!"

"O, God, the Son!" she heard him whisper, as if striving to recall the petition of the Litany, "O, God, the Son, Redeemer of the World, have mercy upon us miserable sinners!"

On a Sabbath evening the wife was busy in the room, his eyes wistfully following her. "Mary!" she heard, and hastening to him received an embrace and a kiss. It was the last word uttered on earth by the eloquent advocate.

One solemn thought is suggested. No words uttered by the orator in moments of highest inspiration were so treasured as those whispered "Amens," and that sighed-out "O, God, the Son!" they were words of penitence.

His imagination in its uttermost wanderings never brought back a scene which thrilled as did the "Dear, dear mother, do you love me?"

It revealed the boy at his mother's knee, and suggested the hope that at last he received the Savior as a little child.—Youth's Companion.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

In the last ten years $210,000,000 have been expended on account of the navy, according to the report of the treasury.

The expenditures of the London School Board this year are estimated at $3,000,000, involving a rate of 5¼d on the pound sterling.

The "Jacqueline" bell, of Paris, cast in 1300, weighed 15,000 pounds; another, cast in 1472, weighed 25,000 pounds. The famous bell of Rouen, cast in 1501, weighed 36,364 pounds. One at Toulouse weighs 66,000 pounds. The largest bell in the world is the great bell of Moscow, about 19 feet in height, and weighing 448,000 pounds. It was cast in 1734, but fell during a fire in 1737, was injured, and remained till 1837, when it was raised, and now forms the dome of a chapel. Another Moscow bell, cast in 1819, weighs 80 tons. The great bell at Pekin, 14 feet high, weighs 53½ tons.

The income tax of Great Britain, according to a Parliamentry return just issued, was charged last year on a total of $660,000,000. This shows an increase of $5,775,000 over the previous year. The number of persons paying tax was 397,750, being an increase of 15,778 over the number in 1877. It would seem, that there are 1,487 persons whose incomes are assessed between $4,500 and $5,000, while between $5,000 and $10,000 there are 12,403; under $15,000, 3,860; under $20,000, 1,824; under $25,000, 980; under $50,000, 1,870; under $250,000, 994; over $250,000, 90.

The following are the heights of the different monuments, domes, etc., in the world: St. Antoine column, at Rome, 135 feet; principal tower of the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, 145; Trajan's column, Rome, 145; Napoleon's column, at Paris, 150; Washington's monument, at Baltimore, 180; the great obelisk at Thebes, 200; Bunker Hill monument, at Boston, 223; Column of Delhi, 262; Trinity Church steeple, at New York, 264; the contemplated new dome of the Capitol, 300; dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, Bee Ranching in California.

This is a famous country for bees and the making of honey, and at many a breakfast-table in distant Europe to-day the waffle is spread with sweets that have been filched from the hearts of 1,000 California flowers. In the mouth of almost every canon there is a bee-ranch or apiary, whose owner grows indolent and prosperous from the labors of his industrious subjects. Here there are no long winters with dearth of flowers, through which the patient workers must be nursed and fed in order that they may live until the opening of the next field-season. These bee-ranches are models of neatness and domestic comfort, and the profession of bee-keeping is rapidly becoming popular among persons of little physical strength or small financial capital, or both; such as maiden ladies, broken-down ministers, bachelor students, and those dilettanti farmers who fancy that the royal road to bucolic happiness lies through the flowery beds of a bee-pasture. Their expenses are as light as those of a hermit in his cave, and what stores of honey are laid up are so much clear gain, as the bees board themselves while they work, and work unceasingly in preparation for the winter which never comes. When the hive is full, the cakes of comb are removed, the liquid is strained from the cells, and the empty cups are replaced, to be filled again and again. This economical process prevents a waste of labor and time in the gathering of wax and the building of new bins in the store-house. Walking out in the morning in the green bushwood of these canons you hear a loud and continuous buzzing of wings, and, although there may not be a flower in sight, it is as ceaseless and strong as in a buckwheat patch or clover field at home. This humming of bees is nature's tenor voice, as the roaring of water is her bass. There is a cure for home-sickness in the bees' monotone, even though the authors thereof be perfectly wild, as, indeed, many of these are. In such a country you cannot feel utterly lonesome and lost.—Sunday Afternoon.

Seth Green has had nearly 7,000,000 of young shad placed in the Hudson river this season. Will some smart boy with a slate and pencil tell us how many bones this would be?

FARM NOTES.

Autumn Garden Gleanings.

Martynias.—Gather for pickles while very tender.

Onions.—Gather and store in a dry, cool place.

Weeds.—Do not put them in the compost-heap, if already gone to seed. It is best to burn them.

Melons.—Should be turned occasionally, as they ripen better. Remove the very latest ones as they set.

Spinach.—For next spring is to be sown this month, in drills fifteen inches apart. First thoroughly manure.

Beets.—Continue to hoe the late-grown crop until the tops are too large. Some thinning of the late sowings may be done for greens.

Sweet Potatoes.—The largest may be removed from the rows for use, and the rest left to grow. Do not allow the vines to root at the joints.

Cabbages and Cauliflowers.—Are benefited by frequent hoeing, and a dressing of guano or other concentrated manure is often applied with advantage.

Turnips.—Hoe and thin the larger until prevented by growth of tops. The strap-leaf sown before the middle of the month will usually make a crop.

Tomatoes.—Destroy the large green worms. Make into catchup when fruit is abundant. Gather green fruit for pickles before frost comes and spoils them.

Cucumbers.—Gather for pickles every second day. Let none ripen save those needed for seed, and they should be of the earliest, otherwise the vines die.

Corn.—Dry a quantity for winter use—it never comes amiss. Save the best and earliest ears for seed. Cut up and cure the stalks for winter fodder as soon as the crop is off. Clean the ground.

Celery.—Keep clear of weeds. If some is wanted for early use, straighten up the leaves and draw the earth to them with the hands. But around New York this operation is not performed until next month, as the plants will now make their most rapid growth in the cool nights and warm days.

Why Stock-Farming Is Better Than Grain-Raising.

The advocates of stock-breeding and feeding as being more desirable farming than making grain-growing a specialty need not be without a reason for the faith that is within them. It is not a mere blind assertion that the former will pay better than the latter in a series of years. It has not simply "happened" that this has been true in the past. It can be shown that the principles of good business management strongly favor the plan of making live stock a prominent feature on the mass of farms of the country—certainly in the West. There are many farms of which this is not true, but they are in the minority, not the majority.

It is an obvious principle, that, if we have to transport our products, especially long distances, it is wise to reduce the weight and bulk as much as possible. This the farmer does in a marked degree where he feeds his grain and grass to animals instead of selling these products. The condensation is most marked where the product of the animal, as wool or milk, or better, its products, butter and cheese, are sold; but the homely proverb, that the best sack in which to ship corn to market is a beef-hide or hog-skin, expresses a truth forcibly, if not elegantly.

The one great disadvantage of Western agriculture, as compared with that of the East, is the greater distance from the great markets for farm products. Complaints of too high charges for transportation have been very common. A difference of even a small fraction of a cent in the freight charges per pound, for shipping corn, may decide whether the crop is to give a profit or loss, for its value at starting is now less than half a cent per pound. A like difference would be less important in the case of pork, beef or mutton, still less in the case of cheese, butter or wool. Here is one indisputable advantage the stock farmer has. It is a generally recognized rule that the selling price of any article is largely affected by the time, labor and skill required to produce it. It is also usually true that the more frequently we change the form of the product, the more we "manufacture," the greater the probable profit. In these regards the stock farmer has the advantage over the one who stops at grain growing. Animals require a longer time for their production, and usually more care and skill than grain growing.

It is one of the most obvious of business principles that one should keep his capital employed. It is better to loan money to the Government at 4 per cent. for a long series of years than to loan it for three months of each year at 10 per cent., and have the money lie idle the remainder of the time. It is better to take steady work at $1 a day than to rely on uncertain "jobs" at $2 a day. It is a special advantage of stock-growing and feeding that, if rightly managed, each animal may increase in size, weight, and value each day, and each day labor for itself, or require the labor of its owner in some form. Payment for this labor is to be expected, and some profit also. It is a special disadvantage of exclusive grain-growing that, especially with spring-sown small grains, all the work may be done in less than half the year; then the crops cease to improve or change in actual value, except to lose by waste of various kinds. During perhaps half the year the farmer giving his attention to grain-growing is comparatively idle, as are his teams, while the stock-grower may find employment during the entire year. The fact that daily labor throughout all the year is an essential in dairy farming is one chief reason for the more than usual profitableness of that interest through a long series of years.

It is wise not only to keep capital constantly employed, but also to keep all the capital employed whenever it is possible. Stock-farming here, again, has the preference over grain farming. Very many farms are too wet, too hilly, too stony, or, as yet, too stumpy for profitable tillage, but will give a fair return when in grass. There are nooks and corners, there are the sides of streams and fences, which produce good grass, but are not used when the land is in grain. So, too, the stock will probably consume many products which would be largely wasted on grain farms. The waste of valuable food, where no stock is kept on a corn-growing farm, is very great. Even straw from the small grains can be put to better use than simply to allow it to rot for manure.

The use of the word manure readily suggests one other marked advantage in rearing and feeding stock over the plan of grain or grass growing for sale. Much less is removed from the farm and much more remains to be returned to the land as manure. The hay-seller disposes of nearly all the land has produced, except the roots; the grain-seller saves the stalks, the stock-seller saves much of the grain; the wool or milk-seller saves still more, as a rule, although in some respects pasturage of dairy cows is more exhaustive to land than is feeding steers.—Western Farmer.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.

To Clean Sponge.—Rinse two or three times in sea-water.

Fleas.—If you will take air-slacked lime, place in a colander and sift over the places infested by fleas, you will find yourselves free of the pests.

Oatmeal Crackers.—Take one pint of milk, one teaspoonful of salt, and stir in sufficient meal to make a thin batter; drop in buttered tins and bake hard.

Green-Corn Omelet.—Take twelve ears of green corn, five eggs, salt and pepper to suit the taste; split the middle of each row of corn, and then scrape from the cobs.

To Drive Away Red Ants.—One pint of tar in two quarts of hot water, put in earthen vessels in closets, or sprinkle sea-sand, or strew oyster shells or red-cedar shavings.

To Renew Gilt Frames.—If you will take sufficient flour of sulphur to give a golden tinge to one and one-half pints of water, and boil in it five onions, strain, and when cool apply to the parts that require restoring, with a soft brush, it will come out good as new, when dry.

Blackberry Cordial.—Ripest berries; mash; put in linen bag; squeeze out juice; pound of best loaf sugar to every quart of juice; put in preserving saucepan, and when melted set on the fire, and boil to thin jelly; when cold, to every quart of juice allow a quart of brandy; stir well and bottle. Ready for use at once.

Chicken Salad.—Two chickens weighing six pounds, two bunches of celery. Boil the chickens in very little water; cut in large pieces; dry the celery without washing; take two yelks of hard-boiled eggs, the yelk of one raw egg, and mix them together, with one teaspoonful of dry mustard; add slowly half of a large bottle of oil, the juice of one lemon, two table-spoonfuls of vinegar, teaspoonful of salt, little red pepper; put in a cold place just before using; mix it through the chicken; also, two hard-boiled eggs cut fine, one table-spoonful of capers, and six olives, cut fine; save little dressing for the top.

Baked Fish.—Take any nice fish, boil it, remove the bones and chop considerable parsley very fine, with one small onion. Have about as much bread crumbs as fish. Take a pudding-dish and butter it, then lay in a layer of bread crumbs, then a layer of fish, ending with the bread crumbs. Mix your parsley and onion, with salt and pepper, through your bread crumbs. Put lumps of butter over the top, a very slight grating of nutmeg, and pour over it all sweet cream, or very rich milk, till it rises nearly to the top. Bake in a quick oven till it has a nice, rich brown crust.

Sparkling Broth, or Bean Soup.—Procure one quart of small black beans or white ones will do, and soak them in boiling water over night. In the morning put the beans in six quarts of water in a large boiler, adding some beef or mutton, or any kind of cold meat that you may have in the house, first cracking the bones and cutting off the fat from the meat. Put to it one large onion, some nutmeg, and whole peppers. Set it on the fire where it will simmer nine hours. Then strain it, rubbing all the mealy parts of the beans through the sieve. Wash the boiler and return the soup to it to heat up. When served, cut up half a lemon in very thin slices and lay in the bottom of the tureen, pouring the soup, boiling, over them. A wine-glass of claret is a great improvement.

The Grampus.

The grampus (Delphinus grampus) is the most voracious of the inhabitants of the ocean. It does not devour one-third of the animals it kills. It is the greatest enemy of the whale, and dead bodies of whales have frequently been found having large pieces of flesh torn from the body, and the lips mutilated or destroyed. As soon as the whale opens its mouth to defend itself the grampus darts at its large soft tongue, tears it off, and causes the death of the animal.

It is said that the grampuses are fond of amusing themselves by mobbing the Greenland whale, and that they persecute it by leaping out of the water and striking it sharply with their tails as they descend. In consequence of this it has been called the thrasher or killer. The swordfish is reported to join the thrasher in this amusement, and to attack the whale from below to prevent it from diving.

The grampus is from twenty to thirty feet in length and from ten to twelve feet in girth. It has forty-four conical, strongly made, and slightly curved teeth. Its color is black on the upper part of the body, suddenly changing to white on the abdomen and part of the sides, and there is generally a white patch of considerable size behind the eyelid.

Although it sometimes wanders to more southern regions, its favored home is in the northern seas that wash the coast of Greenland and Spitzbergen, where it congregates in small herds.

The latest shoe-buckle is in the form of a horseshoe.

THE EUROPEAN WAR-CLOUD.

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

The cable dispatches report that the strained relations between Russia and Germany are causing decided uneasiness, and it is believed on the Berlin and Paris Bourses that a war-cloud is hanging over Europe. As the result of this uneasiness, values are unsettled, and heavy operators are holding off, anxiously awaiting the result of the diplomatic negotiations. While this cloud, which now threatens so darkly, may dissipate and pass harmlessly away, there is without question abundant cause for apprehension. There has not been a time for years when the political pot has boiled so furiously as since the signing of that mischievous instrument, the Berlin treaty, which, by its most sanguine advocates even, was only regarded as bridging over difficulties temporarily. It now appears as if the tide of political complications had become strong enough to carry the bridge completely away. There is scarcely a section of Europe, except Scandinavia, that is not involved in difficulty with some other section.

A brief review of the situation will show how well grounded are the apprehensions in the commercial centers, which are always the most sensitive points and the quickest to feel any disturbing influences. Since the massacre in Cabul the Afghan tribes have risen in revolt. The Ameer's loyalty is in doubt. The Russian journals are urging the Government to hurry their troops to the frontier and demand a partition of the country. It is evident that the work which was supposed to have been settled by Maj. Cavagnari must be all done over again. In their desperation the English people are not slow in charging that the disloyalty of the Ameer and the revolt of the Afghan troops are the result of Russian intrigue and the charge is made with all the more boldness and recklessness because, in the present weakened financial condition of Russia, and the extreme delicacy of her relations with Germany and Austria, England can afford to offer her an affront with impunity. So far as Germany and Russia are concerned, it is not easy to see what has disturbed the relations of these two old friends, except that Germany cannot bear the pressure of such a formidable military power upon her borders, and is consequently seeking some cause to make war against her. As their interests are not opposed, and they have no mutual territorial aspirations, it is difficult to find any other reason than that Germany is determined to reduce the military strength of Russia. If this be the motive of Germany she has chosen an opportune time to assert it. A Russian alliance is no longer indispensable to Germany, and Russia has no other alliances with the continental powers, while Germany has just made a fresh and strong alliance with Austria, besides having offered overtures to England and France, which have been favorably considered. Again, while Russia emerged from the Turkish war with a halo of glory around her, it left her weakened and almost crippled financially, burdened with an enormous debt and flooded with paper money. The German people have not been slow in speaking out their real sentiments, and the Russians have angrily retorted. That it is not all "newspaper talk," however, is shown by the interview between the Emperor and the Czar and the negotiations between Bismarck and Gortschakoff, and the situation is all the more grave because, notwithstanding these consultations, the misunderstanding still continues.

Threatened by England on the one hand and Germany on the other, another danger threatens Russia in the future, and that is the possibility of the erection of a new Sclavic empire south of the Danube, with Austria as its promoter, if not its actual head. The latter power has already occupied Bosnia and Herzegovina under the Berlin treaty, and, by the consent of the same treaty, has still further pushed her way southeastwardly into the Sandjak of Novi-Bazar, which is only the prelude to her ultimate extension to Salonica, on the Ægean. Directly this is a commercial necessity, but indirectly its effect must be to add immensely to the Sclavic population of Austria, if not to give it a preponderance over the Magyars. Independent of Austria, other causes are operating toward the same result. It is absolutely certain that at no distant day Eastern Roumelia, Macedonia, and Thrace, down to the Greek line, will unite with Bulgaria, forming one powerful Sclavic kingdom. The whole tendency of events is toward such a consummation. What influences will then control the new kingdom? To answer this it must be remembered that Austria will extend along its entire western frontier. It must also be taken into account that embassies from Montenegro, Servia and Roumania have been in Vienna expressing their desire to cut loose from Russian influences altogether and affiliate with Austria. Should such a departure occur, Austria would place herself along the whole north line of the two Bulgarias and be a complete barrier between them and Russia. The end would be a vast Sclavic empire along the Danube, dominated by Austrian influences, and thus the region hitherto regarded by Russia as her own would be occupied by a rival power, and that power in complete sympathy with Germany. Thus beset with complications and threatened on three sides, without money and without alliances, it is no wonder that the Czar is reported to be despondent and sick. It would be rash to predict that war is going to result immediately from this significant combination of events and this unusual tension of diplomatic relations, for diplomatists are very fertile in resources for patching up complications; but at the same time the breaking of any one thread may scatter the treaty of Berlin to the winds and involve a general war.

"Here We Are."

A primitive wedding took place lately near Lithonia, De Kalb county, Ga., the ceremony being performed as the happy couple were standing on a log in a swamp. It was a runaway match, and the parties had engaged the services of the Rev. E. H. Clarke, who reached the rendezvous about 9 o'clock at night. The lovers were hidden in the swamp, and as the reverend gentleman passed through they whistled to him and called out, "Here we are." In a few moments more they were man and wife, and went on their way rejoicing.

ALL SORTS.

A shoemaker has, perhaps, more interest in woman's rights—and lefts—than anybody else.

There are said to be about 80,000 telephones now in service in this country, and only 500 in England.

All over Europe the scarcity of grain would be alarming if the United States were not so ready with large crops.

The largest sum ever paid for a horse in England was $72,000, given for Doncaster by the Duke of Westminster.

The Cincinnati Commercial looks around at the season's crops, and pronounces America the cornucopia of the world.

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, as the bookkeeper remarked when he adopted his employer's autograph.

A thousand pounds of powder was exploded in a quarry near Reading, Pa., loosening about 30,000 tons of stone at one blast.

The Ohio penitentiary management, determined not to be outdone by Edison, have introduced electricity as a mode of punishment.

Alphonse Daudet's great novel, "Kings in Exile," on which he has been engaged for more than two years, will soon be published in Paris.

West of Red river, in Manitoba, the proposed track of the Canada Pacific railway is being surveyed, but, though the contracts are actually let, the line is not yet located.

An old farmer, the first time he ate an oyster stew, was asked how he liked it. "Well," he answered, "I like the soup well enough, but I wish they'd left out them pollywogs."

A maiden living in Wurtsboro, Sullivan county, N. Y., picked up a small cub the other day while looking for a cow, but let it drop when the old bear growled behind a stump.

More than half the extent of mileage in the American railway system is in the Western States and Territories, but three-fourths of the ownership is in the Middle and New England States.

Julia Shepard, a mulatto, had the reputation among the negroes of Springfield, Mass., of being a voudoo charmer. A boy whom she was employed to nurse became ill and finally died. An analysis proved that he had been killed with arsenic. Julia is under arrest, the conjecture being that, to keep her standing with her own people as a witch, she committed murder.

People are sometimes apt to say that they don't call any one a relation who is more remote than a second cousin at furthest, but when the present Earl of Breadalbane succeeded his twelfth cousin in the possession of Taymouth Castle, the finest seat in Scotland, with $300,000 a year, he felt that relationship might be recognised even at that distance.

Of the four sons of the ex-Khedive of Egypt, the eldest is Tewfik, who has replaced his father. The second is Hassan, who was educated at Oxford and afterward served in a Prussian cavalry regiment. The third is Hassein, educated at Berlin, and, unlike his brother Hassan, grave and austere. The fourth son is Ibrahim, who studied at Woolwich, and has lately returned from England.

Col. Edwin Lawrence Drake, who sank the first oil well, is living in a modest home in Pennsylvania. He is disabled by muscular neuralgia, and, as he sits in an invalid's chair in the doorway, he can see the long tank trains carrying away the product of his discovery. His illness at an unlucky time prevented him from making a fortune; but he has a pension of $1,500 a year from the State.

Billy the Butter is a Savannah negro, so called because of his butting capabilities. His common feat is to break an inch board by running his head against it. Therefore, when he charged angrily at Mr. Howard with his head down, Mr. Howard naturally thought his life was in danger, and hastily fired with a pistol. Probably his fear was well founded, for the bullet glanced off the negro's hard skull, simply stunning him.

Peter Bain, of Bourgeval, France, gained the consent of his sweetheart to marry, and started for home, singing joyously as he went. The girl listened to his voice as he crossed a field, and noted that it stopped suddenly in the middle of the song. This odd breaking off excited her wonder. She went to learn the cause, and found her lover murdered. A rival had overheard him, followed him, and struck him down from behind.

How to Spell Isaac.

Mr. Isaac Staples, of Stillwater Minn., is a lumber-dealer who has an extensive correspondence. His bookkeeper has made a memorandum of the fact every time the given name of Mr. Staples has been misspelled in a letter addressed to him. The correspondence has already yielded the following fifty-one erroneous spellings, which will be read with delight by the spelling reformers:

Isiac
Iisac
Icsack
Iscac
Ysac
Isacg
Isic
I-isce
Icas
Isach
Isic
Isisac
Issacc
Issasc
Icsas
Issaic
Icke
Aisec
Issar
Isssac
Issach
Icsic
Isaas
Isiac
Isac
Iassac
Isk
I Sic
Issach
Issack
Isac
Isick
Issace
Isssce
Iseke
Issick
Issak
Iisace
Isia
Isak
Isack
Ike
Icsac
I Sick
Isich
Jsaac
Issac
Issce
Isoac
Idcc
Isaic

In the street parade of a circus at Mayfield, Mo., was a lion's cage, out of which hung the beast's tail. A boy could not resist the temptation to pull it, whereupon the lion attacked a man who was in the cage, and bit him dangerously.

Excelsior Hardware,

Auburn, Ind.

SURE THING!

We buy goods to sell and not to keep.

Cooking Stoves, Box Stoves,
Flat Stoves, Heating Stoves,
Parlor Stoves, Elevated Stoves,
Coal Stoves, Oil Stove,

And stoves of every kind. We have the largest stock of stoves in the county, and will sell cheaper than the cheapest. Farmers, mechanics, merchants, traders and everybody, when you want a call on us, we will sell you a first-class stove for less money than it takes to tell it.

STOVE!

Call and see what a pile of iron and tinware you can buy for a FEW CENTS. Our stoves are all fully warranted in every respect.

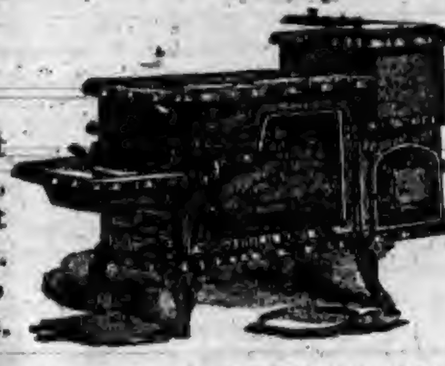
Our stoves have been submitted to the

SEVEREST TESTS

for years. They have become and are recognized as the

STANDARD COOKING STOVES

of America, and the fact that 420,000 are now in daily use, is positive proof of their great superiority over all others. Our large sales enable us to sell stoves at very low prices.



"SMALL PROFITS AND QUICK SALES" IS OUR MOTTO.

W. H. KIBLINGER & COMPANY,

North of court house, 1st door west of McQuiston & Ralston's double store.

YOU CAN BUY A FINE

PARLOR SUIT!

With puffed edges and stuffed ks, including rble table, for

FIFTY DOLLARS!

—AT—

F. FLIEGNER'S FURNITURE STORE

15 WEST WAYNE STREET

FORT WAYNE, IND

FOR SALE

AT LOWEST PRICES AT

THE PHYSICIANS' DRUG STORE.

A full line of everything usually kept in a

FIRST-CLASS DRUG STORE,

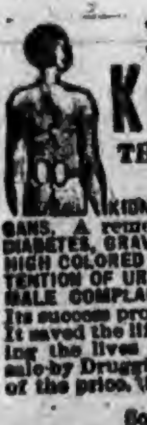
—SUCH AS—

Pure Drugs, Patent Medicines, Perfumery, Hair Oil, Fine Soaps, Brushes, Lamp Chimneys, Coal Oil

And a complete line of

Toilet Articles.
Liver & Kidney Pads,

Trusses, Shoulder braces. A choice selection of pure wines and liquors, furnished for medicinal purposes only. A full line of Wall Paper and Window shades, with all the latest improved fixtures, will be sold at prices remarkably low. We ask a share of public patronage, feeling assured that we can offer inducements worthy of attention.



DAY'S KIDNEY PAD

THE GREAT DISCOVERY

FOR DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS, BLADDER AND URINARY ORGANS. A remedy that will positively cure DIABETES, GRAVEL, DROPSY, BRIGHTS DISEASE, HIGH COLORED URINE, INCONTINENCE AND RETENTION OF URINE, NERVOUS DEBILITY AND FEMALE COMPLAINTS when NOTHING ELSE CAN. Its success proves the efficacy of ABSORPTION. It saved the life of its discoverer and is saving the lives of thousands of others. For sale by Druggists or sent by mail on receipt of the price, ($2.00.)

DAY KIDNEY PAD CO., Sole Proprietors, Toledo, Ohio.

Send your address for our pamphlet, "How a Life was Saved."

CASEBEER & MATHENY,

First door South of First National Bank. Auburn, Ind.

A Young Editor's Experience With Artemus Ward.

Detroit Free Press.

I met Artemus Ward but once. I was quite young at the time and was acting as city editor of the Star, published at Schenectady, N. Y. While I was city editor of that sheet I met Artemus. I was standing on a bridge at the time, and in talking about newspaper work was about to say something in regard to my heavy editorial responsibility, but Ward checked me by asking:

"What creek is this?"

"Creek!" I exclaimed, "why, this is the Erie canal."

"How far is it navigable?"

"Why, of course it is navigable from one end to the other."

"Well," solemnly replied Ward, "that beats all the streams I ever heard of. By the way, I think I can make out some large boats anchored up the stream there—what are they, propellers or side wheelers?"

I replied that they were merely canal boats, and were moved by horse power.

"Ah! I didn't think the stream was as shallow as that," said Artemus.

"As shallow as what?"

"Why, you say that those boats are pulled along by horses. Now, of course they must walk along in front of the boat, mustn't they? I used to run a stone boat on my lamented Uncle John's farm, and I distinctly remember that the horses walked along in front."

I mentally declared that I had never before met with such ignorance. I spent some time in explaining the peculiarities of the big ditch, and just as I had begun to think that at last I had set the stranger right on the subject, he knocked my hopes into kindling wood by remarking:

"I suppose that when the stream dries up in summer they put boats on wheels, don't they?"

Then I began again and explained every feature in the canal, from New York to Erie. How attentively he listened to my words. I can still see that melancholy face, lit by the sad light of the stars, and those mournful eyes looking into mine so earnestly; and again I hear, as I did then, after I had talked for nearly half an hour, going fully in to the details of boating, the low, pathetic drawl:

"Any saw mills on this stream that you know of?"

Shortly after some gentlemen came along who seemed to be acquainted with my obtuse friend. Presently one called him Artemus, and then I commenced to reflect. I always reflect best when I'm hid away somewhere, so I went and hid myself.

New Facts About Parrots.

One day last week there arrived in Pittsburg, from South America, nearly 600 young and uneducated parrots, which are being disposed of at $5.00 apiece. A reporter dropped into the store where they are on exhibition, and had a chat with the importer. These birds build in the royal palmetto tree, digging a hole into it, and building their nests much after the fashion of the woodpecker. In order to get them the trees have to be cut down. The young birds are then put in cages and fed upon palmiche, guava, and banana until the palmiche season closes, when they are old enough to eat any and all kinds of food. The breeding time is in May, and there are three birds to the nest—never more. When taken they are sorted, the males from the females, and sold, the price received being about $1.50 apiece. They hatch but once a year, and receive their full growth in about eight months. In response to the question as to whether it is necessary to split a parrot's tongue in order to make it talk, the parrot man said that the idea was an old woman's story. All that was necessary to make a parrot talk was to place it, while young, where there was a great deal of talking going on, and the bird would soon repeat what it heard, and when it did begin to imitate sounds, it would keep at it.

Its propensity to repeat anything it hears may sometimes be amusing and often annoying, owing to the possibility of its striking the sensibilities of the pious-minded by being profane, not to say blasphemous. At the McHenry House, Meadville, there is a parrot which is a source of great annoyance to train men. When it sees a freight train coming it will yell at the top of its voice: "Switch off! switch off!" The enunciation is so distinct that not unfrequently happens that the train will be switched to avoid a supposed danger. The same bird, when it sees a passenger train, will yell: "All aboard!" and thereby cause a scamper among the passengers, who, after sitting in the cars for ten or fifteen minutes, will discover that they have been sold.

Underground Mules.

Colliery mules sometimes live many years without seeing daylight, as they are only taken out of the mines when work is entirely suspended. The mules are used in hauling cars of coal from the various parts of the mines to the foot of the slope of the shaft from where it is hoisted to the surface by steam. The mules go to work with the miners and continue until evening. They are stabled in the mine and are carefully attended to. Strange to say, the coats of mules working in the collieries are singularly smooth and glossy and miners attribute it to the coal dust that settles on the hair and polishes it. The lead mule in a team always carries a miner's lamp attached to his collar, but miners say that the lamp is unnecessary as the mules never get off the track in the night. In some places where it is not convenient to haul the cars, mules are trained to push them, and it is not uncommon to see a dozen of the animals working in that way. In pushing cars the mule is provided with a heavy breast pad, instead of the ordinary harness. The ample time the mules have for reflection does not, however, seem to improve their dispositions, as every mining report contains accounts of men and boys who have been kicked to death or severely injured by them. Owing to the constant teasing of driver-boys, mules occasionally become so savage that they cannot be approached at all.—Miners' Journal.

How to Act in a Sick Room.

(N. Y. Times.)

Nothing requires more care, judgment and circumspection than the simple act of visiting a sick room. A capital book could be written on that subject, warning people of the danger of being brusque and stupid. There ought never to be more than one spare chair in a sick room, says an authority, and a nurse who knows what she is about would do well to place an ice-pitcher on that chair, so that no one could sit in it.

The most absurd thing a person can do who calls on a sick man or woman is to refer back to something which, in their imagination, was the cause of this illness, "the cucumbers of last week, or the soft crabs of the week before." Religious admonitions, a delicate point, though they may save the soul sometimes, if carelessly administered certainly hurt the body. Mr. Brickly who has written a careful book, which he calls "Notes on the care of the sick," says that he "looks with disgust on the person who speaks to the patient as if the illness was a distinct punishment for some grievous sin," and follows it up by sending some book, with a note containing these words: "I hope you will prayerfully study this little book which I send you." Doctors themselves often act in exact contradiction to their theories. "I must insist on the most perfect quiet in the house; have the children moved to the rooms below to avoid all noise," says Esculapius. Then the physician goes down stairs quiet enough, but in the hall forgets all about the patient, for he closes the door with a loud bang, and instead of moving off softly with his horse and wagon, rattles his equipage all he can over the cobble-stones. Doctors, sometimes, are as much at fault as visitors in sick-rooms.

Facts For Union Soldiers to Ponder—The Treasury Department a Regular Rebels' Nest.

Here is the latest grievance of the ex-soldiers: Miss Ringold, an aunt of the confederate guerrilla Mosby, is a clerk in the appointment bureau of the treasury department. Her duty is to pass upon the merits of the claimants for office, and loyalty to the Union is not with her a prerequisite in making recommendations to the secretary. Miss Plummer, of Maine, is a messenger in the treasury department. She was formerly an efficient clerk, drawing $75 per month, but was reduced to a messenger's position, at a salary of $55. She served through the war as a volunteer nurse. To the clerkship which she was forced to vacate Miss O'Laughlin was appointed. The latter lady is a relative of the late Mrs. Surratt, and was an inmate of her house when President Lincoln was assassinated. Miss Allston, of North Carolina, who claims to have been one of a loyal family in North Carolina during the war, has been removed to make a place for Miss McCauley, of Georgia, the male members of whose family served in the confederate army. Complaint is made that even the loyal secretary of the navy has appointed as inspector of clothing at the Pensacola (Fla.) navy yard, one George H Beers, who was a captain in the United States navy when the war broke out, and who deserted his post to enter the confederate service.

How He Convinced Them.

[Dallas Herald.]

Ex-Gov. J. W. Throckmorton certainly understands all the arts of an old Texan. In his speech defending Ed. Bomar, at Gainesville, after having spoken about an hour he said:

"Gentlemen of the jury—It is said by the prosecution that because the deceased was in his shirt sleeves when killed, he had no pistol."

Here Mr. Throckmorton pulled off his coat and stood before the jury in his shirt sleeves.

"You would say," continued Mr. Throckmorton, "that I am not armed because I am in my shirt sleeves. Look! do you see my arms?" cried he, holding up his hands.

No signs of arms could be seen.

Mr. Throckmorton then drew a pistol from under his left arm, another from under his right, one from each boot, and a huge bowieknife from the back of his neck, placing them upon the table.

"You see, gentlemen, though in my shirt sleeves, I could be well armed."

This was a clincher and it carried the point, entirely destroying the argument of the prosecution.

IF YOU WANT A

SILK HAT,

A soft or stiff Hat,
A Street or Traveling Cap
A Youth's or Boy's Hat.
A Child's Turban,

Or anything in the line of

GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS!

Call On

K. B. Miller & Co.,

THE HATTERS,

34 Calhoun Street, Ft. Wayne.

SHIRTS MADE TO ORDER,
A SPECIALTY. 14-6m.

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Southern R. R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Sep. 29 1878, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST.

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accom
Toledo	11 05 a m	12 01 a m	10 p m
Wauseon	12 16 "	1 08 "	"
Bryan	1 05 "	1 58 "	"
Butler	1 42 "	2 25 "	"
Waterloo	2 00 "	2 40 "	"
Sedan	2 10 "	2 50 "	"
Corunna	2 16 "	2 55 "	"
Kendallville	2 30 "	3 08 "	"
Ligonier	3 07 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	3 38 "	4 10 "	"
Elkhart	4 00 "	4 35 "	4 1[illegible] "

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	3 05 "
Goshen	1 29 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 58 "	10 42 "	"
Kendallville	2 30 "	11 19 "
Corunna	2 40 "	11 22 "
Sedan	2 47 "	11 36 "
Waterloo	2 53 "	11 45 "
Butler	3 10 "	12 01 a m
Bryan	3 45 "	12 40 "
Wauseon	4 27 "	1 27 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 40 "	9 50

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. R. CURTIS, Division Supt.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1878.

GOING WEST.

	No 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Nigh ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 12	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 13	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	3 10 pm	8 30 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 48	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 25 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 20	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 45	4 55	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 00	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 6	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15 pm	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line

75 Miles Shortest to Indianapolis, Louisville and all points South. 52 Miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas Texas, and all points West. Direct Route to Detroit and all Michigan and Canada points.

TIME CARD IN EFFECT MAY 25, '79.

SOUTH.	MAIL.	EX.	ACC.
Bay City		am
Saginaw		am
Lansing		am
Detroit		am	3 [illegible]pm
Ann Arbor		[illegible] am	5 2 pm
Jackson	6 0 am	[illegible] am	6 [illegible]pm
Jonesville	7 1 am	3 5 pm	9 [illegible]am
Bankers	7 27am	1 [illegible] pm	9 40pm
Waterloo	9 13am	2 [illegible] pm	12 [illegible] am
Auburn	9 20am	3 0 pm	1 00am
Auburn Junc	9 29am	3 [illegible] pm	1 1[illegible]am
Ft. Wayne	10 20am	3 5 pm	2 35am
Indianapolis	6 2 pm	6 5[illegible] pm
Cincinnati	7 00pm
Louisville	11 00pm	am
St. Louis	7 30am	am
Washington		8 10pm
Baltimore		9 20pm

NORTH.		EX.	ACC.
Baltimore		7 10am
Washington		8 32am
St. Louis	8 00am	7 00pm
Louisville	2 00pm	6 50pm	7 30am
Cincinnati			9 00am
Indianapolis	6 40pm	4 05am	11 50am
Ft. Wayne	5 00am	11 40am	5 05pm
Auburn Junc	5 52pm	12 30 pm	6 25pm
Auburn	5 57am	12 35pm	6 50pm
Waterloo	6 16am	12 46pm	7 05pm
Bankers	7 51am	2 22pm	10 20pm
Jonesville	8 10am	2 37pm	10 45pm
Jackson	9 20am	3 40pm	12 35am
Ann Arbor	10 35am	5 10pm	2 05am
Detroit	11 50am	6 30pm	3 35am
Lansing		5 24pm
Saginaw		8 57pm
Bay City		9 55pm

All trains daily except Sunday. Through tickets to all principal points. For information as to routes and connections apply to

P. B. LOOMIS, Pres't & Gen'l Mang'r.
S. K. HOOPER, Gen'l Ticket Ag't.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect November 10, 1878.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	5 40 pm
Bluffton	2 12 pm	[illegible]55 pm
Montpelier	2 52 pm	[illegible]34 pm
Hartford	3 17 pm	[illegible]58 pm
MUNCIE	4 08 pm	[illegible]1 pm
Newcastle	5 00 pm
Cambridge City	5 37 pm
Connersville	6 17 pm
Cincinnati	9 20 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 15 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville	11 00 pm	8 20 am
Terre Haute		1 34 am
St. Louis		7 30 am

STATIONS	GOING NORTH. Mail.	Express.	Accom.
St. Louis		9 00 am	7 00 pm
Terre Haute		3 27 pm	1 32 am
Louisville		2 00 pm	6 50 pm
Indianapolis		6 40 pm	4 15 am
Cincinnati	6 00 am
Connersville	11 13 am
Cambridge City	11 46 am
New Castle	12 25 pm
Muncie	1 25 pm	9 20 pm	6 45 am
Hartford	2 13 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	2 40 pm	10 31 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	3 13 pm	11 00 pm	9 15 am
Fort Wayne	4 25 pm	11 15 am	0 45 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.
Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.
All trains daily except Sunday.
Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Detroit Eel River & Illinois R R.

TAKE EFFECT DEC. 1, 1878.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	MAIL No. 2.	ACCOM. No. 4.	LOCAL FT No. 8.
lv. Logansport	[illegible]am	7 30pm	6 45am
Mexico	9 16	8 20	7 51
Denver	9 27	9 00	8 44
Chili	9 36	9 12	9 09
Roann	9 58	9 27	9 55
Laketon	10 13	10 00	10 35
N. Manchester	10 23	10 17	11 10
Liberty Mills	10 35	10 30	11 37
Collamer	10 51	10 50	12 20pm
S. Whitley	10 55	10 55	12 50
Columbia City	11 [illegible]	11 31	1 40
Collin's	11 45	11 55	2 25
Churubusco	12 00	12 12am	[illegible]
La Otto	12 25pm	12 43	3 55
Cedar Creek	12 3	12 53	4 16
Auburn Junct'n	12 50	1 12	4 35
Auburn	[illegible]	1 17	5 05
Butler	1 20am	2 00am	6 30pm

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1.	No. 5.	No. 7.
Logansport ar.	7 10pm	1 00pm	5 30pm
Mexico	6 33	12 55	3 54pm
Denver	6 23	11 38	3 30pm
Chili	6 17	11 27	3 10pm
Roann	6 02	11 08	2 30pm
Laketon	5 46	10 38	2 02pm
North Manchester	5 30	10 25	1 29pm
Liberty Mills	5 23	10 18	1 00pm
Collamar	5 15	9 58	12 40pm
South Whitley	5 11	9 48	12 20
Columbia City	4 48	9 12	11 25
Collin's	4 30	8 46	10 37
Churubusco	4 18	8 29	10 04
La Otto	3 55	7 57	9 03
Cedar Creek	3 48	7 45	8 40
Auburn Junction	3 25	7 23	8 00
Auburn	3 20	7 18	7 19
Butler lv.	2 40pm	6 30am	6 00am

FRANK J. HECKER, Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

CHICAGO DIVISION.

TIME TABLE No. 4.

TO TAKE AFFECT MAY 16, 1879.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Expr'ss	Chic'o Expr's
CHICAGO		10 00pm	9 10am
Walkerton Junction		1 00am	12 10pm
Milford Junction	2 20pm	2 14	1 20
Cromwell	3 30pm	2 45	1 48
Albion	4 20pm	3 10	2 08
Avilla	5 20pm	3 30	2 34
Garrett ar.	[illegible]55pm	3 45	2 50
Garrett lv.	[illegible]am	3 53	3 10
Auburn Junction	[illegible] am	4 03	3 24
St. Joe	am	4 25	3 44
Hicksville	am	4 4[illegible]	4 00
Defiance	5 4[illegible]am	5 27	4 45
Fostoria	2 30pm	7 25	6 40
Tiffin	3 45pm	7 54	7 09
CHICAGO JUNCTION	6 00pm	8 09	9 19

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Expr'ss	Chic'o Expr's
CHICAGO JUNCTION	5 20am	8 15am	6 40pm
Tiffin	6 20	9 12	7 56
Fostoria	9 35	9 35	8 24
Defiance	4 45pm	11 30	10 38
Hicksville	6 18	12 14pm	11 24
St. Joe	6 50	12 30	11 41
Auburn Junction	7 45	12 50	12 05am
Garrett ar.	8 00	12 58	12 10
Garrett lv.		1 15	12 20
Avilla		1 40	12 33
Albion		2 08	12 56
Cromwell		2 32	1 22
Milford Junction		3 00	1 55
Walkerton Junction		4 0[illegible]	3 20
CHICAGO		7	6 10

N. H. WOOD, Master of transportion Chicago Division, Garrett.
C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans, Ohio Division Chicago.

JUSTRECEIV'D

—AT—

J. ABRIGHT'S

Fine Gold and Plated Jewelry,
Ladies Gold Watches,
American Watches,
Rogers & Bro. Silverware,
A splendid line of imported Vases
Watch Chains, magnificent
Holiday Gifts, Lockets,
Ladies Sets, Gents

GOLD & SILVER SETS

Sleeve and Collar Buttons, Jet
Shell and Horn Jewelry,
All at astonishingly

LOW PRICES.

Watches and Jewelry neatly repaired on short notice

SAVED!

TIME, PATIENCE & MONEY

By always taking the great

Wabash Route,

FOR ALL POINTS

orth, East, South or West

LIGHTNING TRAINS,

Invariably on Time, with Close and Sure Connections.

No changes of cars to St. Louis, Hannibal, Quincy, Keokuk, Peoria, Burlington, Kansas City, Atchison and St. Joe, and only one change to all points in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Arkansas and Texas, forming the

SHORTEST AND QUICKEST

—AND—

Only Direct Route

From the West to all points in the East, including New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

Through Sleepers from St. Louis to Boston, 1223 MILES,

The Longest Sleeping Car Line in the World.

A. L. HOPKINS, Gen'l Manager.
R. ANDREWS, Gen'l Sup't.
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen'l Passenger Agent, Toledo, O.

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 9. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, OCTOBER 9, 1879. Number 41.

The Auburn Courier
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY THE COURIER COMP'Y.
EDITORS,
THEO. REED & ROB J. LOWRY.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills.
ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody.
ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin.
ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

Thos. H. Sprott.
REAL ESTATE, COLLECTION AND INSURance Agent. Loans effected on improved farms. Kansas lands for sale or trade. Auburn, Indiana

Gay Plumb.
ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,
PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller.
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Groscupheimer's Corners, two miles east of Auburn, DeKalb County, Ind.

D. J. Swartz, M. D.
SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO DISEASES of the Eye and Ear, Fistula in Ano, Hemorrhoids or Piles and Chronic Ulcers. Office on Main street, over Shafer's Furniture Store, Auburn, Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,
PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,
TENTH STREET. EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross. Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,
FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. S. RICHARDS, Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month; at Waterloo, the first and at Butler the second Saturday of every spring and fall month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACKINTOSH,
Co. Sup't, of schools.

$66 A WEEK in your own town, and no capital risked. You can give the business a trial without expense. The best opportunity ever offered for those willing to work. You should try nothing else until you see for yourself what you can do at the business we offer. No room to explain here. You can devote all your time or only your spare time to the business, and make great pay for every hour that you work. Women make as much as men. Send for special private terms and particulars, which we mail free. $5 outfit free. Don't complain of hard times while you have such a chance. Address H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1y.

Sick Headache
Positively Cured by these Little Pills.
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Coated Tongue, Pain in the Side, &c. They regulate the Bowels and prevent Constipation and Piles. The smallest and easiest to take. Only one pill a dose. 40 in a vial. Purely Vegetable. Price 25 cents. Sold by all Druggists.
CARTER MEDICINE CO., Prop'rs, Erie, Pa.
Five Vials by mail for one dollar.

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $5 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50 cts. to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 13-1y.

A Page Who Needs Spanking.

[St. Paul Pioneer.]

A bright, intelligent page of the United States senate is a pleasant subject to interview. A reporter of the Pioneer Press fell in with one the other day, who was making a trip to the Yellowstone country, and found him a regular daisy. Turning to the reporter the page said: "I can give you a little incident of some historical interest." "What is it?" "I was in charge of the president's room at the Capitol when Grant's last term of office expired. Just at twelve o'clock, meridian time, acting Vice-President Ferry brought down the gavel and Captain Bassett, superintendent of the pages, watching him, sang out, 'gone,' and I, holding the president's door half open, exclaimed, 'Time's up, sir.' President Grant raised his hand the instant I spoke and turned to Mr. Fish and asked, 'Have I a right to finish it?' He had signed 'U. S. Gr—' to a bill. The whole Cabinet was present, and a general consultation, lasting five minutes, followed. I don't remember what was said, but it was decided that he had a right to finish his signature. I got the bill granting a pension for Gen. Frank Blair's widow signed. A member of the House came to me and said, 'The president's time will be out in half an hour. I will give you anything if you will go in and run over the bills and put the widow Blair's bill on top.' Frank Blair had done my father a service once, and I was glad to comply with the member's request. There was a great pile of bills before the president, far more than he could sign in the short time left him. I went through the pile and picked out the bill, asking the president to sign it."

"Did he do it?"

"Like a little man. He is not half as big a fellow as some of your second lieutenants."

"Didn't somebody's bill get left on account of your irregular movement?"

"Yes, but I couldn't help that. I took advantage of my position to help a friend, and General Grant is too much of a gentleman to snub a poor page, even if he is a democrat, as I am. I like Grant. He was good to us boys."

"You were around when the electoral count fight was in progress?"

"Yes, sir; you probably remember that there were two sets of electoral returns from Vermont, and that one of them was stolen and found in Secretary Gorham's room. I and another page were in the room when it was determined to send them back. We had dropped on the gentlemen who had them in custody. It was not known whether they were the legitimate returns or the false ones, but the thieves weakened and hired us to take them back. Before we left the secretary's room we both were sworn never to divulge the names of the men we saw present. We were each presented with $200 and covered with promises that we would never want for a position while they had any influence at court or elsewhere. I was offered $800 for that same envelope and its contents, but we had contracted to deliver them on Representative Hewitt's desk in the House, and we carried out the contract. We both went to the hall together, and my friend passed up to Hewitt's desk and laid down the envelope. He was so nervous that he deposited the envelope with the written side up. Hewitt's eagle eye fell on the inscription so quickly that my partner had no time to run before the New York dyspeptic was on his feet shouting, 'Mr. Speaker, the lost Vermont returns have just been laid on my table by a page.' 'Who is he? Where is he?' I skedaddled back to the senate chamber, but my brother in sin stoped and gave himself up. He also gave the Speaker my name, and the sergeant-at-arms soon marched me into the Speaker's presence. We were placed under arrest, but our confinement was short and rosy. We said we would never divulge anything that would give away those who had trusted us. I suppose there was too much influence behind us, and probably too many hearts to ache over what was only an abortive theft."

"Your naming the gentlemen in the secretary's room would have called out several cards of explanation, and possibly more. Did either of you get an office?"

"My friend is earning $160 per month Uncle Sam is his paymaster. He doesn't have to work hard."

"You boys probably have some clear-cut opinions of your superiors. How do you like Conkling for instance?"

"He is an imperial hog. He is so polite that he isn't polite at all. The pages all hate him worse than any other man in either house of congress."

"Senator Thurman—how is he?"

"He is a good man. He whirls a big bandanna and blows his nose on schedule. He is the snuff senator. There is only one thing he likes better than Ramsey's jokes, and that is casino. He plays casino all night."

"Senator Bayard?"

"He is a very fine gentleman and good to the pages. His weakness is good goers on the road. He is like Grant and Bonner."

"The Camerons?"

"Simon was not much of a favorite. He subsidized on two pages and gave the rest the cold shoulder. Don is the son of his father."

"Jim Blaine?"

"Oh! he is popular. Everybody likes him. He is just what you would suppose him to be from the reports of the newspapers."

"Hamlin?"

"He is a good-natured fellow but doesn't know any thing.'

"Dawes and Hoar, of Massachusetts?'

"Dawes always looks at the galleries to see if anybody is watching him while he is speaking. Hoar is good-natured, but somehow the boys don't hang to him."

"The bonanza senators?'

"Sharon is never there; but Jones is a brick. I made $50 on one of his speeches. Always got money and will trust the boys with his errands. I have known pages to have $6,000 of his money at one time. He isn't suspicious.'

"The southern brigadiers?'

"Matt Ransom, of South Carolina, is as good as the best. Gordon and Lamar are pleasant, and Ben Hill is not a bad man. I tell you who used to be a royal fellow—Flannegan, of Texas. He was always fighting for the pages. Wade Hampton is a fine fellow.'

"Conger, of the House, the great American objector, is a confounded fool. It's "object" until you cant rest. He is a civil service man, but took care of his nephew all the same. Fornando Wood is a sumptuous cuss, and the boys have no use for him. Burnside is the fashion-plate of congress. He got a resolution through the senate permitting skull-caps in the chamber. Townsend, of New York, was one of the best fellows going. He used to take me home in his carriage, and wanted to send me to sea for a good time on a man-of-war. Garfield is a student, and is not especially popular. He is always thinking of something. The colored senator, Bruce, is a first-rate man.'

"Do the pages make anything?'

"We used to get $90 a month, but now it is only $75. The boy that gets the president's room is rewarded with $1,400 a year. The perquisites for the pages are considerable. A good one has no trouble in making $100 a month. A complete book of the autographs of congressmen and heads of departments brings $50. A page made $300 out of what was known as the 'dead-lock picture'—a humorous sketch. While the electoral commission was in session the boys had a good opportunity to make something. They speculated on the extra tickets the congressmen shelled out. I knew a boy who made $80 off the bier of Charles Sumner. He sold the flowers for $20; Wormley paid him $10 for one bouquet. When the casket was removed he watched his opportunity, and cut the fringe from the bier. He sold it to the colored people for $60, dealing it out in pieces on the same principle that some people sell bits of the rope a man was hung with. A congressman used to give me $5 for every note I carried for him; I suppose he thought I was on to his racket. There is also quite a margin in the official documents that a member leaves behind him when he quits congress for good. We pick up a good many relics. I have the ink-stand that President Grant used in performing his last official act."

Nicknames of State Residents.

The nicknames of the citizens of the several states are as follows: Alabama, lizards; Arkansas, toothpicks; California, gold hunters; Colorado, rovers; Connecticut, wooden nutmegs; Delaware, muskrats; Florida, fly-up-the-creeks; Georgia, buzzards; Illinois, suckers; Indiana, hoosiers; Iowa, hawkeyes; Kansas, jayhawkers; Kentucky, corn crackers; Louisiana, creoles; Maine, foxes; Maryland, craw thumpers; Michigan, wolverines; Minnesota, gophers; Mississippi, tadpoles; Missouri, pukes; Nebraska, bug eaters; Nevada, sage hens; New Hampshire, granite boys; New Jersey, blues, or clam catchers; New York, knickerbockers; North Carolina, tar boilers and tuckoes; Ohio, buckeyes, Oregon, webfeet and hard cases; Pennsylvania, Pennanites and leatherheads Rhode Island, gun flints; South Carolina, weasels; Tennessee, whelps; Texas, beef heads; Vermont, Green Mountain boys; Virginia, beadles; Wisconsin, badgers.

For Sale at a Sacrifice.

A GEISER THRESHING MACHINE in good condition, offered for sale by Mr. D. D. Moody, at a very low price, and on time. This is an excellent opportunity to get a bargain. 27tf.

Thomas A. Hendricks.

[Shelby Democrat.]

The next national democratic convention will assemble with greater responsibilities attending it than will accompany any political assemblage that will convene in the year 1880. If wisdom is permitted to guide its action the convention will be the forerunner of one of the fiercest political battles ever fought in this country. The work of selecting candidates will be of the first imporance as the great heart of the nation throbs in feverish dread that some mistake will overtake those who are to be entrusted with so great a question. Who can reconcile all of the antagonistic elements in the democratic party and draw strength from the opposition is a problem not so easy of solution as one might imagine. But we believe that Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks can come nearer uniting all of the discordant factions than any other man spoken of for the presidency within the democratic party, and being thus convinced we enter the list to champion his cause. This is the home of Mr. Hendricks, here were witnessed his early days, his struggles at the bar and all of his first efforts to achieve distinction as a lawyer and fame as a statesman. We know him well, yes better than the world knows him, because his life has always been before us as his presence has been with us always with but slight interruptions. In all of the political contests through which he has passed, no one has charged him either with official corruption or being devoid of personal integrity, but on the contrary it has always been conceded by his adversaries that his private life was without reproach, and his public record was free from plunder. We have seen him in the halls of the nation engaged in legislation calculated to benefit his country when it would have doubtless been millions in his pocket to have legislated in the interest of the rings so common in Washington City. We have seen him doing duty on many of the most important committees and have observed that he never made a blunder in his life from which either his party or his country suffered. We have seen him in the senate of the United States measuring swords with the giants of the republican party—always their equal in devotion to country, and never behind them in broad and liberal statesmanship. We have seen him seated in the gubernatorial chair by the votes of thousands of admiring men of all parties, and have seen him retire with the plaudits of a generous people. In short he has shed a halo of imperishable glory about every position he has ever filled, and never proved recreant to a public trust.

Hendricks' long and active participation in public affairs has peculiarly fitted him for the presidency, and the people knowing this anxiously look forward to the day when he shall be elevated to the chief place in the nation. In 1876 he was the choice in the national convention of many patriotic and far seeing delegates who only consented to relinquish their choice after a prolonged struggle in which it was well understood that he should be the nominee in 1880. He made the sacrifice because his party demanded it of him and carried Indiana for the ticket in that memorable campaign when it would have been fatal to the ticket and to the cause of liberty and free institutions to have lost it. Mr. Hendricks has very properly said that he will not again take the second place on the ticket and has spoken the sentiments of the Indiana democracy upon that subject. New York for years has been permitted to name the demmocratic nominees and has seldom failed to name a New York man who has always led us to defeat. The entire west is becoming tired and disgusted with the bummers of the east who seem to be more interested in place than they are in true democratic doctrine. The great west and south can nominate a ticket which would everywhere be hailed with joy and after having placed it in the field they have the power to see that it will be triumphantly elected. But New York can be carried with as much certainty with Horatio Seymour, Sanford E. Church, or some such men on the ticket for vice president, as it can with Mr. Tilden as our nominee for president. Mr. Hendricks made the sacrifice once, and now it is in order for some other democratic statesman to follow his example in the interest of success and good government. Mr. Hendricks represents a state that it is important to carry; he has a public record that can not be successfully assailed; he is a man who shares the confidence of the people of the entire country, and his views upon all public questions are in entire harmony with the producing masses. If nominated new life would be infused into the democratic party, and his name everywhere would be regarded as the synonym of success.

Facts for the Grant Boom.

[New York Sun.]

The official records show that the administration of President Grant was more disastrous to his party than that of any other president of the United States.

The Congressional Record shows that during the first two years of Grant's term as president there were 170 republicans and 67 democrats in congress, divided thus: 118 republicans from all the states of the north and [illegible] republicans from the southern states; 40 democrats from northern and 27 from southern states. The republican majority was 103.

During the last two years of Grant's term the republicans had but 106 members in congress—90 from the north only 16 from the south—while the democrats had 187 members—97 from the north and 90 from the south—a democratic majority of 81. This shows that during Grant's term of the presidency the republicans sustained a loss of 64 members of congress, while the democrats made a gain of 120 members.

When Grant began his term as president there were 28 republican and 7 democratic senators from the south. The day he retired from the presidency the republicans had but 5, and the democrats had 27 senators from the southern states.

The question of a third term was presented with great directness in many of the states in the campaign of 1874, and the people with much greater directness declared against it.

In 1872 Gen. John A. Dix was elected governor of New York by 51,835 republican majority. He was renominated in 1874, and despite the advice of the experienced and sagacious politicians that he must positively prohibit the convention from endorsing Grant's administration, the convention, which was controlled by Grant officials in the customs, postoffice, and internal revenue service, passed the following resolution:

> That the administration of Gen. Grant has been distinguished for achievements in foreign and domestic policy unsurpassed in the history of the country.

The Liberal republicans made no nominations for states officers, but under direction of ex-Gov. Fenton and others in convention resolved:

> That we declare our uncompromising hostility to any pretensions toward perpetuating power in the hands of the same person beyond a second term; such pretensions deserve, and should receive, the indignant condemnation of the people.

A week or two later the democrats met in convention and declared:

> The presidency of the United states is a public trust, not a private perquisite and there should be no third term of it.

On that issue Tilden and Dorsheimer were elected Governor and Lieutenant-Governor by 50,317 majority, a change of 102,000 votes. This seemed to indicate that the third term had received "the indignant condemnation of the people."

In October, 1872, Gen. John F. Hartranft was elected governor of Pennsylvania by a majority of 34,368. A month later the same state gave Gen. Grant a majority of 135,000 for a second term, but at the republican state convention in 1874 Mr. Allison, then Grant register of the treasury, offered the followng resolution:

> That if Gen. Grant be a candidate for a third term, the republican party of Pennsylvania would support him.

The Hon. O. J. Dickey, the successor of Thaddeus Stevens in congress, in opposing that resolution said:

> If Gen. Grant desires a third term there is honesty and patriotism enough in the republican party to stand by the precedent established by Washington. No man in this country ought to violate the example set by the father of his country. Should such a thing be attempted, the people, with a unanimity with which they rushed forward to save the Union will crush out the man who dares to break down so wise a precedent. The people of Lancaster county are emphatically opposed to a third term.

At the general election which followed, John A. Latta was elected Lieutenant-governor by a majority of 4,669, despite the majority of 135,000 cast for Gen. Grant only two years before; and thus Pennsylvania responded to the resolution of Register Allison.

The republican state convention of Ohio took no action either for or against a third term, but the democratic convention of that state thus declared:

> That we have seen with alarm and regret the advocacy in influential quarters of the election of a president of the United States for a period beyond that to which the traditions and usages of the country have almost given the sanction of a fundamental law; that such an election would be a long stride on the road to a protracted monarchy and personal despotism; and we are decidedly in favor of establishing the one-term principle by an amendment to the constitution.

The republican majority in Ohio was 34,268 in 1872, but upon this issue of the third term, as presented by the democratic convention, the entire democratic state ticket was elected by a majority of 17,202—a change of over 51,000 votes.

In 1872 Indiana gave Gen. Grant a majority of 21,000, but on a third term issue in 1874 gave a democratic majority of 17,202.

In 1872 Illinois gave a majority of 56,439 for Gen. Grant, but in 1874 declared against a third term by the election of a democratic state ticket by 30,000 majority—a change in two years of more than 86,000 votes.

New Jersey gave Grant 14,180 majority in 1872, and in 1874 the republicans nominated for governor George A. Halsey, one of the most pronounced third-term men in the state. The democratic candidate was elected by 13,233 majority.

Massachusetts gave Grant 74,212 majority in 1872, and to show her condemnation of a third term elected Mr. Gaston, democrat, governor by a majority of 7,032—a change of 81,000 votes in two years.

These state of Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois gave an aggregate republican majority of 302,000 votes in 1872, but in the issue of a third term for Grant that great majority was overcome, and a democratic majority obtained of 141,000 which indicates a change in these seven states of 443,000 votes, due mainly to the opposition of the people to a third term of the presidency for Gen. Grant.

Almost all the states of the south were republican when Grant first become president. The republican majorities by which congressmen were elected, who served during the first two years of Grant's term, were as follows: Alabama, 15,406; Arkansas, 8,840; Florida, 4,017; Louisiana, 7,163; Mississippi, 36,221; Missouri, 20,252; South Carolina, 35,793; Tennessee, 31,695. Total for the eight states, 159,385 republican majority.

At the congressional elections held in these states during the last year of Grant's term all of them, except Florida and South Carolina, gave democratic majorities as follows: Alabama, 32,772; Arkansas, 19,414; Louisiana, 6,083; Mississippi, 56,554, Missouri, 58,048; Tennessee, 48,000. Florida gave 926, and South Carolina 870 republican majority, which leaves, after deducting the republican majorities in the last two named states, a net majority for the democrats in these same eight states of 216,576, which seems to indicate that the democrats under Grantism gained 369,340 votes in these eight southern states.

The same ratio of gains and losses applies to nearly all the states in the Union.

It is not strange that there is a growing desire upon the part of the democrats throughout the country to have the republicans nominate Gen. Grant for a third term in 1880.

Winter Apples.

[Indiana Farmer.]

The season is at hand for gathering and storing winter apples, and a hint on these subjects now is timely. Northern apples, such as Balwin, Northern Spy, Spitzenberg, etc., should be gathered early. If suffered to remain on the tree till the middle of October they become too ripe, from the influence of our long and warm summer, and soon decay. A winter apple generally reaches maturity in September, but the pulp does not ripen and become mellow till several weeks later; and if carefully gathered and kept in a cool dark place their ripening process may be retarded for several months. After an apple becomes mellow it soon decays. To prevent this change is the chief point to be aimed at in the arrangements for keeping winter apples. A first consideration is to gather the fruit before the mellowing process begins, for if this has once fairly set in nothing short of actual freezing will arrest it. Fruit carefully picked by hand may be kept in a well ventilated cellar, carefully excluded from light and free from dampness. The apples may be placed on broad shelves, not more than three or four apples deep, or they may be carefully packed in clean barrels, and headed, or securely covered. The temperature during the winter should be kept near the freezing point. But the point at which we fail most in keeping apples is in suffering them to remain in the orchard too long. The first week in October should close our fruit gathering, and if the apples are left in piles in the orchard they should be carefully covered with straw so as to exclude the light and maintain a uniform temperature. Our advice is, gather your apples early.

—Use Card's fever and ague cure and liver invigorator. For sale by F. E. Davenport and Casebeer & Matheny. 32-3m.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, OCT. 9, 1879.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

JOHN ELLIOTT, a wealthy resident of Williamsburg, N. Y., and his wife were killed a few days ago by a runaway accident.

THE great six-days' contest at the Madison Square Gardens, New York, for the Astley belt, emblematic of the world's championship, was won by Rowell, the Englishman. The official score is as follows: Rowell, 530 miles; Merritt, 515 miles; Hazael, 500¼ miles; Hart, 471 miles; Weston, 450 miles; Ennis, 450½ miles; Krohne, 450½ miles; Taylor, 450½ miles.

JUSTIN L. GUNN, a paper manufacturer of Bridgewater, Mass., was recently murdered by his son, aged 22 years, for the purpose of obtaining possession of $40,000 worth of property which the father possessed.

A NEW Roman Catholic church costing $4,000,000, and said to be the finest parish church in the United States, has just been dedicated at Norwich, Ct.... In the suit brought by the United States against Samuel J. Tilden to recover certain sums alleged to be due from him for income taxes during 1861 to 1872, inclusive, over and above the amounts paid by him, a motion was made in the United States District Court at New York, a few days ago, by Tilden's counsel, for a bill of particulars. Judge Choate has made an elaborate decision in the matter, and says that the motion must be denied upon well-settled rules of practice relating to the matter of bills of particulars.

THE Supreme Court of Rhode Island has disposed of the Sprague case by appointing Robert Thompson trustee of the property of Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague. The action of the court is tantamount to a divorcement of the parties, so far as property interests are concerned.... Rowell, the winner of the Astley belt in the New York pedestrian contest, received one-half of the net receipts, or about $24,000. Pretty good pay for six days' labor.

JOHN W. CARROLL, a reputable citizen of Oil City, Pa., attended the sessions of the Freethinkers at Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., a short time ago, where he heard Bob Ingersoll speak for the first time. He returned home in a state of intense excitement, and has since become wildly insane.

THE Pennsylvania coal companies have at last entered into a compact by which the supply, and consequently the prices, may be regulated by the leading producers.

THE WEST.

THE flourishing mining town of Deadwood, in the Black Hills of Dakota Territory, has been almost totally swept out of existence by fire, and nearly ,000 people rendered homeless thereby. The fire broke out in a bakery at Sherman street at 2:20 o'clock on the morning of Sept. 26, and, following that thoroughfare, swept everything before it on Lee, Main, Gold, Patton and William streets, and several residences on Centennial avenue. Fanned by a light breeze, and nothing to contend with except a very inefficient fire department, everything was at the mercy of the flames. Less than half a score of pronounced fire-proof warehouses withstood the severe test. The buildings being mostly of wood and poorly constructed, they burned like so much chaff. The fire spread with such wonderful rapidity that any attempt at saving anything would have been useless. All along its course terrific explosions of gunpowder, petroleum, liquor, etc., were of frequent occurrence. Buildings were blown into atoms. The hook-and-ladder apparatus and hose-carriage were the first things to burn, leaving nothing but a few feet of worthless hose with which to battle against the devouring element. The wildest excitement prevailed on account of the fearful force of the flames, and the people thought of but little beside saving their own lives, hundreds escaping with only their night-clothes. Every team within miles of the city was called into service to help save what could be got out. About 125 buildings, beside fifty or sixty dwelling houses, were destroyed. The loss is variously estimated at from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000.

A FIRE in the town of Alturas, Modoc county, Cal., destroyed property worth $150,000.

CAPT. BEYER, with a company of United States cavalry, recently pursued and overtook a band of 140 hostile Navajo Indians on the Las Animas river, in New Mexico. After fighting all day, the troops were compelled to withdraw under cover of darkness, with a loss of five men killed and one wounded, and thirty-two horses killed and six wounded. Two Navajos and one citizen were also killed in the fight.

PRESIDENT HAYES and party extended their Kansas journey as far westward as Fort Dodge. The distinguished travelers were received everywhere along the route with hearty greetings, and speech-making and hand-shaking were indulged in at all the stopping places. From Fort Dodge the President returned to Topeka, where he was tendered a reception by Gov. St. John and the other State officers, and addressed the people from the steps of the Capitol building. Gen. Sherman also made a brief speech. From Topeka the party journeyed to Leavenworth, stopping an hour at Lawrence on the way, where dinner was partaken of and some more speech-making indulged in. The President spent the Sabbath at Leavenworth as the guest of Gen. Pope, and Monday morning, Sept. 29, the party turned their faces eastward. There was a halt of several hours at St. Joseph, Mo., to enable the citizens of that place to show their hospitality to the chief executive of the nation. The eastward journey was then resumed, and Springfield, Ill., was reached the next morning. Tuesday was spent in Springfield, the party being the guests of Gov. Cullom, and on Wednesday the party embarked for Indianapolis, where a cordial reception awaited the distinguished visitors. While at Leavenworth a couple of men from Missouri called on the President. They were kindly received and introduced to Mrs. Hayes. After expressing their approbation in flattering terms of the administration, one of them asked the President to appoint him to a little postoffice in his neighborhood. The President informed him that he would have to forward his papers through the ordinary channel, and the man failed to get his postoffice.... The ten days' round of festivities in honor of Gen. Grant at San Francisco were wound up on the 30th ult. by a grand reception of public school children, at Woodward's Garden, which is described as the most enthusiastic ovation the ex-President received on the Pacific slope. Thirty thousand school children assembled to pay their respects to the distinguished visitor, and he was almost buried beneath a constant shower of bouquets cast by the enthusiastic youngsters. Gen. Grant addressed the throng in the following words: "It is a gratifying sight to witness this evidence of educational privileges afforded by this young city. The crowds gathered inside and outside this building indicate that every child of an age fit for school is provided for. When education is universally diffused, we may feel assured of the permanency and perpetuity of our institutions. The greatest danger to our people grows out of ignorance, and this evidence of universality of education is the best guarantee of your loyalty to American principles." The Ex-President left the following morning for the Yosemite valley.

THE losses by the Deadwood fire are now estimated at upward of $3,000,000. The people of the calcined city are busily engaged in rebuilding, and the saw-mills in the vicinity find themselves unable to supply the demand for lumber.

SALT LAKE telegram: "A Silver Reef special reports that a party of twenty-eight prospectors, who started on an expedition two months ago have been massacred by Indians near the eastern boundary of this Territory."

PROF. JOHN WISE, the well-known aeronaut, and George Barr, teller of the St. Louis National Bank, made a balloon ascension from St. Louis, Mo., on Sunday afternoon, [illegible] with the intention [illegible] remaining [illegible] but a few hours. Nothing had [illegible] been heard [illegible] up to the Wednesday following, and it was feared the voyagers had met a fate similar to that which befell Donaldson and Grimwood, at Chicago, three years ago, who, it will be remembered, were lost in Lake Michigan. A balloon, supposed to be Wise's, was seen moving very rapidly over Laporte, Ind., in a northerly direction, on the day after the ascension.

FROM the Sac and Fox Agency, located in the Indian Territory, there comes intelligence of a bloody fight between a party of twelve of the desperadoes who infest the region of the agency and a party of soldiers from Fort Sill, resulting in the killing of nine of the bandits. The killing of Jim Barker and the capture of Triplet by a Cherokee Sheriff, Jesse Cochran, deprives them of a bold, bad leader and desperate man. It is expected that the troops will kill or scatter this band, as they have orders to remain two months longer in the field, if necessary.

THE Chicago Tribune is authority for the statement that United States Circuit Judge Drummond, of Chicago, will, on the 1st of January next, retire from the Federal judiciary. Advancing years and impaired health lead the Judge to take this step.

THE visit of President Hayes to Indianapolis was made the occasion of a big demonstration. There was a grand industrial procession several miles in length, representing every branch of business and industry. President Hayes and Gen. Sherman, escorted by the military, were at the head of the procession, which was reviewed by Mrs. Hayes from a platform in front of the postoffice, and which occupied two hours and five minutes in passing. The entire route was lined with people by thousands. After the procession the President was driven to the fair grounds, where he and Gen. Sherman entertained the great crowd with speeches of considerable length. The distinguished party was dissolved at Indianapolis, the President and family proceeding thence to their old home at Fremont, Ohio, there to remain a few days, while Gen. Sherman and staff went to St. Louis to attend the militia convention.

WASHINGTON.

THE September report of the Department of Agriculture on the condition of the wheat crop indicates an increase over the yield of 1878. The potato-crop average for the whole country is 95, against 73 the same time last year. The condition of the buckwheat is somewhat better than last year. The average is 98 for the whole country. Sorghum averages 95, against 84 last year.

A WASHINGTON dispatch says that "the limited demand upon the treasury for gold under the late circular excites much surprise among treasury officials. Treasurer Gilfillan says that the total amount called for up to this time amounts to only $50,000. It is believed at the Treasury Department that it will be almost as difficult to get rid of the vast amount of gold stored away as it has been with the standard dollars. Nearly every person who is tendered gold at the treasury, in settlement of accounts, declines, and expresses a preference for legal-tender notes.

THERE is in the treasury but $6,179,000 in gold in denominations less than $20—an amount not sufficient to meet any active demand upon the treasury for small coin. To supply this deficiency, it is understood to be the intention of the Treasury Department to recoin most of the foreign gold received at the New York assay office into $5 and $10 pieces. In recoining foreign gold, nothing less than $5 pieces will be turned out, as it is desired to get as large a number of standard silver dollars as possible into circulation.... Orders have been issued to the Treasurer of the United States, and to the Assistant Treasurers, to pay out both gold and silver upon all Government obligations.

POLYGAMY, besides being subjected to prosecution, is to be made less profitable in the future. By an Interior Department decision wives enjoying the distinction of having husbands with still other wives will not be permitted hereafter to enter land under the Homestead and Pre-emption law. It is held that, unless this prohibition is enforced, every Mormon will soon possess 160 acres for each wife and thus become a landed aristocrat.

NEARLY $8,000,000 were paid out of the treasury during September on account of pensions arrears.

WHAT the arrears of pensions will foot up begins now to be susceptible of computation upon satisfactory basis. Up to the 1st inst. 13,387 cases were settled, the aggregate sum paid being a little less than $20,750,000. It is estimated at the department that about 6,000 or 7,000 more cases remain to be settled. Assuming their average will be about that of those already paid, the total should not exceed $30,000,000. The Commissioner of Pensions estimates it at less, and is of opinion that the $25,000,000 last session appropriated will prove sufficient for the total arrears.... Following is the coinage of the United States mints for September: Gold, 133,522 pieces; value, $1,869,120. Silver, 2,309,200 pieces; value, $2,396,092. Minor coins, 1,469,150 pieces: value, $14,694. Total, 3,998,912 pieces; total value, $9,279,906.

THE SOUTH

A FIGHT is reported to have recently taken place in the Panhandle of Northwestern Texas between Indians and a party of young sportsmen from Dallas and Fort Worth, Texas, in which seven of the latter were killed.

ANTHONY BLAIR (colored) was hanged at Morristown, Tenn., Sept. 26, for the murder of his step-daughter, aged 16, in July last.

THE mortality reports from Memphis indicate that the yellow fever is dying out. For the week ending Sept. 28 the number of cases was sixty-three, and the number of deaths thirty-one. For the three days ending Sept. 28 there were twenty-three new cases and fourteen deaths.

A SANTA FE dispatch says in regard to the Indian emeute in that Territory: "Gov. Wallace, as soon as he learned that there was an Indian massacre in the southern portion of his Territory, telegraphed to Silver City, Grant county, to learn the particulars, and from S. M. Ashenfelter received what follows: Seven white men have been killed in a fight with Indians in a corn-field, near McEver's ranche, about fifteen miles this side of Hillsboro. This occurred on the 11th inst. On the same day ten Mexicans, men, women and children, were murdered in the Jaralosa Cienega, some three miles from McEver's ranch. The women and children were most horribly and disgustingly mutilated, iron bars being used for the purpose. Twenty-five men, women and children were among the wounded in the corn-field."

A FIRE at Bolton, Texas, last week, destroyed $100,000 worth of business property.

THE new steamboat Natchez, just built at Cincinnati, was partially burned opposite New Orleans last week, while she was in the act of making her first entry into that port. Fortunately no lives were lost.

THERE were eight deaths from yellow fever at Memphis for the two days, Sept. 29-30, twenty-six new cases being reported to the Board of Health in the same period. Two colored companies that have been doing patrol duty in the stricken city for the past two months have been relieved from duty; they were paid $8,080, donated as a gift by the Committee of Safety, who also provided each member with ten days' extra rations.

IN September, 1878, the National Bank of Baltimore was robbed of two tin boxes, one containing $37,000 in bank notes belonging to the bank. The other contained bonds aggregating $28,000 deposited by the late Col. William M. Boone, together with bank certificates and private papers. One day last week a young man hunting in the woods near Westberry, Md., saw two men sounding for something buried. At night the young man, with several friends, went to the spot and, digging, unearthed the tin box, which still contained Col. Boone's bonds and a number of his private papers.

ADVICES from Memphis continue to show the gradual abatement of the yellow-fever epidemic, and there is every reason for hoping that, except in case of a recurrence of hot weather, the city will soon be freed from the dread visitation.

POLITICAL.

WASHINGTON telegram: The fact that Secretary McCrary had discontinued housekeeping here, and has forwarded his household effects to the West, is considered an indication that he has received positive information as to his confirmation for District Judge of Iowa, and that he will retire from the Cabinet at the latest about the opening of Congress. There still seems to be a doubt that ex-Senator Ramsey, of Minnesota, will succeed McCrary as Secretary of War.

THE Republican State Convention of Nebraska was held at Omaha on the 1st inst. Hon. Jesse W. Davis presided. Hon. Amasa Cobb was nominated for Supreme Judge, and J. L. Carson and J. W. Gannett for Regents of the State University. The following resolution was received with tumultuous demonstrations: We, as Republicans of the State of Nebraska, welcome back to the shores of America the champion of our Union, the protector of our nation, and the hero of the great Rebellion—Gen. Ulysses S. Grant.

GENERAL.

A SINGULAR railway disaster is reported from Mexico: a train was carrying 400 kegs of gunpowder. By some means unknown the powder was ignited, and the explosion that followed blew the train to atoms and killed every passenger on board.

ON the 3d day of July, last, a man named Rollins left New York astride of a velocipede, with the avowed intention of traveling to Chicago by that mode of locomotion. He made good his word, and arrived at his destination on the 27th of September, having covered 1,313 miles. He traveled by easy stages, halting for several days at a number of places.... Gold and silver continue to pour into this country from Europe at a remarkable rate. The specie imports for the week ending Sept. 27 amounted to $8,577,542. The total imports since the resumption of specie payments aggregate $39,730,402, three-fourths of the amount being in gold.

AN advance of one-half cent on iron, making the card rate three cents, Western classification, was agreed upon by the Western Iron Association at a meeting in Pittsburgh last week. The nail manufacturers of that city also advanced ten-pennys to $3.40 per keg. These advances correspond to those lately made in pig iron, and indicate the growing activity of the trade.

THAT favorite young soubrette, Lotta, is delighting Chicago visitors and residents for a couple of weeks at present. This week she appears in the title role in "Zip; or, Point Lynde Light," a play written for her by Fred Marsden. Next week she is underlined as Musette. Little needs to be said about the merits of this charming actress, as she was always a favorite in the Garden City, and will, no doubt, fill McVicker's Theater to the doors.

NEW counterfeit $5 bills on the National State Bank of Troy, N. Y., are in circulation. The old genuine issue of this bank, which has a painted seal, bears the name "F. E. Spinner, Treasurer." In the counterfeit the word "Treasury" is under the name of Allison, and is spelled "Trensary."

MAJ. THORNBURGH, who commanded the ill-fated expedition against the Indians, and who met his death in the Milk river massacre, served as a private in the late war of the Rebellion. He entered West Point from Tennessee, in which State he was born, July 1, 1848, and was graduated and made Second Lieutenant in the Second artillery, June 17, 1867. He was a brave and efficient officer.

THE base-ball championship of the United States, which has been held almost uninterruptedly by the Boston Club for the past eight seasons, is this year transferred to Providence, R. I. There were eight contesting clubs in the arena. The Providence club won 55 games, Boston 49, Chicago 45, Buffalo 44, Cincinnati 38, Cleveland 24, Troy 19 and Syracuse 15.

FOREIGN.

NIHILIST incendiaries were unusually active with the torch in Russia during the month of August. The number of fires in the empire within that period was 3,987, causing damage to property to the amount of $15,000,000.... The rinderpest is spreading in Germany and in Russian Poland.... Large numbers of agricultural tenants in Ireland refuse to pay the full amount of their exorbitant land rents, and serious disturbances are threatened. Similar troubles are expected in England.... The German quarrel with Japan is said to be getting more serious. A German steamer was recently authorized by a German envoy to the Mikado to break the cholera blockade at Yokohama, in consequence of which Japan is changing the cholera regulations concerted between Japan and the Christian powers. America sides with Japan, but England supports Germany.

IN the recent general European understanding, projected through the skillful manipulation of Prince Bismarck, Russia seems to have been left out in the cold, and the necessity for seeking the friendship and support that Germany no longer extends has impelled Russia to make overtures to her ancient enemy, the Ottoman Government. It is asserted in a cable dispatch that Prince Lobanoff has gone to Constantinople for the express purpose of negotiating the basis of a close alliance between Russia and Turkey, in consideration of which Russia consents both to forego the payment of 800,000,000 francs out of the war indemnity and to surrender back to Turkey some of the provinces in Asia Minor which were taken from her in the costly settlement.

A CARGO of American sheep afflicted with disease of the feet and mouth, which arrived in an English port a few days ago, has caused the Privy Council to place these animals in the same category as American cattle. Yankee mutton designed for British consumption will hereafter be dressed on the docks.... The majority of the Roumelian Chambers has reported in favor of concessions to the Jews.

THE hop crop of England is the smallest since 1860.... Sir Francis Wyatt Truscott has been elected Lord Mayor of London. ....The English cotton mills continue to shut down. One of the largest in Preston has just closed up.... The Mark Lane Express of Oct. 1, in its review of the British grain trade, says: "The condition of the new grain has not improved to any appreciable extent. Thrashing has made but little progress, as most grain already secured is in an unfit state, and some weeks must elapse before the offerings of new wheat will show any material increase. It is generally admitted that the wheat crop the present year will be about 30 per cent. below the average. The home requirements between now and next harvest may be expected to absorb 16,000,000 or 17,000,000 quarters of foreign produce."

FIVE of the City of Glasgow Bank Directors, sentenced on the 1st of February to eight months' imprisonment, were released the other day, at Glasgow, amid the hootings of the crowd.... A dispatch from Madrid announces that the Spanish Government has sent 4,000 men to Cuba to relieve those already there, and 4,500 more will go this month. The banks in Spain and Havana advanced nearly $5,000,000 for military expenses in Cuba.... A body of belligerent tenants were fired into near Castlebar, Ireland, and one of them killed.

A HAVANA dispatch says that the Spanish columns continue to [illegible] the insurgents, who surrender daily. The combined forces of Guillermo, Maceo, and other chiefs were defeated at Rio Palmarito and Pinones, with ninety-five prisoners taken.

The Massacre of Maj. Thornburgh's Command.

On Sept. 29, Maj. Thornburgh's command, which was out after the hostile Ute Indians, was suddenly corralled and attacked by several hundred Ute Indians, near Milk river, in the vicinity of the Ute Reservation, in Colorado. Maj. Thornburgh was killed and a large number of men wounded, and the command entirely surrounded. The whole story of the massacre is told in the following dispatch from Rawlins, Wyoming Ter.:

"Maj. Thornburgh's expedition against the hostile Ute Indians, when within seventy miles of the agency, halted for the night of the 26th inst., and the Major sent Grafton Lowry, one of his scouts, to the agency to communicate with Agent Meeker, and to see how matters stood. He found the utmost excitement and confusion prevailing. The Indians had sent all their old men, women and children south toward the Blue river. The warriors were decorated and painted in the usual war style. They were about to murder Mr. Meeker, but Mr. Lowry prevailed on them not to commit the deed. Mr. Meeker told Lowry that he attempted to leave the agency with his family, but was prevented by the Indians; that they, the Indians, signified their readiness for war, and seemed anxious for the approach of the troops. They then made another move to kill Meeker and fire the buildings, but were a second time prevailed upon to desist. Lowry now attempted to return to the command, but was informed that he must remain; but, after giving them a number of assurances of his peaceable mission, he was allowed to depart, but was accompanied by about thirty warriors, who rode with him a number of miles and then left him. Lowry arrived at the command, then near Milk creek, on the evening of the 28th, and gave Maj. Thornburgh the above information.

"The next morning, Sept. 29, the command advanced, under the guidance of Joe Rankin, who is well acquainted with the country. About 9 o'clock a. m. Rankin discovered fresh Indian signs, and, having arrived at a canyon through which the road passed, and which would afford an excellent opportunity for ambush, he led the command around over the hill, over an old trail well known to him. By this movement he saved the lives of the command, for, on arriving on the top of the hill, he discovered the Indians in ambush on either side of the canyon through which the road passed.

"Thornburgh formed his men in line and awaited the coming attack. He was repeatedly urged to fire on the Indians, but persistently refused to do so, saying that his orders would not justify an attack. Two Indians now rode up to within a hundred yards, dismounted and, with a savage yell, fired, shooting Capt. Payne through the arm. At this signal the Indians gave a war-whoop and the battle commenced. Thornburgh now found that he was surrounded. He ordered a charge, which he gallantly led in person, and succeeded in cutting his way out, and, when within about 500 yards of his wagon, he fell dead with two bullets through his brain. Capt. Payne now took command, and the battle was carried on until 8 o'clock, p. m., the troops using the wagons and animals as breastworks. The Indians fell back a short distance and went into camp. During the engagement Lowry was killed.

"The casualties are about as follows: Killed—Maj. Thornburgh, Lowry, and thirteen enlisted men, the Wagon-Master McKinstry, and one teamster. Wounded—Capt. Payne, Capt. Lawson, Surgeon Grimes, Lieuts. Paddock and Wolf, and thirty-five men.

"Maj. Thornburgh's body had not been recovered when Rankin left with the dispatches.

"Capt. Payne had fortified his position, and thought he could possibly hold it until the arrival of reinforcements, in case they were sent promptly.

"It is now reported that Agent Meeker and his family and all employes have been murdered, and the agency building destroyed, but this report lacks confirmation.

"Settlers from Snake and Bear rivers are flocking in here for safety, and considerable excitement prevails.

"Troops have been ordered forward from Forts Sanders, McPherson, Fetterman and Robinson, and will leave for the seat of war as soon as they reach the railroad, by special train. Gen. Merritt, to whom the command of the expedition is given, is one of the best Indian fighters in the country, and his troops have accomplished wonderful things.

"The Utes are a warlike tribe, and have from 500 to 600 warriors. They started out on the war-path because they became dissatisfied with the treatment received from their Agent, who, they claim, was starving them.

"A hunting party, composed of Gen. Tyner, Assistant Postmaster General; J. W. Hoyt, Governor of Wyoming; J. K. Hayford, Postmaster at Laramie City, and editor of the Laramie Sentinel; two cooks, and an escort of eight soldiers, are with the beleaguered troops on Milk river."

Rough Treatment of a Spirit.

George Tomes and a friend from Pittsburgh, named F. A. Tremain, went to see a spiritual seance in a well-furnished brown-stone house up-town last Sunday evening. They paid $1 each for entrance. Tomes says: "When the spirit Mary came out into the room, about eight feet from the cabinet, the passage was clear in front of me, and I went for her like a streak of lightning, and threw my arms around her. She screamed and struggled, and several of the men ran to her assistance. My friend started to help me, but he fell over the seats, and the spirit got away from me. The ghost weighed 150 pounds if she weighed an ounce, and I fully identified her as the medium. A woman who had been sitting behind where I stood cried out, 'You nearly killed my daughter, and you ought to be shot with a pistol; and I've a good mind to shoot you for treating a spirit in that way.' The spirit had very little clothes on, and her face was whitened to give her a ghastly look."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

American Tea.

In the New York Tribune "Solon Robinson" treats on the American tea-plant, about which he assumes to speak on authority. After a preliminary fling at the Agricultural Department, he settles down to the American tea question, and pronounces it a failure. He says the plant will grow, but when the product is prepared and duly made into "tea," the decoction has a flavor which is not agreeable. No one, he says, calls for the second cup of American tea. He also advises the department to abandon the idea of growing coffee in Florida.

Appetite of the Bullfrog.

A gentleman of our borough some time ago captured a large bullfrog, and on opening it he was not a little surprised to find in its stomach a full-grown meadow mouse. In a scientific journal, a few days since, we notice mention of one of these frogs swallowing a cedar bird. Another party tells us of a small snapping turtle he found in the maw of a still more voracious batrachian.—West Chester Village Record.

SIX misbehaving young men were taken from their beds by a mob at Wesley Chapel, Ind., tied to a fence in a row, and whipped almost to death.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

IT is estimated that 90,000 more persons visited Saratoga this season than ever before.

OVER $1,000 a month is wasted in lottery tickets by the mill hands of Bridgeport, Ct.

FROM official statistics just published it appears that the number of suicides in Prussia since 1874 has gone on increasing to an alarming extent. Whereas in that year 2,826 of such cases occurred, the list in 1877 showed a total of 4,330, divided between 3,559 males and 771 females.

THE postal department and telegraph, that in many European countries are sources of revenue to the Government, are carried on in Russia at an expense to the Government. The official accounts for the next year put the postal income at 13,465,000 rubles and the expenses at 14,380,000, the deficit being 915,000 rubles. The telegraph income is put at 6,563,000 rubles and the expenses at 6,907,000, the deficit being thus 344,000. Consequently, the postal and telegraph deficit sums up 1,250,000 rubles.

A RAPID penman can write thirty words a minute. To do this he must draw his quill through the space of a rod—sixteen feet and a half. In forty minutes his pen travels a furlong, and in five hours and a third, a mile. We make on an average sixteen curves or turns of the pen in writing each word. Writing thirty words a minute we must make 488 to each second; in an hour, 28,800; in a day of only five hours, 144,000; and in a year of 300 days, 43,200,000. The man who made 1,000,000 strokes with a pen a month was not at all remarkable. Many men, newspaper men for instance, make 4,000,000. Here we have, in the aggregate, a mark 300 miles long to be traced on paper by each writer in a year.

AN interesting and valuable statement has been prepared at the Treasury Department at Washington, which shows the amount of the public debt per capita for the last twenty-three years, and reads as follows:

Yr.	Amount of debt per capita of population.	Interest per capita.	Yr.	Amount of debt per capita of population.	Interest per capita.
1856....	$ .38	$0.07	1868....	$69.26	$3.84
1857....	.85	.06	1869....	67.10	3.48
1858....	.93	.07	1870....	64.43	3.32
1859....	1.75	.10	1871....	60.46	3.06
1860....	1.91	.11	1872....	56.81	2.83
1861....	2.74	.16	1873....	52.85	2.64
1862....	15.46	.87	1874....	50.49	2.35
1863....	33.31	1.25	1875....	49.10	2.31
1864....	50.21	2.38	1876....	47.44	2.19
1865....	76.98	3.97	1877....	45.48	2.10
1866....	76.35	4.30	1878....	43.31	2.00
1867....	74.28	4.18	1879....	40.42	1.89

THE net and gross earnings of the railroads of the country for the past eight years exhibit features of interest to every one, and we give them, together with the miles in operation each year:

Yr.	Miles operated.	Gross earnings.	Net earnings
1871........	44,614	403 millions..	141 millions
1872........	57,323	465 "	..166 "
1873........	66,237	526 "	..184 "
1874........	69,273	520 "	..189 "
1875........	71,759	503 "	..185 "
1876........	73,508	497 "	..186 "
1877........	74,112	472 "	..170 "
1878........	78,960	490 "	..187 "

The greatest gross earnings were in 1873, but the greatest net earnings were the next year. The number of miles has nearly doubled in the eight years, and will be fully double in 1880 at the close of the decade.

THE toothpick market is agitated. Those chiefly in use are of white wood and pointed at both ends. A patent for fourteen years was obtained for them in 1866, and the factory of the Boston owners at Buckfield, Me., used from three to five thousand cords of wood yearly and turned out incalculable quantities. A box of 2,500 sold for twenty-five cents, and the profit was large. A log six feet long and about eighteen inches in diameter was placed in a machine, where bevel knives cut it in each direction and turned out the toothpicks ready for market. About eighteen months ago another Boston firm started a factory in the woods of Ohio and used similar machinery. The price then began tumbling, and fell to 20 cents at retail, then to 18, 14, and 12. Of late the original manufacturers have reduced the figure to 10 cents, or 8 cents at wholesale, and report their antagonists to be on the verge of stoppage.

Important to All Who Use the United States Mails.

POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THIRD ASSISTANT P. M. GEN.,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 20, 1879.

John P. Loge, Esq., Cincinnati, Ohio:

SIR: Referring to previous correspondence on the subject, and particularly to your letter of the 6th inst., you are advised that the department has finally decided that mail matter not addressed to a postoffice shall not be forwarded to destination. Respectfully,

A. D. HAZEN,
Third Assistant Postmaster General.

It will be well for correspondents to take care to direct their letters to the proper postoffice and not merely to the name of a locality. It will also be well for all persons writing letters to place the name of their postoffice at the top of their letter sheets to insure a proper direction to the reply.

As an explanation of the above it may be cited that Charleston, W. Va., is the name of one of the principal towns of that State, but there is no such postoffice as Charleston, W. Va. The name of the postoffice is Kanawha C. H., and mail matter for Charleston must be addressed to Kanawha C. H. (the name of the postoffice), or it will not be forwarded. There are thousands of similar cases throughout the country where the name of the town and the postoffice are not the same, and persons using the mails must see to it that their mail matter is addressed to the postoffice.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The Coming Session of Congress.

From members of both houses of Congress who occasionally visit this city on their way to and from the numerous investigations set on foot last winter, it is learned that the general expectation among them is that the coming session is to be very long and probably exciting. The sessions immediately before the Presidential election are usually long and generally exciting. It is considered quite probable by members that the winter session will last until September. There is everything to make a very long session probable. The contest over the election laws will be renewed. The members of both houses will have no end of stump speeches [illegible] at their constituency.—Washington Correspondence.

The Growth of Nihilism in Russia.

Russian Nihilism is not dying out. The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Cologne Gazette declares that the continuance of those conditions which gave birth to it, begetting discontent, contempt and general hatred of Government institutions, brings regular accessions to its ranks. That Nihilism has not been shaken to any extent, in spite of Gen. Ghourko's vigorous measures, is proved by the fact that its celebrated organ, Land and Liberty, still appears in St. Petersburg, always finding its way to the bureaus of the highest officers of state. A six-months' state of siege having been unable to prevent the circulation of this paper is in itself a proof that the blows hitherto dealt have not yet affected the vitality of Nihilism. The area of its activity is becoming wider, and it is establishing itself in the nation; people, as they get accustomed to it, are beginning to regard it with favor; and, decreasing in gloomy and narrow fanaticism, it is increasing in popularity and influence. The press toned down its indignation articles immediately after the murders of last spring. Then came discussions on the causes of the evil, tending to show that the nation required increased freedom and rights in order to fight against it. And when language and action on the subject had gone as far as possible; when the Government had been implored to do its part, and had turned a deaf ear to the appeal, the journals confined themselves to reporting occurrences, and ceased altogether attacking Nihilism itself. The press has, as a matter of fact, discontinued its assistance of combating the revolution. The evils in the system of government are, on the other hand, so numerous that there is no lack of materials for attacks against present institutions, and, in this way, fresh ground is prepared for Nihilism.

Lincoln on Sumner.

The last installment of the North American Review's "Diary of a Public Man in 1861" contains this amusing anecdote, never before published:

As I rose to leave, Mr. Lincoln picked up and handed me a note to look at. I recognized Senator Sumner's handwriting as I took it, and was not, therefore, particularly surprised to find it alarmish and mysterious in tone, bidding Mr. Lincoln, for particular reasons, to be very careful how he went out alone at night. I saw that Mr. Lincoln watched me while I read the note, and I perhaps may have expressed in my countenance an opinion of the communication which I did not think it civil to put into words, merely reiterating, as I laid it back on the table, my own conviction that there was nothing to fear in Washington, and no occasion for measures likely to influence the public unfavorably in other parts of the country. As I arose to go, Mr. Lincoln pulled himself together up out of the rocking-chair in which he had packed himself, and, scanning me good-naturedly for a moment, said very abruptly: "You never put backs with Sumner, did you?" I suppose I looked as much surprised as I felt; but I laughed and said that I did not think I ever had done so. "Well, I suppose not," he said; and then, hesitating a moment, went on: "When he was in here I asked him to measure with me, and do you know he made a little speech about it." I tried to look civilly curious, and Mr. Lincoln, with an indescribable glimmer all over his face, continued: "Yes," he said, "he told me he thought 'this was a time for uniting our fronts and not our backs before the enemies of the country,' or something like that. It was very fine. But I reckon the truth was," and at this point I was compelled against my will to laugh aloud, "I reckon the truth was, he was—afraid to measure!" And with this he looked down with some complacency on his own really indescribable length of limb. "He is a good piece of a man, though —Sumner," he added, half quizzically, half apologetically, "and a good man. I have never had much to do with Bishops down where we live; but, do you know, Sumner is just my idea of a Bishop?"

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$6 25	@	10 00
HOGS	3 70	@	4 25
COTTON	10½	@	10⅞
FLOUR—Superfine	4 75	@	5 85
WHEAT—No. 2	1 21	@	1 27½
CORN—Western Mixed	50	@	53½
OATS—Mixed	35	@	37½
RYE—Western	76	@	77
PORK—Mess	9 50	@	9 80
LARD	6⅛	@	6¼
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 50	@	5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 25	@	3 50
Medium to Fair	3 75	@	4 00
HOGS	3 00	@	3 75
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex.	4 50	@	5 10
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	4 75	@	5 25
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 03	@	1 04
No. 3 Spring	96	@	97
CORN—No. 2	36	@	37
OATS—No. 2	26	@	27
RYE—No. 2	59	@	60
BARLEY—No. 2	71	@	73
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	25	@	27
EGGS—Fresh	14½	@	15
PORK—Mess	9 80	@	9 90
LARD	6	@	6¼
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	1 04½	@	1 05½
No. 2	1 03	@	1 04
CORN—No. 2	36	@	37
OATS—No. 2	26	@	27
RYE—No. 1	58	@	59
BARLEY—No. 2	64	@	65
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red Fall	1 07	@	1 09
CORN—Mixed	34	@	35
OATS—No. 2	25	@	26
RYE	60	@	61
PORK—Mess	9 75	@	9 90
LARD	5¾	@	6
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT	1 06	@	1 11
CORN	40	@	41
OATS	29	@	30
RYE	67	@	68
PORK—Mess	9 85	@	9 95
LARD	6	@	6¼
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—Amber Michigan	1 13	@	1 15
No. 2 Red	1 11	@	1 12½
CORN—No. 2	41	@	42
OATS—No. 2	28	@	29
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice	5 50	@	5 75
WHEAT—No. 1 White	[illegible]	@	[illegible]
No. 1 Amber	1 13	@	1 14
CORN—No. 1	44	@	45
OATS—Mixed	30	@	31
BARLEY (per cental)	1 15	@	1 40
PORK—Mess	10 25	@	10 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	4 75	@	5 00
Fair	4 25	@	4 75
Common	3 25	@	3 75
HOGS	3 70	@	4 10
SHEEP	3 00	@	4 00

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED,
ROB. J. LOWRY | Editors.

The Grocers' Exchange is a Cincinnati concern, composed of two men, who thought they had devised means of collecting bad grocery bills, but who are now in jail. They wrote to the Rev. Lewis French as follows: "Your account will be advertised, with full particulars, during the Exposition, which opens Sept. 10, unless you call and make settlement with us at our office." The reverend debtor construed this as an attempt to blackmail, and had the Exchange arrested.

President John W. Harper, of the Danville (Ind.) College, disappeared mysteriously a year ago, while on his way to address a Sunday-school convention. There was nothing in his business or social relations to drive him off, and it was believed that he had been murdered for the $500 that he was carrying in his pockets. Lately his wife took out letters of administration on his estate. But he now returns. His story is that he was knocked down and robbed; that the blow affected his reason, and he wandered westward, finally coming to his senses among the Ute Indians.

There are in the United States nearly 1,000 Universalist churches and over 700 ministers. They own and support fifteen academies and colleges, publish seventeen periodicals, with many associations for the publication and dissemination of tracts, Sunday-school literature, etc. As a distinct denomination the Universalists were organized in the United States in 1770, under the direction of the Rev. John Murray. The doctrine of universal salvation, the essential teaching of the Universalists, however, found able advocates in the older church, centuries ago, in England, France and Germany.

A long review in the Syracuse Herald of the startling increase of opium-eating in this country concludes as follows: "Opium, besides doing as much to wreck the frame and rot the mind as either tobacco or alcohol, is infinitely more to be dreaded than they, for its approaches are so gentle and seductive, its use is attended with so little inconvenience—in short, it is so eminently polite and respectable a demon—that we do not realize its proximity till it has us or our loved ones in its clutches. The enemy that is open and above-board in his methods of work, the devil with his horns and tail and cloven hoofs uncovered, is almost a friend in comparison with the mild-mannered Mephistopheles."

A strong feeling of animosity is growing up between Russia and Germany, and there are politicians and journalists on both sides who make no secret of their wish for a trial of strength between the two countries. Germany is certainly taking precautions that seem to provide for the worst. Ten thousand workmen are laboring on the fortifications of the fortress of Thorn, which is called the Strasbourg of Germany's eastern border. The fortress of Posen has also been immensely strengthened and enlarged, and can now accommodate a large army. A considerable part of the indemnity payments made by France has been expended upon these fortifications, and in furnishing them with enormous stores of provisions and ammunition.

Col. Charles H. Gibson, of Philadelphia, met with no success in trying to bring about a duel. He has been a nominee for Congress, and occupies a respectable social position. John H. Davis, a broker, called him a liar, and he desired a bloody but honorable vengeance. He wrote a challenge to mortal combat, gave it to a friend to deliver, and awaited the answer with much impatience. After three days the friend put before him a copy of the Pennsylvania statute against dueling, and informed him that the letter had not been delivered at all. The Colonel's ire had not cooled, and he soon found, in Charles Walstrom, a second who did not play him false. But a new difficulty arose. Mr. Davis refused to receive the challenge in the desired spirit, but prosaically had the bearer and sender of the challenge arrested, and they were compelled to give bonds to keep the peace.

Two years since, when the Emperor of Germany visited Strasbourg, he was received with outward show, at least, of cordiality. There was no disloyalty outspoken enough to display discourtesy or ill-feeling toward the Emperor. Whether this was significant of more than the complete submission that follows overwhelming defeat is questionable. But it indicated acceptance of the situation and disposition to make the best of what could not be mended. Not long ago the Emperor revisited Strasbourg. The shop-keepers shut up their places of business; people closed their window shutters; the French residents remained in-doors as on a day of mourning, and only the official buildings were decorated. In one sense, the affair was trivial. The Emperor can stand that sort of performance quite as well as the Strasbourgers can its probable consequences. But it indicates what store of lingering hate is augmenting in the conquered province.

Z. L. White, the New York Tribune correspondent, passing through Utah, submits the most recent estimates of polygamy we have seen. Of the 125,000 Mormon population, it is claimed that only one-tenth are living in polygamy, that is, that only one-tenth of the male adults avail themselves of the privilege of having more than one wife, poverty and other considerations preventing the rest. Of these only a portion have married since the law of 1862, and a prosecution must follow within five years of the crime, which consists in contracting any marriage subsequent to the first, when the first wife is living.

Real Estate in Leadville.

Scribner's Monthly contains a notable paper on Leadville, written by Ernest Ingersoll, and illustrated by Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote and Mr. J. H. Mills, from which we quote this account of an interesting phase of mining life:

All this excitement and influx of masses of men, and the consequent irregular squatting anywhere upon unoccupied ground, began at once to produce discord and a fever of speculation in real estate. A certain corporation claimed to own the whole town-site under a patent from the Government, and tried to exact payment from every tenant; but the illegality of this was asserted, and, pending decision, every one not only laughed at the company, but proceeded to buy and sell original squatter-claims as though no better title was ever in existence—a supposition probably true at that time. Town lots rose from nothing to fabulous prices in a day, and fortunes were made and opportunities neglected accordingly.

Next came a period of "jumping," that is, getting forcible or fraudulent possession of property. Men would call with a paper having a legal appearance and politely inform some man occupying the cabin they coveted that they had bought the property from the owner.

"You know, pard," they would remark affably, "that you just settled down here 'cause it was convenient like, and nobody said nothing about it; but now the owner thinks he orter have some good from his property, and we've bought it. We don't want to be onpleasant, but it looks like you'd have to vamoose."

"That's all right, no offense," the shaggy-headed cottager would reply, quietly; "but I reckon ef the owner or anybody else wants this yere cabin they've got to take it, and they've got to hold over me, and get up right 'arly in the mornin', too," and he lays a loving hand upon the hilt of his six-shooter, while the would-be jumpers anathematize their way out of the door.

There were, however, clear cases of tenancy of land where no title was held, and here the occupant, if unruly, was likely to find his cabin timbers falling about his ears in the middle of the night, under the vigorous stroke of a band of citizens who proposed to see the real owner put in possession then and there. Headless fellows would insist upon putting their trading shanties or dwelling-houses anywhere in the streets and alleys set apart for public use, and then down would come a squad of police, hitch a span of horses to the underpinning and raze the obstruction in ten minutes. Hard words were a matter of course in all these little public and private transactions in real estate, and every day or two a man would be shot or beaten half to death; but public opinion and the numerous witnesses quickly and loudly decided the right of the case, and the Coroner's jury was very likely to formulate the popular verdict. Truth to say, the vox populi in these cases was usually about right. Outside of a case of robbery by "bunko thieves," if a man gets shot in Leadville, it is safe to conclude that he has got his deserts.

Speculation in town lots did not last very long, however, and now real estate is down to a pretty solid basis of value. The probability is that the future will see a decline in prices, as a whole, rather than an enhancing of the value of real estate within the corporate limits, as no doubt Leadville has seen her highest tide-mark of population.

The Origin of Coal.

The received opinion that a vein of coal simply represents a mass of vegetation, which has been changed directly into that substance, is opposed by M. Fremy. Some time ago he adopted a synthetic measure to discover the real secret of the manner in which coal was produced, and his experiments appear to show that while fiber could not be converted into anything resembling coal, certain substances of vegetable origin, such as sugar, starch, gum, vasculose, etc., did admit of that conversion. An artificial coal made of these latter materials yielded tar, gas, water and coke, just like ordinary pit coal. Gum, inclosed with water in a sealed tube, and subjected to heat, was changed into a coal containing 78 per cent. of carbon, 5 per cent. of hydrogen, and 16 per cent. of oxygen. His conclusions are that coal is not the direct result of vegetable substances; that the impressions of plants sometimes found in it have been produced after the modification was established, and that there are two stages in its fermentation of peat, and the second of the transformation of ulmic acid into a mineral fuel, under the joint action of heat and pressure.

While a negro was whitewashing in the jail at Troy, Ohio, a prisoner blackened his own face with burnt cork, daubed his clothes with whitewash, and walked out unmolested.

VITAL ISSUES.

The Army at the Polls and the Doctrine of State Rights.

Eloquent Extract from a Recent Speech by Hon. George H. Pendleton.

The presence of the army at the polls!

Must I argue it seriously? Must I show by theory and reason that it is entirely incompatible with the freedom of elections? Must I go into history and sustain the theory by the example of every free Government which has ever lived and died? Must I show that nearly every State in the Union has prohibited even the mustering of the militia on the days of election? Must I show that the framers of our constitution were so jealous of the military power that they made it absolutely the creature of Congress?

The Congress shall have power:
To raise and support armies;
To provide and maintain a navy;
To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces.

But lest even Congress should be tempted to use the army to perpetuate the power of a party or destroy the liberty of the people, the constitution carefully provided that even Congress should make "no appropriation of money to that use for a longer term than two years."

To guard still more carefully the use of the military power the constitution declares that, while Congress may "provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia," and the President shall be their Commander-in-Chief when called into the service of the United States, "the appointment of officers and the authority of training the militia" are reserved to the States respectively. And still further to prevent the army from becoming a part of the machinery of Government, or an instrument of civil administration, or a posse, or a police power—in a word, to confine it as nearly as possible to the single, simple duty of fighting the armed enemies of the country, the constitution gave Congress the power "to provide for calling out the militia to execute the laws of the United States."

These are the wise constitutional provisions. Laws and habitudes made in pursuance of their letter and spirit governed the use of the army for more than seventy years. The war came, armies were raised and used, the people became accustomed to the exactions of the military power, the commanders came to love it. In the border States—I speak more confidently as to Kentucky, because I happen to know about it—the military power was used for every purpose, without shadow of authority of law. The military commanders, by special orders, defined the qualification of voters, defined the duties of judges of election, ordered them not to receive the votes of certain classes whom the constitution and laws declared were qualified to vote, and not to permit certain candidates to be voted for whom this same constitution declared to be eligible; and sent troops to the polls to enforce the execution of these orders. Remember these things were done at the State elections for State officers. We know full well that on one occasion, within four days of an election in a warm party contest, the commanding officer forbade the Democratic nominee to be a candidate for the Judgeship of the Court of Appeals, and ordered the judges of election not to receive votes for him. If it be said that Kentucky was disturbed, and many of her citizens were favorable to the Rebellion, the answer is plain, that, if there was peace enough to have an election at all, there was peace enough to have a free and legal election.

These events produced the law of 1865. It prohibited many of the wrongs complained of, and forbade the use of the army at elections except, among other things, "to keep the peace at the polls." No argument could induce the Republicans to leave out those words. Under that clause every evil has crept in. Troops have been used as a posse; troops have been stationed for the purpose of intimidation over the country. They were sent with Butler to New York; they were kept handy for use in the State Houses of South Carolina and Louisiana; they were put at the beck of every Deputy Marshal, and when there was danger of a Democratic Legislature they were sent to drag members from the legislative halls of New Orleans. At the extra session of Congress the Democrats sought to repeal this clause. It was demonstrated by a history of fourteen years that the troops were never needed to keep peace at the polls; that they were never called on for that purpose; that the pretense was used that troops in squads and companies and regiments might be stationed in the proper localities, subject to the call of Deputy Marshals, to obtain partisan advantage. It was the same old story taught by all philosophy, by all experience, by all the instincts and impulses of human nature. The Democrats sought to repeal the law; they appealed to the constitution, to the traditions of the fathers, to the philosophy of our institutions, to the experience of the world.

We were met with the assertion that we desired to encourage turbulence at the polls, to strip the administration of legitimate power. The President adopted the suggestion, and vetoed the bill.

Mark the bill exactly! It left the President the power to use the army anywhere, everywhere, at any election, whether general or special, to repel the armed enemies of the country; to suppress insurrection; to resist and crush rebellion. It only prevented him, in time of peace and tranquillity, from taking bodies of troops to the polls under the pretense of preventing men from fighting or crowding around the ballot-boxes. He might have all the flocks and herds on the royal demesnes, but his heart coveted this little ewe lamb of the people. I impute to the President no bad motive. I know him too well to asperse his personal character. I believe no more patriotic men exist than our army. "To keep the peace at the polls," even by this President and by this army! That would be the peace that the wolf keeps among the lambs! That would be the peace of the desert! That would be the peace which the armies of France kept when the people voted for the empire! That would be the peace which Rome enjoyed when the candidates bought the election to the imperial throne from the legions! That would be the peace of all voting on the side of the soldiers.

The presence of such a power is incompatible with the freedom of elections. It will overpower a strong people; it will seduce a weak people; it will mold a corrupt and debauched people. But in either event free election is destroyed. The power of the army is force; its life is absolute command and implicit obedience. Its weapons are sword and musket. Its methods are despotic. In the atmosphere of its presence and protection, reason, judgment, free choice—the very element and substance of election—cannot breathe, refuse to live. No free Government has ever permitted troops to be used at the polls. Every Government which has tolerated their presence there has ceased to be free, no matter under what pretext; no matter for what avowed or real purpose; the result has been the same. Rome existed as a republic for 500 years, her armies conquered the world; her Consular elections were annual; her Consuls commanded her armies. By a law of the republic the armies were prohibited to approach the sacred circle of the city at the time of an election. Cæsar returning from Gaul led his legions across the Rubicon under the pretense of saving the order of the city, or quelling domestic turbulence, "of keeping the peace at the polls," and in fifty years the empire superseded the republic, and the army sold the imperial crown. France has made the army an instrument of civil administration. All the Latin race has, in the Old and New World, followed the example, and orderly, free government has nowhere long existed among them. England learned this lesson long ago. For centuries no armed soldier has been permitted near the polling places, even if the peace were broken. The Sheriffs of London summoned the juries and held the issues of property and life in his hands. Their power was so great that oftentimes the chiefs of the parties sat in council awaiting the results of the election as the token of their safety for another year or of the necessity of instant flight from the country. The turbulence was great. London was convulsed by riotous mobs and the excesses of armed bands, and yet, wisely curbing the impulses of the moment, the statute of 1735 recited that by the common law, by the statutes of Edward I., by the usage and practice of the realm, armed troops had not been permitted to approach the polls for any purpose, and continued and enforced the prohibition. When, a few years afterward, troops were used to quell a riot at a Westminster election, with uncovered heads and bended knees the offenders received the censure of the House of Commons. Within a month, when the city of Quebec requested the presence of a regiment to preserve its peace, the Governor General refused. He said a well-regulated police, not a part of the army, must keep the peace of the community. England to-day is the freest Government in the world except our own. A soldier cannot enter the hall of the Commons with his uniform and arms.

Our Declaration of Independence is the protest in behalf of civil liberty, immortal in history. It will gather glory throughout all the ages. It voices the whole spirit of freedom. It exalts the individual in stating his inalienable rights. It ennobles the State in defining its just purposes and powers. It was evoked by the wrongs our fathers suffered.

"He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good."

"He has kept among us in time of peace standing armies without the consent of our Legislature."

"He has affected to render the military independent of and superior to the civil power."

"He has deprived us in many cases of the benefits of trial by jury."

This sublime protest against outrages on civil liberty denounced the wrongs of which the Democratic party complains to-day. It stands upon the declaration out of which the republic was born. It asks nothing which the Declaration does not demand. That was a "revolutionary document," says Gen. Garfield. Aye! and the Democratic party is "revolutionary" to that extent, and no further. It teaches the truths which the Declaration announced to be self-evident. It demands the rights for the assertion of which our fathers pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor. The Republican party to-day denounces these doctrines as revolutionary, and inconsistent with the maintenance of the Government and the best interests of the people.

My countrymen, must I adjure you to heed the lesson of all reason, of all history? The great experiment is in our hands to-day. We are exposed to greater dangers from this cause than any Government. Other Governments have the King, the throne, the crown, the executive head—the emblem of national sovereignty raised above parties, wielding the vital powers of the Government, and maintaining its form, whichever party may succeed. If it were possible at all, such a Government might use the troops impartially to keep the peace as between the parties. Every department of our Government, every representative of the sovereignty of the people is in the hands of a party; every office, and honor, and emolument is the price of party success. It is madness, to confide to a party the power of bringing troops to the polls, where its fate is to be decided.

State rights are not State wrongs. The rights of the States, as reserved and limited by the constitution, are as essential to our constitutional Union as are the rights and powers of the Federal Government. Both are essential to our Government and form of governmental being, which has been so well defined by the Supreme Court of the United States to be "An indestructible Union composed of indestructible States." The doctrine of States' rights is not the doctrine of disunion, nor of nullification, nor yet of secession. It does not maintain the superiority of the States. It does not decry or belittle the powers of the Federal Union, whether of making or executing the laws. It never has been stated, it never will be stated, more tersely, more accurately, more clearly, than in the Tenth amendment of the constitution, so tenaciously insisted on by Massachusetts:

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

The Government of the United States is supreme within its sphere, because the constitution expressly provides that "This constitution and the laws of the United States, which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding." The constitution is the supreme law. The laws made in pursuance of it are likewise supreme. The laws made not in pursuance of it are not supreme. They are null and void. They are no laws. The duty and the power to execute the constitution and laws have been confided by the constitution to the Federal Government. The powers of the Federal Government are delegated, every one of them, by the States; or, if you prefer it, by the people of the States. They exist by virtue of that delegation, and the instrument delegating, defining, expressing the extent and limit of the powers, is the constitution. The powers and rights of the States, meaning thereby the Government and the people of the States, are inherent in them as political communities. The States delegated some of their powers to the Federal Government; they prohibited the exercise of some by themselves absolutely, and of others without the consent of Congress. The constitution defines the powers delegated, the powers prohibited, and declares that the powers not delegated to the United States nor prohibited to the States are reserved to the States.

If a question arises as to the power of the United States, you must look to the delegation of powers by the constitution. If the power is not found there, it does not exist. If a question arises as to the power of a State, you look to the powers delegated to the United States, and then go to the powers prohibited to the States. And if the power is in neither category it does belong to the State. If a difference of interpretation as to the power delegated and prohibited arise, and a case involving the question can be made, then the judicial tribunals, and ultimately the Supreme Court of the United States, become necessarily the final arbiter. If a case for judicial interference cannot be made, that great public opinion—that enlightened public conscience which seeks the highest sources of wisdom, which always aspires to be right—will in one way or another give decisive judgment. That opinion may ebb and flow like the tides of the ocean at the bidding of the fickle encore. But it will attain a steadiness like the ocean from which all height is measured. This is the doctrine of State rights, as maintained by the Democratic party. It is the doctrine of the constitution. It is the doctrine of local Government, of home rule, of Union. It is the doctrine of a simple Government of few powers, touching few objects,—of freedom. Consolidation is as unconstitutional as secession; unity of Government is as unconstitutional as separation, and both consolidation and unity tend as certainly in the end to disunion. If it be said this theory cannot be strictly correct, for that twenty-four new States have been carved out of territory belonging to the Union, the answer is—that it is strictly and entirely true as to the original thirteen States, and that every new State has been admitted to the Union expressly on the same terms as the original States.

I know it is fashionable in these days to decry State rights, to hold them up as the origin of the war and the cause of all our sectional troubles. They are confounded with secession, with nullification, with denying or dwarfing or paralyzing the Federal Government, and they are made the stalking horse of all that shocks the Union sentiment of the people. Even now the fear of them is invoked to aid the scheme of using the military power and the civil officers of the Federal Government to interfere with elections. I protest against this confusion of ideas; I protest against defining the doctrine wrongfully and then attacking it as our doctrine. I will quarrel with no man about terms, about names he may call this Government—a Nation or a Confederation, or a Federal Union. If he believes the Federal Government is supreme within its sphere and the States are supreme within their spheres, and that neither may trench on the powers of the other; if he believes that all powers not delegated nor prohibited are reserved to the States respectively, he is States-rights man enough for me. He asserts the true, constitutional, conservative doctrine; conservative of our Government, of our Union, which was designed to be perpetual, of our freedom.

Wm. Boulster, of Oppenheim, Fulton county, New York, was born Dec. 25, 1775, and is, therefore, nearly one hundred and four years old. He has lived fifty years in Fulton county, and is in good health, but is beginning to lose his sight and hearing.

THURMAN ON SHERMAN.

Extract from the Ohio Senator's Columbus Speech.

The Republican speakers and Republican press are crowing lustily about what they call the resumption of specie payments. Behold, say they, we are on the eve of prosperity; resumption brought this about, and we brought about resumption; ergo, you should all support the Republican party. My friends, it requires no great powers of analysis to explode this sophistry.

In the first place, have we specie payments? Do any of our debtors pay us in specie unless the debt be $5 or less? Do the banks pay their creditors in specie? Try and see if they do. Collect as many bank bills as you can and assort them. Out of $10,000 you will have probably not over $200 on the national banks of Columbus. The remaining $9,800 are of banks scattered all over the republic. To present them at the banks that issued them would require you to travel thousands of miles and incur hundreds of dollars of expense. To present them at the Treasury Department at Washington would cost less, but yet would be onerous and expensive. So you abandon the idea of doing either. You have $200 of Columbus bills. You present them at the banks and demand specie. Do you get it? Not unless the banks see fit to give it to you. Our Columbus banks are very accommodating, and I have no doubt that, in a case of necessity, they would oblige you by giving you specie for your $200 of their notes. But they are not obliged to do so, and were you to present $5,000 or $10,000 of their bills for redemption, they would not do so. They would pay you in the much-derided greenback. Then what would you do with the greenbacks if you wanted specie for them? Present them to any Federal officer in Columbus for redemption? If you did he would smile at your ignorance, and politely tell you that the Government did not redeem greenbacks in Columbus; that if you wanted specie for them you must carry or send them to the city of New York and present them to the Assistant Treasurer of the United States. Well, you can't afford to incur that trouble, expense and loss, and so you conclude to keep your greenbacks. Why, what does the Secretary tell us in the speeches that he is delivering through the country; in order to illustrate, I suppose, the honesty of the President's civil-service rules? Does he tell us that the Government is redeeming greenbacks in specie? Far from it. He tells us that comparatively few greenbacks are presented for redemption. Our so-called specie payments, therefore, are no specie payments at all. Neither individuals, banks, nor the Government make payments in specie. Paper money, when undoubtedly good, is so much more convenient than specie that it keeps specie out of circulation. In no country that uses small paper money can there be a specie circulation, except small change. In England and France there is veritable specie payment. Debts of large as well as small amount are often paid in specie. But in those countries there are no small notes, and hence a large proportion of the money in circulation is specie. In our country we have small notes of both the Government and the banks, and hence we have no specie in circulation worth mentioning, except our subsidiary coins of half dollars and less.

But, while we have no specie payments, accurately speaking, I admit that our paper money has been brought to a par with specie. Of the sacrifices suffered by the people, in order to bring this result about, of the shrinkage of all values, the paralysis of all industries, the thousands of laborers thrown out of employment, the bankruptcies, amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars, I shall not speak to-night. If there is any one here who thinks that we have not paid dearly for the whistle, I will not, to-night, attempt to disturb his belief. But when the Secretary of the Treasury perambulates the country, boasting of the achievement of bringing greenbacks to a par with coin, it is not improper to point out to him the graveyards through which we have passed in our dreary march to this result. And when he claims that this consummation was brought about by the Resumption act, and his execution of it, it is eminently proper to show him how baseless is his claim, how hollow is his pretension.

There are various causes that have operated to bring our paper money to a par with specie, and among them the Resumption act is the least. Had that act never been passed, and had Congress authorized what the Secretary of the Treasury, without authority of law, now permits, the receipt of greenbacks in payment of customs duties, they would have been at par with specie a year at least before the time fixed for resumption by the Resumption act. When that act was before the Senate I moved an amendment providing for the receipt of greenbacks in payment of customs duties. The Republicans voted it down. I said it was worth more than all the provisions in the act. My opinion was treated with silent contempt, for the bill had been concocted in caucus, and the Republican Senators would not debate it. Time has proved that my judgment was correct. With all the machinery of the Resumption act, and its cost to the people, the Secretary of the Treasury found himself compelled to receive, in plain violation of law, the greenback in payment of the duties.

I have said that, had the Resumption act never been passed, greenbacks would have reached a par with coin. It would have been through great suffering, as it has been through great suffering, aggravated by that act, but it would certainly have come.

About every twenty years we have a commercial revulsion which, for brevity, we call a panic; when the country wakes up to the fact that, owing to an imprudent extension of credit or bad legislation, or both, it is not able to pay its debts on demand. A long period of suffering, generally five or six years, ensues, and then, having reached the bottom, any change must necessarily be for the better, and business begins to revive. Specie payments are resumed, as it is called; that is, paper money and specie come to par. It is not this resumption, so called, that produces a revival of business, but it is the revival of business that produces the resumption. In 1837 one of those panics occurred. In five or six years thereafter, indebtedness being in a great measure liquidated, or wiped out by the Bankrupt law of 1841, business began to revive, and, as a consequence, we had what was called a resumption of specie payments. In 1857 we had another panic, and its history would have been precisely that of the panic of 1837 had not the civil war occurred. In 1873 came the last panic, and, without any Resumption act, five or six years, as in former instances, would have brought us back to a revival of industry and a resumption of specie payments, so-called. If I understand one of the speeches of the Secretary of the Treasury, he admits that the panic of 1873 made resumption possible. If so, where is the merit of the Resumption act which was not passed until Jan. 14, 1875? I agree that resumption necessarily followed the panic of 1873, just as it followed the panic of 1837, without a Resumption act, but it took five or six years to resume, just as it took the same time after 1837.

But another cause has largely contributed to our so-called resumption, and for this cause our Republican rulers certainly claim no credit. Owing to bountiful crops in America and short crops in Europe for three years, the balance of trade, instead of being against us, has been largely in our favor; until, at length, gold is being shipped, in large amounts, to this country to pay for bread.

Another cause that has facilitated the equalization of paper and coin was the Democratic measure of remonetizing silver, which President Hayes vetoed, but which we passed over his veto.

Still another cause was the Democratic bill that put an end to the destruction of the greenback, for without the greenback in existence neither Secretary Sherman nor the national banks would have the audacity to pretend that they could maintain actual specie payments. In a word, my friends, the claim of the Radical leaders to your support on the ground that they have brought about prosperity to the country by a resumption of specie payments is a bold pretense, without any foundation in fact, that can deceive none but those who are ignorant or those who wish to be deceived.

In conclusion upon this subject, let me say that they who charge us with a purpose to undo what has been done, and to plunge the country into a wild career of inflation, do us the greatest injustice. However much we deplore the suffering that has been caused by Radical measures, and especially by the contraction of the currency, we have no purpose to embark upon a career of wild and wanton speculation.

INDIANA ITEMS.

The old settlers' meeting at Dayton was attended by at least 3,000 people.

Typhoid fever is almost epidemic in Corydon and vicinity, and is of the severest type.

Henry Work, aged 75 years, and a resident of Plymouth for twenty-two years, has died.

The tobacco crop in Brown county this year will not be one-third what it has been of late years.

The 8-year-old daughter of John Hemphill, of Rising Sun, was fatally kicked by a mule.

Kosciusko county brags of being out of debt and having $80,000 toward the erection of a new Court House.

The corner-stone of a new orphans' home was laid at Jeffersonville, last week, with considerable ceremony.

The citizens of Rush county will vote, Oct. 13, upon the proposed levy to aid the North and South railroad.

The soldiers' reunion at Lebanon, last week, brought out the largest crowd that ever assembled in Boone county. Of ex-soldiers, 2,000 were present.

The infant child of Prof. Alpheus McTaggart, of Earlham College, Richmond, which was so badly scalded by the accidental upsetting of a vessel, has died of its injuries.

The conference of the Episcopal clergy of Central Indiana was held at Terre Haute last week, with a large attendance. Nearly all the clergymen in the diocese were present.

A man named Demuth, while intoxicated, attempted to mount his horse at Ferdinand, when the animal jumped, throwing him to the ground and causing his death by a fracture of the skull.

As Hezekiah Fowler, of Metamora, was fixing a belt in his saw-mill at that place, he was struck on the head with a circular saw, crushing his skull in a horrible manner. He died in a few hours.

Edward Chaney, a farm-laborer in Otter Creek township, was rolling the field, when the span of mules took fright, ran away, and threw Chaney in front of the roller, which passed over him, causing instant death.

The wind-mill pump swindlers have reached Tippecanoe county, and last week swindled Mr. Stingley, of Laramie township. Mr. Stingley signed an order for one pump, which the rascals changed to seven and shipped that number to him.

Joseph Jordan, alias Durbon, a resident of Clark's Hill, and recently from near Richland, Ky., has been arrested by a requisition from the Governor of Kentucky and taken to Richland to answer the charge of murder, committed sixteen years ago in that State.

About a year ago, Adam Austin and his wife were driving over Blue river bridge—a structure erected by Shelby county, within the corporate limits of Shelbyville — when the horse took fright and backed over the embankment into the river, killing Mr. Austin, while his wife escaped without serious injury. She now sues the county for $5,000 damages.

The widow and children of the late John J. Reynolds, of Lafayette, are quarreling over his estate, valued at $250,000. Before his death he had given his children large gifts, and the question is whether these should be considered as advancements, to be deducted from the share of each respectively, or as actual gifts of which no account was to be made.

The flouring-mill of Flabaugh & Ferre, one mile south of Somerset, on the Missinewa river, in Wabash county, was burned the other night. The mill was worth $4,000. There was stored in it over 5,000 bushels of wheat, a part of which belonged to the farmers in the neighborhood. It was no doubt the work of an incendiary. There was no insurance on the mill or grain.

The Postmaster of Columbus is in receipt of a package of letters from Jeffersonville, ranging in date from 1871 to the present date, addressed to several citizens. They were taken from an old mail-car of the Jeffersonville, Madison and Indianapolis road, which was being torn up for repairs in the shop. The letters fell in behind some paneling at various different times, as indicated by their dates.

A trip through half a dozen of the counties of Southwestern Indiana convinces the Indianapolis Sentinel's correspondent that the wheat crop in this part of Indiana, in the acreage sown, will be larger in 1880 than ever before. A great deal of the early-grown wheat is already up and looks well, while on every farm the farmers are busy breaking land for the late September and October sowing. The use of fertilizers is general, and in the counties of Floyd, Harrison, Perry, Spencer, Warrick, Dubois, Orange, Washington and Clark the demadd for bone-dust and phosphates is far in excess of the supply.

"Stick to the Cow."

We have known men who have failed because they were unwilling to let well-enough alone. An amusing story, told of Dr. Hugh Blair, a Scotch preacher, and Boswell, the biographer of Dr. Johnson, illustrates our remark:

When a young man, Boswell, being present one night in Drury Lane Theater, amused the audience by imitating the lowing of a cow. He did it so well that there was a general shout, "Encore, the cow!"

Instead of responding, Boswell tried to imitate the noise made by some other animal, and failed. "Stick to the cow, mon!" whispered Dr. Blair, who sat next him.

Young people might profit by this homely advice.

Illicit distilling is decreasing in Tennessee.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, OCT. 9, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

R. H. Weamer and John H. Baker put down the rebellion.

During the summer, 11,854 Russians were imprisoned at Moscow, of whom 10,477 were condemned to exile in Siberia.

Nothing definite has been heard from the Ute Indian war, since the attack on Thornburg. Northwestern Colorado is all excitement.

The Hicksville fair was a grand success this year. Total number of entries 1,029. Total receipts (except for speed entries) $1,967,67.

The administration slate is made up. Blaine is to receive the support of the Hayes wing in the republican convention. Sherman wants to be senator from Ohio.

Haub. Williams, of the Indianian, and Quinn Hossler, of the Republican, both of Warsaw, are distributing their "pictur's" among their friends. Come, Zimmerman, you'r on deck.

R. H. Weamer gave Col. I. B. McDonald considerable "taffy" in last week's Republican. When I. B. McDonald asks for an office, this same R. H. Weamer will not be slow to brand him as a rebel sympathiser.

The grand stand on the fair grounds at Adrian, Mich, contained about 2000 persons last Thursday afternoon, when it gave way with a crush. It is reported that sixteen persons were killed and seventy-five more wounded.

Allen county has started a political menagerie, with Frank Wolke and Mart Spencer as the elephants.—Fort Wayne News.

Who has charge of the "comps?" We want a ticket to that show.

During the races at the Goshen fair, last Thursday evening, a severe storm created, and several were fatally injured. A handsome team belonging to Mr. Hendeman, of Goshen, was crushed to death under a falling tree.

A new gun is now being manufactured called the Remington-Keene magazine gun. It can be fired effectively, ten times in succession, and is light enough for a private to carry on a march. It is a complete revolution in military and naval arms.

The democrats of Massachusetts met in convention at Boston, on Tuesday last, and nominated John Quincy Adams for governor. The balance of the ticket is composed of straight-out democrats who are opposed to the election of Ben Butler.

It is said that Gen. Grant is to be presented with another residence property, that of the late Commodore Garner, on Staten Island. $75,000 is the amount required to buy it. The donors will receive their reward if ever Grant is elected president again.

Thirty young men of Canasteo, N. Y. have signed a pledge, whereby they agree to abstain from intoxicating drinks for life, and any one of them who breaks it is bound to publish in the village papers, over his own signature, a notice that he can be no longer trusted as a man, and is not capable of resisting temptation.

Tilden is urged to take part in the Ohio campaign, "but," he says, "I am under engagements which render it impossible." Of course it would be impossible for him to render any personal service, except for himself. On the contrary Hendricks is doing noble service in Ohio, concerning which the Cincinnati Enquirer says: "Governor Hendricks may find something to his credit in Ohio when he comes before another national convention."

The Garrett Herald and Auburn Republican did not relish our criticisms concerning the speeches of a few who were honored with the privilege of addressing the soldiers at the re-union. We did not expect them to, and would have been disappointed if they had. We have the satisfaction of knowing, that at least two of the republican editors of the county are qualified to promise one thing before an event, and excuse a violation of the same promises afterward. The party lash troubles them a great deal more than honest motives.

An exchange says: "The amount of money received on account of the late pedestrian match in New York was $75,923. After all deductions for expenses, the remainder was divided as follows:

Rowell, 530 miles	$19,500 00
Merritt, 515 miles	7,812 50
Hazael, 500 miles	4,192 50
Hart, 482 miles	2,730 00
Guyon, 471 miles	1,930 00
Weston, 455 miles	1,363 00
Ennis, 450½ miles	1,072 50
Krohne, 450½ miles	877 50

Rowell's two walks have netted him the snug sum of $43,893,30."

R. H. Weamer seems to think we were mistaken when we said:

"The several committees having in charge the arrangements for the reunion, are entitled to credit for having endeavored to conduct the affair on a non-partisan basis."

He intimates that republican doctrines in favor of a centralized government, which were sneakingly edged into the speeches of Baker, Robertson and Stratton, were just what the committee wanted. How is it? We want to know. If it was the desire and intention of the committee, that the republican speakers should take advantage of the occasion and advocate the treasonable doctrines of the republican party of to-day, instead of reciting incidents and relating adventures connected with the late war which would interest the soldier, then we want to make the necessary correction, and place the committee right before the public.

"'Honor to whom honor is due.' The republican party put down treason once, and it can do it again, and if any of the democratic party feel like helping they can, but it is foolish for them to claim honors they have never earned or merited."

The above is an extract from the Garrett Herald's reply to our criticism on a few of the re-union speeches. We did not pretend to claim honors for any party, the honors upon that occasion were due the soldiers of all parties, one equally with another. The Herald says, "The republican party put down treason once, and it can do it again." We say that the republican party in power during the rebellion, does not exist now,—that the party that now disgraces the name, "republican," is capable of doing nothing, except to steal the presidency and reward the thieves who participated in the theft. There are but three or four states in the Union that have republican majorities, nice party to blow about what it can do.

The convention of militia delegates that met in New York last January, reassembled in St.Louis last week. The object of the convention was to effect a series of reforms in the militia laws of the several states, as embodied in a bill presented to the last session of congress, which seeks to greatly enlarge the annual militia appropriation, the amount asked being $3,000,000, and to render its distribution conditional on the acts of states in providing uniform clothing, uniform regulations and uniform systems of drill, especially of rifle practice. The organization of the militia, under the constitution adopted at St Louis, is called the national guard association of the United States, and its object to secure military efficiency and united representation before congress. The executive committee is vested with full powers during the intervals between the meeting of the association. Members of the association are to be commissioned officers of the national guard of the various states, and shall be elected annually as follows: The national guard, or active uniformed militia of each state and territory, including the District of Columbia, shall be entitled to send five delegates to the convention of this association, which delegates shall be selected from the commissioned officers thereof, in such manner as may be prescribed by the adjutant general thereof. Such delegates shall be entitled to cast the vote for each state or territory represented in the convention. The vote shall be taken by states, in alphabetical order.

Hendricks on Hayes.

[Ft. wayne Sentinel.]

In Gov. Hendricks' great speech at Toledo, last Friday evening, he paid his respects to the little man who holds the presidential office to which he was not elected, in a most scathing manner. We quote:

Are you for free and fair elections, or are you on the other side? We prepare a law that will ensure free elections, and President Hayes vetoes it. He says: "I don't like this bill, and therefore it shan't become a law." I think a man that comes into office like Hayes did ought to wear the robes of office less flauntingly. [Tremendous cheering.] He wasn't elected, and you know it. He can't rest. Like a disturbed spirit, he wanders about on the face of the earth and can find no rest. He goes from one fair to another [Laughter], but he has no peace. My countrymen, although I had no desire to be a candidate for the vice presidency, you cannot imagine how proud I felt when over four millions of the citizens of the United States cast their votes for me, and elected me. [Tremendous cheering.] But oh, if I had not been elected, and if by fraud I could have slipped into the place, how like a condemned criminal would I have hid my face from my fellow countrymen forever! [Deafening and long continued cheers, part of the audience rising to their feet and shouting themselves hoarse.] It was enough that Hayes should be carried into the position by fraud, but when he defeats the popular will, his wrong I have no words to describe. He holds office and draws his salary, but when he steps out of that office no one will be thought less of than he. [Cheers.] It may be that Hayes did not know of the fraud that was going on to secure his inauguration, but when we find that he has conferred a government office upon every man who had a hand in the fraudulent business, we are inclined to suspect him.

Gov. Hendricks' indictment is true, every word of it. The country knows it too be true. The world knows it to be true. Better than anybody else in the world, Hayes himself knows it to be true. Rarely has Gov. Hendricks said a better thing in a better way than when he said what we have quoted.

At the meeting of the old pioneers, held at Indianapolis during the state fair, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

Judge Test, president.
Professor John Collett, secretary.
Robert B. Duncan, treasurer.

VICE PRESIDENTS.

First District—John La Goo, Gibson county.

Second District—Jos. Beard, Knox county.

Third District—General Trueblood, Washington county.

Fourth District—Jos. Tarkington, Decatur county.

Fifth District—Dr. A. C. Stevenson, Putnam county.

Sixth District—Cyrus Pence, Henry county.

Seventh District—Dr. Milton Robbins, Shelby county.

Eighth District—Captain Potter, Vigo county.

Ninth District— ——Berry, Madison county.

Tenth District—Job Eldridge, Cass county.

Eleventh District—J. C. Silvers, Wells county.

Twelfth District—Cyrus Fillmore, La Grange county.

Thirteenth District—Charles Cathcart, Laporte county.

Executive Committee—General Tom Morris, General Manson, Fielding Beeler, Dr. Geo. W. McConnell, and Geo. Noble.

We take the following extracts from the Indianapolis Sentinel's account of the meeting.

The amphitheater was packed with upward of 1,200 of the early settlers of our state, who in most cases here when it was a howling wilderness, and with strong arms cut down the forest, cleared the lands, and by perseverance wrought the vast changes which now stands out so grandly before them and their children and grandchildren in this the state of their making.

Sitting in front of this vast assemblage of gray heads, all the oddities of olden times were to be seen. The frilled caps and covered pasteboard sunbonnets were worn on the heads of the "grandmas," and the three cornered hats, brass-buttoned waist-coats, and tight pants had not yet been eliminated from the dress of the sterling "grandpas." President Test delivered his opening address, which was listened to with marked attention and heartily applauded at its close. It was a well-prepared address, and detailed the history of the early life of the old settlers present in a manner that was heartily approved by them, as could be seen by the many ejaculations from those present of "That's right," and "We have been there," during his delivery. During the discourse he gave a glowing eulogy on the state's historian. Hon. John B. Dillon, lately deceased.

The president announced that it would be in order now for five-minute speeches, and Joshua Walker, of Covington, Ind, 80 years of age, was called upon and spoke first. He was followed by Governor Williams, who made the following remarks:

Mr. President and pioneers of Indiana.—On yesterday I attended the meeting of the old seminary boys of Indiana, those who had attended the seminary from 1831 to 1852. It was a very pleasant reunion. They had the picture of the old seminary; some of them seemed to be very fond of looking at it. I would like to show you a picture of the seminary of 60 years ago that many of you attended. Instead of having the windows filled with glass as they were from '31 to '50 it had a log cut out of the side and paper pasted over it, if anything at all. That is the kind of a school house the great bulk of the pioneers of Indiana attended. I have met here to-day three who were my schoolmates 59 years ago. We would hardly know the place if we were to come on to it to-day. Some of us traveled three miles to get to the schoolhouse. We sat down on a three-cornered rail while we were there. We had the old Dilworthy and United States spelling book and a few that were able to get a reader had what was called the introduction to the English reader, or the English reader. I speak of this, my friends, to show you a hardship we labored under and passed through in that time.

After the seminary boys had got through with the exercises in the house they went out and took a game of ball—shinny, as they call it: "Keep on your own side, or you will get your shins hurt." We older ones never had much time for playing shinny, play, or anything else; because at noon they always made the big boys cut wood to make the fire in the morning. I was always of that class of boys—always a big boy.

In 60 years we have made the state of Indiana bud and blossom like a rose, not by the capital we brought with us but by the strong arm we brought to fell the forest to build your cities and to improve the country. If in the next half century the present generation make as great improvement as the last 50 years have done for Indiana, it will be one of the most splendid states in all this Union.

I have talked long enough, and most of you have heard me talk many times. I am glad to meet with the pioneers, but I hope when we meet again we can have our reunion all alone—not alone without other spectators, but it shall not be coupled with any other amusement or fair, or anything of the kind, but be where we can have it entirely as a reunion of the pioneers of Indiana. [Applause.]

Cyrus Fillmore, aged 75 years, and a brother of ex-president Fillmore, attended the convention.

Two twin brothers named Martz who were married to twin sisters whose maiden names were McCormick, all over 70 years of age, attended the convention.

Wells county was represented by Henry Miller, Joseph C. Silver, Michael Miller, William Studebaker, John Ogden Nelson Kellogg, and his wife, Chads Chalfant, Judge Garton, William Stoble and other pioneers, all over 70 years of age.

Uncle Henry Miller, named above, has resided in the state for over 73 years continuously.

Joseph Beard has resided in the state for the past 75 years.

Spencerville.

[Last week.]

—Luther Jones and lady have gone to visit relatives.

—Joseph Spifler is finishing an addition to his house.

—Potatoes are scarce and in good demand in this market.

—Marcus Barney has withdrawn from the firm of Barney Bros.

—Mr. G. Barney returned on Saturday from a trip to Kansas.

—Dr. Houghton and J. Rhodes are each building new barns.

—Mrs. Calvin Jones, of Wisconsin, is visiting friends in this place.

—Rev. L. E. Lancaster leaves on Thursday for his new field of labor.

—A. Kinsey drew first premium at the Hicksville fair, for best hearse and finest coffin.

—Spencerville will be well represented at the Waterloo fair, judging from the number that are talking of going.

—O. W. Rummel will probably represent Spencerville lodge at Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., at Indianapolis in November.

Newville.

—Apples are selling at thirty cents in the orchard.

—The railroad communication from Newville, spoken of in the COURIER has not yet made its appearance.

—Mr. E. W. Coburn has secured the services of Mr. John Eckley, of Allen county, Ind., in Mr. Olds' place.

—Mr. Mort Olds has removed to St. Joe. where he is going into the mercantile business on his own responsibility.

—School meeting on last Saturday evening and resulted in a general wrangle over the choice of a teacher, and nothing done.

—H. V. Lawrence has been at home on a visit, but left again this morning for Big Rapids, Michigan, with his mother, where they expect to stay one week, when he will return to Pierceton again.

—The new bridge over the creek at Newville is almost completed and it is going to be the best job ever done on this side of the county, and one that was very much needed, as this will give people a chance to get into town at all times whether the water is high or low.

—The furneral of Mrs. John Ridge daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Laesure of Newville township, took place to-day (Monday) at the United Bretheren church. She died in Seneca county, Ohio, where she and her husband resided, having removed therr last winter. The corpse was brought back to her father's and interred in the Newville Cemetery. The family has the sympathy of all their neighbors and acquaintances.

—The republicans are thinking of commencing action against the COURIER for damages, for deceiving them in regard to the Ohio election, as it stated that the contest between Gen. Ewing and Calico Foster would be settled on Tuesday (this week), and they went to the expense of sending over a negro to vote. They sent him back, as their funds are getting rather low and they could not board him until the 14th of October.

ALPHA.

A Model Magazine.

What to buy—where to buy it—and what price to pay for it—are three questions, in efforts at whose solution a large proportion of the time of every wife and mother is spent. The publishers of Ehrichs' Fashion Quarterly seems to have an acute comprehension of just what is required. The fall number of this magazine, which lies upon our table, leaves little to be desired in the way of information specially adapted to the wants of ladies. It is not, like many so-called fashion magazines, filled with reprints of illustrations published in European journals; but contains carefully executed drawings, made from actual finished articles of costume at varying rates of cost; each illustration accompanied with a lucid description of the material and manner of making. Not an item of female necessity is left unnoticed; clothing for boys and girls, ladies' underwear, trimmed and untrimmed hats and bonnets, laces, embroideries, hair goods, jewelry, and a hundred other items, are arranged in such admirable order that any lady can without difficulty select an article of a style to suit her taste, at a price commensurate with her means. As a guide to making purchases, the book is invaluable. It reminds its readers of everything they are likely to need, shows them in what styles their wants can be supplied, and gives full and reliable lists of all the latest metropolitan retail prices. The Fashion Quarterly, in short, fills a place in American periodical literature heretofore left vacant, and fills it so worthily as to leave little room for competors.

Published by Ehrich & Co., 287 to 295 Eighth Avenue, New York, at 50 cents a year, or 15 cents a single copy.

Read. Read.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please address G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county, who is authorized to sell the Singer Machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments furnished on short notice. 30-tf.

Ditch Notice.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested in the construction or completion of public ditches located in DeKalb county, Indiana, that the board of commissioners of said county will, on the

23rd Day of October, 1879,

commence an examination of ditches in said county, the time for the completion of which has expired; and all ditches or parts of ditches found unfinished, will be advertised and sold in accordance with Sec. 12 of the ditch law, approved March 9, 1875. All persons concerned will therefore see to it that their allotments are completed by that time, and thereby save costs.

B. F. BLAIR, Pres't. of Board.

Oct. 8th, 1879.

LIVE AGENTS WANTED.

To sell Dr. Chase's Recipes; or Information for Everybody, in every county in the United States and Canadas. Enlarged by the publisher to 648 pages. It contains over 2000 household recipes and is suited to all classes and conditions of society. A wonderful book and a household necessity. It sells at sight. Greatest inducements ever offered to book agents. Sample copies sent by mail, postpaid, for $2.00. Exclusive territory given. Agents more than double their money. Address Dr. Chase's Steam Printing House, Ann Arbor, Michigan. 41-3m.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else. The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
195 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana.
9-32-1y.

SUBSCRIBE
FOR THE AUBURN
Courier!
THE ONLY
DEMOCRATIC PAPER
IN DEKALB COUNTY.

JOB WORK!
NEATLY AND PROMPTLY EXECUTED AT LOW RATES.

$50,000! $50,000!
$50,000
WORTH OF CLOTHING!
Which was manufactured for southern trade, is now offered at
Sixty Cents on the Dollar.

We bought these goods of a large New York house, which manufactures for, and depends principally on southern trade. Owing to the fever raging so furiously south, they could neither sell nor ship their goods, and were obliged, therefore, to dispose of their entire stock to northern dealers at a big sacrifice.
We took advantage of this rare chance by buying only for cash, and therefore are enabled to sell these entire new goods at 65 cents on the dollar.

SAVE MONEY BY FAVORING US WITH A CALL.
SAM, PETE & MAX, Managers
Star Clothing House, FORT WAYNE, IND.,

"We Heard a Mighty Rumbling and Could'nt tell Where"
UNTIL WE HEARD OF
C. H. YESBERA
Coming to the front with the finest line of
Piece Goods and Suitings,
Gents' Furnishing Goods, Hats and Caps,
ever brought into DeKalb County. The acknowledged judgment of the proprietor, renders it unnecessary to say that his stock has been selected with the greatest care and with a view to pleasing the tastes of his customers. Call and examine his goods and satisfy yourselves that
Custom Made Work
is the cheapest, and that a suit furnished by him will outwear three ready-made suits and cost but a trifle more; besides you are always sure to get a good fit.
His Hats and Caps and Gents' Furnishing Goods are the very latest out. Call and see them, in the third room north of the Postoffice.
AUBURN, INDIANA.
41—tf

ROOT & COMPANY
We beg leave to announce that we have now in stock the most elegant line of
FALL DRESS GOODS!
That we have ever before displayed. Our Novelities are new in design and colorings and are simply exquisite. Some of the new effects this season are more beautiful than any that have been before produced. Besides an unusually fine variety of
COLORED SILKS,
In all the desirable shades, we have a line of elegant
Colored Brocades,
Plain Black Silks in all the best known foreign and domestic brands. In this line we have several special bargains, among which will be found heavy Gros Grain Silk. Eighteen inches wide, 75c; Nineteen inches wide, 90c; Twenty inches wide, $1.00. Most excellent goods for the money. We make a specialty of all kinks of TRIMMINGS,
consisting in part of all the fashionable shades of plain, stripe and fancy Velvets, Black and Colored Silks and Satins, Pekin Satin Stripes and Satin Moire Stripes, etc. We have some new, elegant and tasteful goods in this line not to be found elsewhere. Our stock of Black and Colored FRINGES,
will be found unusually large and exceedingly elegant
Button, Button, who's got the Button?
is no longer an open question. Everyone knows that Root & Company have always got the particular button that anyone may want, especially if it be rare and elegant. Our assortment is really almost without limit. New Garments in Black and Colors in all the fashionable shapes.
Root & Co., Calhoun Street,
FORT WAYNE, IND

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

Where to Borrow Money.

Those who desire to borrow money should do so where they can pay a portion of the principal at any time, and thereby stop interest, and also make arrangements, that in case of death the debt shall be canceled and not left to sell out the home from the wife and children. The system of paying commission should be avoided. All this can be accomplished by applying to Thos. H. Sprott, Auburn, Ind., whom we can recommend as responsible and reliable in his transactions.

—Leading citizens of Auburn are organizing an association for the purpose of securing Harper & Brothers' "Peoples Library," consisting of one hundred volumes of standard works of History, Biography, Fiction, Religion, Political Economy, Geology, &c., &c., by popular authors, and writers of acknowledged ability. This is a step in the right direction, and should be aided by every lover of knowledge. The club will probably consist of about fifty persons, at an expense of about $2.00 each, which will secure nearly 50,000 pages of first-class reading matter.

—We are glad to learn that our young friend and fellow citizen, Bill Latson, now of Kansas has met with good fortune since he made his advent in that state. An old gentleman, a neighbor to Billy was taken dangerously sick and Billy like a good Samaritan, attended him down the painful path, until the shadows began to appear, and death became a certainty. Then the old gentleman, in his gratitude, bequeathed half his farm to Billy, and the other half to a comrade who shared his vigils. Billy also got a good team and other property. There is eighty acres in Billy's half, on which is a good stone house, well improved land and some timber. We congratulate Billy, and hope he will make good use of his new accession.

—The county clerk licensed the following parties to "hitch on" during the month of September, 1879;

Aaron Dunn and Paulina Reddick,
James G. Lawhead and Eliza Walter,
Alonzo Schimpff and Cathrine Rinehart,
Samuel A. Squires and Jennie Boyle,
William H. Bickel and Louisa Coyle,
Horace Cutcher and Nettie T. Thomas,
Geo. T. Aman and Mary O. Tipton,
Willard A. Moody and Edna B. Ackley,
John A. Schirg and Georgia V. Houston,
Geo. W. Powell and Eliza J. Daugherty,
Robt. H. March and Jennie Norragon,
Wm. W. Frazer and Lucy A. Seery,
John Miller and Nannie A. Wearley,
Jacob Sechler and Mary J. Widney,
Wm. Heckathorn and Sarah McClish,
W. Rosenberry and Malvina Wilson,
Eugene C. Lackey and Lucinda Parker,
Jacob F. Burns and Minnie E. Bills,
Frank H. Borst and Ida E. Miller,
Arthur G. Daniels and Mary L. Frazer,
Emery A. Metz and Camilla Britten,
J. W. Sherwood and Sue M. Hornberger,
George Row and Ida Ernest,

—A young Buckeye having won the affections of one of DeKalb's fair daughters, came over on Monday last and went straightway to the clerks office and secured the necessary doubling document; after which he inquired for a justice of the peace, and was directed to the First National bank. Meeting Mr. McIntyre the cashier in the bank office, he accosted him as follows: "Say, squire, I've got the papers here, I want you to do your part of the business up, and I've got the money to pay for it." The cashier hesitated a moment, when the young man continued "She's right here, it won't take you long." By this time the cashier had tumbled to the situation, and was sorry to inform the young Buckeye that his certificate authorizing him to perform the marriage ceremony had just expired, but rather than disappoint him he would secure the services of a gentleman who is an expert in that line, and who would be pleased to make the couple happy. 'Squire Walburn was sent for, who tied the hymeneal knot, and pocketed the buzzard dollars with as much grace as an experienced minister of the gospel.

All who love the drama will be delighted with the performance at Ensley's hall, next Tuesday evening, where Irwin Selden's company will play Rip Van Winkle. Of the leading artiste and his company the Scranton City Times says: "There was a pleasant surprise in store for the large and fashionable audience assembled at the academy last evening, to witness M. K. Crane as Rip Van Winkle. He seems to have conception of the witty vagabond entirely his own. He is at times irresistably funny, then changes so quick to pathos that it is with an effort that his hearers can hold back the tears that are so ready to flow. The parting from his child in the second act was very affecting; and when, in the last act, Mr. C. uttered the lines 'Are we then so soon forgotten when we're gone?' he made one of the strongest points of the evening. Little Gussie and Little Gay rendered their respective characters in a style entirely different from the parrot like recitations usually displayed by such very young actors. Altogether the performance was one of the very best ever witnessed in our city. Should Mr. Crane and his splendid company favor us with another visit he may be sure of a hearty reception.

—Mortgages,
—Warrantee Deeds,
—Quit Claim Deeds,
—Guardian's Receipts, (bound),
—Administrator's Receipts (bound),
—For sale in large or small quantities at the Courier office. tf.

—Are you going to the fair?

—Wood wanted at this office.

—Fresh chestnuts at Hollister's.

—Go to Hollister's if you want good chestnuts.

—Charley Klotz sold eight sewing machines, last week.

—Sealskin hats and caps, for ladies, at Mrs. A. J. Little's.

—Mr. E. L. Duck is starting a branch furniture store at Garrett.

—Read the advertisement of G. H. Yesbera, in another column.

—Frank Griswold has a temporary position at the Wabash elevator.

—Bring your apples to Stamets' and you will get the highest market price.

—Mountains of new good at the mammoth store of McQuiston & Ralston's.

—Mr E. Berry is now at Elmyra, New York, buying coal for his winter trade.

—Mrs. Jacob Walburn and children are visiting in Champaign county, Ohio.

—Mr. C. Beugnot is now in St. Louis on business connected with the stave factory.

—Mrs. A. J. Little has just received some new styles in ladies hats. Call and see them.

—A bushel of hickory-nuts would be acceptable on subscription at this office. Who'll be the first.

—Thirty-one hundred dollars was paid out at the Wabash elevators last Saturday for grain.

—Be sure and read the advertisement of Dr. Chase's recipes in another column of this paper.

—Mr. John Rush and wife, of Pleasant Lake, spent last Sabbath with their parents in this city.

—It will require $10,000 capital to organize the proposed agricultural society. Can it be raised?

—Mr. Ora Shaffer will leave for Huntsville, Kansas, in a few days to be gone during the winter.

—Sore eyes, tetter, salt rheum, etc., are cured by Dr. Lindsey's blood searcher. Sold by all druggists.

—Mr. C. J. Coats has arrived safely at Indianapolis, and taken quarters at 90 North New Jersey street.

—If you are billious you will find positive relief by using Sellers' liver pills. Sold by all druggists.

—Mrs. Abraham Sherk, of Wilmington township, is visiting friends and relatives in Wayne county, O.

—Apples! apples!! apples!!! wanted at Stamets'. Remember the place, 2nd door south of First National bank.

—Watch your opportunity and crowd into McQuiston & Ralston's store, if you want to see piles of new goods.

—We notice Wm. Burningame, formerly a resident of this place, on our streets shaking hands with the boys.

—Don't forget the place when you bring your apples to town. Second door south of the First National bank.

—Hank Long of the Kendallville Standard office, called in to see us during his visit to our city last Saturday.

—I will pay six cents each, for 100,000 oak hub blocks. I also want 100,000 oak spokes. D. D. Snyder.

—There is a movement on foot to organize a county agricultural association. The exhibitions to be held at Auburn.

—Mike Long has been cracking store boxes for a week past at McQuiston & Ralston's, and still the goods are not all open.

—A man named Charles Rever, residing at Garrett, had $500 picked from his pockets while at Chicago, last week.

—We have only had a glimpse of McQuiston since he returned from New York. You can't see him for new goods.

—The entertainment given by the Tennesseeans last Tuesday evening, was one of the best ever witnessed in Auburn.

—He must be a mighty mean man that would steal goods now, when McQuiston & Ralston are almost giving them away.

—A. S. Lauferty & Co., of Ft. Wayne want the people to get married. See what they have to say about it in another column.

—We learn that Leb Anderson, of Angola, a brother to our townsman Jas. A. Anderson, will soon move with his family to this city.

—First quality, strictly new mackerel just received at I. W. Martin's to be sold at the remarkable low price of 25 cents per dozen. Try them.

—Hon. S. S. Shutt, gave us a pleasant call last week. He informs us that two hundred acres have been sown with wheat, on his farms, this fall.

—What is more provoking to a young man than to buy two reserved seat tickets to a show, and then have his "boss" go away on a visit the same night?

—Wm. L. Allen, the machine-shop man, loafed around Reading, Mich., a few days, trying to secure a location, under the name of Wm. Hardwicke.

—Dr. John Cowan, of Auburn, formerly of this place, came down, not particularly to see the show, but to see the people—he gave Cole fifty cents though.—Decatur Democrat.

Commissioners Court.—Adjourned Session, Oct. 3, 1879.

The following allowances were made.

Geo. Diel, ex. of poor	$25.00
J. B. Bennett, ex. of poor	17.30
do do " " "	4.50
Geo. Wagoner, poor farm	9.38
Jas. Anderson, work on jail	26.87
J. J. Latson, ex. of roads	7.00
Jacob Gregg, poor farm	31.58
D. Tomlinson, ex. poor	6.75
Western Bridge Works, ex. bridges	15.00
G. W. Weamer, printing	7.50
Reed & Lowry, stationery	44.25
W. H. Kiblinger & Co, ex. crim'ls	62.62
Thos. Baldock, repairs	1.75
John Hartman, janitor	20.00
Myres & Co, poor farm	97.80
M. Boland, recording	2.70
Wm. C. Williams, litigation	54.20
Best & McClellan, "	30.00
Isaac Newton, ex. of poor	18.50
Geo. W. Frick, ex. of bridges	6.00
John Fretz, " " "	20.00
Geo. H. Duncan, " " "	25.00
" " " " " poor	13.00
" " " " " ditches	60.00
B. F. Blair, bridges and ditches	64.00
Crane, Duncan & Co, specific	2.50
G. Wonsetler ex. of poor	41.00
C. R. Wannemaker, ex. of poor	4.00
James Driscoll, " " ditches	13.71
James Bowers, " " bridges	30.80
G. H. K. Moss, general indexes	600.00

On presentation of physician's certificate, Charles Delong was released from payment of taxes.

Geo. W. Maxwell appointed justice of the peace in Wilmington township, vice, John R. Young, resigned.

In matter of public highway in Wilmington and Franklin townships, petitioned for by Jeremiah Lewis et. al. Messrs J. J. Latson, G. C. Ralston and John L. Davis were appointed viewers.

Final reports filed in the following ditch cases.

Jacob Fisher ditch,	Troy township.
Francis Klinkel,	" Franklin "
John Fink,	" Troy "
John Crouse,	" Stafford & Wil'n "
R. M. Lockhart,	" Franklin "
J. W. Lawhead,	" " "
John Carper, et. al. ditch	Union & Jackson township.

In matter of public highway in Jackson township, petitioned for by Lewis Weaver, et. al. the viewers report in favor of location, whereupon Eva Snyder presents her petition for damages, viewers remanded to assess damages (if any.)

In matter of public highway in Butler township, petitioned for by Levi Jackson, et. al. the viewers appointed to assess damages, report damages to Alonzo Lockwood in the sum of $150, and to William Feagler in the sum of $86, and the board not considering the road of sufficient importance to warrant the payment of so large a sum out of the county treasury, refuse to order the road established.

The quarterly report of the superintendent of the farm and asylum for poor, shows the following.

Male inmates	19
Female inmates	8
Total	27

Stock on hand as follows: Mules 4, horses 4, hogs 96, sheep 19, milch cows 11, young cattle 23, chickens 12.

The Hay Fork Swindler gets in his Work Again.

[Wabash Plain Dealer.]

One would think that the patent right swindler would lose his occupation after awhile, but the warnings which every farmer has had are of no effect, apparently. Only last week two citizens of Wabash county were roped in by a brace of villains. They were Jacob Showalter, living near Roan, and Michael Bash, near Mount Vernon. They were persuaded to sign an agreement of some kind which proved to be a note, in the first instance, for over $1200, and in the latter, for $800. The notes were immediately brought to this city, where an effort was made to negotiate them, the $800 note finding a purchaser. The gentleman to whom the other was offered, took steps to find out if it was a bona fide note, and soon discovered it to have been fraudulently obtained. Officers were at once put upon the track of the swindlers, but they had, meantime, scented the danger and skipped for parts unknown. The purchaser of the $800 note had, meanwhile learned of the swindle, and getting the party into a lawyer's office in this city, forced him to refund the money. The swindlers went north from Wabash, and at last accounts were in Adrian, Mich., where they were trying to negotiate the Showalter note. The treachery of one man in this city alone prevented their capture and probably confinement in the penitentiary.

The farmers of Wabash county are not a gullible people, but they will do well to be always on their guard whenever approached by these gentry. In these instances Showalter's and Bash's signature were obtained upon a trivial pretext, they being asked to sign an agreement that the hay fork men might put up one of the forks in their stables for the purpose of exhibiting it to their neighbors.

—While some of the small boys were playing on the streets last Saturday night, one of them, Hardie Mays, met with a serious accident. In a friendly tussel with one of the boys, his foot sliped upon the grass, and he fell heavily upon his left arm, dislocating the elbow joint. Doctors Matheny and Allyn were called, who soon had the bone in position, and the patient is now doing well.

—Chestnuts at Hollister's for 15 cents per quart.

—Notice the change in Root Co's. advertisement.

—Wheat brought $1.18½ per bushel in the Auburn market, last Tuesday.

—1000 bushels of apples wanted, for which the highest market price will be paid, at Stamets'.

—Root & Co., of Fort Wayne, have something to say to the readers of the Courier this week.

—The fair is booming at Waterloo this week. A good show, and a big crowd in attendance.

—The building formerly owned by the Odd Fellows, in which the Courier is located, now belongs to the First National bank.

—List of unclaimed letters in the postoffice, at Auburn, Ind., October 4, 1879: James Dutcher, Charles Hoffman, H. J. Wetherell.

Jos. Raineer, P. M.

—Married.—At the Central House, in Auburn, by Jacob Walburn, Esq., on Wednesday, Oct. 8th, 1879, Mr. Henry Maxwell and Miss Lorano Jackson, both of DeKalb county.

—Billy Edgington has secured the services of an able assistant, for Saturday work. If you want a first-class shave or hair-cut, you can get it without waiting long.

—Mr. I. W. Martin is receiving a very fine selection of ladies' cloaks and dolmans, which he will sell as low as $4.00, and from that up. Examine them before buying.

—Moody and Sankey commenced their revival meeting in Cleveland, O., last Sabbath. They were greeted with an immense audience. The meeting will continue one month.

—If any person in Auburn loaned Wm. L. Allen, alias Wm. Hardwicke, $10.00, let them come forward and have it placed to their credit on their subscription to the foundry project.

—When you go to see McQuiston & Ralston's big stock of goods, if you don't see what you want, ask for it, for it is impossible to display more than one-fourth of their immense stock.

—In looking over the stock of Mr. I. W. Martin, we noticed some very handsome patterns of ladies' cashmere dress goods, brocade and plain, for the very small sum of 16 to 25 cents per yard.

—Seldens dramatic company, supporting E. M. Craen, accompanied by a silver cornet band and fine orchestra, will entertain the citizens of Auburn, at Ensley's hall, Tuesday evening, Oct. 14th 1879.

—Wanted:—To rent a residence property in a desirable location. House must have 6 to 8 rooms, and be surrounded with the necessary conveniences, such as wood-house, well, cistern, etc. Apply at this office.

—There were three of 'em, and they were singing that melodious old song, "He used to wear an old gray coat all buttoned up before." It would have been a great deal more melodious if they had buttoned up their lips just before they started out to sing.

—Just opened by McQuiston & Ralston for the fall trade, the largest stock of dry-goods, clothing, notions and groceries ever seen in one establishment in DeKalb county. Such low prices as they are selling goods at were never before heard of.

—Miss Frankie Ford, Postmaster Rainier's accomplished assistant, is going west to regain her health and visit relatives. She will probably not return until spring. During her absence, Miss Abbie Potter will take her place in the postoffice.

—Dr. Chase's recipe book should be in every household in the country, as it is replete with practical information on every subject which may arise in the house, on the farm, in the workshop, and in the office. It must meet with a ready sale. See the advertisement in another column of our paper.

—Mr. John McClellan, having stocked up the corner grocery with a full line of coffee, sugar, tobacco, cigars, notions, etc., now invites his old friends to call in and examine his goods and prices. Mr. McClellan makes a specialty of cigars and chewing tobacco of the very best brands.

—Mr. John Henry was recently informed that a friend of his at Chicago was presented with a telephone that would articulate sounds correctly, weighed eight pounds and was a "stem-winder." John is undecided as to its gender, and will pay liberally for the correct interpretation.

—Mr. Israel Apple, has our thanks for a half-bushel of the largest potatoes we have ever seen. They are of the bellflower variety, said to be the best spring potatoes in the market, and have no hollows in the center. Mr. Apple raised thirty bushels this year, on less than one-fourth of an acre of ground.

—Married.—On October 2nd, 1879, at Dr. Kelley's hotel, Syracuse, Ind. Mr. C. D. Kelly, of Waterloo, and Miss Lizzie Lawson, of Pierceton. We tender our congratulations to "Cy." and his handsome bride, and here's to their health and their family's—may they live long and be happy.

—In consequence of the rain, the Richland township Sunday-school workers institute did not meet at the time appointed, but will meet at Heist's school house, one and a half miles southwest of Corunna, on Saturday, October 18, 1879. Sunday-school workers are invited to attend. Exercises to begin at 9:30 a. m. L. W. Treear, Pres't.

A Female Swindler.

Several weeks ago a lady called at the dry-goods store of C. Reyher, and presented a draft for $40.10, asking Mr. R. if he would cash it, stating that she wanted some goods. The draft was given by Mr. Hawes, of Goshen, and was taken by Mr. R., and the amount, less $10 in goods, was paid her and she departed well satisfied with the result of her transaction.

Mr. R. put the draft away with other securities, and gave no attention to the matter until a business house in the east sent the draft back stating that it had been "raised" from $4.10 to $40.10, and after an examination it was found to be as stated by the firm.

The woman was neatly dressed, was good looking and quite intelligent, and gave her name as S. M. Wood, and said that she resided near Auburn. The truth of the matter is that she is a travelling swindler, and that the same game of "raising" drafts and checks has been carried on by her for some time. She forged a draft and had it cashed at the Auburn bank some time ago, and quite recently played the same trick on a bank in Goshen.

Papers throughout the state should give this female forger and swindler a free notice. She might thereby be captured and made to suffer the penalties of the law for her evil doings.—Garrett Herald.

That part of the above which relates to the Auburn bank is not correct. The woman did not forge a draft on the bank here, but she did buy a draft on New York, it was afterward raised and presented for redemption in New York, but the change was discovered and the draft protested, so that the Auburn bank is just that much ahead, as the draft has not been, nor will not be paid.

◆

The Daily Post, of Columbia City, contains the following account of an attempt to assassinate E. W. Brown, the senior editor, one day last week. It says: "The sensation of the hour is the dastardly attempt of A. C. Mills, superintendent of the Columbia City free schools, to assassinate the editor of the Post in his office yesterday afternoon. Naturally excitement runs high, and the conduct of the armed, murderous villian is condemned by all.

The immediate cause which seems to have impelled Mr. Mills to play the role of a bully, with murder in his heart, was the following local note in the daily Post of yesterday morning. It is as follows:

"The schools are in a sad confusion. Could anything else be expected?"

To this statement of a fact, Mr. A. C. Mills, superintendent, and Mr James E. McDonald principal of the schools, took umbrage, attacking Mr. Adams, our partner on the street, both using language which reflects no credit upon the positions they occupy. He promptly informed the gentlemen that he had not written the local, which is a fact, but that the same had been written by the senior editor of the Post. Of this occurrence we knew nothing when we came to the office near one o'clock. Feeling tired and sleepy after the labors of the previous day and night, we sought a little rest on the lounge in our office. We had not lain there but a short time when we were awakened in a half dreaming state by Mills entering the editorial room. He at once demanded of us the reasons for the local. Our reply, half asleep as we were, we do not remember. A few words followed when Mills, rising from his seat, called us a "God damned liar," thrusting his hand in his pocket as though reaching for a revolver. This language and his hostile attitude finally awaked us thoroughly. Rising from the lounge we ordered him out of the office in language more forcible than eloquent, at the same time opening the door leading into the hall. By this time Mills had advanced close to us, still thrusting his hand into his pocket and making such demonstrations as convinced us that he meant to play the role of assassin. Refusing to leave at our second invitation we grabbed him by the arm and hurled him into the hallway, shutting the door in his face. No sooner in the hall than he drew his revolver from his pocket, cocking it and pointing it at the door, following this action with a perfect volley of oaths and imprecations too foulmouthed for publication. Finding that we paid no attention to him he at last left, not, however, without telling the hands in the office that he would visit vengence upon us on the street."

◆

The Courier folks are seriously disgruntled about some of the sentiments expressed by the speakers at the soldiers' re-union. They should remember that it is pretty hard to hold a soldiers' re-union without displeasing a democratic politician.—Press.

And it is equally hard for a republican politician to make a speech at a re-union without insulting democratic soldiers. A true soldier can address his comrades without insulting anyone. As a rule cowards always do the most blowing about their bravery and patriotism.

◆

—Mr. Frank A. Hoff has established a branch grocery and provision store at the junction, for the accommodation of the people of that vicinity. His stock there consists of a full assortment of goods in his line which will be sold at the lowest possible living rates. He will pay as much for country produce at the junction as can be had in town.

GET MARRIED!

There is a place in this State where wedding outfits for gentlemen,

CLOTHING
Furnishing Goods,
Hosiery, Hats, &c.

is a specialty. Parties contemplating

MatrimonY

will consult their interest if they wish

Stylish Garments

artistically constructed to visit this place. Besides we carry the largest, best made and finest trimmed stock of Men's Boys and Children's Clothing in the State. Be sure and find

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.
C. O. D.
one price, fine clothiers
Opposite North Door Court House.
FORT WAYNE, IND.

WHAT PAYS BEST
AFTER HARVEST,

Is a serious consideration of its cost and profits, and how to economize by comparing your own experience with that of others in farm labor.

Only $1.15 a Year,

Will place you in possession of the only newspaper that gives the actual experience and experiments of practical farming.

"The Cincinnati Weekly Enquirer, is the medium through which producers of every class make known their own experience, and seek that of others."

"The best teacher of farming, is the farmer himself! A fact fully demonstrated in the department (two pages a week) devoted to the farmer and his household in the Weekly Enquirer."

"Every department is complete."

"It is worth $100.00 a year to farmers, but costs only $1.15."

"The best is the cheapest."

"It always has the news in advance of all others."

"There is none better."

"It is the best political friend the people have, advocating its democracy upon the principles of justice and equity to all."

"It is the original greenbacker."

Such are a few of the many compliments paid to the Cincinnati Enquirer, by the press throughout the country.

The merits of its editorials, agricultural, political, correspondence, literary, telegraphic news and commercial departments combine to make it all that is required in an A No. 1, first-class family journal.

WEEKLY ENQUIRER.

One copy, one year	$1.15
One copy six months	65

COPY FREE TO CLUBS OF SEVEN.

DAILY ENQUIRER.

	without Sun. issue.	with Sun. issue.
One year	$12.00	$14.00
Three months	3.25	3.75
Sunday's issue alone, per year		2.00
Any two day's issue " "		4.00
Any three day's issue " "		6.00

Specimens Free. Agents Wanted.

FAREN & McLEAN, Publishers,
41-3m CINCINNATI, O.

PROF. RICE'S NATIONAL MUSIC CHART

An Astonishing Invention! by which beginners, even, can in a few hours learn to play the pure harmony and correct accompaniment to any song or instrument, on the Piano or Organ. Full, thorough, and scientific, it commences and lays the foundation of all music, with full, thorough bass, and an infallible key to transposition. A dozen songs on each chart, with the chords under each word, and teaching the fundamental laws of pure harmony. It is well worth $20. Sent, postpaid, for $1. Send for Circulars. JOHN ROSS & CO., General Agents, 312 Chestnut Street, St. Louis, Mo.

RUPTURE Can be RELIEVED and generally CURED! by our appliance. Send address on postal card to Rupture Relief Co. Box 2430, St. Louis, Mo.

WANTED AGENTS TO SELL TEA, Coffee and Baking Powder to families. PROFITS FIRST DAYS. Outfit free. People's Tea Co., Box 5019, St. Louis, Mo.

LADIES [illegible] FEMALE PILLS [illegible] Circular FREE. [illegible]

SeminalPastille

An entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency [illegible]

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G CHEMISTS, Market and 8th Streets, ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Book for the Million

A new and complete GUIDE TO WEDLOCK, containing Chapters on a Competent Womanhood, Selection of wife, Evidences of Virginity, Temperaments, Sterility, Advice to Bridegroom [illegible]

It is also a "Private Medical Adviser" [illegible]

DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY, No. 12 N. 8th St., St. Louis, Mo.

HYMENEAL FACTS WILL OUT.

BY C. L. MARION.

I'm a goodly youth of two-and-twenty,
And, unbroken, my days glide smoothly by;
For a lady-love, with money plenty,
[illegible] no cause for a tear nor a sigh.
[illegible], I feel now would [illegible] me;
Or, even a year's [illegible], maybe I'd cry;
For I say, with a vengeance, and no joking,
When one's secret leaks out it is provoking.

Now a maid I love, ah! a damsel fair,
With cheeks like a rose and eye like a star!
In wooing I took particular care,
And then I beheld my conquest afar.
But the lassie I won this could not bear
(For Grace is so modest; in fact, we both are),
That of our wedding one word should we breathe
Till the day a garland was her head to wreathe.

"Because," said Gracie, "I wish to surprise
Dame Rumor, the Misses Andrus and Greys.
Beside, how could I meet curious eyes!
'The fair bride elect!' as everyone says.
'Who wedded will be when summer-time dies
And fades gently into cool autumn days!'
I know I should blush and feel rather queer.
Now say not a word, love; promise me, dear."

Of course I promised—how could I refuse,
When those blue eyes so earnestly pleaded?
Moreover, I think that no one would choose
To have the fact known till it was needed;
So o'er the affair in quiet did muse,
And with our intent nearly succeeded,
When, lo! some "fly" reporter cut the cute caper
Of getting the news to stick in his paper.

Oh! wouldn't I like a punch at his nose
For poking his smeller where he'd no call;
A pity it is one naught can propose
Without these reporters knowing it all.
Thus, my secret (as the paper well shows)
Will be a surprise, if any, but small;
But still, just the same, we wedded will be,
But not a blamed "scribbler" there shall you see!

I say, young man on the hymeneal strain,
Try and outwit these newspaper fellows,
Else ne'er an intent will quiet remain;
For, if these "peers" of a blacksmith's bellows
Get "wind" of a fact they'll "blow" it to Spain;
Now, if they'd wait till a wedding it mellows,
Then the nuptials proclaim of the lover true,
The event would be more refreshing and new.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.

ALMOST BURIED ALIVE.

Authentic and Thrilling Narratives by an Old Physician.

The lectures which have recently been delivered on "living burials," by a physician of eminence, prove that such things happen in countries where rapid interment succeeds death much more frequently than the generality of people would deem possible.

We who hold our dead sacred, and who err, if anything, on the side of keeping them too long unburied, must naturally feel a kind of horror creep over us when, from circumstances, we are brought to witness with what haste and want of reverence the last sad ceremonies are gone through in some countries where climate renders speedy interment after decease an absolute necessity. I propose to relate three marvelous escapes from living burials which happened to different members of the same family at different periods. The scene was in Italy; the facts were related to me by the daughter of two of the parties concerned, and I shall tell the tale as nearly as possible as she told it to me:

"You will scarcely wonder," she said, "at my horror of being buried alive when I tell you that a peculiar fate seems to pursue our family, or at least did pursue it in the last generation. My father was an only son, and, from having been born several years after his parents' marriage, was an object of especial devotion. His mother was unable to nurse him herself, and a countrywoman was procured from a village some distance from the chateau where his parents resided, who was not only well calculated to replace the mother as a nurse, but was of so affectionate a disposition that she seemed to throw her whole soul into her care for the well-being of the child, and lavished as much affection on him as did the real mother. When the age came for weaning him, it was found impossible to accomplish it while the nurse remained with him; and so, after many terrible scenes and the most heart-breaking sorrow on her part, she had to go. The boy throve very well until he was about 3 years old, when he was attacked by some childish malady, and to all appearance died.

"It is unnecessary to dwell on the distracted grief of the parents. The mother could scarcely be induced to leave the body, and, even though all life was extinct, grudged every moment as it flew toward the time when even what was left of her darling would have to be removed forever. (The time that was allowed by the Government for bodies to remain unburied was three days.) The father gave strict orders that the child's nurse should not be informed of the death of her foster son until after the funeral, as he felt convinced she would at once come to see him, and he dreaded the affect the sight of her grief might have on the already broken-hearted wife. However, the order was ill-kept, and on the morning of the funeral, after the guests had arrived and were grouped round the coffin taking their last farewell of the lovely boy, in rushed the nurse, her hair down, her dress all torn and travel-stained, her boots nearly worn off her feet. On hearing the news, she had started off without waiting for extra clothing, without word or look to any one, and had run the whole night in order to be in time to see her boy. As she entered the room, she pushed past the servants and guests, and, on reaching the coffin, seized the child, and, before any one was aware of her intention, or had presence of mind to prevent her, she had vanished with him in her arms. It was found she had carried him off to the grenier, or garret. She paid no attention to threats or entreaties, and all attempts at forcing the door were equally fruitless. The guests waited patiently, hoping that she would before long return to her senses, and bring back the child's body for burial.

"At the end of an hour or more they heard the heavy furniture rolled away and the door opened. The nurse appeared, but with no dead child in her arms—the little thing's arms were clasped lovingly round her neck as she pressed him to her bosom. The mournful assemblage was turned into one of joyful congratulation. The woman would never speak of the means she used to restore the boy to consciousness; indeed, although she became from that hour a resident in the family, and a trusted and valued friend, she forebore ever referring to the incident in which she played so important a part. She lived to see the rescued child married and with a family of his own around him.

"The heroine of the second anecdote was a first cousin to the above rescued child—a young lady of 13 or 14 years old. After a somewhat protracted illness, she, to all appearance, died. The mother literally refused to believe it, although the doctors and the other inmates of the house saw no reason to doubt the fact. The funeral was arranged, the grave made, and the specified three days had come to an end. The mother had never left her daughter's body; she had tried every available means to restore her, but to no avail. As the hour approached for the ceremony to take place, she became more and more distracted and more desperate in her efforts to convince herself that life still lingered. As a last resource, she went for some strong elixir, and taking out of her pocket a fruit-knife with two blades—one blade of gold, the other of silver—proceeded by continual working to force the gold blade between the teeth; when inserted, she poured a drop of the elixir on the blade, then another and another, and tried to make it enter the mouth; but it seemed only to trickle back again and down the chin. Still she persevered, becoming more desperate as the moments flew on to the hour, now so near, when her child was to be taken from her. At the very last, when she was beginning to dread the very worst, she thought she detected a slight spasm in the throat, and, on closer examination, she became aware that the liquid was no longer returning as it did at first. She continued the application, every moment feeling more excited and more joyfully hopeful. Presently the action of swallowing became more decided; she felt a feeble flutter at the heart, and, before long, the eyes gradually opened and closed again; but the breathing became quietly regular, and the mother was satisfied that now no one would dispute the fact; so she called her household round her, and proved to them the joyful fact that her child was restored to her, and that no funeral procession would leave the house that day. Before long the child fully recovered. The fruit-knife, with its two blades, is to this day the most precious heirloom in the family possessions.

"The recovered one lived to form a deep attachment for her cousin (the rescued boy of the first story), possibly from the fact of the strange similarity in their early history; but his affections were already engaged by the young lady whose story we are now going to relate, the facts of which resemble somewhat those already told. This young person was no longer a child when death seemed to claim her, but had reached the age of 18 or 19. She had been suffering from an infectious and dangerous fever, and when the crisis arrived, instead of rallying, she, to all appearance, died. It was the custom in the district in which she lived to dress marriageable girls as brides after death, and to bury them in their bridal costume. The young lady in question was therefore laid out as a bride, in a white dress, orange-flower wreath and veil.

"The day before the funeral, the most intimate friend of the deceased, who had been on a visit at a distance, came home, and insisted with floods of tears that she should be allowed to see her. The mother most decidedly refused, explaining that her daughter had been the victim of an infectious fever, and that she could not allow the daughter of a friend to run the risk of catching it. The young lady persisted, and would not leave the house; but the mother, much as it pained her, was firm in her refusal. However, in the evening the young friend, being on the watch, saw the paid watcher leave the room to go down to her supper, leaving the door unlocked. She immediately entered, and, having reverently kissed her friend's pale face, knelt down by the side of the bed to pray. There were candles at each side of the bed at its head, and two placed on a table at its foot.

"The poor girl was deep in her prayers, when suddenly, without any movement or warning, the dead girl sat up, and said, in a sharp tone of voice, 'Que fait tu la?'—(What are you doing there?) Startled and horrified to the last degree, her friend sprung from her knees, and, in trying to rush out of the room, upset the table on which the candles were placed, and became wedged between it and the bed, her head downmost. Inextricably entangled, she shrieked loudly for help. The supposed dead girl had a keen sense of the ridiculous, and, being weakened from illness, she went off into a hysterical fit of laughter; and the more her poor friend kicked and screamed, the more she kept up the duet by peals of laughter. The mother and household, hearing the noise, rushed up as quickly as possible. The mother was the first to enter the room, and, being a quick-witted woman, at once comprehended the situation. She flew to her daughter, and, angrily ordering her to be quiet and not laugh at her friend's misfortune, she pressed her to her bosom, and, hastily tearing off wreath and veil, dropped them on the floor and kicked them under the bed; then, calling assistance, she carried the girl into another room, and put her to bed. The doctor, who had been at once sent for, ordered her to be taken from home without delay, and they started as soon as was possible. She perfectly recovered; but, strangely enough, could never call to mind the startling events of her return to life. She afterwards married the gentleman who was the hero of the first story. Her poor friend, when extricated from her unpleasant position, was quite delirious; she had a nervous fever, of which she nearly died, and she never entirely recovered from the shock her friend's sudden return to life had given her."

On writing to the lady who related these anecdotes, for permission to publish, she says: "You are at liberty to make what use you like of our family story, on condition you do not mention names of family or places; but you may add that all three who were so nearly buried alive lived to be very old—my father to 84, my mother and aunt to 76—retaining their health, rare intelligence, and to a wonderful extent their personal beauty, to the last."

AN EXTRAORDINARY PEOPLE.

Commander Cameron's Account of the Most Civilized Race in Central Africa.

[From the London Times.]

At the meeting of the British Association at Sheffield, the well-known African explorer, Commander Cameron, who was received with applause, apologized for not having his paper prepared, but he did not believe, in detailing the manners and customs of the people of Urua, in Central Africa, this would be a drawback. Urua was one of the largest native states in Africa. It was bounded on the east by Tanganyika, on the north by independent tribes in Manguema, on the west by Ulunda, and on the south by mountains south of the lake of Bangueolo. The great chief was Kasongo, and the race was perhaps the most civilized in Central Africa. The chief claimed divine honors. On his death all his wives save one were slaughtered at the grave, and the one whose life was not taken was handed over to the chief's successor. The spirit of the deceased Prince was supposed to pass into the body of the successor. The center of the religion of the people was an idol, which was held in great reverence.

The idol was placed in the midst of a dense jungle, and it had for wife one of the sisters of the reigning sovereign. Under the principal chief were smaller chiefs, who collected and paid over to the sovereign tribute. He had seen this tribute come in, and some of it must have come from distant parts of the country. There was a numerous class of wizards in the country who did a large trade in idols and charms. Many of the wizards were ventriloquists, and in this way the idols were made to give answers to the questions put to them. Caste was very clearly defined in the race. No one dare sit down in the presence of the chief without permission, which was very seldom granted. In one case where, in the traveler's presence, a native had neglected etiquette, severe punishment was about to be inflicted, but the traveler saved the offender.

Authority was maintained by mutilation. Hands, feet, ears, noses, were mutilated, and the natives did not seem to mind it much. One woman had cut off her own ears. This woman was one of Kasongo's wives; he had about 1,000 of them. She asked permission to mutilate herself, and she did it at once. The body-guard of the chief was composed, to a great extent, of mutilated people, whose affection for the chief seemed in no way decreased; indeed, it would appear that mutilation strengthened their regard for their chief. The name of the idol was Kungwe a Banza, and profound reverence was shown to it. Fire was obtained by friction from a fire block, and in one case the chief used the shin bone of one of the other chiefs who had been conquered. The dress of the people was very simple, consisting of an apron. Members of the royal family wore three large skins, and junior members of the family wore aprons of green monkey skins.

The hair-dressing of this people was curious, varying more with districts than with rank. In some cases it was worked up into four ring plaits crossed at the top of the head like a crown, and surrounded at the bottom with a band of cowries or other shells. Skewers were inserted in the hair, one end of which could be used in tattooing. The people were not a hairy rrce, but they managed to grow their beards long, and plaited them like a Chinaman's pigtail, usually putting at the end of each a lump of mud to weigh it. Some of the beards reached to the waists. The women, not having beards to amuse themselves with, were tattooed extensively. Tattooing usually commenced at the age of 7, and might be completed about the age of 12 or 14, which was the time for marriage. Beautiful patterns were used, and the tattooing was done in raised cuts. Sometimes a husband, when he was displeased with his wife, cut off all these raised pieces, and the woman could not appear in public again; she was not received into society until she was retattooed.

He saw one of their weddings, which was very curious. The festivities lasted several days. A ring was formed of the natives, two men with big drums being in the middle. The drums were played and the people round danced. The bride was brought out, dressed in feathers and other finery, on the shoulders of two or three women; she was taken into the middle of the ring, and was jumped up and down on the shoulders of the women. The bride threw shells and beads about, for which there was a scramble, as the possession of them was supposed to confer luck. Ultimately the husband came into the ring, and putting the bride under his arm carried her off. The means of communication was by drum signals. They had a call on the drum for everybody's name, and they could ask questions and convey intelligence over hundreds of miles, and receive answers almost immediately. In war, messages were constantly sent enormous distances to bring up reinforcements or to stop their coming. The mass of the people lived in huts on dry land, but there were one or two exceptions to this. He saw two lakes on which people were living in huts. In one case the people had covered over the long grass growing in the water with earth, and on that had built their huts; in the other the huts were built on piles. The language of the country belonged to the same broad family which stretched across the large belt of Africa traversed by him, and the grammar was on the same principles as the grammar of the Swaeli.

Tobacco in the Hen-Roost.

A French gentleman has developed a theory that the inhalation of tobacco smoke by fowls causes their flesh to assume a wonderfully white color and become very tender at the same time. He accordingly shut up a chicken in his fowl-house, and set fire to a store of "caporal," which he left burning in the place. The young fowl, so far from being averse to the odor of the narcotic, was inclined to try its taste as well as its smell, and had in a few days' time consumed so much "caporal" that its flesh was not only whitened, but absolutely "nicotinized" with poison. To it as it stood—probably in a rather stupid state—upon its perch entered one night an adventurer. The precious bird was carried off, plucked, cooked and eaten, and a short time after breakfast the thief was seized with violent and intolerable pains. He rushed to the doctor, heedless of the necessity which would arise of disclosing his nocturnal escapade. He was found to have been poisoned by the nicotine contained in the flesh of the fowl, and was with some difficulty saved from death.

Making 261 Miles in Eighteen Hours.

It was interesting to learn by Weston's help that a man can travel 550 miles in 144 hours, but it is not less wonderful, and it may be far more useful, to learn that a man, using no other motive power than nature has given him, can cover more than twice the distance in considerably less time. That fact was demonstrated at the recent bicycle match in London, when the winner in six days of eighteen hours each covered the enormous distance of 1,404 miles, and the second man made only fourteen miles less. Scores of 200 miles a day were made so often, and by so many men, as to be scarcely worth mentioning, but the winner's 261 miles in a single period of eighteen hours, or at the rate of nearly fifteen miles an hour, makes the future and the past possibilities of personal rapid transit, so to speak, compare very much as the creeping of a child contrasts with his strides as a man. If these men had kept up their traveling for two days more, only the lack of a solid roadbed would have prevented their keeping company with the swiftest steamer across the Atlantic, and they actually did cover within those 108 hours the distance of a crow's flight between London and Constantinople. With the aid of this new "iron horse," a man may make the "round trip" over twice the extreme length of the British island in less than a week, or, translated into distance familiar to us, it would be child's play to go on a bicycle to Coney Island and back by road in an afternoon, or to Albany, along the beautiful banks of the Hudson, in a day. That such comparisons as these are not mere flights of fancy will easily be believed when it is learned that the machine is regarded in England more as a useful tool than as a curiosity or a toy, that country doctors and postmen use them on their rounds, and no less than 60,000 have been made and sold. On such a basis of experience as these facts give, it is asserted that the use of the machine does not cause disease, as was once thought, and that any one, even the weakest or the most timid, may use them, as, with a little experience, the novel mode of progress becomes as easy and natural as walking, with the pleasant addition of a delightful exhilaration caused by the sense of power and the rapid rush through the air. During the match above noticed, for instance, the contestants habitually ate and drank while in motion, and sometimes "seemed to doze"—but it may be doubted whether this was when going at the rate of a mile in four minutes.—New York paper.

Bandanas in the Ascendant.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago a Madras cravat, of bright tints and fine grass cloth fabric, was in the Eastern cities almost certainly the distinguishing mark of one who had lived in the East Indies, or had commercial relations therewith. There were exceptions, but the article tied twice around the neck was worn mostly by the classes we have mentioned. As the disposition increased to free the neck from swathings, and as the late war made all foreign fabrics very costly, the Madras handkerchiefs gradually passed out of fashion. This year they have come into vogue again, both in their genuine and imitated forms. Bright plaid handkerchiefs are now made in squares in England, which closely simulate the real Madras. A happy thought struck a wholesale milliner of Boston. He bought up all the Japanese hats he could find in New York, had them embroidered with silk, and bound and wrapped in the English Madras. He sold them for a handsome profit, and they soon became the rage. At every New England watering-place nine out of every ten young ladies have worn, during the past summer, these hats, and many have trimmed their dresses with the same gay material. The rougher sex has imitated the fashion, and ties of the brightest plaids surround the throats of the majority of young men in Boston and New York. A few make their appearance here, as people return from their vacation. The style may be too gaudy for the most refined taste, but a "bit of color" often produces an agreeable as well as pronounced effect. Some of the ties have made their appearance in the shop windows, usually, however, in their more somber forms, but they will soon be superseded by those of gaudier hues. We cannot say that the best are the brightest, for the tints of the genuine Madras are not usually so dazzling as those of the imitations. As the former are scarce and high-priced, we presume the majority of buyers will content themselves with the English reproductions, or even with the very cheap gingham imitations of the latter. The present season is rather far advanced for the general adoption of the new mode in this vicinity, but if it survives the winter's frosts we shall expect to see the necks of the men and the headgear of the women outshining in variegated splendor the turbans of the Southern aunties.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Bad Country for Doctors.

A medical man in Spoleto, Italy, called in to attend a child who was ill, was informed by the father that, should he cure the infant, 2,000 lire would be his reward, but that should he fail he would infallibly be shot. He undertook the case, and the child shortly after died, whereupon the father, true to the compact, brought his gun and at once put an end to the labors and the life of the unhappy doctor. In Italy juries are generally lenient to a murderer, and the owner of the gun was adjudged to pay a fine of 25,000 lire and suffer ten years' imprisonment only.

The Horrors of Siberian Exile.

Of the treatment of political exiles in Siberia I have before me a thrilling description from the pen of Mr. Robert Lemke, a German writer, who has visited the various penal establishments of Russia with an official legitimation. He had been to Tobolsk; after which he had to make a long, dreary journey in a wretched car, until a high mountain rose up before him. In its torn and craggy flank the mountain showed a colossal opening, similar to the mouth of a burnt-out crater. Fetid vapors, which almost took away his breath, ascended from it.

Pressing his handkerchief upon his lips, Mr. Lemke entered the opening of the rock, where he found a large watch-house, with a picket of Cossacks. Having shown his papers he was conducted by a guide through a long, very dark and narrow corridor, which, judging from its sloping descent, led down into some unknown depth. In spite of his good fur, the visitor felt extremely cold. After a walk of some ten minutes through the dense obscurity, the ground becoming more and more soft, a vague shimmer of light became observable. "We are in the mine!" said the guide, pointing with a significant gesture to the iron cross-bars which closed the cavern before them.

The massive bars were covered with a thick rust. A watchman appeared, who unlocked the heavy iron gate. Entering a room of considerable extent, but which was scarcely a man's height, and which was dimly lit by an oil-lamp, the visitor asked: "Where are we?" "In the sleeping-room of the condemned! Formerly it was a productive gallery of the mine; now it serves as a shelter."

The visitor shuddered. This subterranean sepulcher, lit by neither sun nor moon, was called a sleeping room. Alcove-like cells were hewn into the rock; here, on a couch of damp, half-rotten straw, covered with a sackcloth, the unfortunate sufferers were to repose from the day's work. Over each cell a cramp-iron was fixed, wherewith to lock up the prisoners like ferocious dogs. No door, no window anywhere.

Conducted through another passage, where a few lanterns were placed, and whose end was also barred by an iron gate, Mr. Lemke came to a large vault, partly lit. This was the mine. A deafening noise of pickaxes and hammers. There he saw hundreds of wretched figures, with shaggy beards, sickly faces, reddened eyelids; clad in tatters, some of them barefoot, others in sandals, fettered with heavy foot-chains. No song, no whistling. Now and then they shyly looked at the visitor and his companion. The water dripped from the stones; the convicts were thoroughly wet. One of them, a tall man with suffering mien, labored hard with gasping breath, but the strokes of his pickax were not heavy and firm enough to loosen the rock.

"Why are you here?" Mr. Lemke asked.

The convict looked confused, with an air almost of consternation, and silently continued his work.

"It is forbidden to the prisoners," said the inspector, "to speak of the cause of their banishment!"

Entombed alive; forbidden to say why!

"But who is the convict?" Mr. Lemke asked the guide, with low voice.

"It is number 114!" the guide replied, laconically.

"This I see," answered the visitor; but what are the man's antecedents? To what family does he belong?"

"He is a Count," replied the guide; "a well-known conspirator. More, I regret to say, I cannot tell you about Number 114!"

The visitor felt as if he were stifled in the grave-like atmosphere—as if his chest were pressed in by a demoniacal nightmare. He hastily asked his guide to return with him to the upper world. Meeting there the commander of the military establishment, he was obligingly asked by that officer:

"Well, what impression did our penal establishment make upon you?"

Mr. Lemke stiffly bowing in silence, the officer seemed to take this as a kind of satisfied assent, and went on:

"Very industrious people, the men below; are they not?"

"But with what feelings," Mr. Lemke answered, "must these unfortunates look forward to a day of rest after a week of toil?"

"Rest!" said the officer; "convicts must always labor. There is no rest for them. They are condemned to perpetual, forced labor; and he who once enters the mine never leaves it!"

"But this is barbarous!"

The officer shrugged his shoulders, and said: "The exile works daily for twelve hours; on Sundays, too. They must never rest. But, no; I am mistaken. Twice a year, though, rest is permitted them—at Easter time and on the birthday of his Majesty the Emperor."—Karl Blind, in the Contemporary Review.

The Danger of House Flies.

It may not have occurred to many of our readers that common house flies are capable of doing serious mischief. At this season of the year they are usually an unmitigated nuisance. It will appear from the following case they may be worse: The matron of an establishment, in opening her mouth in the act of yawning, allowed a fly, which had been crawling over a poisoned fly-paper, or tasting the infusion in which it was soaked, to dart into her throat. In a few minutes the throat and head became greatly swollen, violent retching followed, and it seemed evident that the sufferer was poisoned. Repeated emetics restored her, but only after much pain. This evidence proves beyond a doubt that a hitherto-unsuspected danger lurks in our midst. Wall-papers have been repeatedly shown to be dangerous, and fly-papers have been known to require watchfulness in using; but until now it has scarcely been observed that flies themselves might be the transmitters of the poison they have possibly imbibed.

RAILWAY accidents, strictly so called, do not appear to have caused the death of a single passenger on the lines of the United Kingdom during the six months ending with June last.

KITTIE WHITE.

Oh, Kittie White! fair Kittie White,
You've snared my very heart to-night,
With glance so like soft sunset's ray
Which meets the eye at close of day!
We shyly look—we dare not gaze—
Lest dazzled by those parting rays.

Oh, Kittie White! glad Kittie White,
Of all the merriest, loveliest sprite,
Your tresses bright seem golden spray
When tossing in the breeze at play;
And childhood's dreams come back once more
Of angel guests from brighter shore.

Oh, Kittie White! loved Kittie White,
Though not with costly gems bedight,
Diamonds or pearls I cannot prize,
'Gainst pearly teeth and sparkling eyes;
These are the riches past [illegible]
Who only is of gold possessed.

Oh, Kittie White! dear Kittie White,
No wonder that my heart is light—
A smile from thee, thou charming elf,
Illumes for me the world itself!
And, if of aught I dream to-night,
My dreams will be of Kittie White.

CHICAGO, Ill. W.

PITH AND POINT.

A THERMOMETER gains notoriety by degrees.

How to get up pork and beans—Take an emetic.

BEER fills many a bottle, and the bottle many a bier.

BELONGS to a screw steamer The steamer's (s)crew.

MOTTO for the milkman—To the pure all things are pure.

NOW is the time to put up your stove-pipe and yet your fall soot.

A BIRD-FANCIER calls his canaries "Riches," because they have wings.

"I'M in for it," as the fellow remarked who was jailed for taking a pocket-book.

A LIVELY female gossip with but one arm is known as "the short-hand reporter."

A BACHELOR'S house should have no Eves.—Waterloo Observer. Suppose he had gutter cister'n in the house?

"WHERE yer bin, Billy?" "Bin fishin'." "Ketch anythin'?" "No. But I expect to when I get in the house."

"BEACONSFIELD has become a regular old woman," says a correspondent. He probably spends his time darning Afghans.

PEOPLE who shoot at Kings and Emperors need a little Creedmoor practice. They usually score nothing out of a possible one.

THE Boston Transcript says: "Mystery deepens in every family." Ah; the Bostonians are serving hash in deeper dishes, eh!

YOU can keep a bee away from you by the use of tobacco-smoke, but a bee is always in such a confounded hurry that he gets in his work before you can light your cigar.

A MINISTER at Oshkosh
Cribbed a sermon from Dr. McCosh,
And soared with such flights
To philosophy's heights
That his listeners said it was bosh.

A MASSACHUSETTS lady is reported to have scolded her little boy for taking a drink of water at a hotel. "For," said she, "we pay a dollar for our dinner, and water is very filling."

"NO, SIR," said the gentleman from Pittsburgh, "I was not in the war, but my brother was, and he was wounded." "Ah!, indeed. Seriously wounded?" "Yes, sir; he was shot in the horse."

WHEN a handsome Baltimore lady asked a pedestrian to knock a man down who had been following her he swiftly obeyed, and was not much astonished to learn that it was her husband.

"I WOULD box your ears," said a young lady to her stupid and tiresome admirer, "if—" "If what?" he anxiously asked. "If," she repeated, "I could get a box large enough for the purpose."

RECTOR'S wife (severely): "Tommy Robinson, how is it you don't take your hat off when you meet me?" Tommy: "Well, marm, if I take off my hat to you, what be I to do when I meet the parson himself?"

WOMEN somehow get over childish notions that men never outgrow. Some men celebrate the anniversary of every birthday as long as they live, while women quit doing so almost as soon as they grow up.

LIGHTNING has been accused of some strange freaks lately. One day last week it struck a Jersey editor in the throat and passed down to his stomach. He paid his ten cents, and it didn't hurt him a bit.

"WE wish," says a Texas newspaper, "that a few of our citizens could be permitted to live till they died a natural death, so as to show the world what a magnificently healthy country Texas really is."

EDISON hasn't yet got up a machine which will materialize the feelings of a young man when he takes another man's 50-cent hat off the tonsorial peg and ascertains that its owner has meandered with his silk tile.

AN unfortunate mistake: Magistrate—"You are charged with having emptied a basin of water over the plaintiff." Irishwoman—"Sure, yer Honor, ye must forgive me; in the dark I took the gentleman for my husband."

I NEBBER breaks a colt afore he's old enough to trabbel;
I nebber digs my taters till dey's plenty big to grabbel;
An' when you sees me risin' up to 'structify in meetin',
I's fust climb up de knowledge tree and done some apple-eatin'.

LATE in the afternoon one of the police discovered a boy about 9 years old curled up in a corner of Machinery hall, and made inquiry: "Bub, what are you doing here?" "I'm lost!" was the laconic reply. "How long since you have seen your friends?" "Well, I left dad about three hours ago, I guess." "And you've been lost ever since?" "Yes." "Well, it's too bad." "Y-yes, it's a sad case," said the lad, trying to appear very brave, "but I'll bet that while I'm doing all the losting, dad's doing most of the feeling bad!"—Detroit Free Press.

THE plague of rats, which infested the Deccan district, in India, is rapidly being "wiped out." Nearly one hundred thousand have been killed at Hubil, fifty thousand at Gadag, and seventy-five thousand at Newgund. Very large numbers are being destroyed in the Southern Maratha country.

SABBATH READING.

[illegible]

Few mental tasks are more difficult than the work of making a perfect analysis of the thoughts and tendencies of a present age. Hundreds of years after a period has passed by it becomes less difficult to learn what was in that period of high, or low, or good, or bad; but when one is standing in an era he seems to be like one in the midst of mountains—too near to see well their height. Times past analyze themselves; that is, they divest themselves of the unimportant and incidental and retain the ideas and influences that were of great moment, and thus render them conspicuous by insulating them from a confusing crowd. As winter renders the trunks and immense branches of the trees visible, and makes visible the architecture of palace and cottage by stripping off the summer foliage which conceals all things but itself, so past years reveal the central ideas of a people because they remove that thick and entangled foliage of every-day life. Reading the past is one of the most common mental employments; not because history only is entertaining, but because the present will not suffer itself to be read. We are all historical students, not so much from choice as from necessity. We have no alternative. Neither the present nor the future will permit us to look into its mysteries.

As a proof that the study of the present is always difficult you may note the fact that the voices of those who are giving us the signs of to-day are utterly discordant. These students and prophets divide themselves almost equally into optimists and pessimists, some assuring us that religion is dying, faith is dying, and society is upon the eve of an earthquake; others assuring us that religion is only purifying itself for a greater work of good in the world. This discord comes not from differences of judgment or motive any more than from the persistent unwillingness of a passing day to be read fully by a heart that is beating in the midst of it. We must get out of a forest if we would see its extent. In the very midst of it we see only the trees of a few acres, we hear the clatter of a few birds, or see the quick spring of the wild squirrel or deer; but, emerging from it, and winding up a hill road or mountain side, we then see what a long, black mass that wood was, what a sea of oak or pine.

And yet we must do the best we can in seeking the contents and import of the present years; and, as the work rises in difficulty, we must rise in patience and care, with which we mark their qualities and prophetic voices. Our happiness and success do not lie in the next age, but in this; and, should the next age be able to discern what was the good or bad of this period, such ability will be of little avail to you and me, for we shall no longer be in any condition to avoid the bad or pursue the good. Our destiny lies in the days and nights which are now passing along, and a poor analysis of them made now will be of more value to us than a most perfect judgment made up in the future. Macaulay surveyed well and defined well the happy and painful elements in the English life of two centuries, but the definitions, and wisdom, and rhetoric, and hopes, and fears came too late to be of any value to the subjects of William and Mary, or to the quiet followers of William Penn. Equally well Mr. Froude has pointed out the shame and glory of the men around Julius Cæsar, but too late for the happiness of Julius, or Cicero, or Pompey. Thus, beautiful and valuable as history is, no age dares wait for its own history to be its instructor. The teacher is then a good one, but the pupil is dead. It therefore comes to pass that we who live in these times must always be studying their quality, even though the results of such study must be very imperfect.

It has now been about twenty-five years since science began an active campaign against some of the dicta of the Christian religion. This science had its advance pickets out almost a score of years earlier, but it has been almost twenty-five years since the van of the scientific army became visible and the Generals in the church began to be alarmed and to load up and fire in self-defense. It must be about twenty-five years since Hugh Miller taught that our earth was not made of nothing 6,000 years ago, but that it had been turning on its axis before our Adam and Eve came to its shores. A rich New York merchant, a Mr. Lord, started a magazine, partly to save the church from the damaging results of such teachings. The "Kosmos," "The Vestiges of Creation," "The Footprints of a Creator," "The Old Red Sandstone," were the books of that period, and they were indeed the novels of that day in popularity. Some of the leaders in the church contended that 6,000 years were time enough for all this coming and going of oceans, this rising and sinking of mountains, this making of coal beds and prairies, this burying of rich woods and flowers in the deep earth; while other leaders urged that God in creating the earth could just as easily make rocks with shells in them as rocks without, and coal with ferns in it as just simple plain coal without pictures, just as man can make plain muslin, or he can print and have calico. Thus came along gradually the war of the natural and supernatural, which has assumed larger proportions each succeeding year. The early leaders on both sides have died; new Generals and new troops have come. Instead of Lyell and Miller and the Humboldts, we have Darwin and Huxley and Tyndall; and instead of the old leaders in the church, we have MacLeods and Tullocks and Christliebs and McCoshes and Stanleys in large numbers, who have abandoned many of the old forts and lines of defense and many of the old guns to take up new lines with new heroism. Just what we see in the world's arsenals and armies we see in the church—a change of weapons and defenses. An argument now between a Hugh Miller and some advocate of the 6,000-year period would be much like a war in which the bow and crossbow and sling should resume their place as weapons, and a leather shield should appear as a sufficient barricade. "The times change, and in them we are changed."

This recall of past days may in the outset teach us this, that the mere fact of nervousness or alarm does not establish the fact that the danger is great or real, for the best good has always been full of doubt as well as of courage. Nothing is secure in this world. Our happiness, our prosperity, our fortunes, our life, are held tremblingly, and this shadow of apprehension falls day by day upon the future of each one's religion.

When I was young there was a little book showing that there was once in the world one boy that was fearless. He had never been able to experience any emotion of fear or imagine how fear could come or might seem, and at last he wept because no one could teach him what it was to be in anyway or degree alarmed; but outside of that little book such person has never been found, for man, even when called brave, suffers regular returns of this trembling of the heart. Few can move along in a night train or in a steamship without feeling at times that perhaps this will be their last journey on this planet. Man when educated is a brave animal, but it is with a courage which has its modifications; and his riches, and name, and peace, and life are held nervously with the feeling that they may not last. Indeed, God only is peace, for nothing can disturb His morrow. Over Him alone can be uttered the holy words: "The same yesterday, to-day, and forever." Man would love much to look upon any of his dear possessions, his fame, or fortune, or fireside, the sacred group around it, and say these are secure—no ill can come. Thus all the forms of faith rest uneasily upon their thrones, and if wise states fear the morrow, and monarchy and republic alike fear the Communist, or the traitor, or the revolutionist, and if each heart sinks in despair of its own peace, so Christianity, however well sustained by argument from its ministers, will always extract from any present a bitter cup of solicitude. One cannot therefore infer from the mere fact of alarm that a calamity is at hand.

To return to our direct theme: After this twenty-five or thirty years of active warfare against some of the old strongholds of religion, the naturalists have accomplished some things. They have compelled the almost universal admission that the earth was not made de novo 6,000 years ago. There may be here and there a Christian, and perhaps here and there even a Christian minister, who maintains that God made the heavens and the earth just a little while before the paramids were built, but the idea may be called abandoned, just as Herculaneum and Pompeii were abandoned, although some few shepherds and beggars built huts over the buried towns. The naturalists have destroyed those Christian dogmas which assigned a date to creation. The literalness of the Old Testament may be viewed as overthrown.

It seems to me that those studies of evolution which have engaged so many distinguished minds for many years have not only changed the time of creation but the manner of it, and, while they have not come anywhere near teaching us that man came from a low form of simple existence, from protoplasm, they have compelled us to confess that our immensely varied world has sprung from a few germs of the divine planting, and that our infinite variety began in far-off simplicity. But science has not yet measured this simplicity, and has failed most completely to show that man as we now see him was not just about such a creature always, and did not pass through any brute forms and stages. Of course we know not what new witnesses the friends of evolution may find in the future, but, as it seems to my own mind, these students of transmuting species have wholly failed to show that man was not in the outset of his career the exact creature of to-day. It is admitted that, should scientific study show that man is a result of other forms of physical organism, such a showing would not destroy religious belief. Indeed, there are several clergymen now occupying important pulpits who accept of the theory that man's career began in the sponge or jelly-fish; but, aside from the question of results, it seems that no assertion of science has in the past five years failed more perfectly than the idea that man did not begin existence as man. Science has simply shown the disposition of nature to evolve many colors from one—many forms of roses from one rose, many colors of pigeon, or rabbit, or dog, from one gentle tint—but science has made no approach toward showing us that an oyster can became a bird or an infusoria is advancing toward an elephant. It finds in creation more of development than the church once saw, but it cannot tell us how many fountains there were, and who opened them for that river of life which, rational or irrational, flows down through our globe. The scientists have failed to find any origin of life except by means of a Creator, and have failed to find any origin of man except an origin much like the one delineated in Genesis. Analogy they have found between high and low animals; they have discovered that man is an enlarged ape or oyster, but analogy will not create anything or make anything. St. Paul's resembles St. Peter's, but that resemblance did not build either cathedral. So man resembles the ape, but this similitude will not explain the presence here of either ape or man.

Explaining a Joke.

He came into the office, modestly and shyly, as was befitting, and asked to see the man who put jokes in the Advertiser. The joker was engaged in reading some very exciting tables of trade and navigation returns, in order to inform "An Old Subscriber" how many gallons of beeswax had been exported from the province of Prince Edward's Island in the year of 1871, and was consequently in a very hilarious mood. The visitor took off his hat, mopped his manly brow with a dirty handkerchief and placed before the newspaper man a scrap of paper on which was written:

"When Sir Joseph Porter dies the company will be treated to half-and-half—Porter and bier."

The newspaper man read it, looked up and exclaimed, "What is it about?"

"It is just a little joke, you see."

"Ah! I didn't notice. I will read it again."

He reperused, and then asked, "Where is the joke?"

"Why, the play on words—a pun, you know—Porter and bier."

"Oh, ah, yes. Porter and bier. Well, did you ask Mr. Porter about this? Will he be pleased to see his name in the paper in that connection?"

"Why, there is no such person. Sir Joseph Porter is a character in 'Pinafore.'"

"Well," mused the newspaper man, "if there is no such person I don't see how he can die. A person who don't exist can't die very successfully. Any attempt to kill a man who don't live must necessarily prove a failure."

"But you don't understand," explained the amateur joker. "You see the whole point is in the play on the two words—porter and bier. Porter and beer mixed is called half-and-half. Now you catch the idea, don't you?"

"Well, I understand it so far. But where's the joke?"

"Why, I explained——"

"Yes, I know that you explained. You said porter and beer mixed is called half-and-half. But that kind of porter is not a man—it is a liquor, and anyhow you don't spell beer right."

"But that's the point. You notice there the words have different meanings and the same sound. It is to bring out a different idea that the word itself conveys that I have tried, and I flatter myself——"

"No, no," interrupted the newspaper man, "not flatter. Your grammer is at fault. The joke is flat, not flatter."

At this point some of the people in the sanctum interfered, and the enemy beat a graceful retreat without any casualties.—London Advertiser.

How the Ancients Engraved Gems.

We must remain as yet some little in doubt as to the methods employed by of old artists to perfect these miracles of taste. We have, however, the absolute certainty that these ancient masters were familiar with the diamond, and that their best work was made by using this, the hardest of all substances, as a tool. A splintered fragment of the diamond served as a scraping tool, and they were well acquainted with the drill. Prehistoric man worked a drill at the very commencement of his existence. A Phœnician gem—a lion attacking a bull—shows how the drill was used. A number of circular depressions are found in the gem, which mark the extremities of the figures. This was done not only for the sake of effect, but to show the artist the limit of his work as to depth. After the holes were sunk the artist united the various portions of his work by scratching. Now, the use of the diamond point or splinter, fixed in an iron socket, allowed a certain flexibility of handling, which our modern processes of gem engraving do not permit. To-day the work is done by means of a minute rotating disk of copper, which is whetted with oil and diamond dust. On the least application of the substance to be cut to the disk, it is the disk which bites into the stone. The difference in manipulation is, then, that to-day it is the stone which goes to the tool, and not, as in olden times, the tool to the stone. It is more convenient, then, in 1879, to bring the cart to the horse. It can now be readily understood why, in modern work, time and labor being spared (the art conception not entering for the present into the subject), why this work of to-day is inferior to the art of the past. It is purely a mechanical process now, for a rotating disk will no more draw lines which have feeling than will photographing processes paint pictures. It has been stated that we are not entirely acquainted with the methods employed by the old glyptic artists. This becomes quite evident from this fact, that their best work seems to have been both cut and polished at the same time. To-day we have no tool, no substance, which will accomplish this double feat. Mr. King, dwelling on the diamond point, says its extensive use is the great distinction between the antique and modern work.—Harper's Magazine.

A Printer's Error.

Printers, or rather compositors, poor fellows! are only men, and subject to blunder-making as all their kind are. But they are seldom so guilty as are the writers whose manuscripts they put in type, although they bear double blame because of the oftentimes wretched caligraphy imposed on them. A very curious "printer's error" happened to escape publication in Boston many years ago. It was at the height of the Congressional campaign which ended in the defeat of Anson Burlingame. He had made a speech in Music Hall, but hundreds were unable to get in to hear him. On leaving the hall, in company with Gen. Henry Wilson, shouts came from the crowd on the street for "A speech! A speech from Burlingame!" Standing on the sidewalk, Anson made a neat little address, during which he apostrophised the monument on the other side of Charles river, as "that tall gray shaft on Bunker's height." Imagine the fun created when, on examining the proofs of his main and his street speeches, he found in the latter a significant passage concerning "that tall grog-shop on Bunker's height."

Okolona and Lemars.

After mature deliberation, says the New York World, we have come to the conclusion that the frenzied utterances
of the Okolona Southern States
and
the Lemars Sentinel
(being always printed in this staccato style) contain for the compositors of those journals
a great deal of Fat!!!

AGRICULTURAL.

Brief Notes.

To cure scab in sheep, rub with plain petroleum with sponge three times a week. Dogs can be cured of mange in the same way.

Farmers in Missouri complain that all their crops are taxed after they have paid taxes on their land, teams and agricultural implements.

In cultivating sweet potatoes do not let the vines root at the joints, as numerous small potatoes will form there at the expense of large ones.

Land laid down with clover is better than money in bank, drawing more interest than any bank can pay, and compounding the interest oftener.

A Chicago paper says the imported cabbage worm has reached that city. The cabbage patches in the vicinity of the Union Stock Yards literally swarm with them. It is likely that they will reach the Mississippi river during next season.

The Chicago Times says: Any observer will notice that the horses and mules employed for heavy teaming in this city are of a much larger size than those used a few years ago. Farmers who are breeding horses for sale to city truckmen will do well to make a note of this.

In order to keep their butter over the period of low prices and the hot weather, California dairymen seal up their products in tin cans, and sink them in the bottom of cold streams. Butter made in April comes out in October in good order, and continues to keep fresh in the cool weather of winter. Forty-four-pound cans are commonly used.

Save the Machinery.

The following, from the Prairie Farmer, should command the attention of every farmer, sensible or otherwise, in the land. Read it, and then go and act upon or follow the suggestions and lesson therein sought to be enforced:

"If the amount of money lost each year to the farmers of the United States by sheer neglect and carelessness in the care of farm machinery and implements could be even approximately arrived at, it would probably present one of the most astonishing examples of waste the country has yet seen; fully as great as the perquisites—to say stealing might be considered libelous—of those who have to do with the erection of our public buildings, and the various jobs of some of our law-makers, both national and State. It would go a good way in paying the interest on our national debt.

Now, considering that the working people of the United States pay nearly all the interest of this debt, as well as the principal so far paid, and, as the farmers of the United States compose much more than one-half of this population, it behooves them to economize in this important matter of saving in the wear and tear of farm machinery and implements. Many of them are costly, and when worn, either from carelessness or long use, are not only inefficient, but expensive to keep even in working order.

We have time and again written on this subject, especially upon the saving in keeping them properly housed, and their bright surfaces protected from rust, and their wooden and rough iron parts well painted, and will here only add that the makers of machines and implements often buy particularly old machines, if well preserved, at enormous prices, simply as an advertisement, just as a piano-maker does an ancient harpsichord, to show their customers how long a piano will last.

Experiments made in France some years ago show that the friction of wooden surfaces running on wood amounted to from one-quarter to one-half the force employed. The friction of metal on wood was something less, while with metal on metal surfaces the friction was from one-fifth to one-seventh of the power required to move them.

With lard applied to wood on wood, the friction was only one-tenth to one-twentieth of the power required to move the surfaces. Metal on metal had the friction reduced to one-half of what it was before. Of the various lubricators used in these experiments, pure lard and black lead give the least friction when cast iron is moved upon cast iron.

The chief reason why machinery lasts so much longer with some farmers than with others is from care in wiping and oiling, for whenever the bearings get worn the play soon causes the machine to become racked from the constant shaking and jarring of these loose surfaces. This is especially true of all fast-running gears, as those of reapers and mowers, threshers, corn-shellers, fanning mills and the various feed-grinding mills in use on the farm. The cause of wear in all journals and bearings is either from the gumming of the surfaces from the lubricators used, or from dirt containing grit and working in. All bearings, therefore, should be frequently wiped clean before oiling, and every possible means used to protect them from outside causes of wear.

A good wagoner always wipes the axles before oiling them. Very few also wipe the boxes, and yet one should be as necessary as the other. It will keep the bearings true for a long time, and save a vast amount of wear and tear for the team.

How much more necessary, then, for such costly machines as reapers, mowers, threshers and grinding mills, whose usual life, as now managed, is only about three years.

Bearings, from the long-continued use of gummy lubricators, sometimes come to consume more in friction than dry surfaces. There is nothing better for cleaning such surfaces than kerosene. After cleaning use only the best lubricators. For swift-running bearings fatty matter is the best. (It is poor economy to buy cheap oil.) For slow bearings and journals petroleum lubricators are the best. The matter of friction in farm machinery is really a serious one to the owners, and yet we suppose the makers of farm machinery will go on reaping rich rewards year by year, from the useless wear and tear of machinery, and which they really do not covet, simply because the majority of our farmers depend upon borrowing an agricultural paper rather than to buy one, and thus lose more in one day than would pay for a good paper for five years.

If horses had the speech given to Balaam's ass they would often put their masters in mind of the loss accruing from the lack of oil, but since the only means of communication is through galled shoulders, curbs, sprains, wind-galls, etc., we suppose ignorant and non-reading farmers will go on year after year in the old slack way, warned only by complaining and creaking axles, rickety machines, and disabled teams, which indeed only complain after so much injury is done that the value of the machine or animal thereafter is not worth much.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.

Johnny Cakes in Cups.—Three cups of Indian meal, one cup of wheat flour, three cups of thin sour milk, two table-spoonfuls of shortening, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of soda; bake in quick oven twenty minutes.

Cracked Wheat.—Soak it the same as the oatmeal, and, as it is apt to burn, put it in a little tin pail, and set the pail into a kettle of boiling water; cover closely, and let it boil half or three-quarters of an hour. Stir this into boiling water, the same as the oatmeal.

Molasses Taffy.—Two cupfuls of molasses, one cupful of sugar, butter the size of a guinea-hen's egg. Add half a teaspoonful of soda. Try if it is brittle: if not, boil a few minutes longer. Pour out into two buttered dishes. Nuts may be added, if you like, just before the soda.

Perfumes from Roses.—Tincture of Roses.—Take the leaves of the common rose; place them, without pressing, in a large-mouthed bottle; pour some good spirits of wine over them, seal the bottle securely, and let them remain in a dry place for a month or two.

Remedy for Freckles.—The following remedy has been found efficacious in Europe for freckles: Finely powdered sulpho-phenate of zinc, one part; oil of lemon, one part; pure alcohol, five parts; collodion, forty-five parts. To be mixed well together by trituration and applied to the skin.

Egg Pudding.—Boil a pound of rice in new milk; when it is cold, mix half a pound of sugar, half a pound of butter, and ten well-beaten eggs. Flavor with finely-pounded cinnamon and nutmeg. Bake in a pudding dish for one hour, and, just as you draw it from the oven, pour over the top a wine-glassful of sweet wine. To be served without sauce.

Cream Cakes.—Melt as much butter in a pint of hot milk as will make it rich as cream. Mix in flour enough to form a dough (it will probably take one quart), and knead it well, not forgetting to add a pinch of salt. Roll out rapidly on your board several times, cut into small squares, and bake on a griddle. These cakes are considered to be a suitable accompaniment to oyster soup.

Egg-Nogg.—Take the yelks of sixteen eggs and sixteen table-spoonfuls of pulverized loaf-sugar and beat them to the consistency of cream. To this add nearly a whole nutmeg grated, half a pint of good brandy or rum, and two glasses of Madeira wine. Beat the whites to a stiff froth, mix them in, and finish by adding six pints of milk. No heating is necessary in this formula, and the quantity should suffice for a party of twenty.

Oatmeal Samp.—Put a pint of oatmeal to soak in warm water a few hours before cooking it; just water enough to cover it; then pour this mixture into boiling water, a little at a time, with a good pinch of salt, and let it cook slowly, the same as corn-meal hasty pudding, for half an hour or longer. A pudding can be made of it by using eggs, milk, sugar, raisins and cinnamon, the same as for other puddings.

English Ginger Beer.—Two and a quarter pounds of loaf sugar, one ounce of cream of tartar, one and a half ounces of ginger root, two table-spoonfuls of fresh brewer's yeast, two lemons and about three gallons of water; bruise the ginger, put it into a large earthenware pan with the sugar and cream of tartar; peel the lemons, squeeze out the juice, strain it, and add, with the peel, to the other ingredients; then pour over them three gallons of boiling water. When it has stood until it is only just warm, add the yeast, stir the contents of the pan, cover with a cloth, and let it remain near the fire for twelve hours. Then skim off the yeast and pour the liquor off into another vessel, taking care not to shake it, so as to leave the sediment; bottle it immediately, cork it tightly; in three or four days it will be fit for use.

Coast Waves.

Next to the action of rain and rivers comes the gnawing effect of coast waves. The wave thunders against the cliff, which mocks its seemingly impotent rage by dashing it backward in a cloud of foam and spray, but it returns again and again to the charge, until persistency wins the day. The east coast of England, which has for centuries been fast yielding to the attacks of the German ocean, furnishes Sir C. Lyell with a majority of his illustrations in the interesting chapter upon the actions of tides and currents. That eminent geologist tells us how towns and villages, marked by names in old maps, now lie fathoms deep beneath the waves. In one case, which came under his notice, houses had within the memory of living men stood upon a cliff of fifty feet high, but in less than half a century houses and cliff were all ingulfed, and sea-water deep enough to float a frigate occupied their site. As many as twelve churches, each further landward than the last, have been built in one parish, and all but one have been swallowed up by the sea. Churchyards have been consequently destroyed, in many places the corpses and skeletons having been washed out of their graves and floated away by the tide. Sir C. Lyell himself saw human remains protruding from the cliff at Reculvers, in Kent, in 1851. And he humorously alludes to a scene depicted by Bewick, which, he says, numerous points on that coast might have suggested; the grave-yard of a ruined abbey undermined and almost isolated by the sea, with a broken tombstone in the foreground serving as a perch for the cormorants and bearing the inscription, "To perpetuate the memory of ——," one whose very name was obliterated and whose monument was to fall in the waves. And he aptly, though somewhat sarcastically, suggests that such a tombstone would have been a fit tribute to the memory of "some philosopher" who had taught "the permanency of existing continents," the "era of repose," or the "impotence of modern causes."—Belgravia.

Good Talkers.

The first requisite of a good talker is genuine social sympathy. A man may not say, out of some selfish motive, or some motive of personal policy, "Go to! I will become a good talker." He must enjoy society, and have a genuine desire to serve and please. We have all seen the talker who talks for his own purpose, or talks to please himself. He is the well-known character—the talking bore. The talker who gets himself up for show, who plans his conversations for an evening, and crams for them, becomes intolerable. He lectures; he does not converse; for there is no power of a talker so delightful as that of exciting others to talk, and listening to what his own inspiring and suggestive utterances have called forth. Genuine social sympathy and a hearty desire to please others are necessary to produce such a talker as this, and no other is tolerable. Social sympathy is a natural gift, and there is a combination of other gifts which constitute what may be called esprit, that are very essential to a good talker. This combination includes individuality, tact and wit—the talents, aptitudes and peculiar characteristic charm which enable a man to use the materials of conversation in an engaging way, entirely his own; for every talker has his own way of saying good things, as well of managing conversation based on his esprit.

Yet it is true that there are no good talkers who depend upon their natural gifts and such material as they get in the usual interchanges of society. For the materials of conversation we must draw upon knowledge. No man can be a thoroughly good talker who does not know a great deal. Social sympathy and the "gift of gab" go but a short way toward producing good conversation, though we hear a great deal of this kind of talk among the young. Sound and exact knowledge is the very basis of good conversation. To know a great many things well is to have in hand the best and most reliable materials of good conversation. There is nothing like abundance and exactness of knowledge with which to furnish a talker. Next to this, perhaps, is familiarity with polite literature. The faculty of quoting from the best authors is a very desirable one. Facts are valuable, and thoughts, perhaps, are quite as valuable, especially as they are more stimulating to the conversation of a group. The talker who deals alone in facts is quite likely to have the talk all to himself, while the man who is familiar with thoughts and ideas, as he has found them embodied in literature, becomes a stimulator of thought and conversation in those around them. Familiarity with knowledge and with the products of the literary art connot be too much insisted on as the furniture of good conversation.

Beyond this, the good talker must be familiar with the current thought and events of his time. There should be no movement in politics, religion and society that the good talker is not familiar with. Indeed, the man who undertakes to talk at all must know what is uppermost in men's minds, and be able to add to the general fund of thought and knowledge, and respond to the popular inquiry and the popular disposition for discussion. The man who undertakes to be a good talker should never be caught napping concerning any current topic of immediate public interest.

How to carry and convey superiority of knowledge and culture without appearing to be pedantic, how to talk out of abundant stores of information and familiarity with opinion, without seeming to preach, as Coleridge was accused of doing, belongs, with the ability to talk well, to "the art of conversation." It has seemed to us that, if young people could only see how shallow and silly very much of their talk is, and must necessarily be, so long as they lack the materials of conversation, they would take more pains with their study, would devote themselves more to the best books, and that, at least, they would acquire and maintain more familiarity with important current events. To know something is the best cure for neighborhood gossip, for talk about dress, and for 10,000 frivolities and sillinesses of society. Besides, a good talker needs an audience to understand and respond to him, and where is he to find one, if there is not abundant culture around him?—Dr. Holland, in Scribner's Monthly.

Nicknames of State Residents.

The nicknames of the citizens of the several States are as follows: Alabama, Lizards; Arkansas, Toothpicks; California, Gold Hunters; Colorado, Rovers; Connecticut, Wooden Nutmegs; Delaware, Muskrats; Florida, Fly up the Creeks; Georgia, Buzzards; Illinois, Suckers; Indiana, Hoosiers; Iowa, Hawkeyes; Kansas, Jayhawkers; Kentucky, Corn Crackers; Louisiana, Creoles; Maine, Foxes; Maryland, Craw Thumpers; Michigan, Wolverines; Minnesota, Gophers; Mississippi, Tadpoles; Missouri, Pukes; Nebraska, Bug Eaters; Nevada, Sage Hens; New Hampshire, Granite Boys; New Jersey, Blues, or Clam Catchers; New York, Knickerbockers; North Carolina, Tar Boilers; Ohio, Buckeyes; Oregon, Webfeet; Pennsylvania, Pennanites and Leatherheads; Rhode Island, Gun Flints; South Carolina, Weasels; Tennessee, Whelps; Texas, Beef Heads; Vermont, Green Mountain Boys; Virginia, Beadles; Wisconsin, Badgers.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, OCT. 9, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

A Change of Tone.

While General Sherman was down in Kentucky the other day, among the crowd of old soldiers who gathered around him was one who shook his hand with great delight and exclaimed: "Why, general, I'm delighted to see you. Don't you remember me,—Stanley, formerly of Leavenworth!" "Why, of course I recognized you," said the general; "what in the——are you doing down in this country?" Why sir, was the reply, "I am preaching now." "Preaching!" said the general, suddenly changing his tone to one of more respect for the clergyman, "I hope to heaven you are doing well!"

Worthless Beauties.

Somehow or other all the famous beauties known in history and in modern newspapers have begun or ended with a loss of reputation. Between Helen of Troy and Mrs. Langtry, there is a long list of Greek, Roman, Italian French, German, English, and other women famous as beauties, not one of whom deserved a particle of the respect due to a good American girl or matron who keeps out of the newspapers, as any woman can do when she chooses. Lola Montez was a professional beauty from Europe who visited America. Nobody here could discover her beauty, but it had been worshipped by a king of most ancient and heroic lineage. Mrs. Rousby was an English professional beauty who had achieved conquests which made her a heroine of the London society journals. But she had little success in America, where prettier and better women abound. Her beauty was fatal to her character, and led to excesses that killed her at an age when a really beautiful and good woman ought to be at her stage of perfection.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Mysterious Glove.

A woman's glove is to her what a vest-pocket is to a man. But it is more capacious, and in ninety-nine instances out of a hundred it is much better regulated. A man will carry $200 worth of small change, four matches, half a dozen toothpicks, a short pencil, and yet not be able to find a nickel or a match or a toothpick or a pencil or a card when he wants it. Not so with a woman. She has the least bit of a glove, and in that glove she carries the tiniest hand and a wad of bills and the memoranda of her intended purchase of dry goods, and car tickets and matinee checks and may be a diminutive powder bag. We have no idea how she does it—how she manages to squeeze those thousand and one things into that wee space. But she does it every time, and the glove never looks the least discomposed or plethoric or ruffled. And when a woman wants any article concealed about that glove she doesn't seem to have the least trouble in the world getting at it. All that is required is a simple turn of the wrist, the disappearance of two fairy fingers, and the desired article is brought to light. It is a wonder that no savant can explain.

Bound to Have Her.

The old man Bendigo keeps a pretty sharp eye on his daughter Mary, and many a would-be lover has taken a walk after a few minutes' conversation with the hard-hearted parent. The old chap is stuck this time, however, and cards are out for the wedding. After the lucky young man had been sparking Mary for six months, the old gentleman walked in as usual, requesting a private confab and led off with:

"You seem like a nice young man, and perhaps you are in love with Mary?'

"Yes, I am," was the honest reply.

"Haven't said anything to her yet, have you?'

"Well, no; but I think she reciprocates my affection.'

"Does, eh? Well, let me tell you something. Her mother died a lunatic, and there's no doubt Mary inherited her insanity.'

"I'm willing to take the chances,' replied the lover.

"Yes, but you see Mary has a terrible temper. She has twice drawn a knife on me with the intent to commit murder.'

"I'm used to that; got a sister just like her,' was the answer.

"And you know I've sworn a solemn oath not to give one cent of my property to Mary,' continued the father.

"Well, I'd rather start in poor and build up. There is more romance in it.

The old man had one more shot in his carbine, and said:

"Perhaps I ought to tell you that Mary's mother ran away from home with a butcher, and that all her relations died in the poor-house. These things might be thrown up in after years, and I am now warning you.'

"Mr. Bendigo, I've heard all this before,' replied the lover; "and also that you were on trial for forgery, and had to jump Chicago for bigamy, and served a year in state prison for cattle stealing. I am going to marry into your family to give it a decent reputation. There—no thanks—good-bye.'

Mr. Bendigo looked after the young man with his mouth wide open, and when he could get his jaws together he said:

"Some hyena has gone and give me away on my dodge."

A French Way of Washing Clothes.

A system of washing clothes has lately been introduced in some French towns which is worthy special mention. Its economy is so great as greatly to reduce the cost. This is the process: Two pounds of soap are reduced with a little water to a pulp, which having been slightly warmed is cooled in ten gallons of water, to which is added one spoonful of turpentine oil and two spoonfuls of ammonia; then the mixture is agitated. The water is kept at a temperature which may be borne by the hand. In this solution the white clothes are put and left there for two hours before washing them with soap, taking care in the meantime, to cover the tub. The solution may be warmed again and used once more, but it will be necessary to add a half a spoonful of turpentine oil and another spoonful of ammonia. Once washed with soap, the clothes are put in hot water, and the blue is applied. This process, it is obvious, saves much time, much labor, and fuel, while it gives to the clothes, a whiteness much superior to that obtained by any other process and the destructive use of the wash-board is not necessary to clean the clothes from the impurities which they contain.—Ex.

Poultry for Market.

No fowl over two years old, says the American Agriculturist should be kept in the poultry yard, except for some special reason. An extra good mother, or a finely feathered bird that is desirable as a breeder, may be preserved until ten years old with advantage, or at least so long as she is serviceable. But ordinary hens and cocks should be fattened at the end of the second year for market. Feeding for this purpose may be begun now. When there is a room or shed that can be closed, the fowls may be confined there. The floor should be covered with two or three inches of fine sawdust, dry earth, sifted coal ashes or clean sand. The food should be given four times a day, and clean water be always before the fowls. A dozen or more fowls may be put at once in this apartment, so that there need not be too many ready to sell at one time. The best food for rapid fattening, for producing well-flavored flesh and rich fat, is buckwheat meal mixed with sweet skimmed milk, into a thick mush. A teaspoonful of salt should be stirred in the food for a dozen fowls. Two weeks feeding is sufficient to fatten the fowls, when they should be shipped for sale without delay, and another lot put up for feeding. If the shed is kept dark and cool, as it should be, the fowls will fatten all the quicker for it.

Only Christians.

John Wesley was once troubled in regard to the disposition of the various sects, and the chances of each in reference to the future happiness or punishment. A dream one night transported him in its uncertain wanderings to the gates of hell.

"Are there any Roman Catholics here?" asked thoughtful Wesley.

"Yes,' was the reply.

"Any Presbyterians?'

"Yes.'

"Any Congregationalists?'

"Yes.'

"Any Methodists?' by way of a clincher, asked the pious Wesley.

"Yes,' was answered to his great indignation.

In the mystic way of dreams, a sudden transition and he stood at the gates of heaven. Improving his opportunity, he again inquired:

"Are there any Roman Catholics here?'

"No,' was replied.

"Any Presbyterians?'

"No.'

"Any Congregationalists?'

"No.'

"Any Methodists?'

"No.'

"Well, then,' he asked, lost in wonder, "who are they inside?'

"Christians!' was the jubilant answer.

Necessity of Amusement.

There are, even now, some old fogies who would have men and women work from morning until midnight, day after day, without relaxation, or amusement of any sort. But just as man is merging into the machine, and learns to go his rounds, like a horse in a bark mill, in a sudden fit of perversity he dies. Just as you get him to believe that riding and fishing and walking and fencing, dancing, attending the theater or concert-room, in moderation even is a waste of time, you have to send for the doctor, or the undertaker, or the superintendent of a lunatic asylum.

The philosophy that would adjure innocent recreation would also take away the spring and youth, the former from the seasons, the latter from human life. The fact is human life craves relaxation and excitement, and we are rapidly waking up to the fact. As a people we have been overworking ourselves, for eight or nine generations, and the system is beginning to tell upon us. the careworn look of our citizens exhibits the sad story at a glance—we require more holidays; our recreations are too irregular, too few and far between. We stand in earnest need of invigorating sports and of plenty of healthy amusements. We should be more intellectual even, if we devoted less time and thought to the culture of the intellect; we should become more many-sided, less fantastical, and should enjoy a healthier old age. Those people who turn their faces against rational amusements had better blot out the sunshine and strip the earth of its flowers. Recreation is essential to perfect health and happiness.

F|O|R S|A|L|E
AT LOWEST PRICES AT
THE PHYSICIANS' DRUG STORE.
A full line of everything usually kept in a
FIRST-CLASS DRUG STORE,
—SUCH AS—
Pure Drugs, Patent Medicines,
Perfumery, Hair Oil, Fine Soaps,
Brushes, Lamp Chimneys, Coal Oil
And a complete line of
Toilet Articles.
Liver & Kidney Pads,

Trusses, Shoulder braces. A choice selection of pure wines and liquors, furnished for medicinal purposes only. A full line of Wall Paper and Window shades, with all the latest improved fixtures, will be sold at prices remarkably low. We ask a share of public patronage, feeling satisfied that we can offer inducements worthy of attention.

DAY'S
KIDNEY PAD
THE GREAT DISCOVERY
FOR DISEASES OF THE
KIDNEYS, BLADDER AND URINARY ORGANS. A remedy that will positively cure DIABETES, GRAVEL, DROPSY, BRIGHT'S DISEASE, HIGH COLORED URINE, INCONTINENCE AND RETENTION OF URINE, NERVOUS DEBILITY and FEMALE COMPLAINTS when NOTHING ELSE CAN. Its success proves the efficacy of ABSORPTION. It saved the life of its discoverer and is saving the lives of thousands of others. For sale by Druggists or sent by mail on receipt of the price, [illegible]
DAY KIDNEY PAD CO.,
Sole Proprietors, Toledo, Ohio.
Send your address for our pamphlet, "How a Life was Saved."

CASEBEER & MATHENY,
First door South of First National Bank. Auburn, Ind.

ISAAC HAGUE'S
NEW SHOE STORE!
A NEW STOCK OF
BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT
Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen, we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— first door east of McQuiston & Ralston' double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

Excelsior Hardware,
Auburn, Ind.

SURE THING!
We buy goods to sell and not to keep.

Cooking Stoves, Box Stoves,
Flat Stoves, Heating Stoves,
Parlor Stoves, Elevated Stoves,
Coal Stoves, Oil Stove,

And stoves of every kind. We have the largest stock of stoves in the county, and will sell cheaper than the cheapest. Farmers, mechanics, merchants, traders and everybody, when you want a call on us, we will sell you a first-class stove for less money than it takes to tell it.

STOVE!

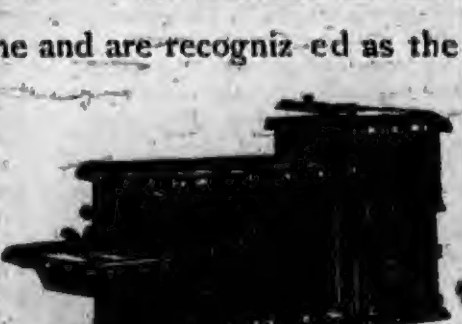
Call and see what a pile of iron and tinware you can buy for a FEW CENTS. Our stoves are all fully warranted in every respect.

Our stoves have been submitted to the
SEVEREST TESTS
for years. They have become and are recognized as the
STANDARD COOKING STOVES
of America, and the fact that 420,000 are now in daily use, is positive proof of their great superiority over all others. Our large sales enable us to sell stoves at very low prices.



"SMALL PROFITS AND QUICK SALES" IS OUR MOTTO.
W. H. KIBLINGER & COMPANY,
North of court house, 1st door west of McQuiston & Ralston's double store.

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Souther R. R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after [illegible] 1879, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm
Toledo	11 05 a m	12 01 a m	10 p m
Wauseon	12 16 "	1 08 "	"
Bryan	1 03 "	1 53 "	"
Butler	1 45 "	2 26 "	"
Waterloo	2 00 "	2 40 "	"
Sedan	2 10 "	2 50 "	"
Corunna	2 15 "	2 55 "	"
Kendallville	2 20 "	3 05 "	"
Ligonier	2 37 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	2 58 "	4 10 "	"
Elkhart	3 00 "	4 35 "	4 15 "

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	8 55 "
Goshen	1 29 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 56 "	10 42 "
Kendallville	2 20 "	11 18 "
Corunna	2 30 "	11 22 "
Sedan	2 37 "	11 34 "
Waterloo	2 55 "	11 45 "
Butler	3 10 "	12 01 a m
Bryan	3 45 "	12 40 "
Wauseon	4 27 "	1 27 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 40 "	9 35

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. R. CURTIS, Division Supt.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. &C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1878.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Night ex.	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 55 am	10 12	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 12	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Fast ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 30 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 48	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 25 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 20	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 45	4 55	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 00	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 6	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15 pm	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday, Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line

75 Miles Shortest to Indianapolis, Louisville and all points South. 53 Miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas, Texas, and all points West. Direct Route to Detroit and all Michigan and Canada points.

TIME CARD IN EFFECT MAY 25, '79.

SOUTH.	MAIL.	EX.	ACC.
Bay City		am
Saginaw		am
Lansing		am
Detroit		am	2 50pm
Ann Arbor		am	5 20pm
Jackson	6 00am	am	6 50pm
Jonesville	7 10am	pm	9 00am
Bankers	7 27am	pm	9 40pm
Waterloo	9 12am	pm	12 [illegible]am
Auburn	9 20am	pm	1 00am
Auburn Junc.	9 29am	pm	1 10am
Ft. Wayne	10 20am	pm	2 35am
Indianapolis	6 25pm	pm
Cincinnati	7 00pm
Louisville	11 00pm	am
St. Louis	7 30am	am
Washington		6 40pm
Baltimore		9 70pm

NORTH.		EX.	ACC.
Baltimore		7 10am
Washington		8 25am
St. Louis	8 00am	7 00pm
Louisville	2 00pm	6 50pm	7 30am
Cincinnati			9 00am
Indianapolis	6 40pm	4 05am	11 50am
Ft. Wayne	5 00am	11 40am	5 00pm
Auburn Junc.	5 32pm	12 25pm	6 25pm
Auburn	5 51am	12 35pm	6 30pm
Waterloo	6 05am	12 46pm	7 05pm
Bankers	7 54am	2 25pm	10 20pm
Jonesville	8 10am	2 37pm	10 45pm
Jackson	9 35am	3 40pm	12 35am
Ann Arbor	10 35am	5 10pm	2 05am
Detroit	11 50am	6 20pm	3 35am
Lansing		5 24pm
Saginaw		8 57pm
Bay City		9 55pm

All trains daily except Sunday. Through tickets to all principal points. For information as to routes and connections apply to
P. B. LOOMIS, Pres't & Gen'l Mang'r.
S. K. HOOPER, Gen'l Ticket Ag't.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect November 10, 1878.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mall.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	5 40 pm
Bluffton	2 12 pm	53 pm
Montpelier	2 52 pm	38 pm
Hartford	3 17 pm	58 pm
MUNCIE	4 05 pm	40 pm
Newcastle	5 00 pm
Cambridge City	5 37 pm
Connersville	6 17 pm
Cincinnati	9 20 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 15 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville	11 00 pm	6 20 am
Terre Haute		1 32 am
St. Louis		7 30 am

STATIONS	GOING NORTH Mall.	Express	Accom.
St. Louis		8 00 am	7 00 pm
Terre Haute		3 27 pm	1 32 am
Louisville		2 00 pm	6 55 pm
Indianapolis		6 40 pm	4 15 am
Cincinnati	8 00 am
Connersville	11 13 am
Cambridge City	11 46 am
New Castle	12 25 pm
Muncie	1 25 pm	9 20 pm	6 55 am
Hartford	2 13 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	2 40 pm	10 31 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	3 18 pm	11 00 pm	9 15 am
Fort Wayne	4 25 pm	11 15 am	0 45 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Detroit Eel River & Illinois R R.

TAKE EFFECT DEC. 8, 1878.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	MAIL No. 2.	ACCOM. No. 4.	LOCAL FT No. 6.
lv. Logansport	[illegible]	7 [illegible]	6 [illegible]
Mexico	9 15	[illegible]	7 [illegible]
Denver	9 27	[illegible]	[illegible]
Chili	9 [illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Roann	9 [illegible]	[illegible]	9 [illegible]
Laketon	10 12	10 [illegible]	10 [illegible]
N. Manchester	10 [illegible]	10 [illegible]	11 [illegible]
Liberty Mills	10 [illegible]	10 [illegible]	11 [illegible]
Collamer	10 [illegible]	10 [illegible]	11 [illegible]
S. Whitley	10 [illegible]	10 [illegible]	12 [illegible]
Columbia City	11 [illegible]	11 [illegible]	2 [illegible]
Collin's	11 40	11 [illegible]	3 [illegible]
Churubusco	12 00	12 [illegible]	3 [illegible]
La Otto	12 [illegible]	12 [illegible]	3 [illegible]
Cedar Creek	12 [illegible]	12 [illegible]	4 15
Auburn Junct'n	12 [illegible]	1 [illegible]	4 [illegible]
Auburn	12 [illegible]	1 [illegible]	5 [illegible]
Butler	1 [illegible]	2 [illegible]	6 [illegible]

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1.	No. 3.	No. 5.
Logansport ar.	7 [illegible]	1 [illegible]	[illegible]
Mexico	6 [illegible]	11 [illegible]	[illegible]
Denver	6 [illegible]	11 [illegible]	[illegible]
Chili	6 17	11 [illegible]	[illegible]
Roann	6 [illegible]	11 [illegible]	[illegible]
Laketon	5 [illegible]	10 [illegible]	1 [illegible]
North Manchester	5 [illegible]	10 [illegible]	1 [illegible]
Liberty Mills	5 [illegible]	10 [illegible]	1 [illegible]
Collamar	5 15	9 [illegible]	12 [illegible]
South Whitley	5 13	9 [illegible]	12 [illegible]
Columbia City	4 48	9 [illegible]	11 [illegible]
Collin's	4 [illegible]	8 [illegible]	10 [illegible]
Churubusco	4 10	8 [illegible]	10 [illegible]
La Otto	3 [illegible]	7 57	9 [illegible]
Cedar Creek	3 [illegible]	7 45	[illegible]
Auburn Junction	3 [illegible]	7 23	[illegible]
Auburn	3 20	7 19	7 19
Butler lv.	2 [illegible]	6 [illegible]	6 [illegible]

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

CHICAGO DIVISION.

TIME TABLE No. 4.

TO TAKE EFFECT MAY 18, 1879.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Expr'ss	[illegible]
CHICAGO		10 00pm	9 10am
Walkerton Junction		1 00am	12 10pm
Milford Junction	2 30pm	2 14	1 20
Cromwell	3 30pm	2 46	1 48
Albion	4 30pm	3 10	2 08
Avilla	5 30pm	3 29	2 24
Garrett, ar.	5 45pm	3 45	2 40
Garrett lv.	6 15am	3 55	3 10
Auburn Junction	4 [illegible]	4 05	3 26
St. Joe	am	4 25	3 44
Hicksville	am	4 45	4 00
Defiance	[illegible]	5 27	4 40
Fostoria	2 30pm	7 25	6 40
Tiffin	3 40pm	7 54	7 05
CHICAGO JUNCTION	4 00pm	8 00	8 10

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Expr'ss	Chicag'o Expr'ss
CHICAGO JUNCTION	5 20am	8 15am	6 40pm
Tiffin	6 20	9 12	7 35
Fostoria	9 25	9 35	8 34
Defiance	4 45pm	11 30	10 25
Hicksville	6 15	12 15pm	11 24
St. Joe	6 50	12 30	11 41
Auburn Junction	7 25	12 50	12 05am
Garrett ar.	8 00	12 58	12 10
Garrett lv.		2 25	12 20
Avilla		1 40	12 35
Albion		2 06	12 58
Cromwell		2 32	1 22
Milford Junction		3 00	1 58
Walkerton Junction		4 08	3 20
CHICAGO		7	6 40

N. H. Wood, Master of transportion Chicago Division, Garrett.
C. H. Hudson, Superintendent Trans. Ohio Division Chicago.

JUSTRECEIV'D
—AT—
J. ABRIGHT'S

Fine Gold and Plated Jewelry,
Ladies Gold Watches,
American Watches,
Rogers & Bro. Silverware,
A splendid line of imported Vases
Watch Chains, magnificent
Holiday Gifts, Lockets,
Ladies Sets, Gents
GOLD & SILVER SETS
Sleeve and Collar Buttons, Jet
Shell and Horn Jewelry,
All at astonishingly
LOW PRICES.
Watches and Jewelry neatly repaired on short notice

SAVED!
TIME, PATIENCE & MONEY
By always taking the great
Wabash Route,
FOR ALL POINTS
orth, East, South or West
LIGHTNING TRAINS,
Invariably on Time, with Close and Sure Connections.

No changes of cars to St. Louis, Hannibal, Quincy, Keokuk, Peoria, Burlington, Kansas City, Atchison and St. Joe, and only one change to all points in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Arkansas and Texas, forming the

SHORTEST AND QUICKEST
—AND—
Only Direct Route

From the West to all points in the East, including New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

Through Sleepers from St. Louis to Boston, 1223 MILES,
The Longest Sleeping Car Line in the World.

A. L. HOPKINS, Gen'l Manager.
R. ANDREWS, Gen'l Sup't.
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen'l Passenger Agent, Toledo, O.

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 9. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, OCTOBER 16, 1879. Number 42

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills,

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn De-Kalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for De-Kalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

Thos. H. Sprott,

REAL ESTATE, COLLECTION AND INSURANCE Agent. Loans effected on improved farms. Kansas lands for sale or trade.
Auburn, Indiana

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National, Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's Store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller,

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

D. J. Swartz, M. D.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO DISEASES of the Eye and Ear, Fistula in Ano, Hemorrhoids or Piles and Chronic Ulcers. Office on Main street, over Shaffer's Furniture Store, Auburn, Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET. EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross. Prop'r Auburn. Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS. Proprietors. Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains. Good sample rooms on first floor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month; at Waterloo, the first and at Butler the second Saturday of every spring and fall month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACKINTOSH,
Co. Sup't, of schools.

$66 A WEEK in your own town, and no capital risked. You can give the business a trial without expense. The best opportunity ever offered for those willing to work. You should try nothing else until you see for yourself what you can do at the business we offer. No room to explain here. You can devote all your time or only your spare time to the business, and make great pay for every hour that you work. Women make as much as men. Send for special private terms and particulars, which we mail free. $5 outfit free. Don't complain of hard times while you have such a chance. Address H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1y.

Ditch Notice.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested in the construction or completion of public ditches located in DeKalb county, Indiana, that the board of commissioners of said county will, on the

23rd Day of October, 1879,

commence an examination of ditches in said county, the time for the completion of which has expired; and all ditches or parts of ditches found unfinished, will be advertised and sold in accordance with Sec. 12 of the ditch law, approved March 9, 1875. All persons concerned will therefore see to it that their allotments are completed by that time, and thereby save costs.

B. F. BLAIR, Pres't. of Board.

Oct. 8th, 1879.

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $5 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1y.

Grant.

[New York Sun.

When an enthusiastic third termer at San Francisco told Grant the other day that there were many in that city who would like to see him president again, he answered, dipomatically, "I don't aspire." Still further pressed to say whether he would be a candidate in a certain contingency, he looked toward the sea and took refuge in silence.

This is the sort of game which has been played for the past two years, while the managers of the game have been pretending that Grant was not a candidate for 1880. As he has approached the point from which he started out, some of the disguise has been thrown off.

It is no secret that the voyage round the world was part of a plan to put Grant in training for a third term. He desired to go abroad, and that wish fitted in with the desires of those who wanted him away from party strifes, and out of danger of the committals and complications which would be almost inevitable should he remain at home. He was put in the way of gaining a large sum of money, enough to cover his expenditures of travel on a liberal scale, without seemingly having to incur any obligation. The arrangement was far more delicate than the subscription to the fund in his behalf in 1868. But the parties to it are as well known as were Fish, Borie, Childs, Drexel, and the others who flourished during two terms as the power behind the throne.

Grant is as much a candidate now as he was in 1868 or in 1872. All the ring chiefs and a great number of leaders in the republican party are for him first, last, and all the time. They have not changed in the least degree, or abated a jot in devotion. Their programme of a sectional crusade has been organized with reference to Grant. All the platforms are manufactured in one mould, and they bear the impress of a preconcerted plan of campaign for 1880 by forcing an issue with the south, and claiming that a man with an iron grip is demanded in the executive office.

The traditions of the presidency from Washington down count for nothing with this faction. They want power, patronage, the treasury, the high honors, and a strong government, backed by a great standing army, an increased navy, and European forms and customs, without regard to expense. The glitter of a court at Washington with class distinctions, enormous outlay, parade, palaces for the Cabinet, and extra appropriations for maintaining the dignity of their stations, are all comprehended in the scheme of a restoration of Grantism.

Grant is shrewd, and does not mean to enter the convention with any ordinary chance of losing the nomination. His expectation is to conquer it in advance, so that there will be nothing more than a ratification of the machine's decree, when the delegates get together eight months hence. He turned aside from an intended journey to Australia in obedience to a call from the wire pullers, who told him the time had come for a personal participation on his part. Hence his return by way of California for the proposed ovations. Yet, when interrogated about the presidency he replies, "I don't aspire."

Francis Bacon and His Warts.

[Cornhill Magazine.]

Francis Bacon supplies a very effective piece of evidence as to the influence of the imagination on external growth which seem to have their origin in deficient vitality of certain parts of the external surface of the body, as warts, wens, and the like. Bacon did not, however treat the afforded evidence in his own case with the acumen which might have been expected from the inductive philosopher. "I had from my childhood," he says "a wart upon one of my fingers; afterward, when I was about 16 years old, being then at Paris, there grew upon both my hands a number of warts—at least 100 in a month's space. The English ambassador's lady, who was a woman far from superstition," (a statement which must be taken cum grano) "told, me one day she would help me away with my warts; whereupon she got a piece of lard with the skin on, and rubbed the warts all over with the fat side; and among the rest that wart which I had from my childhood; then she nailed the piece of lard, with the fat toward the sun, upon a post of her chamber window which was to the south. The success was that within five week's space all the warts were quite away, and that wart which I had so long endured for company. But at the rest I did little marvel because they came in a short time, and might go away in a short time again; but the going away of that which had stayed so long doth yet stick with me."

What Does It Mean.

What mean the ovations now being paid to Grant? That he is an illustrious captain no one will deny; but is it on account of his military services that the people are running wild after him? This may have something to do with it, but it is an incident, and not the cause. It cannot be that he is received with huzzas, and flowers are thrown in his pathway, because of his civil services, for as a civilian he was a failure. While he was at the head of the executive branch of the government corruption ran riot, states were bayoneted; liberty was throttled and fidelity to him made the open sesame to wealth and position. His stolid indifference to law and the traditions of the government marked his administration as an anomaly; and when he left the presidency, although succeeded by a fraud, the people breathed freer because they felt that the danger of a personal departed with its first and only representative in the presidential chair.

But no sooner had Grant left the chair of Washington than the rich men of the country gathered about him to do him honor. They fed and toasted him, and when he went down the Delaware river to take a steamer for Europe, he was accompanied by the millionaires of Philadelphia.

On reaching Europe he was taken in hand by earls and dukes. He feasted at their tables and drank of their wine. From Europe he went to Asia, and in the east, as in the west, he was the guest of the nobility and of kings. These men saw in him a representative of personal government; hence they honored him. Other Americans equally as talented and as patriotic as he had passed through these countries without notice; hence it could not have been on account of his citizenship that he was honored. When he had completed his journey and his foot touched his native land again, he was received with shouts that made the welkin ring. He landed in probably the richest city in the world for its population, and was received by the richest men of that city with open arms. He was invited to dine at the country seat of a millionaire, and it was given out that no man with less than $1,000,000 would be asked to meet him there. Surrounded by rich men, partaking of their bounty and flattered by their attentions, we find Grant, the great general and the indifferent civilian, to-day.

Again, we ask, why these attentions to the late general of our army? It seems to us the great answer may be found in the fact that while president of the United States he exercised all his influence and power to further the interest of capital. The corporate capital of the country—the railroads, the insurance companies and the banks—the bondholders and other men of capital were cared for, while the poor men—those whose capital consists of brawny arms and sinews of steel—were passed by as unworthy of notice. Such men were bound hand and foot and ground to powder by the Juggernaut of capital under the administration of Grant. Capital wants a strong government. It seeks the overthrow of that founded upon the principles of Jefferson, and seeks to erect upon its ruins one modeled upon the plan of Hamilton. It wants to look to Washington for its protection and not to the capitals of the several states. It wants a Nation in all the name implies, and not a Union, where the persons and the property of the people are cared for by the states. It sees in Grant the man to do its bidding, hence it runs after him and intends again to invest him with power, symbolized, it may be, by the imperial purple. But the people stand in the way of the consumation of this plan. They will interpose their votes to prevent its being carried out. We know the power of money. We know the strength of associated capital when wielded in a common purpose; but the strength of the people is greater than the strength of money. When they arise in their might they will crush to the earth everything in their way. When they see their liberties in danger they will go to the rescue of their imperiled country as they went when Beauregard fired on Sumter. The rich may plant, and the politicians may water, but the increase can only be the will of the people.

A Saw Accident.

A singular accident and narrow escape is reported from Bay City, Mich. It is stated that while a Mr. Farmer was standing in front of a six foot revolving circular saw, at Bradley's mill, one of the teeth of the saw flew out and struck Mr. Farmer in the breast. He escaped with his life only because the tooth happened to strike and embed itself in his gold watch, which was sadly damaged. The best way is to keep clear of circular saws, especially those having inserted teeth.

Immigration Increasing.

Foreign immigration to this country is again steadily increasing. A considerable portion of it will form a useful addition to our population. A hundred razor-makers recently arrived in New York, who are to be employed in an effort to permanently establish their industry on our soil. Thousands of preceding migrations of a similar kind have rendered immense service in increasing national wealth, developing latent resources and advancing our industrial position, while the inventive ingenuity and enterprise of native-born citizens have had a large share in the progressive steps which have made the United States capable of great achievements in all the leading industries. Immigrating artisans have also rendered indispensable aid to many of these movements. It is no small matter that our free institutions make it a comparatively easy task to attract hither skilled laborers of any class born in any other country, when there is a special need for their services.

Facts About Flour.

Flour is peculiarly sensitive to atmospheric influences, hence it should never be stored in a room with sour liquids, nor where onions or fish are kept, nor any article that taints the air of the room in which it is stored. Any smell perceptable to the sense will be absorbed by flour. Avoid damp cellars or lofts where a free circulation of air cannot be obtained. Keep in a cool, dry, airy room, and not exposed to a freezing temperature nor to intense summer, nor to artificial heat for any length of time above 70° to 75° Fahr. It should not come in contact with grain or other substances which are liable to heat. Flour should be sifted and the particles thoroughly disintergrated, and then warmed before baking. This treatment improves the color and baking properties of the dough. The spongue should be prepared for the oven as soon as the yeast has performed its mission, otherwise fermentation sets in and acidity results.—American Miller.

Cheap Wheat.

A late number of the Walla Walla (Washington Territory) Watchman says:

The question is frequently asked, what does it cost to raise wheat in the great valley of Walla Walla? After a careful inquiry, we adduce the following answer: It costs about $1.90 per acre to plow, sow, and seed; $1.25 to cut and head, and about seven cents per bushel to thrash and sack it. This includes wages, board, and hired help, and horse feed. A header usually works up from fifteen to twenty acres, and threshers, with good machinery, clean up from 2,000 to 3,000 bushels per day. Harvest hands receive from $2 to $3 per day and board. The yield this year is larger and heavier than usual, and ranges all the way from twenty-five to sixty bushels to the acre. Wheat according to the above figures, can be raised and sacked for twenty-four cents a bushel, and is worth to-day fifty cents, which shows conclusively that our farmers have a perfect little bonanza.

A Beautiful Story.

Miss Coleridge relates a story to this effect. Alexander, during his march into Africa, came to a people dwelling in peaceful huts, who knew neither war nor conquest. Gold being offered him he refused it, saying that his sole object was to learn the manners and customs of the inhabitants. "Stay with us," said the chief, "as long as it pleaseth thee." During the interview with the African chief two of his subjects brought a case before him for judgment. The dispute was this: The one had bought a piece of ground, which, after the purchase, was found to contain a treasure for which he felt himself bound to pay. The other refused to receive anything, stating that he had sold the land with what it might be found to contain, apparent or concealed. Said the chief, looking at one: "You have a son;" and to the other, "You have a daughter; let them be married, and the treasure given them as a dowry." Alexander was astonished. "And what," said the chief, "would have been the decision in your country?" "We should have dismissed the parties and seized the treasure for the King's use." "And does the sun shine in your country?" said the chief; "does the rain fall there? Are there any cattle there which feed upon herbs and green grass?" "Certainly," said Alexander. "Ah," said the chief, "it is for the sake of those innocent cattle that the Great Being permits the sun to shine, the rain to fall, and the grass to grow in your country."

—Use Card's fever and ague cure and liver invigorator. For sale by F. E. Davenport and Casebeer & Matheny. 34-3m.

Women.

[State Sentinel.]

Let the toast go round—"The only endurable aristocracy, who elect without votes, govern without laws, decide without appeal, and are never in the wrong."

Woman's rights and woman's wrongs are now-a-days universal topics for discussion. We are told that women now enjoys all the rights required for their happiness. Not so; no sadder mistake was ever made. There is not one man in a thousand who yields to woman all her rights. To measure these rights by the statutes, or even by what is claimed by women themselves, in their conventions, does not meet the demand. There are rights which find no expression in the written laws of our country more priceless than those which relate to suffrage, to property, and so on, throughout the entire list that are catalogued as rights to be embodied in the laws of the land. There are few men, comparatively speaking, who yield to woman the homage due them. In this view of the case, the laws, the literature, current comment and the oral statements all bear testimony. Woman's value is not fairly recognized—the wealth of woman's affections is underestimated. Her griefs, her burdens her anxieties and trials do not call forth that abundant sympathy which is her due. Her sex, her weakness, her sensitiveness are not regarded by men in their proper light. There are isolated cases to which our criticisms does not apply. But we are talking of the rule, not of the exceptions. A writer whose head is level says: "Woman would never fall from their high estate if mankind, with the deceit and cunning of serpents, did not tempt them and pull them down. Men may have trials and troubles to vex them in everyday life; but women have more erring husbands and sons far out-numbering erring wives and daughters. Women do not receive the credit at our hands they deserve. A false estimate of the female sex starts many a man, young and old on the downward road. When loving mothers advised, they treated their advices with contempt. When sisters counseled, they spurned such kindness and anxiety. It was a woman, Frank, who gave us birth; a loving mother tendered and cared for us in our helpless infancy; when sick and nigh unto death she watered our couch with her tears; her anxiety for our comfort and welfare, life and hapiness was only second to our Savior's. Her watchful, sleepless hours manifested such love and tenderness as stern man knows nothing of. Young men, old men, middle-aged men, all help to malign and abuse women, insult and ruin her. Husbands betray their trust, and oppress and distress her—the wife—who should be cared for as the apple of the eye. Young men, as lovers, prove false to their promises, and virtue is trailed in the dust. The blame seldom attaches where it belongs but the weaker sex receives all the odium."

Such tributes to woman's value are always timely. They are all well calculated to set men to thinking, and, as a result, to elevate and sublimate man's nature.

The Method of one Good Farmer.

We occasionally hear of improved methods of cultivation that are worthy of general adoption. That of Hon. Jasper Davidson, residing near Hazleton, Gibson county, in cultivating wheat has some new and important features and has certainly proven successful in his case. Mr. Davidson has raised 190 bushels to the acre during the last six years, or nearly 33 bushels per acre each year, cropping the same ground the whole period. The smallest yield was 22 bushels and the largest 43 bushels per acre. His land is best sugar-tree upland. His plan is to sow clover on the wheat in April and turn a few sheep on it till the wheat is knee-high. He pastures some fifty head on seventy-five acres of wheat. They do no damage, but are, he thinks, an improvement. The harrowing that is done to cover the clover seed tears up some of the wheat stalks but is after all a great benefit to the crop. The clover grows vigorously after the wheat is taken off, and puts the ground in excellent condition for the next crop. The fact that Mr. Davidson's ground has produced and average of over 30 bushels per acre six years in succession with no other fertilization than sheep pasturing and clovering is sufficient evidence that the plan is a good one and worthy of adoption by farmers who have not enjoyed similar success.—Indiana Farmer.

For Sale a Sacrifice.

A GEISER THRESHING MACHINE in good condition, offered for sale by Mr. D. D. Moody, at a very low price, and on time. This is an excellent opportunity to get a bargain. 27tf.

Don't Cram Young Heads.

The peculiar features of the existing educational systems are provoking the criticism of some of the ablest teachers. A special matter of complaint is that "the work required in the study of reading, arithmetic, grammar, and geography in our best schools of to-day is from five to 10 times greater than it was in the same studies and in the best schools of the first part of this century." As a result, diligent scholars are obliged spend so much time in committing to memory abstract rules, dates, and names, that their health is sometimes impaired by mental acquisitions which confer no permanent benefit and do not materially enlarge their understanding. There is no end to the amount of labor that can be imposed by rules requiring the contents of numerous text-books to be accurately recited, and after young heads are crammed full of such wisdom they may still be very imperfectly educated. The schools are doing so much good that great care should be taken to check any evil tendencies that may lurk in the course of studies or methods of teaching.

Resumption.

[Newark Advocate.]

It is amusing to hear republican politicians and orators boast of the "resumption of specie payments," when every intelligent man knows that their is no such thing. There is but one place in all these broad United States that specie payments can be required, and that is at the sub-treasury at New York. And even there you must present your currency in sums of $50 and upwards before you can have the requisite boon of receiving one specie payment. Specie payment—as claimed by the republicans—is a sham, a delusion, a myth. We have waded through all this sea of ruin simply to accomplish the equalization of paper with coin. For that is all there is of this boasted resumption. And this would have been accomplished years ago, without all this costly sacrifice of fortune and happiness, had the government done that which the democratic party wanted it to do, and what it has since done—namely to accept its own currency for all dues, both public and private, and thus put it at par, and that is all resumption has done for it.

—For first-class jobwork, come to the COURIER office. Good work, good material and low prices guaranteed.

WHAT PAYS BEST

AFTER HARVEST,

Is a serious consideration of its cost and profits, and how to economize by comparing your own experience with that of others in farm labor.

Only $1.15 a Year,

Will place you in possession of the only newspaper that gives the actual experience and experiments of practical farming.

"The Cincinnati WEEKLY ENQUIRER, is the medium through which producers of every class make known their own experience, and seek that of others."

"The best teacher of farming, is the farmer himself! A fact fully demonstrated in the department (two pages a week) devoted to the farmer and his household in the WEEKLY ENQUIRER."

"Every department is complete."

"It is worth $100.00 a year to farmers, but costs only $1.15."

"The best is the cheapest."

"It always has the news in advance of all others."

"There is none better."

"It is the best political friend the people have, advocating its democracy upon the principles of justice and equity to all."

"It is the original greenbacker."

Such are a few of the many compliments paid to the Cincinnati ENQUIRER, by the press throughout the country.

The merits of its editorials, agricultural, political, correspondence, literary, telegraphic news and commercial departments combine to make it all that is required in an A No. 1, first-class family journal.

WEEKLY ENQUIRER.

One copy, one year	$1.15
One copy six months	65

COPY FREE TO CLUBS OF SEVEN.

DAILY ENQUIRER.

	without Sun. issue.	with Sun. issue.
One year	$12.00	$14.00
Three months	3.25	3.75
Sunday's issue alone, per year		2.00
Any two day's issue " "		4.00
Any three day's issue " "		6.00

Specimens Free. Agents Wanted.

FARAN & McLEAN, Publishers,
41-3m CINCINNATI, O.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, OCT. 16, 1879.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, in what are known as the Pittsburgh riot cases, affirms the constitutionality of the law imposing upon that city, and the county in which it is situate, the payment of damages for the destruction of property by the mob in 1877.

Robert W. Steele, bookkeeper for Isaac Smith's Son & Co., umbrella manufacturers in Broadway, New York, is reported to have disappeared with $60,000 of the firm's money.

The persons who robbed the National Bank, of Laconia, N. H., last April, have been discovered and indicted. The amount of their plunder was $125,000.

THE WEST.

The Denver Tribune contains a letter, dated at Santa Fe, N. M., giving the details of the recent slaughter of nineteen persons—among them a man, his wife and three children—by a raiding band of Indians, near Hillsboro, in that Territory. Eight other persons were badly wounded, among them three children. The Indians were pursued by a company of armed settlers, who succeeded in killing ten of them.

There was a fatal balloon ascension at San Francisco, on Sunday, the 5th of October. Prof. Colgrove, aeronaut, and C. H. Williams, manager of Woodward's Gardens attempted to make a balloon ascension from the gardens, the wind blowing almost a gale. The balloon seemed to be insufficiently inflated with gas, and rose heavily above the buildings of the garden, soon after dropped, and scudded along at a low elevation, tearing away telegraph wires in its flight. In a moment the bag ripped, and the gas escaped with a roar heard for blocks. Both occupants of the basket were thrown out, and fell a distance of 200 feet. Williams was fearfully crushed, and died almost immediately. Colgrove lived some four hours.

The evidence at the official inquiry into the causes of the terrible disaster at Adrian, Mich., develop the fact that the seats of the grand stand into which the people were crowded at the time of its fall were insufficiently supported, the accident being entirely due to this cause.

Eight men were fatally injured in the Tioga mine, Bodie, Cal. They were being lowered into the mine, when the engine became unmanageable, and the car on which the miners were descending was precipitated several hundred feet....The local committee of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee in Chicago is at work preparing for the reception to be given to Gen. Grant on his arrival there Nov. 12....The band of Apaches under Chief Victoria, who have so often escaped from their reservation in New Mexico, only to be brought back by the troops, have at last been punished. Maj. Morrow pursued and overtook the unruly savages, gave them a good whipping and recovered sixty stolen horses....The report that the Hon. Thomas Drummond has determined to retire from his position as Judge of the United States Circuit Court is now denied.

The fate of the two men—Prof. Wise and George Burr, who ascended in a balloon from St. Louis on Sunday evening, Sept. 28, still remains a mystery at this writing. A party under the direction of Prof. Wise's son, who went from St. Louis to explore the vast bottom lands of Macoupin county, Ill., on the theory that the lost balloon was wrecked therein, returned to that city the other day, after a very wearisome work. They only succeeded in proving beyond all question that all theories about the balloon landing south of Springfield, Ill., are fallacious, and forces the conclusion that the telegraph operator on the shore of Lake Michigan, who thought he saw a balloon passing out over the lake at 11 o'clock on the night of Sept. 28, was correct. The junior Wise refuses to believe that his grandfather has been killed, and holds to the theory that the balloon landed in Canadian woods, remote from a telegraph station.

The Horn silver mine, owned by Campbell, Cullen & Co., has just been sold in Chicago to Eastern parties, for $5,000,000, the par value of its stock being $10,000,000. This mine is located in Frisco, in Southern Utah, and was purchased by the recent owners, three years ago, for $25,000....A mob, coming in carriages, on horseback and on foot, entered Janesville, Wis., one night last week, with the intention of lynching Baumgarten, the murderer of little Sandy White, but the Sheriff, having been apprised of their coming, had sent Baumgarten out of town for safety. After assuring themselves that the murderer was not there the mob departed.

Gen. Grant, after spending a week of quiet and repose in the romantic and delightful valley of the Yosemite, returned to San Francisco on the 7th inst., and was thence driven to Belmont, the palatial residence of Senator Sharon, where a grand reception was given in his honor.

Chicago elevators contain 3,054,621 bushels of wheat, 3,473,119 bushels of corn, 604,523 bushels of oats, 84,492 bushels of rye, and 384,349 bushels of barley, making a grand total of 7,602,103 bushels, against 5,853,280 bushels at this period last year....Disastrous prairie fires are reported in Western Minnesota and Dakota Territory.

The past week was a week of conventions with Chicago. There were in session, at one and the same time, the American Humane Society, the Methodist Rock River Conference, the Illinois Masonic Grand Lodge, the National Railway Conductors' Association, the Woman's Christian Association, and the Evangelical Conference.

Gen. Grant sailed from San Francisco for Oregon on the steamer St. Paul, on the 9th of October.

THE SOUTH.

Three thousand five hundred persons witnessed the execution of Joe Kemp at Evening Shade, Sharp county, Ark., Oct. 3, for the murder of Marion Hulsey in 1869. He made a very short speech, saying: "I die to-day for a crime for which I deserve the punishment. I would give some advice to young men and boys: Honor your father and mother that your days may be long on the earth. Lord have mercy on my soul."

A dispatch from White Wright, Grayson county, Texas, gives brief particulars of a horrible crime at a place known as Brush, eight miles south of that place: "Some unknown white men surrounded the house of Thomas Watson, colored, the family consisting of a mother and two children, a boy of 18 and a girl of 9 years, called them to the door and shot them down in cold blood, killing the mother and son instantly and mortally wounding the little girl. The authorities at that place are working faithfully to bring the murderers to justice, but up to date no arrests have been made."....Three men were killed and five seriously wounded by the explosion of a saw-mill near Willis, Texas.

Savannah, Ga., celebrated the centennial of the siege of that city and the death of Sergt. Jasper, last week. There were imposing processions, in which twenty militia companies participated, handsome decorations and a profuse display of American flags. After the ceremony of laying the corner-stone of a monument which it is proposed to erect to the memory of the heroic Jasper, Senator Gordon delivered an oration.

WASHINGTON.

The addition to the national-bank circulation, as shown by the report of the Comptroller of the Currency, has been at the rate of about $[illegible],000,000 a month for [illegible] months past. During September the increase was nearly $[illegible],000.

The Assistant Attorney General for the Postoffice Department declares that letters addressed to lottery companies, or to agents for such companies, are unmailable, per se, and Postmasters should refuse to register letters when so addressed.

The Supreme Court of the United States has resumed its business at Washington with a formidable docket of 821 cases before it, which, it is estimated, will require three years for adjudication, without including new suits that may be added from day to day.

The Treasurer of the United States reports the total amount of standard silver dollars coined at $42,737,750; amount on hand in the treasury offices, $31,703,680; amount outstanding in circulation, $11,054,060....The Treasury Department has arranged with express companies to transport all shipments of fractional silver to parties ordering it at the Government contract rates.

POLITICAL.

Ex-Gov. Tilden, in an interview with a reporter of the Washington Post, says he does not seek and has not sought the nomination for President.

The official returns of the late election in Maine have been published. For Governor, Davis, Republican, received 69,170; Smith, Greenbacker, 48,077; Garcelon, Democrat, 21,841. Davis lacks 808 of a clear majority over all, and therefore fails of being elected by the popular vote. The election of Governor now devolves upon the Legislature, which, being Republican in both houses, will of course elect Davis.

The official returns of the vote for Governor of California show as follows: Glenn, Democrat, 47,562; White, Workingmen, 44,630; Perkins, Republican, 67,073.

The Straight-out (anti-Butler) Democrats of Massachusetts met in convention at Boston, last week, and nominated a full State ticket, headed by John Quincy Adams, Jr., for Governor... The Democrats of Louisiana, in session at New Orleans last week, nominated L. A. Wiltz for Governor. Mr. Wiltz was formerly Mayor of New Orleans, and is now Lieutenant Governor.

An election was held in Colorado on the 7th of October for a Supreme Court Judge and county officers. Beck, the Republican candidate for Judge, was elected by about 4,000 majority....One of the United States Marshals in the South, now in Washington, is authority for the statement that Grant will have a solid delegation from that section of the Union in the next Republican Convention... The Senatorial committee which has been engaged for several weeks in an investigation of the alleged bribery of certain members of the Kansas Legislature at the time Ingalls was re-elected to the Senate, last winter, has adjourned to meet again in Washington in December.

GENERAL.

A woman named Susan Kennedy has been convicted of murder at Montreal, Canada, and sentenced to be hanged Dec. 5....The Cunard steamer Canada, which arrived at New York last week, had on board a precious shipment in the shape of $5,000,000 in gold, for use in the settlement of trade balances between England and the United States....The dwarf minstrel known as "Little Mac" is no more. He died in New York a few days since.

The Canadian authorities have issued an order prohibiting the transportation through, or introduction into, the Provinces of Quebec, Ontario, New Brunswick and Prince Edward's Island, of cattle from the United States. Fears of the introduction of the cattle disease furnish the pretext for this determination.

A Montreal dispatch says quite a commotion was created in that city when it became known that the Grand Jury had brought in true bills against the Directors of the Consolidated Bank, living in that city, Sir Francis Hincks, Messrs. Bickie, Rankin, Grant, McKay, and Ogilvie, and the late manager, J. B. Rennie. The indictments charge them with having made a willfully false statement of the affairs of the bank.

The mystery surrounding the fate of the St. Louis aeronauts, Prof. Wise and George Burr, is as far from solution as ever. A balloon, supposed to be the missing "Pathfinder," was seen, on the night of Sept. 28, to pass over Miller Station, Ind., some thirty miles southeast of Chicago. It was less than a mile away, and appeared, Mr. Faber said, to be sailing in a northeasterly direction very rapidly toward the lake, which is only about half a mile from Miller Station. It was watched for several minutes before it passed out of sight. A day or two after this a balloon was seen sailing high up in the air by people living near Pontiac, Mich., thirty miles northwest of Detroit. Again the mysterious air-vessel was seen to pass over Albion, Mich., on the 9th inst., going southwest rapidly at a great height. Can it be possible that Prof. Wise and his companion, losing control of their air-ship, are sailing wild in the regions of the upper atmosphere?

FOREIGN.

The situation in Syria is alarming. The Arabs have joined the Kurds to oppose Midhat Pasha's reforms, and Turkey has decided to send forty battalions to maintain order. ....London dispatches indicate great uneasiness on the part of the British Government on account of the threatening aspect of the tenant-right and land-reform agitation in Ireland.

There was a big meeting of discontented land tenants at Cork, Ireland, on the 5th inst. Parnell, M. P., the leading spirit in this agitation, boldly counseled physical resistance to the unjust demands of the land-owning aristocracy, and declared that robbery and oppression would prevail in Ireland so long as Englishmen were permitted to rule.

Advices from Afghanistan report that on the 3d of October an attack was made by some Afghans on the British camp at Shutargardan pass. Twenty Afghans were killed and six English soldiers were wounded....Gen. Roberts has been advised by the Ameer not to advance at once on Cabul, lest the Afghans sack Bala-Hissar, but unlimited confidence is not reposed in the Ameer, and the English General will push on.... Dispatches from Europe suggest that commercial considerations were not the chief reasons for the lately formed alliance between Germany and Austria. It is reported that between Austria and Russia there is a breach that is widening daily; that the Czar has sent a special envoy to Emperor William, and that Russia is at the same time mobilizing her armies and reorganizing the Cronstadt navy-yard, and, by secret agents, working up a disaffection towards Germany among the Poles and some other none too willing and loyal subjects of the Emperor William.

Late advices from South America report a rising of Communists at Bucaramanga, in the State of Santander. The Alcalde headed a crowd of ruffians in an attack upon several wealthy establishments, among others the only bank in the place, and completely sacked them, killing and wounding persons who endeavored to defend them, and also burning the buildings. They then retired to the two cuartels, carrying their plunder, and there intrenched themselves, bidding defiance to the authorities of the State. The President of the State organized a force, attacked the robbers in their intrenched position, and completely routed them. He killed several of the leaders and took many prisoners.

Revolting details of the sufferings of the famine-stricken people still come from Cashmere. There is reason to hope that the worst is over, but undoubtedly the relief measures have been miserably mismanaged by the Maharajah and his advisers, and the loss of life has been terrible....A dispatch from Capetown, South Africa, says: "Cetywayo's arrival here had been anxiously expected, and the English colony turned out in force to see the monarch pass. He is an exceptionally fine specimen of the noble savage, big, black, about 50 years of age, standing nearly six feet high. He is well proportioned, has a fully-developed frame, and a good-natured, broad, open face of the Zulu type, quite unlike portraits that have appeared. In Simon's bay he was taken on board the Boadicea. There he saw the soldiers at drill, and expressed wonder and admiration, remarking, 'Oh! I was only born yesterday. I am a mere baby. I never should have fought against such good men as the English, who intended to take away my country and govern it so much better than I could. They shot us to make us Christians. I ask pardon for shooting back at them.'"

The Mark Lane Express' last weekly review of the British wheat market indicates what substantial basis there is for the late advance in prices. The state of the crop which is being harvested is reported most discouraging throughout the United Kingdom. The late rains have had the effect to sprout the grain, and, so far as threshed, the quality generally has proved inferior. The product of France, it is stated, has been rather underestimated, but this is more than counterbalanced by the uncertainty as to whether Russia can be relied on for the supply reckoned upon.

During the progress of a race at Constantine, in Algeria, two stands crowded with spectators fell, injuring seventy people, many of whom will die....A Berlin correspondent announces that if the Russian army is further increased, it is considered that a proportionate increase of the German army will be absolutely and immediately necessary.

Gen. Roberts, in command of the British army, advancing on Cabul, gained an important victory on the 7th of October, near the Afghan capital. The native position was carried, twelve guns captured, and the enemy pursued until nightfall. The loss of the Anglo-Indian troops was eighty killed and wounded.

Terrible Accident at Adrian, Mich.

Adrian, Mich., Oct. 3.

It is hardly possible yet to appreciate fully the extent of the appalling calamity which has fallen on this city and county. The shadow of suffering and death resting on so many homes involves the whole community, and nothing is talked of but the calamity and its victims. The scene in the fair grounds, when the grand stand went crashing to the ground, with its burden of men, women, and children, was one never to be forgotten. Every heart stood still for a moment, and then scores of men rushed to release those lying under the heavy roof and timbers. Nothing that could be done to relieve the wants of the suffering was left undone. The wounded were carried away, and medical attendance secured as quickly as possible. The physicians of the city, and those present from other parts of the country, labored like giants. Men and women vied in rendering aid wherever it was needed. Dry-goods stores gave, without stint, of the material necessary for bandages, while drug-stores for hours resembled a field-hospital in a general engagement, many of the minor wounded flocking thither for attention. The city is in mourning to-day; crape and other insignia of sorrow are displayed from offices, public buildings and every business house. This morning nearly all the stores were closed, out of respect to the memory of those who perished in the disaster.

Street rumors place the number of dead at from fifteen to twenty, but careful inquiry among physicians, undertakers and friends would prove the following to be a correct statement:

J. F. Merick, a German, resident of the Second Ward, 55 years old; died a few minutes after coming out of the ruins.

Mrs. John Hubbard, Jasper; breathed but a few times after being taken out.

David Plumador, Petersburg.

William Mulzer, city; aged 12.

Peter Hyde, city; a boy 12 years of age.

John Johnson, German, whose home is at Attica, Ohio, and who worked for a Dover farmer named Clemerson.

Ashael Henderson, 70 years of age; Plum river, Jo Daviess county, Ill.

Christy Eagen, Manchester; 12 years of age, died during the night.

Henry Hart died at 5 o'clock this morning.

A boy named Willie Hall is reported dead, but not authenticated.

R. R. Hume, Medina; punctured through the lungs, died at the Central House.

Irving Poiners, living in the adjoining town of Madison; died at half-past 3 to-day.

Reuben Ferguson, of Rome; aged 40, died this afternoon.

The number of wounded who have received medical treatment foots up this evening to 224, taking no account of the minor injuries, and those taken to their homes in the country. Over one-half are fractures and dislocations of limbs, and it will not be a matter of surprise if the percentage of deaths should be doubled inside of forty-eight hours. Thirteen out of sixteen members of the band are badly hurt, and their instruments, bought July 4, are irreparably wrecked.

Public attention is now fixed upon the inquest, and the people intend that the responsibility for building such a death-trap shall be properly located.

Public-Debt Statement.

Following is the public-debt statement for Oct. 1:

Six-per-cent. bonds	$283,681,350
Five-per-cent. bonds	508,440,350
Four-and-a-half-per-cent. bonds	250,000,000
Four-per-cent bonds	737,157,050
Refunding certificates	3,688,900
Navy-pension fund	14,000,000
Total coin bonds		$1,796,967,650
Matured debt		29,074,720
Legal tenders	$346,742,496
Certificates of deposit	31,215,000
Fractional currency	15,747,808
Gold and silver certificates	19,189,750
Total without interest		$412,887,679
Total debt		$2,239,480,049
Total interest		22,591,082
Cash in treasury		234,778,679
Debt less cash in the treasury Oct. 1, '79		$2,027,292,452
Decrease during September		2,563,759
Decrease since June 30, 1879		4,808
CURRENT LIABILITIES.
Interest due and unpaid		$4,180,528
Debt on which interest has ceased		29,074,720
Interest thereon		1,858,799
Gold and silver certificates		19,189,750
United States notes held for redemption of certificates of deposit		31,215,000
Cash balance available Oct. 1, 1879		148,997,886
Total		$234,778,679
AVAILABLE ASSETS.
Cash in treasury		$234,778,679
Bonds issued to the Pacific Railroad Companies, interest payable in lawful money—
Principal outstanding		64,623,512
Interest accrued and not yet paid		969,352
Interest paid by the United States		42,712,450
Interest repaid by the transportation of mails, etc.		12,846,480
Balance of interest paid by the United States		30,865,969

Advance in the Price of Paper.

The manufacturers of printing paper have determined upon an important increase in the price of that article. At a meeting held in Chicago, on the 2d inst., attended by representatives of all the leading mills of the Northwest, the price of all-rag print paper was fixed at 7 cents per pound, and of wood and straw print paper at 6½ cents per pound, in car-load lots. Another advance is contemplated on the 1st of December. This advance in price is occasioned by an increase in the demand for paper and a scarcity of rags, the price of the latter article having advanced from $1.75 to $2.25 per cwt within the past thirty days.

A young British officer, fresh from South Africa, says the war was "very exciting—far more so than fox-hunting." He adds: "I flatter myself that I put an end to the career of six promising young Zulus."

Among the presents given a bride in Brunswick, Me., were a pair of old andirons which had been a wedding-present to her great-grandmother.

THE UTE INDIAN WAR.

A Circumstantial Account of the Engagement in Which Maj. Thornburgh Fell, and of the Subsequent Siege and Relief of Capt. Payne's Command—Heroic Bravery of the Troops.

The command of Capt. Payne, which was corraled by the hostile Ute Indians on Milk river, Col., on the 29th of September, and hotly besieged for nearly a week, during which the devoted little band was subjected to an almost incessant rain of bullets, was finally relieved on the 5th of October, by the arrival of Gen. Merritt's command. The account of the battle in which Maj. Thornburgh lost his life, and the subsequent six days' siege, forms one of the most exciting chapters in the annals of Indian warfare, and, although rather lengthy for our limited space, we give it entire. The narrative begins with the date, "Battle-field, Milk River, Oct. 3, 6 p. m.," and proceeds:

The Indians still surround us, and pour in an effective fire from a commanding bluff, at a distance of 500 or 600 yards, having a cross-fire upon our position, which position was chosen hastily on the first day of the fight. All our horses and all but twelve mules have been killed. We sheltered them as best we could, with wagons, but to no purpose.

Capt. Dodge and Lieut. Hughes, with Company D, Ninth (colored) cavalry, came to our rescue yesterday morning at daybreak, after a forced night march of thirty-five miles from Bear river. Cheer upon cheer rent the air from our trenches when it was ascertained who were coming. A lull in the firing enabled them to come in and shelter their horses as well as possible, taking to the fortifications quickly, when the attack redoubled its fury. Had the heights been accessible, Capt. Dodge would have charged them with his company, while we covered him from our rifle-pits, but this was utterly impossible, the ascent being nearly perpendicular. All that we could do during the day was to keep a good lookout from the loop-holes, and return the fire when any Indian showed his head. This, however, was a very rare occurrence, as the Indians have rifle-pits and loop-holes. Before dark every horse but three of Capt. Dodge's command was shot down.

We have been able, at great risk, to haul off our dead animals every night; otherwise the stench would be intolerable.

A sally is made every night for water, a distance of 200 yards from our intrenchments.

The field of battle was admirably chosen for defense by the Indians, and, had it not been for Maj. Thornburgh's advance guard, commanded by Lieut. Cherry, discovering the ambuscade, the entire command would have been annihilated. He saw a small party of Indians disappear over a hill, half a mile in front, and at once divided his party to reconnoiter, and only discovered them when he had flanked their position by about 200 yards. Cherry rode back at full speed, with two or three men who were with him, and notified Maj. Thornburgh, who had already begun the descent into the deep ravine which was intended to ingulf the command.

The Indians were dismounted and lying down along the crest of the high, steep ridge, not 100 yards from the point where the deadly assault would have commenced. The troops were withdrawn a short distance, dismounted, and deployed in line of battle, with orders to await the attack of the Indians. Lieut. Cherry was here ordered by Thornburgh to take a detachment of fifteen picked men, and make a reconnoissance and communicate, if possible, with the Indians, as it was thought that they only desired to oppose his approach to their agency, and would parley, or have a "big talk," if they could be communicated with. Cherry moved out at a gallop with his men from the right flank, and noticed a like movement of about twenty Indians from the left of the Indian position.

He approached to within a couple of hundred yards of the Indians, and took off his hat and waved it, but the response was a shot fired at him, wounding a man of his party and killing his horse. This was the first shot, and was instantly followed by a volley from the Indians.

The work had now begun in real earnest, and, seeing the advantage of the position he held, Cherry dismounted his detachment and deployed along the crest of the hill to prevent the Indians flanking his position, or to cover their retreat, if found necessary to retire upon the wagon-train, which was then coming up slowly, guarded by Lieut. Paddock, of Company D, Fifth cavalry.

Orders were sent to park the wagons and cover them with the company guarding them. The two companies in advance were those of Capt. Payne, Company F, Fifth cavalry, and Capt. Lawson's, Company E, Third cavalry, which were dismounted and deployed as skirmishers, with Capt. Payne on the left and Capt. Lawson on the right. From Cherry's position he could see that the Indians were trying to cut him off from the wagons, and at once he sent word to Maj. Thornburgh, who then withdrew the line slowly, keeping the Indians in check until opposite the point which his men held, when, seeing that the Indians were concentrating to cut off his retreat, Capt. Payne, with Company F, Fifth cavalry, was ordered to charge the hill, which he did in gallant style, his horse being shot under him and several of his men wounded.

The Indians having been driven from this point, the company was rallied on the wagon-train. Maj. Thornburgh then gave orders to Cherry to hold his position and cover Capt. Lawson's retreat, who was ordered to fall back slowly with the led horses of his company. Cherry called for volunteers of twenty men, who responded promptly. They fought with desperation, as nearly every man was wounded before he reached the camp, and two men were killed.

Maj. Thornburgh started back to the wagon-train, after giving his final orders to Capt. Payne to charge the hill, and to Capt. Lawson and Lieut. Cherry to cover the retreat. He must have been shot dead when barely half-way there, as his body was seen by one of Capt. Lawson's men, with life extinct and lying on his face.

Capt. Payne, then in command, at once set about having the wounded horses shot to make breastworks, dismantling the wagons of boxes, bundles of bedding, corn and flour sacks, which were quickly piled up for fortifications. Picks and spades were used vigorously for digging intrenchments.

Meantime a galling fire was concentrated upon the command from all the surrounding bluffs which commanded the position. Not an Indian could be seen, but the incessant crack of their Sharp's and Winchester rifles dealt fearful destruction among the horses and men. The groans of the dying and the agonizing cries of the wounded told what fearful havoc was being made among the determined and desperate command. Every man was determined to sell his life as dearly as possible.

About this time a great danger was approaching at a frightfully rapid pace. The red devils, at the beginning of the fight, had set fire to the dry grass and to the sage-brush to the windward of our position, and it now came sweeping down toward us, the flames leaping high into the air, and immense volumes of smoke rolling on to ingulf us. It was a sight to make the stoutest heart quail, and the fiends were waiting, ready to give us a volley as soon as we were driven from our shelter. Now it reaches our flank, and blankets, blouses and empty sacks were freely used to extinguish the flames. Some of the wagons were set on fire, which required all the force possible to smother it. No water can be obtained and the smoke is suffocating, but the fire passes and we hold our position. Meantime, a constant volley is poured upon us, Capt. Payne being wounded for the second time, and First Sergt. Dolan, of Company F, killed instantly. McKinstry and McKee were killed and many others wounded. Our greatest danger now is past. The men have now mostly covered themselves, but the poor horses and mules are constantly falling about us.

Just about sundown a charge was attempted, but repulsed, the Indians trying to drive off some of our horses which had broken loose.

The attack ceased at dark, and soon every man was at work enlarging the trenches, hauling out the dead horses, caring for the wounded, and burying the dead.

At daylight the attack was resumed, and the firing of the sharpshooters has been kept up every day since, and occasionally at night, sending us to our pits in a scramble.

This is the fifth day of our siege, but we are determined to hold out, if it takes a month for succor to reach us. But we are confident that Gen. Merritt, whose name is upon the lips of every one, is on the road [illegible] us.

THE KILLED.

The names of the killed and wounded are as follows:

Maj. Thornburgh, Fourth infantry.

First Sergeant John Dolan, Company F, Fifth cavalry.

Private John Burns, Company F, Fifth cavalry.

Michael Firestone, Company F, Fifth cavalry.

Samuel McKee, Company F, Fifth cavalry.

Amos D. Miller, Company F, Fifth cavalry.

Thomas Mooney, Company D, Fifth cavalry.

Michael Lynch, Company D, Fifth cavalry.

Charles Wright, Company D, Fifth cavalry.

Dominick Cuff, Company E, Third cavalry.

Wagonmaster McKinstry.

Teamster McGuire.

THE WOUNDED.

Capt. Payne, Fifth cavalry; slightly in the arm and side.

Lieut. Paddock, Fifth cavalry; flesh wound in the hip.

Dr. Grimes; flesh wound in the shoulder.

Company F, Fifth cavalry—Sergt. John Merrill, Trumpeter Fred Sutcliffe, Trumpeter John McDonald; Privates James T. Gibbs, John Hoaney, Emil Kussman, Eugene Patterson, Frank Simmons, Eugene Schickedonz, William Esser, Gottlieb Steiger.

Company D, Fifth cavalry—Privates Nicholas Heeney, Thomas Lynch, Fred Bernhard, E. Mullen.

Company E, Third cavalry—Sergt. James Montgomery, Sergt. Allen Lupton, Corporals C. F. Eichwurzel, Frank Hunter; Privates Jas. Conway, John Crowley, W. H. Clark, Orland Durand, Thomas Ferguson, Thomas Lewis, Edward Lavelle, Willard Mitchell, John Mahoney, James Patterson, William Schubert, Thos. Macnamara, Marcus Hansen, Joseph Budka, John Donovan.

Teamsters Thomas Cain, —— Nelson.

Guide Lowery.

With the exception of the wound of Guide Lowery, the wounds of the above-named men are not serious. His is probably mortal.

Total killed, 12; total wounded, 43.

Oct. 4—1 p. m.—No courier could be gotten off last night, owing to the constant firing of the Indians into the camp. The moon came up an hour after dark, and a volley was poured in at once. Our party who went after water was unmolested, and we had our little stockade all cleared for action before the firing was resumed. As I write this dispatch the bullets are whistling over the top of the trench. They often strike the grain sacks, a few inches above our heads, but we are deep enough to be comparatively safe.

A soldier of Gen. Merritt's command sends a later report, in which he says: "Oh, what a happy crowd Payne's command was when Merritt reached them! The sight of the Fifth cavalry entering under Gen. Merritt and Col. Compton was a grand one. The poor fellows in the intrenchments at first probably thought we were Indians. We were immediately challenged by a sentinel, and in reply answered that we were friends. Gen. Merritt caused the trumpet to sound the officers' call, and at its end three big cheers rent the air. They were relieved at last. The sight was one of the most affecting I have ever seen, and brave men shed tears. There is a horrible stench all around. Wounded men are hobbling in every direction. One hundred and fifty dead horses, lying thirty feet from the intrenchments, present a horrible spectacle.

A report comes from White River Agency to the effect that Agent Meeker and all the men at the agency were murdered, while the women and children were spared, and were under the protection of Chief Douglass.

Cheyenne, Oct. 10.

From private advices it is learned that Gen. Merritt had no fight before reaching Payne's command. After daybreak on Sunday, Gen. Merritt, Lieut. Cherry, and M company, went out to look at the battlefield where Maj. Thornburgh was killed, and which is a mile from the intrenchments. The Indians, who were concealed in the rocks beyond, opened fire, and a new battle began, which lasted about an hour. It was hot, short, and decisive, ending in favor of the troops, because they were protected by bluffs. The Indians then held up a flag of truce and came in to hold a parley. They proposed to surrender on certain conditions, which Gen. Merritt could not accept. They asked him if he insisted upon going to White River Agency, and, replying that he did, they told him they would have to renew the war. They then retired to their stronghold. In the conflict one private was slightly wounded and four horses killed. Eight Indians were killed. During the parley the Indians, who were part of Jack's band, stated that thirty-seven of their number had been killed during the five days' siege of Capt. Payne's intrenchment.

It was also discovered from them that they were fortifying the road to the White River agency, so as to obstruct the passage of the troops. As the country is very mountainous, and the roads lead through canyons, they will be able to trouble Gen. Merritt considerably.

At the time the letter was written, giving these advices, Gen. Merritt had not determined upon a time for resuming the march for White river, further than that he should do so as soon as the men and horses were sufficiently rested.

From the Bannock Agency, near Camp Brown, Wyoming Territory, comes the news that 100 families of Utes, accompanied by only two old bucks, have arrived at the agency. This fact shows that the Utes are expecting to have a lengthy conflict. It also demonstrates the shrewdness of the Utes, who compel their enemies to feed and protect their families. Furthermore, it bears out the impression that the hostile Utes do not number over 150 bucks.

Daring Train Robbery.

A bold and successful train robbery was perpetrated on the evening of the 7th inst., at Glendale, a small station on the Chicago and Alton railroad only fifteen miles from Kansas City, by a party of twelve bushwhackers. Particulars of the crime are given as follows by a correspondent: The night express of the Chicago and Alton, which left Kansas City at 6 o'clock this evening, bound for Chicago and St. Louis, met with a thrilling adventure soon after its wheels had commenced to tell off the miles across the fields and forests of Missouri. The country for many miles this side of Kansas City has a noted history as having been for many years the abode of bands of desperadoes and robbers. Between Independence and the town of Blue Springs, and about twenty miles from Kansas City, is the village of Glendale, which consists of a water-tank, a small station-house and a few dwellings. These nestle in the dark shadows of a hollow—a dismal and forlorn place. About 7 this evening, a few minutes before the express train from Kansas City was due, twelve masked men entered the station and took possession, enforcing strict obedience with wicked-looking revolvers and other weapons. Mr. W. E. Bridges, Assistant Auditor of the road, was in the office, with Agent McIntire. The robbers ordered them to throw up their hands, which they did at once. They then relieved them of all of their effects, and took what they chose of the contents of the office. They then placed them under guard and demolished the telegraph instruments. Having done this they cut the wires outside the office. They then awaited the arrival of the express. Soon the train arrived, and the engine stopped at the tank, and the masked men took possession of the train. Three men, climbing into the express car, ordered the startled messenger to surrender and deliver his keys to them. When he manifested a disposition to defend the property of the company, he was struck on the head with the butt of a heavy revolver and knocked down and overpowered. The robbers seized his keys and took packages estimated to contain about $35,000 in currency from the safe. Meantime the rest stood guard, offering no violence, and not disturbing the passengers.

They immediately went away, mounting horses and scattering, while the train departed for the east. The whole affair occupied less than five minutes. When the train reached Blue Springs the facts were reported. Soon after a special train was ordered to take a heavy force of men from Kansas City to Glendale, and in a few minutes they were in hot pursuit. The leader of the gang, a tall man with a heavy sandy beard, has been seen several times lately in the vicinity of Glendale.

FIGHTING EDITORS.

Street-Fight Between Two London Journalists.

The city of London has had a sensation of small proportions, caused by the unusual spectacle of a street encounter between two well-known journalists, one of the parties to the melee being Mr. Henry Labouchere, editor and proprietor of the society journal called the Truth, and the other Mr. Edward Levy Lawson, editor and part proprietor of the popular Daily Telegraph. The editor of Truth gives the following amusing account of the fistic battle:

"Between 11 and 12 on Monday night, I was in King William street, Strand, standing in the middle of the roadway to hail a hansom cab, when I suddenly felt a blow that seriously damaged my hat, and ultimately fell on my cranium. At first I thought that a blow had been aimed at me by the cab-driver, for the night was so dark that it was difficult to distinguish objects clearly; but, on looking round, I perceived a stout hand flourishing a stick, and performing a sort of war-dance. I naturally imagined it was some lunatic running amuck through the streets, and, not feeling disposed to have the small modicum of brain with which nature provided me completely staved in, I at once closed with my antagonist, and we began pummeling and cuffing each other after the simple but somewhat ineffective mode of those who have not made a study of the noble art of pugilism. Of course a crowd collected and tried to interfere and separate us; and it was only then that I discovered that I was engaged in single combat with the editor of the Daily Telegraph. 'You have insulted me,' he shouted; 'you have insulted my family, and you have insulted my uncle.' The crowd was for the most part delighted at being privileged to witness a row—a real row—between two persons decently dressed. But others, regarding the matter as disreputable, surged in between us. The fair sex was represented by a nymph, who hung first on my arm, then on that of the eminent editor, and cried, 'My dears, don't go a-fighting like this, or you'll hurt yourselves.' The warlike element was embodied in a stalwart rough, with a pipe in his mouth, who scornfully observed: 'They hurt themselves! They don't know how to.' My antagonist then walked down the street, and I followed. 'Don't follow me,' he cried. 'I have as much right to the street as you,' I modestly remarked, and finally, much to the disgust of the crowd, we retired into a neighboring house. Whether Edward Levy Lawson was drunk or sober I do not know, but it would appear that my determination to inform the public who and what is the 'we' who daily vilifies the most prominent Liberals in the country, and terms them traitors because they venture to question the policy of the Government of which the 'we' is a henchman, has aroused the ire of the aforesaid Edward Levy Lawson."

Mrs. Hemans.

At 7 years old, an age when most girls' ideas are limited to dolls, romps and new frocks, Felicia's delight in the bright summer days, was to climb up into an old apple tree with a volume of Shakspeare in her hand, and lose herself in a world of imagination, among the Rosalinds, Imogens and Beatrices. All that was strange, weird and romantic had an irresistible fascination for her. Gwrych, as every respectable old mansion should, had its specter, and on moonlight nights the child, all trembling yet eager, would creep out into the long, dark avenue, fearing, yet hoping, to get a sight of the goblin. At other times, when she was supposed to be in bed, she would rise, dress herself, and steal out of the house down to the sea-shore to listen to the moaning of the waves, and to indulge in a twilight bath. She was never sent to school; her education was purely desultory; all the world of poetry was thrown open to her; but from systematic studies, beyond French, English grammar and the rudiments of Latin, she was wholly exempted. At 7 she began to compose verses, and at 14 a volume of these was published.—The Argosy.

Pork packers of Chicago require 25,000,000 feet of lumber this year in the shape of boxes.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$8 25	@	10 00
Hogs	3 70	@	4 10
Cotton	10½	@	10¾
Flour—Superfine	5 10	@	5 60
Wheat—No. 2	1 26	@	1 27½
Corn—Western Mixed	55	@	56
Oats—Mixed	38	@	39
Rye—Western	81	@	82
Pork—Mess	9 60	@	9 75
Lard	6½	@	6¾
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 50	@	5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 10	@	3 25
Medium to Fair	3 75	@	4 00
Hogs	2 80	@	3 30
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	6 00	@	6 50
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 00	@	5 50
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	1 10	@	1 11
No. 3 Spring	1 04	@	1 05
Corn—No. 2	38	@	39
Oats—No. 2	28	@	29
Rye—No. 2	64	@	65
Barley—No. 2	75	@	76
Butter—Choice Creamery	24	@	26
Eggs—Fresh	14	@	14½
Pork—Mess	10 40	@	10 50
Lard	6¼	@	6½
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	1 11½	@	1 12½
No. 2	1 10	@	1 11
Corn—No. 2	38	@	39
Oats—No. 2	28	@	29
Rye—No. 1	66	@	67
Barley—No. 2	70	@	71
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red Fall	1 17	@	1 18
Corn—Mixed	36	@	37
Oats—No. 2	25	@	27
Rye	68	@	69
Pork—Mess	10 50	@	10 70
Lard	6	@	6¼
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	1 17	@	1 20
Corn	42	@	43
Oats	31	@	33
Rye	72	@	73
Pork—Mess	9 90	@	10 00
Lard	6	@	6¼
TOLEDO.
Wheat—Amber Michigan	1 21	@	1 22
No. 2 Red	1 21½	@	1 22½
Corn—No. 2	42	@	43
Oats—No. 2	31	@	32
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	5 50	@	6 75
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 23	@	1 24
No. 1 Amber	1 17	@	1 18
Corn—No. 1	45	@	46
Oats—Mixed	30	@	31
Barley (per cental)	1 15	@	1 40
Pork—Mess	10 50	@	10 75
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	5 00	@	5 25
Fair	4 10	@	4 60
Common	3 20	@	4 00
Hogs	3 45	@	4 10
Sheep	3 00	@	4 15

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED, ROB. J. LOWRY, } Editors.

SPEECH
OF
HON. THOS. A. HENDRICKS,
OF INDIANA.

Delivered at Eaton, Ohio.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: I need not remind you that during the years following the close of the war your minds were disturbed by the most profound anxiety for the public welfare. There was no more work for the sword. Overcome and disbanded, the troops of the South had returned to their homes. Acquiescence in Federal authority was complete and universal. Yet you feared that the reconciliation might not be thorough and perpetual; that dangerous causes of alienation might still remain. But you were compelled, and perhaps content, to trust—as you did trust—the possibility of fraternity and union to the wisdom of public policies, and to the good sense and patriotism of the people; and, notwithstanding the follies and crimes of some, and the wicked demagogism of others, arousing dangerous passions that were sleeping, I feel assured that your reliance upon yourselves and your fellow-countrymen will not fail you, but that fraternity and union will grow with the growth and strengthen with the strength of the country.

You were also solicitous for our material welfare, because of the exhaustion caused by and following the tremendous struggle. The production of our important and great staples could not be maintained in quantities sufficient to meet the demands upon our resources. Our embarrassment and the hindrance to production were greatly augmented by the unfortunate policy of reconstruction, whereby for awhile the relation of the States to the Federal Union were confused and confounded, and the white and black races were involved in distrust, hatred, and strife. The mad policy and passions of the times excluded capital from an entire section of the country, and disturbed labor in its employment. The direct, the inevitable, consequence was that our foreign trade was heavily against us. May I state the facts as an illustration? During the two years and eleven months from July 1, 1865, to May 31, 1868, our imports, valued in our own currency, amounted to $1,507,449,065, and our exports, under the same valuation, amounted to $1,411,-189,195. During that period of two years and eleven months, after the close of the war, our purchases exceeded our sales abroad by the enormous sum of $186,000,000.

I suppose that balance against us was met largely by sales of our public securities abroad, but, during that same period, we exported over and above our imports of gold and silver $183,077,691. I then thought, and so expressed the opinion, that our future prosperity must depend upon an increase of production and more advantageous foreign trade; that, when our sales should exceed our purchases abroad, our financial difficulties would rapidly disappear, and we would soon stand upon a specie basis, and that to such end we wanted peace, reconciliation, and harmony. I thought, and said that a statesmanship worthy this country and adequate to the necessities of our condition would seek every opportunity to foster and increase the production of the staples that command foreign markets. And I ventured the opinion that "an increase of 20 per cent. would turn the balance of trade in our favor, and the current of gold toward our own shores, and contribute more than any enactment of Congress to an early resumption of specie payment." I need not remind you, for it cannot be effaced from your memories, that no beneficent change in policy or administration took place, but that in 1869 and thence to 1873 and 1874 the sympathies of the administration and the policies of Congress were altogether favorable to those who least needed favor, and hard upon the masses, who have the burdens to carry. The changes in the public contracts were such as made the obligations harder and the burdens heavier, save only the provision for a reduction of interest.

Favoritism, extravagance and corruption pervaded and poisoned the public service, and went unrebuked and unchecked. Unnecessary and extravagant expenditures burdened the people with oppressive taxes, and withdrew large volumes of currency from the channels of trade, and added to the evils of contraction. Finally, in the fall of 1873, the evils of vicious administration and of unequal and unfair legislation culminated in a financial panic and disaster that struck and paralyzed all the business pursuits and useful enterprises of the country. At once the people realized the extent and magnitude of the calamity. They abandoned faith and hope in the Republican party, and trusted to themselves for the recovery of lost prosperity. Promptly and earnestly the work was undertaken. Eighteen hundred and seventy-four became a memorable year. A Democratic House was chosen, charged with the duty of retrenchment and reform. In every household an economy was adopted more rigid than ever before known. Labor was active and diligent to the utmost extent of possible employment. The results are now seen and realized. Individual economy, practiced everywhere throughout the country, had the effect to reduce our purchases abroad as follows: From 1873 to 1874 the reduction was $74,729,868; from 1874 to 1875 it was $34,400,906; from 1875 to 1876, $72,264,245; from 1876 to 1877, $9,418,065, and from 1877 to 1878 the reduction was $14,-271,594. The economy of the people in 1878 as compared with 1873, in the consumption of foreign goods, was about $200,000,000.

During the same period the diligent industry of the people so increased our agricultural productions, and such was the condition of the foreign market, that our exports for sale abroad in 1878 were $172,369,139 more than in 1873, and in the year 1878 our exports of merchandise exceeded our imports by the sum of $257,-796,964. It is a striking fact that in 1873, the year before the Democratic House was chosen, our purchases exceeded our sales abroad by $119,656,289, and that after three years of Democratic control of the House the figures were reversed, and, as I have said, the exports in the year 1878 exceeded the imports by $257,-793,964. The balances against us in 1872 marked the increase of our indebtedness, and the figures of 1878 indicated its reduction.

The effect of the favorable condition of our foreign trade upon our supply of gold and silver is shown in the fact that in 1873 the export of specie exceeded its import by the sum of $63,127,637, and that in 1878 the excess was only $3,911,911. Our favorable foreign trade has not only turned the current of specie toward our shores, but it has caused the return of large volumes of public securities that had gone abroad to meet the balances when they were against us, thus reducing the export of gold to meet the accruing interest. The effect of a foreign trade during the past five years, favorable to us beyond all precedent, and brought about by the economy and diligent industry of the people, has been to increase our supply of gold and silver and to make it permanent and reliable, and to make the resumption of specie payments a possibility.

Mr. Sherman claims for himself the credit of resumption, and that the policies of his party have given us assurances of better times. I have made a summary of events that passed within your own observation to aid you in passing upon the fallacy of that claim. What had he or his party to do with resumption? How have they contributed to a return of prosperity? In the winter of 1875 Mr. Sherman, as the representative of a party caucus, reported and urged the Resumption bill. It became a law by the vote of all the Republicans, and over the vote against it of all the Democrats in Congress. Who now claims for that measure that it facilitated resumption or in any degree alleviated the calamities of hard times, or that its tendency was to place the business of the country upon a firmer and surer foundation? Is any man so credulous as to believe that resumption, permanent and reliable, could rest upon borrowed gold? "Public confidence and financial stability cannot be made to rest upon borrowed gold." When trade and commerce gave assurance that the supply of the precious metals was permanent and would constantly increase, then confidence became established and the paper currency took its place by the side of gold and silver.

You all now know that resumption has come of trade and commerce, the result of foreign balances in our favor, and not at all because of any Congressional declaration or requirement. The resumption clause was properly denounced by the St. Louis Convention as a hindrance to resumption. It was as well a hindrance to prosperity. It was a terror to capital, and stood in the way of the employment of labor. Our money, paper and coin, is now of equal value and readily convertible, and we indulge the hope of better times in spite of the Resumption law and of its kindred party devices. All along the pathway of that measure are strewn broken fortunes and ruined enterprises.

Do you believe our country needed to have been the scene of a financial and commercial panic? Our lands are rich, our people intelligent and industrious, and the world's markets have been open to our products. Yet the panic did come; and its continued and terrible hold upon the country for the long period of five years, in spite of the great effort of the people, showed that its causes were to be found down deep in bad public policies and in maladministration. I may not state what sufferings it inflicted, nor what hopes of happiness lie buried amid its ruins. May I give you an illustration? When the war was over, was it not a most obvious duty to reduce the public expenditures by a rigid economy? It was not done. From 1865 to 1875 the expenditures continued enormous and extravagant. Then the Democrats came into power in the House, and at once established the fact that the public service could as well and efficiently be administered with an annual reduction of $30,000,000.

At their first session, that was the reduction. Now, please tell me, had that reduction been commenced in 1865, and continued for eight years, and until 1875; had $30,000,000 of the taxes been left uncollected, to circulate in the channels of trade, giving life and energy to business and commerce, do you believe there would have been a panic and such financial disaster as covered the land with ruin? Reform in that one particular would have saved us.

Mr. Sherman tells you that prosperity is now coming, and that he is its author. You and I are, then, mistaken in supposing that economy on the part of the people reduced the purchases abroad. It was not the diligent labor of the people, the rich lands, the abundant rains in their season, and the great crops that enabled us to supply the extraordinary foreign demand, such a demand, indeed, as we never knew before. Mr. Sherman did it. It was his tears of sympathy over the sufferings of the people, and not the rains falling from the clouds, that moistened the earth and caused it to yield so abundantly. Never was claim made so bold and brazen, and yet so false. To him and his party we reply: You squandered the public money; you continued extravagant appropriations; you hindered production by promoting the strife of sections and the hatred of races; you legislated for favorite interests and against the people; and now, when the rigid economy and diligent industry of the people, and propitious seasons, and a favorable condition of the foreign market, combine to give us better times, and to gladden us with the hope of returning prosperity, you can not claim merit or support. The equality and convertibility of our currency is in spite of the hindrances of the Resumption law, and we cherish the hope of better times, in spite of the evil influences of bad policies and maladministration.

The great difference between us was that we insisted upon reaching specie payments by an increase of the precious metals, and you by a reduction of the paper money—by contraction. You provided for your policy in the Resumption act, in violation of the pledge made to the country in the act of June previous, that the legal-tender notes should not be reduced below $382,000,000. Under your policy resumption was impossible short of universal ruin, for contraction injured production.

It was a Democratic demand that remonetized silver and provided for its coinage. It was a Democratic House that modified the Resumption law and stopped contraction by the act of May 31, 1878, which forbade the Secretary of the Treasury to cancel or retire any more of the legal-tender notes, and required him to keep them in circulation. The remonetization of silver (over a foolish veto), and the protection of the legal-tender circulation, and our immense crops North and South, and the great demand abroad have brought all classes of the currency to par and give promise of returning prosperity.

The contest in which you are engaged is characterized by reckless accusation. Why charge the Ohio Democracy with a purpose to inflate, and depreciate the currency? They have been and still are opposed to contraction. Is that inflation? They demand that treasury notes shall take the place of national-bank currency. For that do you dare attribute to them a purpose to issue bad money? Is it the banker that gives credit and character to the bank bills? Nay, you know it is the Government's obligations pledged as security that gives them favor and currency everywhere. That security withdrawn, the bills become as worthless as falling leaves of autumn. Is the security less if the issue and the promise be direct from the public treasury, and not through the medium of banks? Have the bank bills not been always at par—neither above nor below the treasury notes, and that only because they were redeemable in treasury notes? The demand for treasury notes as a substitute for the national-bank notes is a demand for money always and everywhere of equal value. But please observe that in the platform in which this policy is asserted the Ohio Democracy demand that the issue of treasury notes shall be regulated by legislation or constitutional provision, so as to secure the greatest possible stability of values. Can you find no good motive for the support of this policy? In deciding upon its merits is it not to be considered that in any possible view the substitution will save to the people and their treasury over $10,000,000 every year? And you and I cannot be indifferent to the fact that the enormous wealth brought by the national banks under harmonious management now seeks to control the politics of the country in defiance of the will of the people. Please tell me how it was that in this State, but one year ago, the Chairman of the Republican State Committee did venture to demand of the banks money to control the election.

Is it not enough that enormous sums of money are raised for each election by the detestable practice of taxing the immense army of officials? Must there be added contributions from the profits made upon $400,000,000 of bank capital? When these two streams unite to corrupt public morals, the party in power will be secure in its hold upon the patronage and treasury of the nation. It need not then again resort to returning boards, and the attendant crimes of perjury and forgery. The anxiety of the Ohio Democracy was reasonable; it became a patriotic sentiment when here, and against themselves, the banks were called upon for money. Who blames them that in such a crisis they bend the ear to the teachings of Jackson and heed his admonition to guard well the rights and liberties of the people when the banker is found in league with the partisan? His admonition was the expression of anxiety at a consolidation of wealth inconsiderable as compared with the enormous millions now under harmonious management.

What say you to the cry: "A solid North against a solid South?" Is it not the cry of hatred, of separation, of treason? It should startle us as a "fire-bell in the night."

None should utter it who love a united country better than partisan rule. Leave that cry, my countrymen, to those who seek wicked gains, and who for gain would barter the love of country. Party policy made the attitude of the South inevitable. You Republicans would despise the men of the South did they not resist you. You established and sought to maintain over them the worst Government in the world. You first taught the colored men to distrust and hate them, and then to rule them. You gave the ballot to the colored men and took it from the whites. And you placed the colored people themselves under the control and management of adventurers. Thus the control of public affairs came into the hands of bad men, who were in no way identified with the people or section, and were strangers in sympathy and purpose. The public good ceased to be the object and purpose of government. Plunder of the people reigned supreme. The increase of State indebtedness became frightful. Taxation threatened to swallow up not only the earnings but the accumulations of the people. Men contemplated approaching ruin with horror. At length large bodies of colored voters turned against the demoralization and misrule, and State after State was recovered, reclaimed, restored. The reorganization of the Democratic party in those States became indispensable to the recovery and protection of popular rights, the security of property, and the welfare of labor. Political union for protection and safety against plunder and ruin made the South a political unit, and at once the price of wages and the price of lands advanced, and valuable productions increased. Is there any man among you whose hatred toward the South is so malignant that he would tear down the present authority and restore the vampire Governments of ten years ago?

Your fears and prejudices are now addressed because of the character of the representation in Congress from the South. You are told that in a large degree it is made up of Brigadiers from the Southern army. Is that disagreeable to you? Then perhaps you will find comfort in the fact that the evil will decrease as the years roll by. The older men will pass away, but I dare not say that the young men who will take their places will be more agreeable to you. I think they will not be. But the offense to you is not that they were Brigadiers. It is only that they are Democrats, and stand in the way of the partial and unfair purposes of your party. You know this to be true. It does not offend you that Brigadiers are now in the Cabinet, in the Federal courts and in high offices of Government. They are of your party, and you are content. But if there be an evil of which you have a right to complain in this matter, it is found in the constitution itself. Yes, back of that—in the principle of popular representation. It is because under the constitution each State shall choose its own Senators, and each district shall select its own Representative that we find the houses of Congress constituted as they are.

If we are to have a free republic, then each State and district must be absolutely free in its choice, and without any restraint whatever. Will you men of Ohio allow New England, or the Gulf States of the Pacific slope, to question your elections? Because your delegation in Congress may be unfriendly to some measure greatly desired by one of those sections, are you to be called to account? Shall it be regarded as a cause of offense, or as a ground of antagonism against you? Because Ohio will not support what she believes to be a heresy in doctrine, or a corruption in measure, can another State, or section, in the spirit of our Union, assume a hostile attitude toward her? As you are true Union men, answer me that question.

For four years the Democrats have had a majority in the House, and you say that the South has controlled that majority, and therefore you will array the sections in hostility. The step you propose is too responsible. You cannot take it. It is toward renewed strife and disunion. Let me assure you that you have been misled; that the Democrats North and South constitute one party, and that within the organization neither section dominates the other. But please tell me to what do you object? What measures has the House adopted that were partial toward the South or unfair toward the North? The payment of Southern claims, that had grown into a giant evil and national fraud, has been checked and almost entirely suspended.

The public expenditures have been reduced, so that the saving in the four years of Democratic control, as compared with the prior four years, exceeds $100,000,000. The saving to the State of Ohio is nearly $7,000,000, and to each Congressional district nearly $350,000. The saving each year has been more than the average annual expenditures during the administrations of Adams and Jackson. What does the reduction of $30,000,000 in the yearly appropriations by Congress signify? It means that in the public expenditures there shall be economy and honesty. It means that that much money shall not be collected from the people, but shall be left in the channels of trade and commerce, there to stimulate business and enterprise, and to give employment to labor. Will you bear in mind that these great reductions have been made over the opposition of a Republican Senate and administration?

A Republican House demonetized silver; a Democratic House restored it. The silver money now flows into the channels of trade and commerce, and, like red blood in the veins and arteries, gives life and strength.

For a while there was the curse in the Federal courts of juries organized for partisan verdicts. That was through the law permitting the test oath. A Democratic Congress repealed the law, and now the juries may be of "good and true men."

Of these four leading and important acts, do you condemn either? Would you again open the doors of the treasury to trumped-up war claims, in favor of trumped-up loyalty? Would you drive honest economy out of our temple of legislation and restore extravagance and the waste of $30,000,000 each year beyond the needs of the public service? Would you degrade silver again and declare it no money? And would you again humiliate and degrade the juror, compelling him to stand among his fellows with stooped head as he takes the test-oath? If you would not reverse any one of these great acts, I demand your approval, and that in respect to them you say to the Democrats in Congress, from both North and South, "well done."

We want the troops taken and kept away from the polls. We want the elections to be free and fair, and without the corrupt influence of Deputy Marshals and Supervisors. In the name of fair play we demand it. The Federal election laws were adopted as party machinery. They serve no good purpose. Their only design is to keep the party in power. Do you know what occurred at Philadelphia at the last Presidential election? That city is under absolute Republican control, and is known far and wide for the corruption that rules the elections. I believe the courts, prior to the last Presidential election, struck off above 20,000 names from the register of voters, upon evidence that they were false and fraudulent. It was not enough that the city was under party control. Resort was had to the party advantages under the election laws. Seven hundred and seventy-three Deputy Marshals, and 3,232 Supervisors were appointed, at a cost of $41,170. The city was peaceful and quiet. Why, then, were four regiments of party brigands placed in rule over the people when they went to vote? The Republican Marshal of that district, under oath, said they were not needed to secure a fair and free election. The outrage, under the pretense of law, was far greater in New York. The vilest characters were appointed Marshals and Supervisors. Thousands of voters were arrested for no crime and without warrants. Fright and terror prevailed, and large numbers of voters were thus kept from the polls. Do you desire this to be continued? For party advantage do you ask that our elections, heretofore free, shall be placed under such partisan machinery? Are the people, in going to vote, to be placed under fear of unlawful arrests? Shall clubs be held over our heads as we vote? The free American voter is a noble spectacle. Erect, bold, unterrified, he exercises the right of a freeman, and the power of a sovereign. When he shall be made to crawl in the presence of Supervisors and overseers, the end has come to that liberty of which we have been so proud.

I said we demand that the troops be taken and kept from the polls. I would rather die with the ballot in my hand than that one of them should strike me with his sword. Let us be at least as free as the subjects of Queen Victoria. Popular rights have advanced slowly in England, but surely, and have never been pushed backward. So, when it was settled that the trooper should not lord the voter; should not strike him nor jostle him, nor even stand in sight of him when voting, it was settled forever.

The legislation that provides for the use of the troops at the elections is a blot upon our record that must be effaced. At the called session of Congress the Democrats labored faithfully to remove every hindrance and obstruction in the way of free and fair elections. They were opposed at every step. They passed the bills. The President resorted to the extraordinary power of the veto to save the party machinery. On what side of the issue do you stand? For or against free elections? Do you not enjoy the sight when the men of the neighborhood are assembled at the polls? All are there—old friends and new friends; old men and young men; some to cast their first and some their last ballot. They argue and debate; they joke and laugh. It is election day, and that revives old memories, and many a story of the early settlement is told. Some old gentlemen are telling about their first votes, that they were cast for Jackson. Just then a smooth-faced lad offers his vote and it is challenged. The debate and the story stop. All attention is given to the question of the vote. The old men consult. They compare their recollections—when the parents were married and the child was born. Some are very positive, for he went to school with their own boys. It is soon settled, and the right decided. And so the day goes on until in the evening the window is shut down upon the ambition of all the candidates. Upon such elections, and upon such men our institutions must rest. At the next election a shadow is over the scene. The Deputy Marshal and the Supervisor are there as the paid agents and bull dozers for the party. Why are they arresting men and dragging them away without warrants? No crime has been committed and there is no disturbance. It is to excite fear, and thereby keep men from voting. The law of force and violence has taken the place of local self-government. Good cheer and confidence among the neighbors is gone. Anxiety, distrust, and hatred have taken their place.

Do you justify the vetoes? The bills were carefully considered by Congress, and, after great deliberation, were passed. They involved no question of constitutional power on the part of Congress. For nearly 100 years the elections had been free from Federal supervision. It was not questioned that Congress had the power to repeal the offensive laws. It was a question of judgment and discretion, and that question Congress decided by the repeal. Such legislative discretion belongs to Congress and not to the President. The veto power was given not to defeat and destroy, but to protect and preserve; to preserve the constitution from invasion, and to protect the rights and powers of the Executive from legislative encroachment. "It is not a sword, but a shield." The men have taught us this who made the constitution. And it is in accordance with usage almost uniform. I think the people of this country will never consent that the President may defeat the popular will as expressed by Congress, merely because it does not agree with his individual wish and preference. It would enable him to stand in the way of all reforms, and to defeat wholesome regulations of the public service.

It is intolerable that the will of one man may defeat the will of the majority of Congress, upon a question of judgment and discretion. And it becomes indecent and an outrage upon public rights, when the power is exercised to continue party machinery that is used to defeat free and fair elections.

Coming in as the present Executive did, it would seem that he should wear the robes of office modestly. He and his countrymen know that he was not elected. Full 300,000 majority of the popular vote was against him, and a decided majority of the electors duly chosen. In his promotion, by agents and agencies the most detestable, the rights of the people were deded and trampled under foot. Must that be followed by the repeated defeat of the will of the people in the exercise of the veto? On what side will you stand? I appeal to you stand for free legislation, and against such an abuse of a constitutional power; to stand for free and fair elections, and against all party supervision for corrupt ends.

My countrymen, are you prepared for a material change in our system of government? We are in the habit of speaking of it as the best Government in the world. Our fathers lived under it and were prosperous and happy. Under it we have grown to be a numerous, rich and powerful people. A large class of partisans are now dissatisfied with it. They want a stronger government. I suppose that is a general tendency. It was so with the Jews when they asked a King. The proposition to change our institutions fills me with great anxiety. I do not want to see the States broken down. I fear for our liberties when all the powers of Government shall be concentrated in a central authority. We have loved the States. They have been to us home governments. They protect our persons, our characters, our children, our property, our homes and our graves. In their courts our wrongs are redressed and our rights vindicated. Under their guardian care and support our free schools exist, and our highways are constructed and maintained. And by their authority "justice shall be administered freely and without purchase; completely, and without denial; speedily, and without delay."

Whoever advocates the rights of the States and the importance of maintaining them is charged with holding the doctrine that the Union is but a compact, and that the States may secede at their pleasure. That charge is one of the means used to prepare the public mind for the overthrow of State authority. Now, I wish to denounce it in the most positive manner. In the light of the constitution there is no conflict of authority between the States and the United States. Each is sovereign within its sphere.

The United States is a Government, with its powers defined in the constitution; entitled to the allegiance of every citizen, and having the right to enforce, against each individual, obedience to its authority. The constitution of the United States, and the laws of the United States made in pursuance thereof, and the treaties made under the authority of the United States, are the supreme law of the land. Each State is also a Government, to which its citizens owe allegiance, and possesses the right to enforce obedience to its authority. It has all the powers that properly belong to a free State, which have not been delegated to the United States, nor prohibited to the States by the constitution. Each State is a member of the Federal Union, and has no right to secede therefrom, nor has it any right to disturb the harmony of that Union. To promote the Union, and to seek to make it perpetual, is the duty of every State, as it is of every citizen. Speaking upon this subject to the people of my own State, last year, I said:

"It is not true that our Government is weak and incapable of giving us the most complete protection. If we but maintain the authority of the Federal Government, as defined and limited by the constitution, and preserve the States in the enjoyment of their rights according to the constitution, and in the absolute control of their domestic affairs, and if our laws be so honestly administered as to command the approval of the people, our political structure will become the strongest in the world. In times of peace it has been over the people to protect and bless them, and in periods of war it has been adequate to every necessity and emergency."

Upon this I would desire to speak more earnestly than upon any other subject whatever. Upon the tariff, the revenue and the banks we may make mistakes, and afterward recover the lost ground. But in respect to local self-government any mistake is a disaster.

In respect to that, lost ground is never recovered. The power that is strong enough to take from us the management of our domestic affairs; to wrest from our neighborhood and county courts and juries their rightful jurisdiction; and to strip the State Legislatures of their legitimate authority, is powerful enough to hold and keep them. Already great additional powers have been given to the Federal courts, and I have seen parties go away from those courts stripped of lands, and chattels, and homes by the overwhelming costs and expenses, when the matters in controversy could as well have been settled in the local courts without impoverishing either. Every consideration affecting the rights and welfare of the citizen requires that we maintain our system of government, with all the rights and powers unbroken and intact.

Is the time ever to come when the disturbances and bloodshed in the South will be attributed to any other cause than political passion? The influences that produce crime in other localities exist to a like extent in that section. Ambition, avarice, jealousy, revenge, drive men into crime everywhere. But you assume that they do not exist as evil influences in the South, and that men are false and cruel only in the midst of political strife. I appeal to your own consciousness that you are as good and true and honorable men, then, as ever.

Crime should be denounced and punished, whatever the circumstances, whether committed in the midst of political excitement, or in stealth and secret. I make no apology for it. But when it is attributed to Democratic principle or to Democratic organization, I denounce the falsehood of the accusation and the meanness of its author. The great and leading sentiment of Democracy is equality and justice, and crime cannot spring from such a source.

If Dixon, of Yazoo City, was killed to prevent his candidacy for place, it was more than a local outrage. But if he and another candidate came into a controversy, and the killing resulted without such purpose, then the homicide belonged to the locality, like any other case of grave offense. Yet Northern prejudice has been appealed to and excited about it as a political case. His character, if correctly described, was not such as to excite a personal interest and sympathy on the part of good men anywhere. It is stated that he had been the author of a number of deaths, and killed one man from Indiana because of his political associations. If you will make a note of the crimes committed in the North, as reported every morning in the enterprising newspapers, you will be shocked at their number and enormity. May I refer to one case? It occurred in your own State. It was reported in a special telegram to the Chicago Times on the 15th of this month. The town of Westerville is in the county of Franklin, near by your capital. Henry Corbin kept a hotel and saloon in that town. His business as a saloon-keeper was offensive to a class of partisans quite numerous. I understand that he had the lawful right to prosecute his business under the laws of the State. But they did not like the laws which gave him that right. On the night of the 14th of this month, while a number of persons were sleeping in the hotel, at a late hour, kegs of powder were placed in the cellar, and, as is supposed, immediately under the room in which Corbin and his wife and three small children were sleeping. The powder was ignited by a fuse leading from the street. The explosion shook the entire village, destroyed the hotel, and injured some of the parties, especially Corbin, badly. Can you conceive a crime more stealthy, treacherous and cruel? The purpose was to destroy an entire family, and the passion that prompted it was hatred of the liquor traffic and of the laws that permit it. The probable death of the innocent mother and the babe at her side, and of the two little boys sleeping in the trundle-bed, was contemplated by the murderers with malignant pleasure. Now, what think you of the "powder plot," of the stealthy steps, and of the horrible explosion in the night-time as compared with the Yazoo homicide?

But shall Westerville be made a type and representative of Northern society? Shall our civilization be brought into judgment by the powder plot, and the humanity of our people be brought into comparison with the cruelty of the wretches who would murder sleeping children?

Let us judge of one another fairly. Let us strengthen and not weaken the bonds that hold the people of the United States together.

A True Hero.

After the yellow fever had ravaged Memphis in 1878, such was the terror of the people that it became impossible to find any one willing to nurse the sick or bury the dead. James Forbes, an engineer on a railway running into the city, had a fireman named George, a gruff, silent fellow, who had worked with him for years.

One day, the engineer was sent for. His boy, a lad of 18, was struck down with the plague. As he left the engine, George struck his shovel into the coal, and pulled on his cap.

"Where are you going?" said Forbes.

"Along with you. I'll see you through this pull, Jem."

Forbes lived in a small house on the edge of the Bayou Gayoso, a sluggish stream, laden with impurity, which oozes through the city. The boy had been seized with the disease in its most malignant form. He died that night.

Forbes and George nursed him, carried him out in the coffin, and, with their own hands, dug a grave and buried him. When they came back they found that Forbes' only other child, a little girl, had been seized. The mother, a few hours later, was struck down. Both died. The two men stood beside them. The air was heavy with a horrible odor, literally the breath of death.

"You've done all you can, George," said Forbes. "Save yourself. Fly before it is too late."

"No, I'll see you through," said the fireman, gruffly.

Coffins were no longer to be had. They made a box, laid the mother and child in it, dug a grave, and buried them.

Before the task was finished, Forbes turned to go home. The plague was upon him. George carried him to the house, nursed him tenderly until he died; then alone he buried him beside his wife and children. After the last sod was heaped upon the grave, he turned away and went quietly back to his work.

George was not the only hero who justified his right to live in that terrible, dark day. There are hundreds of them still living, or at rest beside those whom they vainly tried to save.

A Wonderful Invention.

I have just witnessed a private exhibition of a wonderful machine, and have obtained permission of the parties most interested to give the Enquirer a brief account of it. My brother-in-law, who is a butcher and pork-packer of this city, to-day killed seven hogs, weighing from 100 pounds to 350 pounds, to test a hog-scraping machine just patented by Mr. Stephen Collins, who is a brother of Mr. D. C. Collins, of the Northern Bank of Covington, Ky. I had seen corn taken clean from the cob by machinery, but never before had I ever seen the hair and bristles taken from a hog by machinery. I am not permitted to describe the machine in detail, but I can say that the working of it was simply marvelous. A hog was killed, placed in the machine, and almost the same instant it came out slick as a whistle, with the exception of a few odd hairs on the legs and head. The seven hogs were passed through the machine in fifty-seven seconds, and the entire body of each animal was as clean as could be desired. This was the initial test of the machine. It is so constructed as to clean any sized hog, and in the test made to-day animals were selected with a view to test its application to different sizes. I should think from what I have witnessed of its working that, with a few improvements which are contemplated, it will have a capacity of 6,000 hogs in ten hours. My brother-in-law is enthusiastic over the wonders already performed by the machine, and says it will certainly save the labor of twenty men for every 2,000 hogs cleaned. It is very simple, and not at all liable to get out of repair.—Chicago letter to Cincinnati Enquirer.

Aboriginal Society Gossip.

Our red brethren out at the campooda had another high old time yesterday. For two or three days past deputations of their fellow-countrymen have been arriving from the adjacent country. Some of the visitors came a full hundred miles to take a hand in the sport. The initiatory ceremony, which consisted principally of eating and dancing, took place night before last, at which time the camp was a blaze of light and babel of hideous sounds. Miss Flap-Jack-from-the-Moon was the belle of the ball. It was observed that young Hop-up-and-Hit-His-Feet-Four-Times was particularly sweet on the bewitching maiden. He treated her to grasshopper pudding and pine coffee no less than four times during the evening, and squeezed her once so hard that she threw a frying-pan at his head. They say it will surely make a match.—Nevada City (Col.) Transcript.

INDIANA ITEMS.

AT Tampico a young man named Isaac Cutsinger, was instantly killed by a falling limb from a tree which he was cutting down.

A BUILDING association, with a present capital of $18,000, and not to exceed at any time $50,000, has been organized at North Vernon.

GOV. WILLIAMS has appointed Daniel Mowrer Trustee of the Blind Asylum, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Judge Ristine.

OTTO BRANMAN, a New Albany boy, 15 years old, while out hunting squirrels with a musket, accidentally shot himself, inflicting a fatal wound.

F. B. RUSHTON, while grinding sugar-cane near Tipton, was kicked by a mule in the chest, in the region of the heart, causing death in a few moments.

ONE HUNDRED acres of wheat, cut with a reaper, keeping six binders going, was the work of a Scotch lassie of Lexington. She used three pairs of horses in relays.

TWO BROTHERS, William and George Sappington, aged 30 and 22, were out hunting nine miles east of Fort Wayne, when William's gun was accidentally discharged, killing George instantly.

GEORGE WAGGONER, aged 93, was in Indianapolis to attend the old-settlers' reunion. He walked all the way from his home in Beck's Grove, Brown county, sixty miles, making the trip in two days.

THE planing and saw-mill of Stroup & Cotterman, at Waldron, was burned by an incendiary fire, not long since. The machinery was damaged and a large amount of lumber burned. The loss will exceed $6,000; no insurance.

THE fourth annual reunion of the brigade composed of the Eighth and Eighteenth Indiana infantry and First Indiana (Klaus') battery will be held at Franklin, Johnson county, on the 16th inst.

WM. S. CULBERTSON, of New Albany, a stockholder in the First National Bank at Minneapolis, Minn., loses $15,-000 by the embezzlements of the cashier of the bank, recently brought to light.

JESSIE, the 10-year-old daughter of Councilman Marks, of Lafayette, met with a miraculous escape from death, when she fell from a tree where she had climbed forty feet, to the ground, only breaking an arm.

CHARLES B. CRICKMORE, for a number of years a saloon-keeper of Knightstown, died recently of dropsy of the heart, caused by excessive use of whisky. For some time past he had been in the habit of drinking from a quart to half a gallon per day.

CAPT. JOHN B. FORD, of Jeffersonville, the inventor and patentee of the new process for manufacturing gas, water and sewer pipes of glass, has organized a company of large capital in New York city, for the purpose of putting up extensive works for the production of glass pipes. He claims that glass pipes will not cost more than half as much as iron.

THE pressure of 25,000 or 30,000 bushels of flaxseed forced out one of the walls of the new oil-mill erected by I. & P. Evans at Indianapolis, a few days ago. Fortunately all the employes escaped into the street, and the only damage is from the loss of seed and the wall, amounting to $6,000. This is the second accident of the kind occurring to this firm, the old mill having caved out.

MRS. FECKER, of New Albany, a highly respected lady, was attacked by a highwayman, the other night, while she was unlocking the front door of her residence on returning from market, who demanded her money or her life. Not responding immediately to this demand, she was struck in the temple by the highwayman and knocked senseless, and her pocket-book, containing $19, taken from her.

Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.

The Indiana Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church held its fortieth session last week at Mount Zion. There were in attendance fifty ministerial and thirty-four lay delegates, beside quite a number of visitors.

Rev. J. H. Luse, of Indianapolis, was re-elected President of the conference, and was required by a vote of conference to travel the conference district during the ensuing year.

The next session of conference is to convene at Brown's Chapel, in Hancock county, on the first Wednesday in September, 1880.

APPOINTMENTS.

First District.—J. H. C. McKinney, Chairman; Greenfield, E. H. Moles; Sugar Creek, J. H. O. Prim; Union, to be supplied; Pleasant Hill, S. J. Jones; Greensburg and Friendship, J. H. C. McKinney; Tanner's Creek, J. P. Williams; Morristown, Wm. Stockinger; Madison and Liberty, to be supplied; Laurel and Duck Creek, to be supplied.

Second District.—T. E. Lancaster, Chairman; Muncie, H. M. Boyer; Muncie Mission, T. E. Lancaster; Anderson, J. C. Miller; Hartford, L. D. Richman; Yorktown, S. Lineberry; Jonesboro, J. M. Langley; Pipe Creek, G. W. Boxell; Jalapa, S. M. Shumway; Salimony, D. S. Boswell; Wabash, E. Conn; New Haven, M. Gustin; Spencerville, H. Stackhouse; Kendallville, F. M. Hussey.

Third District.—D. W. Evans, Chairman; Groveland, H. Harrell; Milledgeville, to be supplied; Frankfort, J. W. Loder; Michigantown, D. W. Evans; Medaryville, W. G. Callahan; Grand Prairie, S. M. Douglas; Mt. Olive, S. M. Shumway; Burlington, T. Baily; Yellow River, J. S. Sellers.

Fourth District.—B. M. Clark, Chairman; Antioch, White River, to be supplied; Monroe, to be supplied; Worthington, B. M. Clark; Richland, J. Hughes; Calvary, R. W. Ruthledge; Guthrie, M. H. Adams; Winslow, to be supplied; West Union, A. S. Baker; Prairie, W. H. Fisher.

A FRESH description of Charles Reade says that he is big and manly-looking, not fat, but large-framed and muscular. He is very fond of physical exercise, such as rowing, riding, cricket, swimming, and notwithstanding his hair is grizzled, his stalwart body shows no signs of decay. He is neat, though careless in dress, and resembles, with his ruddy face, easy gait, and unconventional manner, a prosperous farmer. He likes congenial company, but not formal society, which, as a rule, he takes pains to avoid.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, OCT. 16, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

The Ohio Election.

Latest advices seem to indicate the election of Foster for governor of Ohio, last Tuesday. His majority is probably 20,000. The democrats claim the legislature. We are not at all surprised at the result, when the republicans of Ohio all go to the polls, they cast more votes than any other party, though they may not have a majority in the state.

State treasurer Flemming attended the fair at Waterloo.

Hiram C. Bell, father of Hon. R. C. Bell, of Fort Wayne, was killed by a horse in Delaware county, a few days since.

We owe our readers an apology for a lack of original matter, in the COURIER, this week. Too much ague ails the editor.

The Kelley campaign has opened in New York. Kelley has taken the stump himself, accompanied by S. S. Cox and Lieut-Gov. Dorsheimer.

We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to attend the formal opening of the department for women, of the Insane hospital, which took place at Indianapolis last evening.

Mrs Martha Potts has just completed a walk, from New York to New Orleans and back, the distance being 2800 miles, for a wager of $5.000. She now proposes to be the champion female walkist, or die in the attempt.

Bro. Zimmerman of the Valparaiso, Messenger, published the largest "fair daily" we have received this year. It was full of the latest telegraphic news, and well supplied with editorial and local matter, and last but not least it was circulated free.

When our time is not taken up with matters of more importance, we shall ask the pardon of our readers for devoting a small amount of space to the scavenger correspondent at Angola,(?) whose nonsense appeared in last weeks Auburn Republican.

The first public sale of Mr. Robert Bonner, the noted publisher, and purchaser of fine trotting horses, will take place at Manhattan, N. Y. Oct 29th 1879. Seventy eight horses will be sold to the highest bidder. Some of them capable of trotting in the twenties.

Republican postal employes in Ohio were so anxious to elect Foster, that they opened packages of democratic newspapers and enclosed republican documents; and in some instances threw whole packages of democratic documents out of the postal cars, several having been found along the railroads.

District No 7 in Jackson township is said to have the best worked roads in the county, for which Mr. John Boots is entitled to the credit. Jackson also claims the best herd of Short-horn cattle, and the best herd of Devon cattle in the county. DeKalb ought to have a recorded herd of Jerseys, they are the boss milkers.

Superintendent Rummel, of the county farm, made 57 entries of farm products at the Waterloo fair, upon which he was awarded 51 first and 5 second premiums. That speaks volumes for the management of the farm. There is probably not another county in the state that could make the same showing, if there is we would like to hear from it.

The ninth quarterly report of the state-house commissioners shows that since the commencement of the work the total outlay has been $153,565-56. Of this amount $75,805 12 has been expended on foundation and $40,251-81 for iron work, which will be required for use early next year. The payments to commissioners, per diem and expenses, foot up $12,002-66.

The North Eastern Indiana fair, held at Waterloo last week, was a grand success in every particular. The total receipts amount to about $4.500, which will pay all expenses for this year, and leave a handsome surplus to apply in payment of additional land recently purchased by the association. On Thursday the number of people in attendance was estimated at 20,000, and judging from the number of tickets sold that day, the estimate was not far wrong. With the exception of speed, every department was well filled. Draft, general purpose and light harness horses made a creditable showing. Cattle were exhibited in large numbers, herds of all the popular breeds were exhibited. Hogs, sheep and poultry in endless variety. The new floral hall was well filled, and presented an attractive appearance. Agricultural and fruit halls were filled to overflowing with products of the farm and orchard, proving that DeKalb county is one of the best grain and fruit counties in the state. The most noticeable feature of the fair, was the absence of stands for the sale of intoxicating liquors, fortune wheels and other gambling appliances, so frequently found upon fair grounds.

TERRIBLE SLAUGHTER.

Frightful Accident on the Michigan Central Railroad.

A special dispatch from Jackson, Mich., October 10th, says; An appalling accident took place this morning on the Michigan Central, two miles east of this city. For two score years the railroad has been singularly free from calamities, only to furnish now a most frightful collision. Fifteen persons were killed and twenty-nine wounded.

The Pacific express coming west collided with a switch engine in a cut at the east switch at two o'clock this morning, demolishing both engines, and creating a fearful wreck. Yardmaster Colwell ordered the engineer of the switch engine to make up a freight train, though the Pacific express was due. The engineer objected on the ground that the express was due. Colwell said it was late, and there would be plenty of time. An engine with a car then backed on to the main track. That moment the Pacific express, running thirty-five miles an hour, twenty miles faster than allowed in passing switches, struck the switch engine tender. The express engine forced its way into the baggage car, the baggage into the mail, the two throwing the first passenger to the right on the embankment, and crushing into the two passenger cars behind.

The people in the first passenger car were comparatively unharmed. In the second and third coaches the slaughter was fearful. The engines lay in a tangled mass. One cylinder, thrown back clear over the wreck, landed between the tracks. The smoke-stack a still greater distance from the point of collision. The trucks of all the wrecked cars were forced backward, making a compacked mass of wheels under the entire length of the other cars.

The train was made up of seven Wagner sleepers, four passenger coaches, mail and baggage cars, making a heavy train. The force with which such a mass would come in contact with an obstacle under the high rate of speed made necessary by the train being late is better imagined than described. The shock came with the suddenness of an avalanche, leaving death and destruction in its remorseless path. The ground around the wreck was covered with a mass of kindling-wood, intermingled with broken baggage, ruined express matter and a chaotic mass of debris. A large amount of passengers' baggage remained intact. The caboose attached to the switch engine was driven sixty or eighty feet from the locomotive, and the tender being thrown clear off the track.

A horrible sight presented itself at the point where the baggage-car come in contact with the ends of the telescoped coaches. There was a mass of five or six human beings, including two females, jammed in a crushed and mangled mass—heads, arms and limbs protruding in a sickening manner, telling to plainly of the awful force of the collision. The bodies of the engineer and fireman of the express engine were removed as quickly as possible by the willing hands of their fellow employes, who gathered in large numbers; but the poor fellows were mangled in a most shocking manner, showing that death must have been instantaneous. The engineer and fireman of the switch engine were fortunate, seeing their peril they jumped for the embankment and saved themselves.

The time the collision occurred, when everything was wrapped in darkness made the situation one of extreme difficulty for the extraction of the unfortunates, but those Providence spared came quickly to the rescue. By the dim light of the moon, guided by the piteous appeals of the imprisoned victims, they commenced the work of rescue. They were soon reinforced by numbers of railroad employes, hastily called together. The dead and wounded, as fast as taken out, were placed on the top of the embankment, in charge of a corps of surgeons, hastily summoned, and everything that skill and sympathy could suggest was done. The sight was more than a heart of stone could witness. The poor maimed and bleeding forms lay along the bank. A pitiful spectacle was a little boy wedged in the wreck, who cried piteously to be liberated. His father and mother are reported to have perished.

Mrs. R. J. Warren, of Ganges, Allegan county, with a son thirteen years old, was in the second coach, on her way home from the state of New York where she had been visiting several weeks. They occupied seats on the side of the coach that was so badly smashed. The boy was lying asleep on the seat in front of his mother. When she heard the crash and saw the side of the car come crushing toward her she involentarially leaned over the sleeping boy. The position was held until she was extricated. Her shoulders and back were considerably bruised. Her injuries are not of a severe nature.

Mrs. George A. Jones, of Chalado, Penn., was on her way to Nebraska to join her husband. She suffered severe cuts and bruises on her head and left side. With her was the family of five children. One little girl of eighteen months was killed instantly. The mother never saw it after the accident. One of the other children sustained a slight contusion of the head.

The saddest case was that of Willie Rice, a fair-haired, bright-eyed boy of four years. His father, mother and sister were killed. When found, clasped in the dead mother's arms, they were so fastened in the wreck that it took three hours with axes and other implements to extricate him. His left leg was broken, left arm and chin badly cut. The family lived in Philadelphia, and were on their way to a point west.

The body of Gilbert, the engineer of express engine 197, had the right leg cut off at the hip-joint as by a cleaver, the bowels torn open, the head badly contused. He was a large powerful man. Death must have been instantaneous.

Near by were the torn and mangled remains of U. H. Smith, the fireman, in one heap, under a coat thrown hastily over the trunk and head; in another the viscera and other portions of the remains picked up in fragments. Before the shock of the collision was fairly over life was extinct.

In one room are the remains of two men, one woman and two children of emigrants. It is surmised that they were one family. They were taken out of the wreck at one place, and bear a resemblance to each other. The injuries were various, but of such a character as to indicate immediate death. One of the children lay curled up on the floor as if asleep, with bloody masses of tangled-flaxen hair.

At Shallow's and Univey's are the bodies of two men, one woman and a girl of about ten years. A fine-looking man of thirty-five years, with a sandy complexion, shows contusions on the head, which probably caused death, although the body bears bruises more or less serious. On his person was found an unsigned letter which seems to have been written to his family. On the little finger of the right hand is a plain gold ring. Deceased had the appearance of a tradesman or professional man. The woman's injuries appear in the back. The little girl's head is literally crushed flat. The other victim, a man, is fearfully torn.

A Mrs. Garland and ten-year-old daughter, of Philadelphia, are among the dead. The former was cut all to pieces, her breast ground to atoms and full of slivers and a bad cut on the head. The latter had her head cut off down to the nose.

General Manager Ledyard left Detroit at five oclock this morning. On arrival at the scene, with Attorneys Lathrop, Pond and Nickson, he conducted an informal examination into the accident. The result of the inquiry is as stated above in regard to the cause of the accident. The yardmaster claims that the telegraph operator misled him as to the time of the Pacific express, allowing a greater margin than there was. The operator asserts that he gave the time of the train at some other station. Meantime the train was making up time.

Heads Up.

[State Sentinel.]

The man who can hold up his head in this world need not be especially anxious about the condition of things in the next. An honest man has a divine right to hold up his head. An honest man is always brave, always generous. His heart is in the right place. Honesty is not summed up in paying promptly every honest pecuniary debt. This is well, but honesty has a broader significance. To be honest is to be upright, trusty, faithful, equitable, just, rightful, sincere, frank, candid, to act from pure principles and to be directed by honorable objects. It is to be chaste, faithful and virtuous. An honest man is never mean, never contemptible, small-souled nor white livered. Hence, an honest man may hold up his head and look Heaven and earth square in the face, defy death and the devil. An honest man is a sovereign in his own right. Pope said "an honest man is the noblest work of God." True. He may claim kinship with deity. He is an heir to all that is good in earth and in Heaven. His eye never loses its defiant glow. His heart never gets down into his boots. He never turns pale in moments of danger. He faces the world's music, whether harmonious or discordant. If he loves, it is true. If he worships, it is soul devotion. If he gets into trouble, he does not back out nor lie out of it. He may fight out, but he does not make any dishonorable compromises. He holds up his head, and if death comes his friends and the coroner will find the corpse in the right place. Some one has written—

"Midst the turmoil of life we are prone to bewail
Our lot, should we make a mistake,
But jog along easy and never say fail.
And you'll conquer what you undertake,
There's much to encourage a resolute heart,
For your friends all your actions will scan,
And will help and assist you in doing your part
If you hold your head up like a man."

An exchange says: "John Morningstar, of Indiana, enlisted in the army eighteen years ago, leaving a wife and infant daughter at home. After being wounded and discharged he went to California, where he has since been engaged in mining. Nothing was ever heard from him at home till the 10th, inst, when he returned a wealthy man, found his wife married again and his infant daughter a full-grown woman. The town of Fowler is greatly excited over his return. His former wife, now Mrs. Scott, is in a dilemma. The law says that an absence of seven years without any intelligence received of the missing man during the time is prima-facie evidence of his death, but since Mrs. Morningstar married before the close of the seven years after her husband's disappearance it rather complicates affairs.

For Hendricks and the West.

[St. Louis Times Journal.]

The Missouri Statesman, edited by the veteran Colonel William F. Switzler, came out a few days since in a carefully considered article in behalf of Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks as the democratic candidate for president of the United States. This nomination on the part of the Statesman had more significance in it than the mere expression of a personal preference of the editor—though the simple expression of a choice on the part of so intelligent a politician and so honest a patriot as Colonel Switzler carries very great weight in a state where he has been known and respected considerably over a quarter of a century.

The editor of the statesman, while knowing and honoring Mr. Hendricks for his lifelong fidelity to duty in whatever capacity he has been tried, goes farther and identifies the Indiana statesman with the future political interests of the west. He argues forcibly, first, that it is the duty of the citizens of this great valley to organize for independent political action; second, that in thus organizing, they should choose a leader truly identified with the west and following the fortunes of the west from personal identification and interest. Professions are cheap, and when it is seen that supreme political power in the nation is found in the basin bounded east by the Allegheny and west by the Rocky mountains, there will be abundant speculators in high office ready to avow their devotion to western policies. But professions among office-seekers are most superficial forms of obligation. They are thrown aside as easily as assumed if they are not rooted in self interest. On this ground it is the duty of the west to assert not only its rights in fashioning national laws and policies, but its rights in having men it can implicitly trust to carry out its laws and policies.

It is fashionable to deprecate all allusion to sections in the discussion of national administration. But the experience of the west is not of a kind to commend the sentimentalism of pure nationality in politics. Under the name of nationality, New England in the early years appropriated all the powers of the Federal Government, and by imports and duties saddled most oppressive taxes on the rest of the country to build up her manufactories. Under the name of nationality at a later day the southern states got control of the Federal Government, and bent every power of supreme administration to foster and protect slave interests at the cost of all other rights and considerations. The west has never had any distinctive interest or policy. Its place was always that of the goose to be plucked for the benefit of others. It paid duties on imported goods; bought manufactured articles enhanced in price by protective laws; had its natural farm products half eaten up by cost of transportation on tariffprotected railroads, on rivers full of shoals and dangers that it was wholly unconstitutional to remove; had its finest territory blighted by being made the home of irreclaimable Indian tribes, and other territory threatened by the transplantation of slavery to it, which would have deprived it of most of its value for free white men. And when war resulted from these collisions of sectional interest, the west, that had got no benefits, felt the full force of the fury and destruction of civil war, and now ways a large share of the costs of that unholy sectional strife.

The west has had its measure of ruin brought in by the pretended nationality of eastern policies and southren policies. In the name of nationality it has been taxed since the foundation of the government to build up princely fortunes for eastern manufacturers. In the name of nationality it submitted to Indian and African colonizations to relieve and oblige the south, until a retarded civilization and the vast burden of a war debt attests its patience and its patriotism. It is time at length for a western policy—and we have recently been insisting with all our force on its inauguration with a western man at its head. We need a men that the west knows and trusts. Such a man is the distinguished citizen of Indiana, whose name we have so frequently used in this connection. The clear sighted and veteran editor of Missouri sees the drift of things and discerns the duty of the day as we do—as thousands of others are beginning to do. The boom for Thomas A. Hendricks and a western policy will shortly sweep all others away.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

Liquor License Notice.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of the incorporated town of Auburn, in DeKalb county in the state of Indiana, that the undersigned, an inhabitant of said state over the age of twenty-one years, will apply to the board of commissioners of said county, at their December session, 1879, for license to retail spirituous, vinious and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, at and with the privilege of having the same drank on the following premises, to wit: The north one-third of lot No. sixty-three, in the original plat of said town of Auburn. EDWARD ELDRIDGE.

Dated this 11th day of October 1879.

$50,000! $50,000!
$50,000
WORTH OF CLOTHING!
Which was manufactured for southern trade, is now offered at
Sixty Cents on the Dollar.

We bought these goods of a large New York house, which manufactures for, and depends principally on southern trade. Owing to the fever raging so furiously south, they could neither sell nor ship their goods, and were obliged, therefore, to dispose of their entire stock to northern dealers at a big sacrifice.

We took advantage of this rare chance by buying only for cash, and therefore are enabled to sell these entire new goods at 65 cents on the dollar.

SAVE MONEY BY FAVORING US WITH A CALL.
SAM, PETE & MAX, Managers
Star Clothing House, FORT WAYNE, IND.,

ROOT & COMPANY
We beg leave to announce that we have now in stock the most elegant line of
FALL DRESS GOODS!
That we have ever before displayed. Our Novelities are new in design and colorings and are simply exquisite. Some of the new effects this season are more beautiful than any that have been before produced. Besides an unusually fine variety of
COLORED SILKS,
In all the desirable shades, we have a line of elegant
Colored Brocades,
Plain Black Silks in all the best known foreign and domestic brands. In this line we have several special bargains, among which will be found heavy Gros Grain Silk. Eighteen inches wide, 75c; Nineteen inches wide, 90c; Twenty inches wide, $1.00. Most excellent goods for the money. We make a specialty of all kinks of consisting in part of all the fashionable shades of plain, stripe and fancy Velvets, Black and Colored Silks and Satins, Pekin Satin Stripes and Satin Moire Stripes, etc. We have some new, elegant and tasteful goods in this line not to be found elsewhere. Our stock of Black and Colored FRINGES,
TRIMMINGS,
will be found unusually large and exceedingly elegant
Button, Button, who's got the Button?
is no longer an open question. Everyone knows that Root & Company have always got the particular button that anyone may want, especially if it be rare and elegant. Our assortment is really almost without limit. New Garments in Black and Colors in all the fashionable shapes.
Root & Co., Calhoun Street,
FORT WAYNE, IND

"We Heard a Mighty Rumbling and Could'nt tell Where"
UNTIL WE HEARD OF
C. H. YESBERA
Coming to the front with the finest line of
Piece Goods and Suitings,
Gents' Furnishing Goods, Hats and Caps,
ever brought into DeKalb County. The acknowledged judgment of the proprietor, renders it unnecessary to say that his stock has been selected with the greatest care and with a view to pleasing the tastes of his customers. Call and examine his goods and satisfy yourselves that
Custom Made Work
is the cheapest, and that a suit furnished by him will outwear three ready made suits and cost but a trifle more; besides you are always sure to get a good fit.
His Hats and Caps and Gents' Furnishing Goods are the very latest out. Call and see them, in the third room north of the Postoffice.
41—tf AUBURN, INDIANA.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been appointed by the Judge of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Margaret Bell, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent. JOHN HARVEY, Adm'r.

October 13th, 1879.

Liquor License Notice.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of Jackson township, in DeKalb county, in the state of Indiana, that the undersigned an inhabitant of said state, over the age of twenty-one years, will apply to the board of commissioners of said county, at their December session, 1879, for a license to retal spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in less quantity than a quart at a time, at and with the privilege of having the same drank on the following premises, to-wit: That portion of section six in said township bounded on the east by the Eel River railroad, bounded on the south by the Baltimore, Pittsburgh & Chicago railroad, bounded on the west by the Fort Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw railroad, and bounded on the north by the north line of said township.

CHRISTOPHER BAKER.

Dated this 11th day of October 1879.

Notice of Sale.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of an order of the DeKalb circuit court, the undersigned administrator of the estate of George S. Morr, deceased, will offer for sale at public auction on the premises, on SATURDAY, the 15th day of NOVEMBER, 1879, an equal undivided two-thirds of the following described lands:

The undivided two thirds of a certain tract bounded as follows: Commencing at the northwest corner of the southwest quarter of section seventeen [17], in township thirty-four [34] north of range fourteen [14] east, running thence north until it intersects the north boundary line of the right-of-way of the Detroit, Eel River & Illinois railway, thence in a northeasterly direction along said right-of-way to the east boundary line of the west half of said southwest quarter, thence north on said east boundary line to the north boundary line of said southwest quarter, thence west on said boundary line to the place of beginning, containing about sixty acres of land. Also the following described real estate in said county: Commencing at the southeast corner of the west half of the said southwest quarter of section seventeen [17], running thence north to the south boundary line of the right-of-way of said Detroit, Eel River & Illinois railway, thence in a southwesterly direction along said right-of-way to the west boundary line of said west half of said quarter section, thence south to the section line between sections seventeen [17] and twenty [20], thence east on said section line to the place of beginning, containing seventeen [17] acres of land.

TERMS; - One third cash, the residue in equal payments at 12 and 18 months, with notes at interest, waiving valuation and appraisement laws, and secured by mortgage on said premises Sale to begin at 2 o'clock p. m.

42-3 CYRUS C. WALTERS, Adm'r.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK AT AUBURN, IN THE STATE OF INDIANA, AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS, OCT. 2, 1879.

RESOURCES:
Loans and discounts	$51,503.61
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	50,000.00
U. S. Bonds on hand	500.00
Due from approved reserve agents	2,520.94
Due from other National Banks	2,119.03
Due from State Banks and bankers
Real estate, furniture and fixtures	9,151.92
Current expenses and taxes paid	541.35
Premiums paid
Bills of other banks	2,370.00
Fractional currency, including nickels,	[illegible]
Specie, including gold Trea'y certificates	700.00
Legal-tender notes	5,000.00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer.	2,250.00
Due from U. S. Treasurer
Total	$126,741.79
LIABILITIES:
Capital stock paid in	$50,000.00
Surplus fund	3,000.00
Undivided profits	2,593.75
National Bank notes outstanding	45,000.00
Individual deposits subject to check	12,694.64
Demand certificates of deposit	9,853.40
Time certificates of deposit	3,600.00
Profit & Loss
Total	$126,741.79

STATE OF INDIANA, County of DeKalb, S. S.

I, GEO. H. K. MOSS, cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief. GEO. H. K. MOSS, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 10th day of Oct., 1879. GUY PLUMB, N. P.

Correct—Attest:
W. MCINTYRE, }
J. WALBORN, } Directors.
ISAAC HAGUE, }

Read. Read.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please address G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county, who is authorized to sell the Singer Machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments furnished on short notice. 30-tf.

LIVE AGENTS WANTED.

To sell Dr. Chase's Recipes; or Information for Everybody, in every county in the United States and Canadas. Enlarged by the publisher to 648 pages. It contains over 2000 household recipes and is suited to all classes and conditions of society. A wonderful book and a household necessity. It sells at sight. Greatest inducements ever offered to book agents. Sample copies sent by mail, postpaid, for $2.00. Exclusive territory given. Agents more than double their money. Address Dr. Chase's Steam Printing house, Ann Arbor, Michigan. 41-3m.

Auburn Courier.

The Hazzard Case.

Nicholas Ensley, of Auburn, Ind., arrested some days ago in this city on a charge of kidnapping George Hazzard, a former cashier of Auburn National Bank, and with also attempting to extort money from him, was before Justice Brayton yesterday for trial, when a change of venue was taken to the court of Justice Brown, in the same building. Here a continuance of the case was asked for by the legal counsel of Mr. Hazzard, on the grounds that Mr. Hazzard was unable to be present. The Justice refused to grant a continuance, and the prosecution refusing to proceed with it, the prisoner was discharged. The foundation for the arrest of Mr. Ensley, it will be remembered, grew out of the part he took in the arrest of Hazzard a year ago for larceny of money from the Auburn bank. Ensley, who was an officer of the bank, swore out the warrant on which Hazzard was arrested, and it is claimed by Hazzard, did so to compel him to pay a forged piece of paper Ensley had in his possession. Hazzard declares that Ensley gave him his choice between paying the forged paper or being arrested. He chose the latter, and was therefore tried for robbing the bank. Where Hazzard is, or why he was not present to prosecute Ensley, does not appear, unless he was unable to sustain the charge against him.—Chicago Times.

Hazzard was in DeKalb county fishing, about that time. He had no desire to appear against Mr. Ensley in Chicago, for he knew he had no case. Mr. Ensley was ready for trial at the appointed time, prepared to completley cover Hazzard with infamy. Hazzard's desire for a continuance was only pretended, his dispatch from Waterloo saying that he was arrested, was a lie, as no effort was made to arrest him.

* * *

—Mr. B. M. Lockhart, of this county, who is the general superintendent of state agricultural exhibitions in Indiana, received the following complimentary and deserving notice in last week's Indiana Farmer. "The state fair as managed the present year was in one important respect, a model for all agricultural exhibitions. The remarkable and almost unheard of spectacle was presented of immense crowds of people, numbering from ten to fifty thousand each day, with not an intoxicated person among them. During the entire week of the fair we heard no profane nor abscene language, and we heard the same testimony from numerous other visitors who conversed with us upon the subject. The reason for this agreeable state of affairs is sufficiently explained in the simple fact that intoxicating liquors were not allowed to be sold upon the grounds. Superintendent Lockhart is deserving of all praise for the noble stand he took in this matter, and the state board with only one or two exceptions are entitled to the thanks of all good citizens for their prompt and hearty endorsement of his course. The initial step in the delicate business was taken by Mr. Lockhart, in demanding that the board should issue an order requiring him to keep intoxicating liquors off from the grounds. The order was immediately passed by an almost unanimous vote, and Mr. Lockhart turned back all wagons loaded with beer, whisky, etc., and returned the license fees to the proprietors. This ended the trouble and the result was the remarkable one alluded to above, perfect order and good conduct among the largest crowds that have attended the fair for ten years. The grand result of the fair demonstrates the fact that the licensing of liquor selling on the grounds is not essential to its success in the least, and we trust that the rule adopted this year on the liquor question will be the precedent for all future exhibitions."

No class of men were more gratified with the success of the undertaking to prevent liquor from being sold on the ground, than the officials of the numerous railroads centering at Indianapolis, a number of them having personally returned thanks to Mr. Lockhart for the determined stand taken by him. That the people at Mr. Lockharts home sustain him, is evident from the fact that the same rule has been adopted and is strictly enforced by the Waterloo association.

* * *

—An exchange truthfully says, that "men who set down and expect business to come to them without any effort on their part, are the ones who never make a success in life. There is a right way and a wrong way to do everything, and the only right way to do, when you have anything to sell is to advertise it, and do away with the idea that an advertisement last year answers for this. A thorough business man advertises constantly, and as a consequence gets rich."

* * *

—J. I. Case & Co's steam threshing outfit was brought over from Waterloo, last Saturday forenoon. The traction engine moved along up the hills and over the rough roads, drawing the tender and Eclipse thresher with ease. A team of horses was hitched in front of the engine for the purpose of guiding it, and to prevent other teams from scaring, while passing. The horses were not required to pull or hold back, as the engine furnishes all the power, being capable of drawing the entire load through mud a foot deep.

Local and Miscellaneous

—Mortgages,
—Warrantee Deeds,
—Quit Claim Deeds,
—Guardian's Receipts, (bound),
—Administrator's Receipts(bound),
—For sale in large or small quantities at the Courier office. tf.

—Ice in demand.

—Hay market good.

—Chromo men in town.

—Court still in session.

—Apples are coming in rapidly.

—Squirrel hunters are numerous.

—The grain trade continues lively.

—Grogg's cane mill is running to its full capacity.

—The boss hats and caps at McQuiston & Ralston's.

—Mrs. S. U. Tarney is reported as being quite sick.

—The town is full of drummers of all branches of trade.

—The city has been full of people and business all week.

—The corn crop in this vicinity, as a general thing, is good.

—Over-coats from $3 up to $15.00 at Schaab, Beugnot & Co's.

—John Otto, Esq., made a flying trip to Fort Wayne, Monday.

—We noticed Mr. Ed. Orr, of Corunna, on the streets yesterday.

—Gents underwear from 40c. suits up, at McQuiston & Ralstoe's.

—Nearly every freight train unloads merchandise at our depots.

—Most all the boys took in the Buffalo chase at Waterloo Tuesday.

—Miss Nellie Wheeleck is visiting with friends at West Unity, Ohio.

—Improvements are being made on public buildings in the court yard.

—Since the melon season is over, we haven't heard of a single coon hunt.

—Clothing cheaper than ever before heard of at Schaab, Beugnot & Co's.

—Cashmeres from 15c. to 75c. per yard at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3

—The best assortment of dress goods in the city at McQuiston & Ralston's.

—A ship exhibition and slight-of-hand show Sundied over at this place.

—F. J. Zimmerman has a full force of hands at work on his new building.

—Don't buy your ladies' cloaks till you have seen McQuiston & Ralston's.

—The street gutters are being cleaned which add greatly to their appearance.

—What splendid weather for doing fall work, and everybody seems to be busy.

—Mr. C. A. O. Sherlock is moving into Elder Ward's building on Main street.

—Tramps are not quite so numerous of late—only one in the "lock up" this week.

—The Presbyterian Synod of northern Indiana convenes at Valparaiso this week.

—G. H. Yesbera paid his parental home, at West Unity, Ohio, a visit this week.

—Go to Ensley & Co's for fine dress goods, cloaks, circulars, fancy goods, &c., &c.

—Frank Altenberg, who has been up in the Michigan pineries, returned home last week.

—Twenty-two car-loads of grain was shipped from the Wabash elevators Tuesday last.

—Last week considerable time was spent in our schools in examining pupils for promotion.

—The Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw railroad changed time last Sunday. See card next week.

—Clean out your "flews" and get your stoves in order. This weather won't always last.

—The masons have resumed work on Dr. Allen's new brick residence, on south Main street.

—There are a great many people who will never go to heaven, unless they go at "excursion" rates.

—Sam Pommert's new barber took a walk last Saturday, but Sam will have another in a few days.

—Children and ladies' underwear, children, misses and ladies' hosiery at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3t.

—J. W. Grisier, editor of the West Unity (Ohio) Eagle, spent last Sabbath with friends in this city.

—A large stock of the latest style hats and caps at rock bottom prices, at Schaab, Beugnot & Co's.

—Why is it that a person cannot pass a brick on the sidewalk without stubbing his toe against it?

—Frank Zimmerman is building a handsome frame residence on Fifth street, near the Saginaw depot.

—The races at Waterloo did not meet the expectations of all who attended them. The track was very heavy.

—A car load of the best Akron stoneware just received by Frank A. Hoff. Jars of all sizes, from one-half to ten gallons, at seven cents per gallon.

—It is an honor to any town to have said of it that its streets are clean and sidewalks are good. The first condition of honor we have, and there should be a greater effort to acquire the last.

—Heavy silk fringes, silk velvets velveteens, corduroy, trimmings, silks, and a large assortment of emproideries at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3t.

—Every body says McQuiston & Ralston have the largest stock of goods ever brought to Auburn. Call and see them. 42-3t.

—Mitch Houston has placed in his meat market, a daisy of a little steam engine, with which to run his sausage grinder.

—Irrespective of color, the girls will flirt. Be careful when you look at the "nigs"—that chalk ain't in their eye for nothing.

—The good templars' lodge at this place is increasing rapidly, a number assenting to the "obligation" at every meeting.

—In the month of February next, there will be five Sundays, an occurrence that will not take place again in forty years.

—Rob. McClellan left Saturday last for Buffalo, N. Y., with a car-load of "porkers" where he "shook" them and returned Tuesday.

—We are pleased to learn that Mrs. McDowell, an old lady residing with Mr. Eldridge, is rapidly recovering from a recent illness.

—Prepare for cold weather. Cotton flannels 16 yards for $1.00, also a large assortment of all wool flannels at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3.

—Young wheat is up and growing rapidly, and we are informed that there are fields which will have to be pastured to prevent jointing.

—A new postal route from Kendallville to Angola via Fairfield Center, Turkey Creek and Flint, went into effect a short time since.

—Don't forget that Schaab, Beugnot & Co., can and will sell you dry-goods and clothing cheaper than any other store in northern Indiana.

Lost.—A child's breton lace or sailor collar, on Main street, last Monday. The finder will confer a favor by leaving the same at this office.

—Harry Townsend's dramatic troupe was at Waterloo last week. Wonder if he will favor this town with a performance as he usually does.

—A conductor on a west bound freight train, on the Air Line, was thrown between two cars near Wauseon, and instantly killed Saturday last.

—Schaab, Beugnot & Co. have the largest and best selected stock of ladies coats and dolmans ever brought to De-Kalb county, at prices 15 per cent. below all competion.

—Every business man should have a neatly displayed standing advertisement in the Courier. There is no better way of talking to your patrons, as everybody reads it.

—We can not itemize all our stock, look through before you buy your dry-goods, notions, clothing, carpets, groceries, dishes, etc., at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3t.

—As the cold weather draweth nigh, wouldn't it be well to organize a hook and ladder company? We have the ladders, truck, etc., and a company could be organized with but little or no expense.

—A certain merchant would oblige the citizens who reside in the immediate neighborhood of his place of business, if he would be a little more careful about exposing his person. Shut the door.

—If there was anything very remarkable about the entertainment given on the fair grounds at Waterloo, last Tuesday, except the power of endurance shown by the twenty-mile rider, then we failed to appreciate it.

—Ensley & Co are just opening a fine assortment of millinery goods and dress trimmings. Their goods were selected with a view to pleasing the most fastidious tastes, and regardless of cost. Examine their goods before you buy.

—Many a profane fellow has sat and swore at a new pen, because the ink on it did not flow properly, when if he would put the pen in his mouth and suck off the oil, he would save all this ill-temper. Other persons not profane may do well to remember this hint.

—There will be no services at the Presbyterian church next Sabbath morning, Rev. H. Johnson being in attendance at the Synod, which meets at Valparaiso, and will not adjourn until Monday. In the evening, however, Rev. Mr. Rice will fill the pulpit.

—If a fellow dreams the devil is after him, it is a sign he has been drinking too much "lemonade;" but if he dreams of talking to a ghost with horns and tail, we would advise him to reduce his saloon bill, and join the I. O. G. T's. at once.

—We understand that the tail end of Irwin Seldens dramatic company, played Rip Van Winkle to a large audience at Ensley's hall Tuesday evening. We are unable to find any person that will acknowledge being there, which leads us to believe that the show was a fraud.

—A number of our old friends from Columbia City, dropped in upon us yesterday, and took us by surprise. The party consisted of Mr. Jacob Cramer, Mr. John Goodfellow, Mr. J. W. Hilderbrand, Mr. Robert Crozier, and Messrs Ezra Lyttle and brother. We are always pleased to meet our old friends. Come again.

A change in the time card of the Saginaw road took effect last Sunday. Trains now pass Auburn as follows:

SOUTH.		NORTH.
Mail...	9 23 a. m.	Accom...	3 15 a. m
Express	3 02 p. m.	Mail....	12 34 p. m
Accom.	12 30 a. m.	Express..	5 59 p. m

The revised card will appear in full in next weeks Courier.

American Ingenuity.

[Manufacturer and Builder.]

1736—The first steam engine built, after the Newcomen type, for the Schuyler copper mines.

1773—Another similar engine, made for a factory in Philadelphia.

1785—Oliver Evans, of Philadelphia, introduced steam power to drive a flour mill and a brickyard.

1785—James Rumsey propelled a vessel on the Potomac river by the reaction of the water.

1787—Perkins invented a nail cutting machine, which could make 200,000 nails per day.

1788—John Fitch navigated the Delaware river with the first steamboat.

1794—Whitney's cotton gin invented.

1796—Benjamin Thompson, otherwise Count Rumford, discovered that there is no such thing as a caloric fluid, but that heat is a peculiar mode of motion of the material particles of bodies, and thus laid the foundation of the modern theory of the conservation of forces.

1797—Benjamin Thompson invented a brush-making machine.

1797—Amos Whitemore introduced a machine for making the cards used in cotton and woolen manufacture.

1798—Robert McKean patented the first steam saw-mill.

1799—Oliver Evans, of Philadelphia, made the first high-presure steam-engine, and built a steam carriage, which, however, was not a success.

1804—Col. John Cox Stevens invented the screw propeller, the model of which is still at the Hoboken (N. J.) Institute for engineers.

1804—Oliver Evans built a paddle wheel steamer, to ply on the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers, diven by a double-acting high-pressure engine; also adapted for land coveyance.

1806—Thomas Blanchard, of Massachusetts, invented a tack-making machine, which made 30,000 tacks per hour.

1807—Thomas Blanchard made an apparatus adapted for rifling gun barrels.

1807—Robert Fulton traveled with his first steamboat from New York to Albany.

1807—Oil-cloth for floor carpeting first made in Philadelphia.

1807—John Bedford invented and manufactured metal bound boots and shoes.

1811—John H Hall, of Massachusetts, invented breach-loading muskets.

1812—George Shyemaker sold in Philadelphia several truck loads of anthracite coal for fuel, and was imprisoned as an imposter for selling stone for coal.

1813—Arascis C. Lowell made important improvements in the power loom.

1817—George Clymer produced the first American made printing press.

1818—Jacob Perkins introduced steel engraving as a substitute for copper.

1819—The Savanah made the first passage across the Atlantic ocean by steam power driving paddle-wheels.

1820—Henry Burden, of Troy, N. Y., invented the cultivator.

1821—The same invented improved rolling-mills.

1821—Jordan L. Mott invented utilization of small coal for furnaces.

1822—Jas. McDonald, of New York, invented machinery for flax and hemp.

1823—Jos. Saxton invented a wheel cutting engine, producing epicycloidal teeth.

1824—Ladoc Pratt established his celebrated tanneries in the Catskills, New York state.

1824—Completion of the Erie canal, connecting the large lakes with the Hudson river.

1826—Harrison A. Dyar established the first telegraph line on Iron Island making signals with frictional electricity.

1827—John McClinter, of Pennsylvania, invented the slotting and shaping machine.

1828—First American patent for improvements in locomotives granted.

1828—First locomotive journey made on the Honesdale and Carbondale railway, Pennsylvania.

1828—Hay and straw used for the first time to make paper.

1828—James Borgardus invented the ring flyer for spinning cotton.

1829—The same invented mills with eccentric grinding surfaces.

1831—Redfield published his book on the theories of storms.

1832—James Bogardus invented a dry gas meter.

1834—Henry Burden invented his nail making machines.

1836—James Bogardus invented a pantograph.

1840—The same invented the molds to press glass while blowing.

1841—The same made improvements in drilling machinery.

Since then inventions and patents have succeeded one another at a most astonishing rate.

* * *

Notice.

No visitors will be admitted to the county poor Asylum except on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. Jonathan Rummel, Supt.

* * *

—Those who gathered their nuts on Sunday should save them to make "donations" with—they are better, you know, than "every-day" nuts.

* * *

Persons engaged in raising fine cattle, hogs or sheep for sale, in DeKalb county, would find it beneficial to advertise in the Courier, which is read by nearly every farmer in the county.

Cedar Creek.

—Farmers are begining to husk corn.

—Cedar Creek normal school is prospering finely under the superision of C. M. Merica.

—C. B. Jones the saw mill man at this place is about out of logs.

—The rain has stopped Houser from hulling clover seed.

—Young man don't kiss your sweetheart so publicly on Sunday morning, especially when old people go past to Sabbath school.

—The pupils returning home from the Cedar Creek normal Wednesday evening, got into a racket.

—The lecture of Mr. Ober at this place, was largely attended, and highly appriciated by all present.

—Mr. Charles Bissell, has returned from the west to visit his mother and friends.

—Al. McDoll has returned to this place for repaers. R. R.

* * *

Spencerville.

H. W. Emanuel is now at Fort Wayne attending medical college.

—Mr. August Kinsey will go to Chicago on Wednesday, to purchase furniture.

—M. E. Olds [late of Newville] and Mr. Leon Rhodes visited Spencerville this week.

—Lecturers on temperance this week by Major Cooper of Chicago were a decided success.

E. Case, the great wheat speculator and successful rival of James Krane, visited Spencerville this week.

—Lectures this week by J. Cavanah, a deaf and dumb mute from Michigan, and by Prof. Burns, the author of Burns' grammar.

—Mr. S. Barny of the firm of Barney Bro's will go to Chicago on Wednesday to meet his wife en route from Kansas. He will "take in" the exposition.

—The hardware-room lately vacated by J. W. Cahill will be used as a saloon and gaming room by gentlemen from Auburn. Your reporter could not learn their names.

—The Boyle-Silberg divorce case was compromised. Miss Sadie Boyle was granted a divorce by the court and accepted, by way of compromise four hundred dollars alimony. Penfield & Emanuel for plaintiff, James I. Best for defendant.

—J. A. Provines is selling by subscription "Andersonville," a book of six hundred pages, and contains two hundred and fifty illustrations. Price only three dollars. We learn that he will be assisted in the work by J. Arbaugh, who was also a prisoner of Andersonville.

Special Reporter.

* * *

St. Joe.

—Mrs. M. Tustison who has been very sick, is reported some better.

—Solomon Woodcox, one of Concord's veterans, and who has been for some years badly afflicted, is lying in a dangerous and perhaps dying condition.

—F. N. Wright & Co., of Auburn, have established a branch lumber yard at St. Joe, with J. D. Leighty in charge.

—Dr. N. C. Woodcox of Metz, Ind., is attending his father.

—We think it about time Hank was around to set up those cigars, but then we presume he is detained at home.

—If some one would start an insane asylum on a small scale in St. Joe, and induce a few to take refuge therein, there would be less silly reports in circulation, to the detriment of a few of the smart ones. Watch who put out their washing Monday morning.

—Frank succeeded in getting the school at the brick, but for fear he would not, he had applied for several others.

—J. B. White, Nelson Ulm, I. Meese Jake White, Joe. Koch, we cannot remember how many more, returned Saturday night, after a week's hunt in the south woods. We understand they succeeded in capturing two little deer.

—A telephone connecting Spencerville and St. Joe, is strongly talked of by the business men of the former place.

—Two of the Barny brothers, Sol. and Mart., took in the Chicago exposition on Wednesday.

—McCorkle and lady are stoping at the St. Joe hotel.

—Because a little mistake of 40 pounds was made in weighing Oscar Spilter's wheat, the weighman at St. Joe is catching particular thunder.

—Parties from Bryan, Ohio, are here purchasing clover-seed. Two car loads have already been bought and shipped. $4.00 per bushel is the price paid.

—Twenty car loads of grain were shipped from the St. Joe elevator during the six days of last week. The prices paid were for wheat, $1.17; oats, 26c.; corn 40c.

* * *

—Mr. S. R. Heberling, of Racine, Wis., assisted Messrs N. & G. Ensley, in showing up the machinery of J. I. Case & Co, at the Waterloo fair. The traction engine exhibited by them attracted considerable attention, it was so much admired that one was sold for cash, notwithstanding the lateness of the season. Mr. Heberling is considered one of the best salemen that travels through Indiana, and is just the kind of a man we would like to see permanently located among us.

County Fair.

A meeting was held last evening in the interest of a county fair, to be organized at this place, which was largely attended. The question whether an agricultural society should be organized here was put with a standing vote, when every person present arose, and it was decided to go on with the work. Articles of association were signed by the requisite number, and a committee appointed to solicit subreriptions to the stock of $10,000 at $25 per share. This committee is to report on Saturday, Oct. 25, 1879, at 2 p. m., at Ensley's hall, and our farmer friends from all over the county are invited to be present.

* * *

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Ashma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. Sherar, Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. 42-eow-6m.

* * *

Newville.

—We attended the fair on Tuesday at Waterloo, and saw the elephant in all its splendor and magnificence.

—The bridge contractors and the contractors for the embankment have completed their work in a workmanlike manner, and the commissioners and the contractors are intitled to the lasting gratitude and thanks of the people for the construction of the work in such a durable and excellent style. It is the best job that we ever have had done in this part of the county.

—We attended a grand democratic "boom" in Hicksville, Ohio, on last Friday afternoon, and evening at the Commercial hall, which was jammed full and running over. The people were addressed first by Gov. Williams, of Indiana, in a short but comprehensive speech, after which he was followed by General Manson with one of his logical argumentative and masterly efforts of about two hours length, and at the conclusion of his thrilling and eloquent effort the meeting adjourned for supper, after which they reassembled at the hall, when General Woodford of Toledo was introduced and addressed them on the financial issues of the country, in such able and forcible language that we doubt not that he convinced the minds of all, even the most radical republican of the correctness of his position. After which the Hon. A. P. Edgerton was called to the stand, but declined in favor of the distinguished speakers from a distance, when General Manson was again called to the stand, when he addressed the audience for a few minutes in one of his masterly efforts, thrilling the audience with his witty and laughable anecdotes, and stirring up their mirth and convulsing them with laughter. The meeting adjourned after a vote of thanks to the speakers, and three rousing cheers for Generals Ewing and Rice.

Alpha.

GET MARRIED!

There is a place in this State where wedding outfits for gentlemen,
CLOTHING
Furnishing Goods,
Hosiery, Hats, &c.
is a specialty. Parties contemplating
MatrimonY
will consult their interest if they wish
Stylish Garments
artistically constructed to visit this place. Besides we carry the largest, best made and finest trimmed stock of Men's Boys and Children's Clothing in the State. Be sure and find
A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.
C. O. D.
one price, fine clothiers
Opposite North Door Court House,
FORT WAYNE, IND.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS,
135 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana.
Feb-1y.

BY THE SEA.

BY J. S. CHRYSTAL.

My blue-eyed pet, with golden hair,
 Is sitting on my knee,
And gazes eagerly afar,
Across the beach, beyond the bar,
 Where rolls the restless sea.

She puts her little hands in mine,
 And laughs with childish glee
To see the foaming billows splash,
As on the shore they freely dash,
 Then glide back silently.

But, while she laughs so merrily,
 My heart is far away;
And, as I look upon the shore,
Where loud and long the breakers roar,
 My sad soul seems to say:

"The sea is like a human life:
 It breaks upon the shore
Of time, with a resistless might,
And, when the goal is just in sight,
 Dies—to return no more.

"And, all along the shore of time,
 Full many wreck doth lie;
The pangs of many a mad carouse,
Of blasted hopes and broken vows,
 Of happy days gone by."

Yet, while I muse in mournful mood,
 And gaze upon the sea,
My blue-eyed pet, with golden hair,
Whose heart has never known a care,
Whose voice is music in the air,
 Still sits upon my knee.

Her head is resting on my breast—
 Her eyes in slumber deep;
The same rough sea, whose breakers roar,
And madly, fiercely lash the shore,
 Has lulled my child to sleep.

MY SOJOURN AT THE SPRINGS.

BY HARRIET E. S. CRESSY.

One July morning, not a hundred years since, I started, solitary and alone, for Saratoga, where I had made up my mind to rusticate a few weeks. I was a bachelor of inexpensive habits, and did not mean to run into extravagances which would to any great extent diminish the few thousands I possessed. Therefore, on my arrival at the springs, I steered for one of the most unpretentious hotels, and there engaged a room on the third floor at a reasonable price. In this room was a bed, one chair, a broken mirror, and a washstand, which looked as if it had seen better days. There was no carpet on the floor, only a small, filthy-looking mat in about the center of the room; the walls were unpapered, and the view from the little back window, which was the only one in the room, was far from inspiring.

After the waiter had shown me in, and I had fastened the door upon his retreating steps, I sat down on the corner of my trunk and took a survey of the room. My first impulse was to call for better accommodations at once, but the expense would be more, and I decided not to.

"It does not matter much about the room I have," thought I. "I shall only be here to dress and sleep, and I can make this apartment answer, as poor as it is, for those purposes."

After having thoroughly made up my mind to this effect, I opened my trunk and took out several garments, which I knew should be hung up instead of being crowded into so small a compass with other clothes, but, on looking about the wall, I could not discover a nail, and as for a wardrobe or closet, of course they were out of the question; so I laid them back into the trunk and locked it again. I then brushed the dust from my clothes, brushed my hair in front of the cracked glass, and washed me in the mutilated wash-bowl.

By this time I was glad to descend to the dining-room, where dinner was in readiness. The first glimpse at the boarders convinced me they were not the most stylish people in the world, but, among the long row of faces before me, there was now and then one I liked.

There was a very pretty girl sitting beside a fat, red-whiskered man, at the upper end of the table, and, during my meal, I viewed them both more closely than any of the others. He was particularly attentive to her; it might be he was her husband, but I hoped not, for I already felt considerable interest in her. There were also two or three intellectual-looking young ladies, and one fine, scholarly-looking young man; but the greater part were dull, insipid people. I think there were about forty at the table, but before my meal was finished I had concluded I would not care to form the acquaintance of more than four of them.

I did not once ask myself whether I supposed any of those individuals would consider it a great honor to form my acquaintance, for I was a bachelor, and, of course, very self-conceited.

After dinner I followed some of the boarders into the parlor. The pretty young lady and the fat man were among the number, and she, at the request of an old lady to "play a tune," sat down to the poor, antiquated piano in the corner, and gave us as good music as might have been expected from so poor an instrument. When this was through, there arose a discussion, as there will at most boarding houses, about the fare; one thought we did not live half well enough for the price we paid, and many of the others appeared to coincide. I was a stranger to them all—had eaten but one meal in the house—nevertheless took the liberty to speak on the occasion. So, assuming, as I thought, one of my most intelligent and fascinating looks, I very pleasantly remarked that we could not expect, for $2 a day, as good fare as we might at some of the first-class hotels, where they charged twice or thrice as much.

"Just so, exactly," spoke up the pretty lady, whose name I had not yet learned.

"We must not expect to get more than our money's worth," the fat man answered, with a meaning simper, and the rest, considering the matter finally decided in behalf of the proprietor of the house, arose and left the room. The pretty lady left, too, close upon the heels of the horrid boor I much wished was anywhere else.

"She ain't his wife, it can't be," thought I, "but I will find out before another day passes." And, sure enough, the next day I did find out that she was. After this discovery, I did not care to remain, and thought I would try a new boarding house. In this frame of mind I met an old friend whom I had not seen since we were in college together.

"Where are you stopping?" he asked, after the first salutation had passed. I stammered and blushed, and finally answered: "At W— Hall," thinking, perhaps, he did not know what a mean, insignificant hotel it was. But, much to my chagrin, I found he was acquainted with its reputation, and I would not have undergone the humiliating, debased feeling I felt at that moment for half I was worth.

"Come and stop at Congress Hall with me," he said, not appearing to notice my disturbance.

"I will," I replied, "I only went to that horrid place for a day, and, even for that length of time, without knowing where I was going."

"One will, sometimes, through mistake, get into such wretched dens. I know I have before now," said Corning, by way of consolation, "but come right to Congress, now, and send down for your baggage." I followed just to gratify my pride. Could I bear to be thought poor or mean by my friend, whose equal I was in our college days? No; so I went with him to Congress Hall.

Not until I was fairly there, did I realize the step I was taking. Could I, worth but $5,000, expect to cope with millionaires? Could I pay $4 a day, to say nothing of extras, which would be as much more, and then, oh! I had not thought of that; my clothes! they were not half fine enough, nor sufficient to stop long at so fashionable a hotel. Corning wore diamonds, too; I had not so much as a paste.

But my name was registered; my baggage came up, and I was shown my room by a waiter who was all attention and in expectation of a fee. It did not look much like the room I occupied at the other hotel. Here was a Brussels carpet, gas fixtures and a convenient wardrobe—all very nice and comfortable for those who could afford it; but I, a plain bachelor, who always had been obliged to study economy to keep my head above water, and never very successful in money-making, might as well be content with a little cheaper accommodations.

Thus I ruminated as I emptied a part of the contents of my trunk into the wardrobe.

"But," thought I, "there is only one way for me to do. In the course of two or three days I will pretend to Corning that I have received a dispatch which calls me home without delay, and in this way I can get off."

I was thinking quite strongly of this plan when Corning rushed into my room, quite out of breath, saying there was a party below waiting for me to go up to the lake with them. Accordingly we both hastened down stairs and jumped into the carriage with a party of gay young men, whose company I cannot say I enjoyed. They were fast, profane young men, but Corning had not the appearance of being either, yet he was the more dangerous man. From the first his influence over me was greater than I could possibly account for. After we reached the lake I proposed a sail, thinking it would be very refreshing after our ride from the Springs; but I soon learned my companions had little relish for so simple and innocent a pastime.

There were a number of gambling hells in that vicinity, and into one of these I was led without knowing where I was going until I had fairly entered. I then assured Corning I was not in the habit of frequenting such places. He also declared he was not, and told me we would only remain a few moments as spectators. He then brought me a glass of wine, which I reluctantly drank, as I seldom took anything stronger than ale, and that sparingly. The wine must have been drugged, and I was probably induced to drink of a still stronger beverage, although I have no recollection of it. I remember, however, of playing, and of being told I had lost, but I did not take in a sense of it until the following morning, when I found I was $1,000 poorer for my ride to the lake.

Just before I started for Saratoga, I sold my interest in a dry-goods store, and was paid the sum of $5,000, and this was all I was worth. I pocketed it all and started for the Springs, intending to spend a few weeks there in the most economical manner; but, alas! ere one week had passed one-fifth of my property was gone. I looked this fact fairly in the face, and felt very serious over it, hardly knowing what course to take; but I finally concluded to leave at once, and accordingly packed my clothes again into my trunk and rang for the porter who I hoped would assist me in getting off before Corning was up. There was soon a knock at my door, and, supposing it was the porter, I bade him enter and began at once to give him directions about my baggage and a carriage; but, on looking up, as the man approached me, I saw it was Corning instead of the waiter.

"What, going to leave!" he exclaimed; "pray what is it for?"

"Corning," I said, "I have plenty of reasons, but the principal one is, I was drawn into very bad company last night, and robbed of a thousand dollars; it was taken from me in a way I cannot recover it, so I must make the best of it, and endeavor to keep away from such company in the future."

"You were not robbed, my dear fellow; you played like the rest of us, and was not successful. Another time you might be."

"Another time never will come with me," I replied, "for I will never enter a gambling saloon again."

"You need not, my friend; but, for all that, you are not going to leave yet awhile. I want your company, and you must stay. You will not miss of being at the hop to-night. I have promised one of the finest ladies here to introduce you to her on that occasion."

By this time the porter stood in the doorway, awaiting my orders.

"Get a carriage," I said, "for the next train East." But Corning's voice was heard above mine—"He has decided not to go"—and, at the same time, dropped a $500 greenback into my hand. The porter, of course, went about his business, and I was left to unpack my trunk again.

"I'll make up half the amount to you," Corning said, "although I did not get a cent of your money."

"It is very generous in you," I replied, "but I will not take it from you. I have money enough," and I thrust it back into his hand. Fool that I was! but remember I wished to be thought rich by my old-time friend.

"Well, a thousand dollars is just nothing at all," he said, returning the money to his pocket.

Corning and I then went down to breakfast together, and were, as I supposed, fast friends. I did not then know, although I afterward learned, that my lost thousand was carefully stowed away in his trunk. The day was one of excitement, and I scarcely had time to think of my loss.

Gen. Grant and his staff had arrived at the Springs, and were that afternoon on grand parade. Corning and I made the most of it. I purchased a new suit of clothes for the occasion, and Corning and I rode about during the latter part of the day in one of the most stylish equipages to be hired. To my great astonishment he allowed me to foot the bills. In the evening I attended the hop, and, according to my friend's promise, had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of a stylish-looking young lady, who was presented to me as Miss Otway. This lady wore diamonds; her head was adorned (?) by one of the hugest of waterfalls, fastened by a comb which appeared to be made up of pearls and other costly gems; her hoops were expansive; her dress was of a costly material, decorated with a thousand spangles, which glistened in the gaslight like so many fire-flies in the meadow grass on a June evening. In short, she was the most fashionably and showily-dressed lady in the room. As to her personal charms, it was difficult to tell whether she owed more to art or nature for those. I concluded to wait until I saw her by daylight before I came to any decision on that point. Many an anxious coxcomb sighed for so much as one glance from this goddess of fashion, but Corning and I monopolized most of her attention.

Corning was a widower; I was a bachelor, neither of us so young or pretentious as a score of others who appeared anxious for her favor; but I did not feel flattered at the notice she took of me, supposing it was more out of compliment to our mutual friend Corning than from any regard or admiration I had awakened. Miss Otway and Corning were evidently the best of friends, and I had not a doubt, on this first evening's acquaintance, but that she was his betrothed. The following day I found I was mistaken, Miss Otway herself informing me to the contrary. We had a long interview while Corning and his fast friends were gone to the lake. I found her agreeable, though a little less beautiful than she looked the evening before. She had been an actress at Wallack's Theater, and for aught she knew would resume her profession on her return to New York. An actress! there is something associated with this calling that has, since I learned the catechism at my mother's knee, struck me unfavorably, and as this beautiful girl made the announcement that she belonged to this class, I said, quite pitifully:

"I'm sorry."

A shadow then came over her brow, and she replied:

"Sir, I am an orphan, and poor, and know of no other way to get a living."

From this moment I began to think of this beauty as my future wife. I would not at first allow myself to think I was exactly in love, for what had I, a confirmed bachelor, to do with that tender passion; but I would acknowledge I felt a great interest in this charming creature. It seemed such a pity, too, she should wear herself out for an unappreciative public, just because she had no home. Oh! was there a possibility I could furnish her one? I thought of a cozy cottage far away from the turmoil of the great city, where we might live. Then, like a horrid nightmare, came the thought of my failing fortune. But there I was, and there I must be, let the expense be what it would, for after the above-named interview with my fair charmer, I was not happy a moment unless she was in my sight. But how my expenses increased with our intimacy! Such a living bill might well have alarmed a millionaire; but then my dear Ardilla must ride after the fastest horses; indeed, I could deny her nothing. I must make her the most expensive presents, too, and what was still more, pay her board-bill for the last three weeks, which was no small sum.

Corning, to all appearances, was not sorry to get her off his hands, as he could make hardly enough in his gambling speculations to support both. None of this appeared to me in its true light until I had been acquainted with Ardilla a month and spent all my property but $50. At this juncture I began to look about me and to make preparations to leave. I then asked Ardilla to go with me, telling her that, after we reached Albany we would be married, and afterwards find a home somewhere. She consented, and we were to start the following morning.

Before I had arisen, however, Ardilla had left the Springs, and I could only start on my journey alone, without any hope of becoming a Benedict very soon. She left me a note—a cruel thing it was—stating that she had left for parts unknown, and that it would be useless for me to attempt to find her. She hoped I would forget our little flirtation, and not be grieved that something serious did not come out of it; for her part she was content to let it drop. The time we had passed together had been fraught with happiness for both, but it was past, and we must let by-gones be by-gones, etc.

I perused the note, but did not sink down under my disappointment, although it was a cruel one I will admit. I shook the dust from my feet as I left Congress Hall, and felt that I was a wiser, though a poorer man than when I came there one month before. Corning left the night previous, though I was not aware of it until I knew of Ardilla's departure. If I could only have seen him and given him a piece of my mind before I left, it would have been some consolation to me. I was satisfied he left on purpose to avoid me, and that Ardilla would join him before the day was closed. I would have made an attempt to follow them, but had no money to expend on such an expedition. So I proceeded on my lonely journey homeward, in quite a different frame of mind from the one in which I left that place a month previous. The cars were densely crowded when we left the Springs, and I took a seat with a gentleman I had often seen during my sojourn there, still had never had the least acquaintance with him. We entered into conversation, however, although, owing to my troubles, I was indisposed to talk. But learning that he was an acquaintance of Corning's and Miss Otway, I grew more communicative.

He said he had been stopping at the Union, opposite Congress Hall, and had felt very much interested in my flirtation with Miss Otway—he knowing so well the relations existing between her and Corning.

"Related?" I said, in a questioning manner.

"Yes, in pretty much the same way that Jenkins and the pretty waitress at the concert-saloon were."

"It cannot be!" I replied, half angrily, for I was still in love with the lovely siren.

"But it is. I have seen the same game played by them at Newport. Corning, with his gambling and extravagance, sometimes gets sadly out of pocket, and it is very convenient, at such times, to have some one to pay the bills contracted by his sweetheart. It is very nice, also, for him to get a thousand dollars out of a countryman's pocket, after enticing the unsuspecting fellow into a gambling-saloon, and forcing him to drink drugged spirits, which makes him unconscious of what he is doing, and the next day brag to his chums that the thousand dollars is safe in his trunk."

"How very wise you are," I said, disgusted that a stranger should be acquainted with all my proceedings, and taunt me of my folly and ignorance of the ways of wicked men.

"Don't be offended, sir. I hope you have learned a lesson you will never forget. Only that you might, I should have interposed between you and Corning, but I thought it the wisest course to allow you to learn by experience what you would not have believed had I warned you at the time."

The train now halted; we had reached Balston Spa, and the strange gentleman, after making me a polite bow, left the car. I meant to have asked him a number of questions about the two individuals who were uppermost in my mind after I recovered my thoughts, but he left so suddenly I had no chance. Before the Albany train started again he was on his way back to Saratoga. As I saw him get aboard the return train, I knew he had purposely followed me. Probably he had no bad motive in doing so; he might have considered it his duty to impart to me this bit of information. In this way I ruminated until I reached home. I use the word home, just as other forlorn men do who have neither wife, child nor parents; but, really, it was not much of a home to me. I had lived in the place a number of years, and been associated in business with a gentleman to whom I had sold out my interest in the same. I had many acquaintances there, and there were a few whom I esteemed as friends, but no kindred, no bosom friend. Oh, how deeply I realized this as I was returning from my unfortunate tour! After I finally reached my destination, it partially revived my spirits to behold old familiar faces, and I tried to be as thankful as possible under the circumstances.

The following day I engaged a situation as clerk for my former partner, and have since acted in that capacity. No person in the place knows of my operations at Saratoga, and probably never will by my informing them. About six weeks since I was married to a maiden lady who expects considerable property at her father's decease. Whether he or I will be the first to die remains for time to determine. As yet, I am poor and work hard for a livelihood. I shall not visit a watering-place this summer, being more at home in the small country town where I reside.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

Traveling Stones.

Many of our readers have doubtless heard of the famous traveling stones of Australia. Similar curiosities have recently been found in Nevada, which are described as almost perfectly round, the majority of them as large as a walnut, and of an irony nature. When distributed about upon the floor, table, or other level surface, within two or three feet of each other, they immediately begin traveling toward a common center, and there lie huddled up in a bunch like a lot of eggs in a nest. A single stone removed to a distance of three and a half feet, upon being released, at once started off, with wonderful and somewhat comical celerity, to join its fellows; taken away four or five feet, it remained motionless. They are found in a region that is comparatively level, and is nothing but bare rock. Scattered over this barren region are little basins, from a few feet to a rod or two in diameter, and it is in the bottom of those that the rolling stones are found. They are from the size of a pea to five or six inches in diameter. The cause of these stones rolling together is doubtless to be found in the material of which they are composed, which appears to be lode-stone or magnetic iron ore.

A Fight With a Gray Eagle.

A young man named Hull Joy shot a large gray eagle a few mornings since on his father's ranch, near Washoe lake. Having risen very early (something unusual for him), he espied what he thought was a big chicken-hawk. He ran into the house, got his gun, and, blazing away, brought down the bird with a broken wing. Hull's dog ran to retrieve the game, but found he had no easy task, as the bird jumped on on his back and began to retrieve him. The young sportsman ran to his dog's rescue, but found he had put his foot in it, as the eagle (as it really was) buried his talons in Hull's leg. The yells of dog and master and the fierce screams of the eagle soon brought to the scene of action Hull's father, mother and four of the children, who made a combined attack, and, after a severe struggle, succeeded in killing the royal bird. He measured five feet six inches from tip to tip of wings.—Virginia City (Nev.) Chronicle.

THE BOGUS PROCLAMATION.

Mr. Joseph Howard's Explanation of How He Came to Write It.

[From the New York Evening Telegram.]

During Mr. Howard's editorship of the news department of the Brooklyn Eagle he wrote what has passed into history as the "Bogus Proclamation," the true inwardness of which has never been told. The fact, as we understand it, was this: The Union armies were in trouble. Disaster and defeat were rapidly depleting the Union ranks. Grant's disastrous encounters in the Wilderness and the signal humiliation of Banks upon the Red river were sending a gloom over the entire country. Mr. Howard, sitting in his office, said: "I wonder what I would do if I were President of the United States? These disasters are substantial, and, if long continued, will work ruin. This is a religious country and a sentimental people. First of all I would affect that element by acknowledging the folly of our course, and ask the Supreme Ruler of the universe to direct our path. Second, I would call out a sufficient number of men to put down the rebellion inside of sixty days." It will be remembered that Mr. Lincoln was in the habit of calling for small installments of troops, 75,000 and 100,000, and that the odious system of draft had created disturbances here which resulted in murder, pillage, outrage and public scandal. It occurred to Mr. Howard that in no way could a lesson be better taught than by a burlesque so extreme in its nature as to attract attention, upon which the needed criticism on the existing state of affairs would necessarily be made. He therefore wrote what purported to be a proclamation from the President of the United States, first narrating these defeats and disasters, and, second, appointing a day of fasting and prayer. In other words, he took the people with him into the valley of humiliation. Then he called for 500,000 men between the ages of 18 and 45, with whom to subdue the enemies of the republic. This was signed by "Abraham Lincoln" and "William H. Seward." Before each name was written the word "Signed," indicating that it was a copy of a proclamation. This, on manifold paper, was sent from the Eagle office by Mr. Howard to every newspaper in the city of New York, in the full belief that it would be published in every paper in that city. Accident and a number of unforeseen circumstances combined to prevent its universal circulation; and, although it was printed in three papers, so far as the public was concerned it appeared in but two—the World and Journal of Commerce. The Government instantly and arbitrarily suppressed them and put an armed force before their doors, thereby magnifying into a grave and serious matter a burlesque, which in any other time would have passed with a laugh and a joke. Good judges, notably Mr. Raymond, of the New York Times, insisted that Mr. Howard had inside information of a proclamation of a similar nature about to be issued. The Government, on the other hand, insisted upon it that it was part of a Southern conspiracy and treated it so, arbitrarily sending the author to Fort Lafayette. It was born of an honest desire to teach a much-needed lesson. It was a burlesque, pure and simple, in which there was no treason, and, although a serious proclamation was issued not very long after, the author of the burlesque knew nothing of it beforehand whatever.

Two Angry Bulls, a Man, and a Buggy.

While Jacob G. Zerr, of Geigertown, President of the Berks County Agricultural Society, was returning home from the State Fair at Philadelphia in a buggy, and when between the White Bear Hotel and Geigertown, he espied two bulls in the road. Mr. Zerr saw that the two brutes were in mortal combat, but, noticing that they did not obstruct the road, he drove on, with the intention of passing by. Just as he was about to pass the ferocious animals, the larger one shot across the road, and, before Mr. Zerr was able to stop his horse, the bull was under the buggy, and then began a struggle between buggy and bull. The animal's horns were caught in one of the hind wheels of the vehicle. The occupants of the carriage, Mr. Zerr and his grandson, were in terrible suspense while watching the infuriated bull's struggles to free itself from the spokes of the wheel. The other bull, which up to this time was a quiet observer of what was going on, suddenly made a bolt for its antagonist, and in a few seconds the light buggy was completely overturned by the struggles of the animals, and the occupants were violently thrown out upon their heads, but escaped injury. Mr. Zerr kept hold of the reins, when he was precipitated to the dusty road, and checked the horse from running away. All this happened in less time than it takes to relate it. The vehicle was a complete wreck. The horse was not hurt, but was terribly frightened. The bulls went to finish their battle elsewhere.—Reading (Pa.) Eagle.

GEN. GARIBALDI has returned to his home in the island of Caprera to settle for the remainder of his days. His health during the trip from Rome was excellent, but his general condition is one of great feebleness, and it is thought that he cannot live much longer. He has a cabbage garden on the island which he cherishes very fondly, but he can't work it as formerly, being flat on his back half the time through rheumatism, and unable even to hobble about on crutches.

THE farmers of a Louisiana parish, finding that they cannot profitably raise and prepare sugar in a small way, have combined to build a large mill, and will take their cane to it for pressing on the same principle that farmers in some parts of New York take milk to a common cheese and butter factory, receiving pay for their milk and an additional profit for its products, according to prices realized in market.

IS THERE ANY BY-AND-BY?

BY L. G. WILSON.

They tell me that 'tis all of life
 To live and toil and die;
Ending at once all care and strife,
 There is no by-and-by.

Our cherished hopes that we shall find
 A heaven beyond the sky
Are but the merest mists of mind;
 There is no by-and-by.

On "Earth to earth and dust to dust"
 Alone can we rely?
There's nothing further we can trust—
 There is no by-and-by.

Oh! can it be that all our hopes
 Of final home and heaven,
Of life and rest, of joy and peace,
 In one short hour are riven?

Will those dear friends we've loved so true
 In endless slumber lie?
No fond embrace all ages through;
 No meeting by-and-by?

This curious web we here call life
 Unfinished soon must lie,
The rarest pattern incomplete,
 If there's no by-and-by.

Ah! tell me, ye who look beyond
 The range of mortal eye,
Is this alone the sum of life?
 Is there no by-and-by?

SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

PITH AND POINT.

WHAT was it a circular saw?

AN aurist is an ear-responsible man.

INN-DEPENDENT people—Hotel boarders.

"SPREAD yourself," as the bread remarked to the butter.

THERE'S the devil to pay in a printing office every Saturday night.

IT is better to fall in with a friend than to fall out with an adversary.

THE man who always jokes when he pleases seldom pleases when he jokes.

A LITTLE girl in Ithaca described an elephant as "the thing which kicks up with its nose."

"HE is very absent-minded," said a candidate of an opponent. "Indeed, his mind is entirely absent."

THE morning sun seen through a dense fog looks like a brass knob on the gates of heaven.—Chicago Tribune.

THE new analysis of watermelon shows as follows: Water, 3 per cent.; small boy, 97 per cent.—Detroit Free Press.

A GLASS-BLOWER has recently died at the age of 110 years. His great age is another proof of the truth of the blew-glass theory.

TRUTH is stranger than fiction. A man may know that he is a liar, and yet he'll feel decidedly strange when he is called one.

NOW THAT the search for the remains of Stewart is practically given up, we presume the "vaulting ambition" of the thieves is satisfied.

MRS. PARTINGTON, speaking of the rapid manner in which evil deeds were perpetrated, said that it only required two seconds to fight a duel.

AN Albany genius calls a new suspender which has been patented "the Conscience Suspender." It owes its name to its extreme elasticity.

SCENE—Recitation-room in natural history. Instructor—"Mr. X., have you ever put your head down on any one's breast and listened to the heartbeats as Huxley describes them?" Mr. X. (blushing)—"Yes, sir."

MELANCHOLY barber (with a soul above his business—"I don't get much of a livin' by it, sir!" Customer (through the lather)—"Then—you ought—for you scrape hard enough—for it!"—Punch.

"COME out into the garden, love,
 Where perfume fills the air;
I'll gather the fairest blossoms, love,
 To deck your sunny hair."
"Oh, no, dear George," she sadly sighed,
 "I can't enjoy such bliss;
Ma says I must stay in the house and wash the supper dishes."
—Buffalo Times.

ON the river—"What's the matter, Alfred? You look uneasy." "Well, my wife, who is fond of swimming, dived off the boat some time ago, and has not yet come to the surface; I am afraid that something must have happened to her." "How long has she been under?" "About two hours."—French newspaper.

"LET'S see, they raise some wheat in Minnesota, don't they?" "Raise wheat! Who raises wheat? No, sir; decidedly no, sir. It raises itself. Why, if we undertook to cultivate wheat in that State it would run us out. There wouldn't be any place to put our houses." "But I've been told that grasshoppers take a great deal of it." "Of course they do. If they didn't I don't know what we would do. The cussed stuff would run all over the State and drive us out—choke us up. Those grasshoppers were a God-send, only there ain't half enough of 'em." "Is that wheat nice and plump?" "Plump!" Well, I don't know what you call plump wheat, but there are seventeen in our family, including servants, and when we want bread we just go out and fetch in a kernel of wheat and bake it?" "Do you ever soak it in water first?" "Oh, no, that wouldn't do; it would swell a little, and then we couldn't get it in our range oven."—Schoharie Republican.

Enterprise in Leadville.

Among the first in Leadville there happened to be a merchant who once handled a wholesale business of three millions a year as a grocer in New York city. Failing there, he came to Leadville penniless. But his sagacity seized upon this opportunity, and, getting together sufficient funds, he built a vast shed of slabs and filled it with rows of bunks, two tiers high, capable of accommodating 500 sleepers nightly. His mattresses were thick and soft, his sheets clean, his coverings warm, the place well ventilated through the thousand cracks that gaped between the unseasoned boards. The proprietor was a man of large size and severe mien. He furnished a bed for 50 cents, and posted his rules: No talking or laughing, or singing, or drinking. If a man cared to sleep himself and let others sleep, he was sure of a good night's rest; if he made a noise he was soon ejected and without redress. Of course the Mammoth Sleeping Palace made money, as it deserved to.—Ernest Ingersoll, in Scribner.

SABBATH READING.

Further Thoughts from Prof. Swing on "Religion vs. Science."

Aside from bringing new affirmations and hypotheses, science has brought to bear upon religion an influence, not of new facts, but of a new form of thought. After the modern mind began to study facts, began to report facts from the earth, and fields, and the sea, and the heavens, by degrees there sprung up a new method of thought, a positiveness of style; and it soon reached the whole public, and the theologian and the thinker, in law or politics, and in art, said, "Let us all quit fancy and have facts." Not science, but this new form of thought, came to question the stories of the Bible, and to question the old ideas about heaven and hell and the ideas of the deity. Christianity had been loaded down with the creations of the imagination. It had been a collection of curiosities of form and place and event. Dante and Milton, although poets, were not much more dreamy than was the church. The air was full of angels or imps. The earth was the center of the universe. Houses were haunted. Graveyards were fearful places at night. The devil was a roaring lion or a cloven-footed beast. God was pictured and placed in books. In the Roman Church—and, after the division, in the Protestant Church—all thought and all learning, from that of the child in the nursery to the Judge on the bench and the King on the throne, were mingled with these creatures of a fancy that had never known bridle since the world was made. But after Humboldt and Miller, and Lyell and Herschel, and a large host of leading intellects began to learn and deal in facts, and the world saw how useful and beautiful they were, then the multitude began to say, "Let us seek facts in religion." Away with dreams.

Thus the positive school in material things has affected religion, not by finding some new origin of man or by finding an escape from a God, but by making popular and powerful a new form of public study and public knowledge. Men who once loved and believed marvelous stories now say, "We have lost our fancy, we are no longer children, we have learned to love facts." We admire Milton, and Dante, and Spenser, but we do not want them to compose for us confessions of faith. We shall put our poets in one group, our thinkers in another.

We must not, therefore, feel that all of the disturbance of the air in the sanctuary has come from Darwin and Huxley, and that school; very much of it has come from science, only so far as it turned the human race away from the love of mere pictures to the study of plain truth, so far as attainable. Strictly speaking the materialists have only modified the modern popular belief about the time when our earth began its large circle, and about the details of creation. So far as men have been made atheists by science they have been made such without much good, logical cause. Evolution if proven would not involve atheism, and, what is more to the point, it has not yet been proven. The only new sentiment which this positive school may logically claim to have created is the deep conviction that we do not know anything about the form or nature of God. But we should not have waited for such a teacher to come from the outside of our temples. We should not have lingered so long amid the puerilities of faith, and have committed to writing so much about the Almighty. It has permitted the mind to ponder over many things within its own depths, but that same mind should be slow about printing all its thoughts as being so much final truth from heaven. We ought not to have rushed into print so hastily with our platform about the ways of God to men. Our fathers, Roman and Protestant, presumed upon too intimate an acquaintance with the Maker of the universe, and, in their intercourse with us common people, they said more than their relations and information warranted. The bad effects of that old familiarity are now seen. They had not been near the throne. They had met with shadow and thought it a substance. All the old theological leaders were like the Cardinal de Rohan, who was under the long and sweet impression that he was being bowed to and in all romantic ways saluted in the parks of Versailles by the beautiful Marie Antoinette. What a diamond necklace he at last bought for the royal friend! In the meantime the illustrious and spotless woman was in her palace, and had no part in the drama of love and necklaces of poor Rohan. Our theological drama has met with much such a denouement. The Cardinals had met the King of Kings at Trent and Do rt, and Geneva and Westminster, and had received messages and commands, and lo! the Being with whom they held such communion was not at all the Alm'ghty nor the Savior. A false figure had come and played a dreadful part in the robes of the true Deity.

I am unable to perceive that the prevailing forms of research should do more than deeply impress upon us the truth that we are wholly unable to define the Heavenly Father; and that we should seek repose of mind and heart in the words "infinite," "incomprehensible," and their lofty parallels. But, instead of leading to atheism, this severity and ignorance which mark the positive method should only bring us up to the language of our own Book—"Who by searching can find out God?" and to Paul's words, "The King eternal, and immortal, and invisible." And for my own part I come willingly. It is far better to realize that we cannot measure the Creator than to be making ourselves unhappy by vain debates and wanderings. When we once felt that we knew all about our Heavenly Father, did we not find continual pain and defeat in our efforts to harmonize all things and this religious conception? Not a child could suffer or die, not a perplexing event come, not a dark cloud could arise without our arraigning the great God to learn what was His intention, wherein lay His love. We all ventured a little too near the throne. It seems to me we should all be glad that a more severe form of thought has come not to make us atheists, but to enable us to bow in wonder and submission. Our God, instead of disappearing, only redoubles His greatness. In such a presence we seem lifted above the storms of thought and inquiry, and feel deeply that in the empire of such a King all will be well. We fling away the information we once thought we possessed, and say with the religious Dryden:

> Wherever we are He is: the eternal Mind
> Acts through all places, is to none confined;
> Fills ocean, earth, and air, and all above,
> And through the universal mass doth move.

And again:

> Thy throne is darkness in the abyss of light,
> A blaze of glory that defeats the sight;
> O, teach me to believe Thee thus concealed,
> And search no further than Thyself revealed.

In such sublime statements alone can the modern heart find peace; and as we stand by the grave and know not with what body the dead shall rise, so we stand in this border of the universe, and know not in what form or quality the Being of God comes or goes around our homes and in our hearts. A less rash philosophy has come, and if it has destroyed some images of ideas it has to the religious made more touching and eloquent the hymn:

> Thy way, not mine, O God,
> However dark it be;
> Lead me by Thine own hand,
> Choose out the path for me.

If former times knew the mind of God to any great degree, if they felt that they knew the destiny of each man and each child, and the measurement of the joy or agony of that lot, that feeling has perished with those who knew it. Our bosoms are all strangers to it. We give the earth back to God to be governed, and at last punished, and rewarded. We bow in more ignorance, but also in more adoration.

In the circumstances as they are seen by my eyes, I would not dare to be such a pessimist as to hope no good from today or to-morrow, and to say, with some, religious faith is all going or gone. Nor, on the other hand, dare we be so buoyant and hopeful as to act as though no great crisis had come in the affairs of Christianity. It is most probable that times of peril are here. The good of earth is always in jeopardy, and, perhaps, is in peril now beyond the ordinary quantity of moral vicissitude. Be this as it may, we are bound to act as though a great crisis were approaching our altars. If it be true that the positivists are leading humanity to atheism, the actuality of such a leading will not be manifest in our passing day. A Christian civilization cannot become godless so suddenly. The bad seeds sown now will not blossom in our sight. What the science of to-day is doing will be seen only in the next generation. The persons upon whom its ill will begin to fall are now in the cradle or are just lisping their first words. The full results of evolution and materialism will come after the moralists now living shall have been called from this world. The case is peculiar. When the evidence of the evil shall have come, it will be too late to prevent it, to make an abatement. As the sailor dares not wait until the storm bursts in its fury, but must listen for sighing winds, and must mark the long lance-like clouds shooting up from north or west, and must begin to reduce his canvas, while as yet the sea is laughing in the sunshine, so must the Christian and the friends of Christianity and of all religion decline to wait for a storm to burst, but they must mark the fitful gusts of wind that come up from compass points accustomed to blow ill to the precious ships upon the sea; or as the cottage mother in the hills of Scotland often in winter grows uneasy because her precious ones are across the moor and night is falling around the hearth and the air is full of sudden wind and snow. It may be, there will not be a great overwhelming tempest; but then she goes again and again to the door and longs to see the children once again beneath her roof. All friends of religion must be thus far distrustful of the future, far enough to make them hasten to group the young hearts all near the altars, that they may be secure should it be that a tempest is slowly coming to sweep over the once-happy fields of faith.

Some Eras of Speculation.

The year 1823 witnessed the commencement of a speculation which culminated in a crisis such as had not been known since the South sea bubble. By 1824 foreign loans to the nominal amount of more than £34,000,000 had been issued in this country. In 1825 began the inevitable collapse. Chili and Brazil led the way with failures more or less redeemed in later years. Peru the penniless and Paraguay are to be found side by side, as in the records of 1875. Poyais, an independent state of Honduras, borrowed £100,000 on the personal security of Gregor MacGregor, the cacique of the country, and proved a worthy precursor of its present representative by failing to provide the interest on a single coupon. Its scrip, adorned with all the high-flown titles of its author, long served the turn of petty jobbers, and may even now occasionally be found reserved as a curiosity of the time. Along with these ventures from the New World just starting into existence came appeals from countries having a claim upon the patriotic or the sentimental interest of the English nation. Spain and Portugal contracted obligations for which they are wholly or partially in default at this day. Greece drew from the pockets of sympathizing bondholders the loans of £2,000,000, the interest on which has been suspended now for fifty years. The speculation of the period seems to have been insatiable. The political fate of nations hung in the balance of the stock markets. The operations of Mr. Rothschild and the London financiers, it is said, created an excitement scarcely inferior to the march of armies. The troops themselves, as Sydney Smith wittily remarked, advanced to the cry of "scrip and omnium," "reduced, and 3-per-cents." Following in the wake of foreign loans and politico-financial speculations came the more usual devices of the ingenious promoter. Foreign mines with a nominal capital of more than £24,000,000, more than 600 industrial companies calculated at nearly £400,000,000, stimulated the appetites of the small investor. As on all such occasions, charity and self-help, profit and philanthropy, went hand in hand. The same touching sympathy with the poor which produced the charitable corporation of 1708 produced the Equitable Loan Company of 1825, and has since been the faithful parent of more doubtful children in the shape of companies for workmen's dwellings and other philanthropic objects. Designed to relieve the industrious poor from the usurious exactions of the pawn-broker, and at the same time promising to its shareholders a dividend of 40 per cent., the Equitable Loan Company was one merely of the many schemes by which the unwary were lured to their destruction. Nor was the speculation confined to the Stock Exchange and its surroundings. Gambling in produce was another sign of the same spirit. The markets were glutted, the warehouses filled, speculative purchases were made as if prices must always be on the rise, and by the end of 1825 the ruin and consternation were wide-spread. As usual, upon the Stock Exchange was concentrated the wrath of those who had speculated and lost.—Blackwood's Magazine.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

SOME English engineers have projected a gigantic tunnel under the Gibraltar strait, from Spain to Africa. The length of the tunnel would be nine miles, and its deepest point about three-quarters of a mile under the surface of water. It seems that the engineers undertook to realize the dream of an Englishman who wanted to go by land not only to France, but even to Africa. Hence the projects of two tunnels, one under the English channel, the other under the Gibralter strait.

THE Railroad Gazette shows that, in the two years beginning with June, 1878, two-thirds of all the westward freight from New York went to ten Western cities, and was divided as follows:

	Tons.		Tons.
Chicago	175,455	Buffalo	38,628
Cincinnati	[illegible]	Milwaukee	47,712
Pittsburgh	101,392	Louisville	34,541
St. Louis	91,742	Toledo	34,710
Cleveland	65,486	Indianapolis	26,054
Detroit	[illegible]	Columbus	14,816

Chicago received more than Cincinnati and St. Louis together, and 19 per cent. of the whole.

THE report of the United States Board of Army Engineers, just published, presents the following interesting table as the result of two years' thorough trial of the relative efficiency of the various modern explosives, taking ordinary dynamite as the standard:

Dynamite, No. 1	100
Gun cotton	87
Dualin	111
Rendrock	94
Dynamite, No. 2	83
Vulcan powder	82
Mica powder	83
Nitro-glycerine	81
Hercules powder, No. 1	106
Hercules powder, No. 2	83

A LONG tabular statement setting forth in detail the establishment of every regiment in the regular forces, the disembodied militia and yeomanry cavalry for 1879-'80, has been issued from the British war office. The establishment may be summarized thus: Household cavalry, 1,362 of all ranks, and 825 horses; cavalry of the line, 15,696 of all ranks, and [illegible] horses; royal artillery, 35,216 of all ranks, and 12,816 horses; foot guards, 5,950; infantry of the line, 120,006; First and Second West India regiments, 919; royal Malta fencible artillery, 269; army service corps, [illegible], and [illegible] horses; army hospital corps, 1,745; artillery militia, 17,622; engineer militia, 1,315; infantry militia, 118,625, and yeomanry, 14,610; total, 336,755 of all ranks, and 25,725 horses; or, including the last establishment return of the volunteer force (244,263), 581,018.

A Talk With Artemus Ward.

I met Artemus Ward but once. I was quite young at the time, and was acting as city editor of the Star, published at Schenectady, N. Y. While I was editor of that sheet I met Artemus. I was standing on the bridge at the time, and, in talking about newspaper work, was about to say something in regard to my heavy editorial responsibility, but Ward checked me by asking:

"What creek is this?"

"Creek!" I exclaimed, "why, this is the Erie canal."

"How far is it navigable?"

"Why, of course it is navigable from one end to the other."

"Well," solemnly replied Ward, "that beats all the streams I ever heard of. By the way, I think I can make out some large boats anchored up the stream there—what are they, propellers or side-wheelers?"

I replied that they were merely canal boats, and were moved by horse power.

"Ah! I didn't think the stream was so shallow as that," said Artemus.

"As shallow as what?"

"Why, you say that those boats are pulled along by horses. Now, of course, they must walk along in front of the boat, mustn't they? I used to run a stone boat on my lamented Uncle John's farm, and I distinctly remember that the horses walked along in front."

I mentally declared that I had never before met with such ignorance. I spent some time in explaining the peculiarities of the big ditch, and, just as I had begun to think that at last I had set the stranger right on the subject, he knocked my hopes into kindling wood by remarking:

"I suppose that, when the stream dries up in summer, they put the boats on wheels, don't they?"

Then I began again and explained every feature in the canal from New York to Erie. How attentively he listened to my words. I can still see that melancholy face, lit by the sad light of the stars, and those mournful eyes looking into mine so earnestly, and again I hear, as I did then, after I had talked for nearly half an hour, going fully into the details of boating, the low, pathetic drawl:

"Any mills on this stream that you know of?"

Shortly after some gentlemen came along who seemed to be acquainted with my obtuse friend. Presently one called him Artemus, and then I commenced to reflect. I always reflect best when I'm hid away somewhere, so I went and hid myself.—Detroit Free Press.

AGRICULTURAL.

October Work on the Farm.

[From the American Agriculturist.]

IN gathering late potatoes, all that are dug should be put away safely before night. At this season it will not be safe to leave this tender tuber exposed over night, as a slight frost may spoil them.

CORN SMUT.—There is no doubt of the hurtful character of corn smut, and cattle should be prevented from devouring stalks affected with it. Where the cattle are worth more than the labor of saving them, this may be done by throwing out smutty stalks by themselves, and burning them.

CALVES AND YEARLINGS.—Cold and wet do much harm to young stock and stop the growth, which is rarely commenced again until the warm weather of the next season. A rough shed in the pasture will furnish useful protection, and a small supply of rich food is of value in keeping up the thrift.

HORSES.—The season is too far advanced for turning horses out at night. A cold rain coming on suddenly may do much harm. If horses are caught in the rain and thoroughly drenched, it will be well to rub them dry and then blanket them as soon as they reach home. But the blankets should never be put on until the horses are thoroughly dry.

TAKE CARE OF THE POTATO TOPS.—It is usual to let the pigs glean the potato fields. But, now that Paris green is generally used, the tops should be gathered and burned before the pigs are turned in. Long acquaintance with this deadly poison should not lead to carelessness with it. Neither is it safe to throw the tops into the yards where the pigs are kept.

HARNESS that has been soaked with water will dry hard, unless it is dressed while damp with some kind of non-drying oil. First wipe off the harness with a sponge, and then with a cloth kept for that purpose; you can apply the oil or dressing thoroughly. A coat of water-proof dressing applied now will be useful, but the harness should be thoroughly washed and made perfectly clean.

SAVING CORN STALKS.—There is no necessity to make large stacks of stalks, as they keep the better in small ones. Many farmers in the Eastern and Middle States put them up in large shocks in the field, or a lot near the barn, binding them well, especially at the top, and the fodder keeps bright and green in this way. This is little trouble, and the plan might be followed elsewhere with profit.

FERTILIZERS FOR WHEAT.—Any fertilizers to be used for wheat should be applied without delay. As good a growth as possible ought to be made before winter. Superphosphate of lime; nitrate of soda (in small quantities, however, at this season, on account of its solubility); fine bone-flour, Peruvian guano, salt and plaster can each be used with benefit, according to circumstances.

DRAINS.—Fields will need to be relieved of excess of surface water, but water furrows should be so arranged that as much of the rain fall as possible may be retained on the land. If water channels are made down a slope, soluble fertilizers and manure will be washed away. Make furrows diagonally across the slope with very little fall, and make them broad and shallow, instead of deep and narrow.

ROOT CROPS.—Mangels and beets are not hardy, and should be put away safely before severe frosts. In pitting these roots, it is well to remember that to prevent heating, they should be put into the pits when dry; the pits should not be too high or wide, but may be as long as desired, and a ventilator will be necessary at every six feet. It is safest to finish the pit at first, although the full coating of earth may not be put on until cold weather arrives.

SHEEP.—Long-wool sheep are easily chilled by a cold rain that would not trouble a Southdown or Merino. Long-wools, therefore, require protection from rain-storms, although the weather may not be very cold. An open shed in the field may be sufficient. If brought into the yards at night, sheep should not be shut up; they require abundant ventilation, and can not be crowded with impunity in close quarters. Where ticks abound, or scab exists, use the Cresylic or other effective dip.

COARSE fodder, hard and unnutritious, is the cause of much disease at this season. If there is no pasture available but the woods or a swamp, the animals condemned to such hard fare should get a moderate allowance of artificial food. A cheap, nutritious and healthful food may be made by mixing 100 lbs. cotton-seed meal and 200 lbs. of wheat bran, ground with 100 lbs. of oats; add two lbs. of Epsom salts and mix thoroughly. Two pounds a day of this mixture will be found of remarkable benefit when fed under the above circumstances.

A FARMER SHOULD KNOW HIS OWN FARM.—A farmer cannot work his farm safely without knowing all about his soil. Every field should be studied as to the effects of certain methods with fertilizers upon it. Then the owner can act with reasonable certainty. The plan of experimenting with fertilizers, suggested heretofore in the American Agriculturist, is not one for a year only, but should be followed up in successive years, until the character of each field is known. This is the best season to experiment upon fall crops, and no time should be lost if it is to be done; a year will thus be saved.

CORN HUSKING.—Corn is a crop that needs to be finally disposed of in the field. It cannot well be stored in stocks or barns as other grain, because the ears and husks cannot be dried perfectly. As delay in the field will not dry the ears thoroughly, there is no need to wait for the husking. Two weeks' exposure is sufficient to prepare the crop for husking, and in the pleasant October days it may be husked with less inconvenience than later. A saving of labor may be effected by taking the wagon to the field, and, as a basket of corn is husked, throwing it into the box. When the crop of corn is large, two wagons may be used, one to be loaded while the other is unloaded. This saves the labor of handling the corn a second time. A sufficient number of baskets should be provided for gathering the corn. Two wagons and a pair of horses will keep twenty ordinary huskers employed, and two or three binders will be kept busy in following them.

COWS.—If any inducement was ever needed for skillful management of cows, the present low price of milk and dairy products would offer one. To increase the product in every possible way is a vital necessity for dairymen. The best of feed, good water, frequent carding of the animal to preserve health, are all means towards this end. Now that pasturing is about over for the season, it will be well to look over the back volumes of the American Agriculturist, and study the articles on feeding animals. There are some feeding stuffs that are worth more than others at the same price. This is a point worth special study to all who have live stock.

ECONOMY.—The value of everything a farmer buys will probably increase considerably before long, if the increase has not already begun. Whether agricultural products advance in proportion or not a rigid economy in expenditures will be prudent. The experience of the past few years ought not to be soon forgotten. Every tool, implement, machine or appliance about the premises should be used and preserved with care; and before anything is purchased it may well be considered if it cannot be produced or made at home. Then the money may be doubly saved, for the needed article may be had without much cost, and the money it would have have required will be still in the pocket.

SUNDRY MATTERS.—Every kind of litter and waste matters, except weeds in seed, may be gathered and spread in the yards. Abundant litter for the stables and pens will be valuable; straw is worth too much for feed to be trodden under foot. If the straw and chaff, after threshing, are in the way, buy some thin steers, or take some cattle for feeding on shares; but give something besides the straw. A general cleaning up about the barns, stables, house and garden will give things a neat and comfortable appearance. A good arrangement for watering stock in winter may now be thought of. Poultry and other animals for fattening should be put up at once. Keep over only such fowls as are profitable. Clear all stock from vermin; carbolic soap may do for cows, calves and pigs, and carbolic powder for poultry. Lastly, but by no means least, every farmer should provide himself with a pair of good rubber boots and a rubber coat to protect himself in storms and preserve his health during the winter.

The Ute Indians.

The Ute tribe of Indians is one of the most powerful in the West, and, while it has held a hereditary friendship for white people up to the present, a possible war with it has always been dreaded by the frontier troops. In 1873 a large number of miners trespassed on the Ute reservations, and the Indians boldly declared that the miners must leave or there would be war. A military force cleared their country of the intruders and trouble was averted. Lieut. E. H. Ruffner, of the corps of engineers, who made a reconnoissance of their reservations, speaks in his report of the Ute Indians as a powerful and intelligent tribe, occupying the entire mountain region of Colorado, of undoubted courage, and possessed of all modern improvements in fire-arms.

The Utes on the Colorado reservations number between 2,900 and 3,000 souls, of whom the larger part belong to the Los Pinos Agency. Only about 600 or 700 report at the White River Agency. The tribe is divided into a number of bands, among whom the Tabequaches, Muaches, Capotes and Weinimuches are cared for at the Los Pinos Agency, and the Grand Rivers, Yampas, Uintahs and Peahs at the White River Agency. About as many more are scattered over the far Western States—Arizona, Utah, California, Nevada and New Mexico.

Though the Utes acknowledge the supremacy of the Government, no tribe of Indians is more averse to manual labor and has yielded less to civilizing influences, for the reason that until quite lately their reservations abounded with game, and all settlements were at a remote distance. They keep large herds of sheep and goats for food, but pay very little attention to farming, although they possess an abundance of rich farming lands, which form more than one-third of the arable soil in the State. In case of war they are able to fall back upon the mountain fastnesses, and can hold out as long as did the Modocs in the lava beds.

A German Invasion of Russia.

According to the Moniteur Universel the coolness which has lately arisen between Germany and Russia has been caused by the discovery of a carefully prepared plan for the invasion of Russia by the German army. The details of this plan were contained in some private papers lately stolen from the military attache of the German Embassy at St. Petersburg, Col. von Liegnitz, and it is regarded as a significant fact that, although many things of value must have been within his reach, the thief who took the papers took nothing else. It is also alleged that, in spite of the representations of the German Government, the Russian authorities have displayed but little zeal in endeavoring to trace and arrest the culprit. In Germany it is contended, the Moniteur Universel adds, that it is the duty of all military attaches to assume that a conflict between their country and that to which they are sent may at any moment arise, and that, therefore, the fact that the stolen notes contained a number of observations made apparently in contemplation of a war between the two empires does not in any way indicate that Germany at the present moment is animated by any hostile feeling toward Russia.

ALL SORTS.

THE cotton mills in the South are run night and day.

THE bell-punch law is shutting up many saloons in Dallas, Texas.

THERE is $4,500,000 in cash and bonds in the State treasury of Texas.

SO GREAT have been the changes since the establishment of the republic in France that many ladies of high family are studying in convents to qualify themselves for governesses.

THE Hon. Alexander H. Stephens has been a member of the Presbyterian Church since his youth, and says he has tried to live so that they would never have occasion to turn him out.

DURING the past three years, 132 American railroads, covering nearly 17,000 miles, and representing an invested capital of $728,463,000, have been sold under foreclosure.

A YOUNG man of Holyoke, who got imprisoned in a large refrigerator for three hours, said, when he was released, that he felt as though he had just been entertained at a fashionable church sociable.

IT is said by a London correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean that cigarettes are in common use by English ladies. Emily Faithfull, Elizabeth Thompson and the Duchess of Edinburgh are mentioned as great smokers.

THE Wane of the Honeymoon: Dearest of Loves—"My angel, we ought to be thinking of getting back to town." Dearest of Pets—"As soon as ever you like, dearest, to be done with this weary mooning and spooning."—Fun.

SO GREAT is the depression in Rutlandshire and North Leicester, England, that not one tenant farmer in that neighborhood can show a shilling profit during the last four years, and two of them have committed suicide quite lately from utter despair.

AT the international show at Emerson, Manitoba, the banner was awarded to Dakota for the best general display of farm products. A premium was awarded to Manitoba for her wheat. Minnesota was complimented for her extensive display of grain.

THE London Enquirer says: "The fastest trains now run as follows: Great Western, fifty-three and one-half miles the hour; Great Northern, fifty-one; London and Brighton, and London and Northwestern, forty-seven and one-half; Midland, forty-six miles."

SOME of the more sanguine of the treasury officials at Washington estimate that if no change is made in the revenue laws, and no further extraordinary expenditures are voted, such as that for the arrears of pensions, the public debt may be reduced $50,000,000 during the year 1880-81.

JOE PENTZ took a rifle to his wedding, at Mark's Gap, Texas. The sexton tried to persuade him to leave it at the door on entering the church, but he persisted in carrying it across his shoulder as he walked with his bride up to the altar rail. His explanation was that a rival suitor had threatened to kill him on this occasion, and he meant to be prepared for defense.

ATTENTION has been drawn anew to a Wisconsin religious sect, called Peculiar People, but known to outsiders as "Babes in the Wood." A farmer is the leader, and he has induced them to take up the most childish practices by a literal interpretation of the text, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

IT is proposed to propagate sponges on the Florida coast by cutting the live sponge into small pieces, attaching them to pieces of rock, and sinking them to proper depths in suitable locations. Prof. Schmidt reports that in three years each piece will attain a remarkable size. He estimates the cost of raising 4,000 sponges at $45, which can be sold for $80; leaving a net profit of $35.

Glass Beads.

Among the most curious examples of persistence in art are the well-known Aggry beads, which occur everywhere in Africa and in many parts of Asia. Similar beads are still made for the purpose of barter by glass-makers in England and Italy; yet they appear among the oldest remains in many widely-separated places. Mr. Nesbitt considers them Phœnician, and supposes they were made for the purposes of barter with uncivilized nations, such as the ancient Britons. Glass beads of extreme hardness have been found in British graves, and on analysis were found to be composed and colored in the same manner as those of undoubted Egyptian origin. The usual type is large—not round, but spindle-shaped, and marked with alternate indented bands of red and blue, the colors being separated by a narrow white line. These beads are found in England, on the Gold Coast, in India and Germany, in Italy and Egypt. They are particularly common in the cities along the course of the Rhine. The oldest specimens must be Egyptian, but in all probability the pattern was continued in many distinct manufactories at many different periods.—Saturday Review.

An Egg Hatched in a Man's Pocket.

A week or two since one of the superintendents of the hands engaged at the Rock quarry, about three miles from Rocky Point, in Pender county, found the egg of a terrapin concealed beneath a fragment of rock. He secured the egg and handed it to Mr. Thomas Williams, chief superintendent, for examination. Mr. Williams, being busy at the time, put the egg in his pocket until he could spare time to constitute himself an "investigating committee" on the subject of terrapin eggs. Being thus pigeon-holed, in accordance with general principles, the matter was forgotten until after the lapse of many days, and was then only brought to notice by his searching his pocket for some article that he usually carried there, when he discovered, not a terrapin egg, but a terrapin alive and kicking. Whether Mr. Williams feels any very strong maternal regard toward the terrapin or not we are not prepared to state.—Wilmington (N. C.) Review.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, OCT. 16, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

Glass Wicks for Lamps.

A wick for lamps is now manufactured entirely of glass, by Messrs. Voubriel and Beck of Hanau, Germany. It is designed chiefly for use in petroleum and spirit lamps; and with an equal amount of the wick turned up, it gives a much brighter light than cotton wick. In the spirit lamp, too, it is found to greatly increase the heat of the flame. No sparks are given off by this incombustible wick, nor does the light flare in draughts to the extent which it does with a burning wick; hence it makes the lamp safer. The smoking is also reduced, and it is stated that ten per cent. of oil is saved by its use. Of course the disagreeable task of trimming the lamp is rendered unnecessary, for being of glass the wick does not consume, but wasts away very slightly by fusion.—Chemical Journal.

Fruit as a Medicine.

The irregular eating of unripe fruit is well known to be unwholesome. The regular and moderate use of well ripened fruit is not so widely appreciated as contributing to health. Residents in regions where more or less malaria prevails have discovered that nothing is a more sure preventative of its deleterious effects than a regular supply of fruit. But fruit will not only prevent disease, but, in some instances, it has proved one of the best medicines to cure it. Many years ago a chronic cough, which had excited a good deal of uneasiness, was cured by daily eating ripe raspberries, recommended by a medical writer of high authority as an excellent expectorant. Severe colds are more apt to occur on the first cool and damp days of autumn than at other seasons. We have often cured these diseases on the first attack by eating copiously of ripe watermelons. The beneficial effects of drinking freely of cold water on such occasions are well known, watermelons supply a larger quantity than we would easily swallow in any other way.

Lessons in American Etiquette.

Do not be in too great a hurry to accept an invitation to dine with a Duke or Earl. Such invitations should be received and treated in a manner intended to show this class of people that they should feel themselves greatly honored by the presence of any American sovereign at their tables. On no account address him by any other title than "Mister," and if he objects, or if the toadies present laugh at you, ask him outright if his parents gave him a name, and what in thunder it is. Or if this is unpleasant call him "Cap," and inform him that "Cap." is Yankee abbreviated Latin for Dux, the original Jacobs of Duc, or Duke. Remember, also, while sitting at his table, that you are dining with a person who has never earned a penny in his life; that the bread you break has been bought by money really the possession of thousands of agricultural or other laborers, who have earned it a hundred times over, and that this man's ancestors did not come over with William, the conqueror, or fight with Richard Cœur de Lion for the possession of the holy sepulchre, but that they were pettifogging lawyers at the time of William III., and got the confiscated estates of the genuine English nobility who had to "dust" for supporting the imbecile Stuarts. Don't be afraid to say that your grandfather was a tailor or a blacksmith, as most likely he was, because he earned his money, which is more than your lord's grandfather did. Remember also that this duke, if you came to England and set up in business, would oblige you to ring the servant's bell like any other tradesman, and even though you were as big a lawyer as Mr. Evarts, you couldn't take tea with his family, because you didn't rank with the "higher class."—Graphic.

Plain Talk for Young Men.

Remember, my young friend, that the world is older than you are, by several years; that for thousands of years it has been full of smarter and better young men than yourself; that when they died the old globe went whirling on, and that not one man in ten million went to the funeral or heard of the death. Be smart as you can, of course. Know as much as you can; shed the light of your wisdom abroad in the world; but dont try to dazzle or astonish the people with it. And don't imagine a thing is so simple because you may happen to think it is. Don't be too sorry for your father because he knows so much less than you do; he used to think he was as much smarter than his father as you think you are smarter than yours.

The world has great need of young men, but no greater need than the young men have of the world. Your clothes fit you better than your father's fit him; they cost more money; they are more stylish. He used to be straight and nimble, and, perhaps thought his father old fashioned. Your moustache is neater, the cut of your hair is better, and you are prettier, oh, so far prettier than "pa." But, young man, the old gentleman gets the biggest salary, and his homely, scrambling signature on the business end of a check will drain more money out of a bank in five minutes than you could get out with a ream of paper and a copper plate signature in six months.

Young men are useful and they are ornamental, and we all love them, and we couldn't engineer a picnic successfully without them. But they are no novelties. They have been before. Every generation has a full supply of them, and will have till the end of time; and each crop will think themselves quite ahead of the last, and will live to be called old fogies by their sons. Go ahead. Have your day. Your sons will, by and by, pity you for your old, odd ways. Don't be afraid that your merit will not be discovered. People all over the world are hunting for you, and if you are worth finding they will find you. A diamond isn't so easily found as a quartz pebble, but people search for it all the more intently.

Improved Stock.

[Indiana Farmer.]

But few of our practical stock men are aware of the actual extent of the change produced in our domestic animals within the last half century. A single fact in relation to hogs may serve to illustrate this matter. Fifty years ago the farmer thought he was doing well if he brought his hogs to a net weight of 200 pounds by keeping them through two winters. About the year 1830 an improved breed of hogs known as the "English swine" was introduced into this country from Cheshire, England. They were distinguished by ears like an elephant's, long sides and large bones. These often reached 800 pounds in the perscribed life of a porker. About ten years later, the short legged China pig made his appearance and professed to be fit for the market with only one winter's feeding. This was a great improvement in the cost of pork; but there was an insurmountable objection to the chinaman among swineherds; he could not travel to the market. This objection, however, was soon removed by a cross between these two imported breeds without sacrificing the early maturing quality of the China pig. Continuing the improvement in the same line we have reduced the period of twenty months as the marketable age of a pig, to nine or ten months, and have advanced the standard weight to 300 pounds. Indeed, the Poland Chinas of to-day scarcely bear any resemblence to the animal we used to hunt with dog and gun in the wilds woods of Indiana.

It is true that it requires more food to keep a pig one year, in which time he will gain 300 pounds, than it did to keep his predecessor the first year of his pig life, for you cannot make 200 pounds of pork out of nothing; but it takes less food to make the same weight of pork in one year than in three. This point of early maturity is the important gain in our improved stock of every class. In horses it is not so well marked but in cattle and poultry it is a feature nearly as prominent as in hog raising. The question now is—when will we reach the limits of the possible in this direction?

Good Farm Hands.

There are many young men seeking employment on farms who do not seem to comprehend what the term "good farm hand" means. It is not merely an ability and willingness to work. Nor is it enough that he is acquainted with all the routine of farm business. Laborers come in contact with the family and especially the sons of the farmer, and as matter of conscience and duty the employer wants help of good moral character, who not only keep sober and are always at the place of business, but who will not be teaching his sons—the pride and hope of his life—all the foul lessons of debauchery and crime with which too many laborers are familiar. When an affectionate and kind mother first hears of her son swearing, or learns of his smoking cigars, she is generally informed that such things come from the example and teachings of the hired help. A farmer not only wants his help kind to his stock, but is far more important that they should be careful of the morals of his children. In hiring hands those who use liquor or smoke should be taken only when strictly temperate and moral ones cannot be had. The practice of smoking is a serious one on a farm. It is probable that half the fires in the country which destroy barns are caused by careless smokers. It is a dirty practice at best, but when it endangers so seriously a man's property, he should discriminate against smoking. We acknowledge the legal right of any man to smoke, but the right to refuse to employ them is equally as just. Profanity, obscenity, intemperance, disregard of the law of God and the State, etc., should debar any and all from the farm and from a free intercourse with the farmer's family, and we trust in employing help, farmers will look more to the moral health of their rising sons, as well as the security of their property. It is due to the future character of our country that the farmers should bear faithful testimony against intemperance, vice, immorality and obscenity in all their forms. Any young men who are loose on all these questions should be taught that on the farm, with the innocent children, is no place for anything which is unclean in thought word or action.—Iowa State Register.

F|O|R S|A|L|E
AT LOWEST PRICES AT
THE PHYSICIANS' DRUG STORE.
A full line of everything usually kept in a
FIRST-CLASS DRUG STORE,
—SUCH AS—
Pure Drugs, Patent Medicines,
Perfumery, Hair Oil, Fine Soaps,
Brushes, Lamp Chimneys, Coal Oil
And a complete line of
Toilet Articles.
Liver & Kidney Pads,

Trusses, Shoulder braces. A choice selection of pure wines and liquors, furnished for medicinal purposes only. A full line of Wall Paper and Window shades, with all the latest improved fixtures, will be sold at prices remarkably low. We ask a share of public patronage, feeling satisfied that we can offer inducements worthy of attention.

DAY'S
KIDNEY PAD
THE GREAT DISCOVERY
FOR DISEASES OF THE
KIDNEYS, BLADDER AND URINARY ORGANS. A remedy that will positively cure DIABETES, GRAVEL, DROPSY, BRIGHT'S DISEASE, HIGH COLORED URINE, INCONTINENCE AND RETENTION OF URINE, NERVOUS DEBILITY and FEMALE COMPLAINTS when NOTHING ELSE CAN. Its success proves the efficacy of ABSORPTION. It saved the life of its discoverer and is saving the lives of thousands of others. For sale by Druggists or sent by mail on receipt of the price. ($2.00)
DAY KIDNEY PAD CO.,
Sole Proprietors, Toledo, Ohio.
☞ Send your address for our pamphlet, "How a Life was Saved."

CASEBEER & MATHENY,
First door South of First National Bank. Auburn, Ind.

ISAAC HAGUE'S
NEW SHOE STORE!
A NEW STOCK OF
BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT
Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen, we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— first door east of McQuiston & Ralston' double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16–tf. ISAAC HAGUE

Excelsior Hardware,
Auburn, Ind.
SURE THING!
We buy goods to sell and not to keep.

Cooking Stoves, Box Stoves,
Flat Stoves, Heating Stoves,
Parlor Stoves, Elevated Stoves,
Coal Stoves, Oil Stove ,

And stoves of every ind. We have the largest stoc of stoves in the county, and will sell cheaper than the cheapest. Farmers, mechanics, merchants, traders and everybody, when you want a
STOVE!
call on us, we will sell you a first-class stove for less money than it takes to tell it.

Call and see what a pile of iron and tinware you can buy for a FEW CENTS. Our stoves are all fully warranted in every respect.

Our stoves have been submitted to the
SEVEREST TESTS
for years. They have become and are recognized as the STANDARD COOKING
STOVES
of America, and the fact that 420,000 are now in daily use, is positive proof of their great superiority over all others. Our large sales enable us to sell stoves at very low prices.

"SMALL PROFITS AND QUICK SALES" IS OUR MOTTO.
W. H. KIBLINGE & COMPANY,
North of court house, 1st door west of McQuiston & Ralston's double store.

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich Souther R. R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Sep. 29 1879, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accom.
Toledo	11 05 a m	12 01 a m	10 p m
Wauseon	12 16 "	1 00 "	"
Bryan	1 05 "	1 52 "	"
Butler	1 42 "	2 25 "	"
Waterloo	2 00 "	2 40 "	"
Sedan	2 10 "	2 50 "	"
Corunna	2 15 "	2 56 "	"
Kendallville	2 30 "	3 05 "	"
Ligonier	3 07 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	3 36 "	4 10 "	"
Elkhart	4 00 "	4 35 "	6 15 "

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	3 05 "
Goshen	1 29 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 56 "	10 42 "	"
Kendallville	2 20 "	11 18 "
Corunna	2 40 "	11 32 "
Sedan	2 47 "	11 38 "
Waterloo	2 55 "	11 45 "
Butler	3 10 "	12 01 a m
Bryan	3 45 "	12 30 "
Wauseon	4 27 "	1 27 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 40 "	9 50

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. E. CURTIS, Division Supt.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1878.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Night ex.	No. 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 12	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 13	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 25
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 45	2 40
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex.	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex.	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 30 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 48	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 25 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 20	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 45	4 55	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 00	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 6	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15 pm	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short neLi

75 Miles Shortest to Indianapolis, Louisville and all points South. 53 Miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas, Texas, and all points West. Direct Route to Detroit and all Michigan and Canada points.

TIME CARD IN EFFECT MAY 25. '79.

SOUTH.	MAIL.	EX.	ACC.
Bay City	....	am	....
Saginaw	....	am	....
Lansing	....	am	....
Detroit	....	am	3 35pm
Ann Arbor	....	am	5 20pm
Jackson	6 00am	am	6 50pm
Jonesville	7 10am	pm	9 00am
Bankers	7 27am	pm	9 40pm
Waterloo	9 13am	pm	12 40am
Auburn	9 25am	pm	1 00am
Auburn Junc.	9 35am	pm	1 10am
Ft. Wayne	10 20am	pm	2 35am
Indianapolis	6 25pm	pm	....
Cincinnati	7 00pm		....
Louisville	11 00pm	am	....
St. Louis	7 50am	am	....
Washington		8 00pm
Baltimore		9 20pm

NORTH.		EX.	ACC.
Baltimore		7 10am	....
Washington		8 35am	....
St. Louis	8 00am	7 00pm	....
Louisville	2 00pm	6 50pm	7 30am
Cincinnati			9 00am
Indianapolis	6 40pm	4 05am	11 50am
Ft. Wayne	5 00am	11 40am	5 00pm
Auburn Junc.	5 52am	12 30pm	6 25pm
Auburn	5 55am	12 35pm	6 30pm
Waterloo	6 08am	12 48pm	7 08pm
Bankers	7 51am	2 20pm	10 20pm
Jonesville	8 10am	2 37pm	10 45pm
Jackson	9 20am	3 40pm	12 35am
Ann Arbor	10 35am	5 10pm	2 05am
Detroit	11 50am	6 20pm	3 35am
Lansing		6 24pm
Saginaw		8 37pm
Bay City		9 35pm

All trains daily except Sunday. Through tickets to all principal points. For information as to routes and connections apply to
F. B. LOOMIS, Pres't & Gen'l Manag'r.
S. E. HOOPER, Gen'l Ticket Ag't.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect November 10, 1878.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	6 40 pm
Bluffton	2 12 pm	[illegible] pm
Montpelier	2 52 pm	[illegible] pm
Hartford	3 17 pm	[illegible] pm
MUNCIE	4 08 pm	[illegible] pm
Newcastle	5 00 pm
Cambridge City	5 37 pm
Connersville	6 17 pm
Cincinnati	9 20 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	6 15 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville	11 00 pm	8 20 am
Terre Haute		1 32 am
St. Louis		7 30 am

STATIONS	GOING NORTH Mail.	Express	Accom.
St. Louis		8 00 am	7 00 pm
Terre Haute		3 27 pm	1 32 am
Louisville		2 00 pm	6 50 pm
Indianapolis		6 40 pm	4 15 am
Cincinnati	8 00 am
Connersville	11 13 am
Cambridge City	11 46 am
New Castle	12 20 pm
Muncie	1 25 pm	9 20 pm	6 55 am
Hartford	2 12 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	2 40 pm	10 31 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	3 15 pm	11 00 pm	9 15 am
Fort Wayne	4 25 pm	11 15 am	9 45 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.
Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.
All trains daily except Sunday.
Trains run on Columbus time.
GEO. W. MULLER, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Detroit Eel River & Illinois R. R.

TAKE EFFECT DEC. 8, 1878.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	Mail. No. 2.	Accom. No. 6.	Local Ft. No. 8.
lv. Logansport	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mexico	[illegible]	[illegible]	7 01
Denver	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Chili	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Roann	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Laketon	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
N. Manchester	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Liberty Mills	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Collamer	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
S. Whitley	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Columbia City	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Collin's	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Churubusco	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
La Otto	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cedar Creek	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn Junct'n	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butler	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1.	No. 5.	No. 7.
Logansport ar.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mexico	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Denver	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Chili	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Roann	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Laketon	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
North Manchester	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Liberty Mills	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Collamer	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
South Whitley	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Columbia City	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Collin's	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Churubusco	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
La Otto	[illegible]	7 57	[illegible]
Cedar Creek	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn Junction	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn	[illegible]	7 10	7 10
Butler lv.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

CHICAGO DIVISION.

TIME TABLE No. 4.

TO TAKE AFFECT MAY 18, 1879.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Exp'ss	[illegible] Exp'ss
CHICAGO		10 00pm	9 10am
Walkerton Junction		1 00am	12 10pm
Milford Junction	2 20pm	2 14	1 30
Cromwell	3 20pm	2 45	1 48
Albion	4 25pm	3 10	2 08
Avilla	5 00pm	3 30	2 34
Garrett ar.	5 55pm	3 45	2 50
Garrett lv.	6 15am	3 55	3 10
Auburn Junction	am	4 05	3 24
St. Joe	am	4 25	3 44
Hicksville	am	4 45	4 00
Defiance	8 40am	5 27	4 45
Fostoria	2 30pm	7 25	6 40
Tiffin	3 40pm	7 56	7 05
CHICAGO JUNCTION	5 00pm	9 00	8 10

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Express	Chicg'o Expr'ss
CHICAGO JUNCTION	5 20am	8 15am	6 40pm
Tiffin	6 20	9 12	7 35
Fostoria	9 25	9 25	8 36
Defiance	4 45pm	11 20	10 38
Hicksville	6 18	12 14pm	11 16
St. Joe	6 50	12 30	11 41
Auburn Junction	7 35	12 50	12 00am
Garrett ar.	8 00	12 58	12 10
Garrett lv.		1 25	12 20
Avilla		1 40	12 33
Albion		2 06	12 56
Cromwell		2 32	1 22
Milford Junction		3 00	1 36
Walkerton Junction		4 02	2 50
CHICAGO		7	6 40

N. H. WOOD, Master of transportion Chicago Division, Garrett.
C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans. Ohio Division Chicago.

JUS TREEIV'D
—AT—
J. ABRIGHT'S

Fine Gold and Plated Jewelry.
Ladies Gold Watches,
American Watches,
Rogers & Bro. Silverware,
A splendid line of imported Vases
Watch Chains, magnificent
Holiday Gifts, Lockets,
Ladies Sets, Gents
GOLD & SILVER SETS
Sleeve and Collar Buttons, Jet
Shell and Horn Jewelry,
All at astonishingly
LOW PRICES.
Watches and Jewelry neatly repaired on short notice

SAVED!
TIME, PATIENCE & MONEY
By always taking the great
Wabash Route,
FOR ALL POINTS
orth, East, South or West
LIGHTNING TRAINS,
Invariably on Time, with Close and Sure Connections.
No changes of cars to St. Louis, Hannibal, Quincy, Keokuk, Peoria, Burlington, Kansas City, Atchison and St. Joe, and only one change to all points in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Arkansas and Texas, forming the SHORTEST AND QUICKEST
—AND—
Only Direct Route
from the West to all points in the East, including New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.
Through Sleepers from St. Louis to Boston, 1223 MILES,
The Longest Sleeping Car Line in the World.
A. L. HOPKINS, Gen'l Manager.
R. ANDREWS, Gen'l Sup't.
H. C. TOWNSEND,
Gen'l Passenger Agent [illegible], O.

Recorders Office

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 9. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, OCTOBER 23, 1879. Number 43.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. S. Dills,

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House, Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

Thos. H. Sprott,

REAL ESTATE, COLLECTION AND INSURance Agent. Loans effected on improved farms. Kansas lands for sale or trade.
Auburn, Indiana

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller,

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

D. J. Swartz, M. D.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO DISEASES of the Eye and Ear, Fistula in Ano, Hemorrhoids or Piles and Chronic Ulcers. Office on Main street, over Shaffer's Furniture Store, Auburn, Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET. EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross, Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month; at Waterloo, the first and at Butler the second Saturday of every spring and fall month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.
W. H. MACKINTOSH,
Co. Sup't, of schools.

$66 A WEEK in your own town, and no capital risked. You can give the business a trial without expense. The best opportunity ever offered for those willing to work. You should try nothing else until you see for yourself what you can do at the business we offer. No room to explain here. You can devote all your time or only your spare time to the business, and make great pay for every hour that you work. Women make as much as men. Send for special private terms and particulars, which we mail free. $5 outfit free. Don't complain of hard times while you have such a chance. Address H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1y.

LIVE AGENTS WANTED.

To sell Dr. Chase's Recipes; or Information for Everybody, in every county in the United States and Canadas. Enlarged by the publisher to 648 pages. It contains over 2000 household recipes and is suited to all classes and conditions of society. A wonderful book and a household-necessity. It sells at sight. Greatest inducements ever offered to book agents. Sample copies sent by mail, postpaid, for $2.00. Exclusive territory given. Agents more than double their money. Address Dr. Chase's Steam Printing house, Ann Arbor, Michigan. 41-3m.

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $5 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 29-1y.

—Use Card's fever and ague cure and liver invigorator. For sale by F. E. Davenport and Casebeer & Matheny. 34-8m.

What the Farmer Should Study.

The farmer should study the laws of concentration. He should learn how to concentrate his crops into the best paying articles. Does he consider that butter, cheese, beef, pork and mutton represent only a certain amount of grass, hay and grain that his farm produces? That instead of selling the raw commodities, he can, by putting them into these articles, get much better returns for his products. His study should be how to transform the raw products of his farm into something that is concentrated and that will bring him most money. What he raises has to go to some market. By condensing it little freight will have to be paid, and thus much will have to be saved. A farm is not only a farm; it is or should be, a factory for changing the raw products into articles of general consumption that have a commercial value the world over—that are of the best quality, that keep well and sell well, and bring prices that will pay well for the skill, labor and capital employed in producing them.

How to Milk.

[Indiana Farmer.]

The faster and more gently a cow is milked the greater will be the amount given. Slow milkers always gradually dry up a cow, and for the reason that if the milk be not drawn about as fast as it is given down it will subsequently be withheld, and that withheld is, as a matter of course, what is known as the strippings, in fact, the upper surface of milk in the udder. Many milkers draw the milk with a strong downward pull—in fact, with a jerk. This should never be allowed, it irritates the cow, and often injures the bag. Fill the teat and with a firm pressure of the last three fingers empty it, drawing slightly on the teat and udder at the same time; so proceed alternately with each hand until the milk supply is exhausted. Many milkers get the habit of slow milking because steady, firm, quick milking tires the fingers and wrists until by practice the muscles get used to the work. Until this use comes naturally the individual should only milk such a number as they can without severe cramping of the hands, what are milked should be milked fast, increasing the number until at last there is no tiring whatever. Five minutes is about the limit that should be allowed for milking a cow. There is another thing well worthy of being remembered. Cows should be milked as nearly at a given hour, morning and evening, as possible, since undue distension of the udder is always injurious.

A Few Pertinent Questions.

Can any one point to a single financial measure of the republican party for the last 12 years which in the direct effect has not operated in the interest of the capital and at the expense of the industry and labor of the country, which has not had the immediate and direct effect to make the rich richer and the poor poorer? For example, the enactments of congress, of March, 1869, making the principal of the bonds payable in coin—the act of 1873 demonetizing silver—and the resumption act of January, 1875. Can any one explain why it is that since the Democrats secured a majority in the house of representatives, now over four years ago, we have not heard of such things as the Credit Mobilier ring, the Pacific railroad subsidy ring, the Indian ring, the bank and bond monopoly ring, and other rings too numerous to mention, but the names of which are familiar to every reader? And that such rings have substantially disappeared from the lobbies of congress, while during the few years previous such rings constantly thronged every avenue of the national capitol. Can any one explain why it is that since the democrats have come into power in the legislative department of the government our national credit has been constantly improving notwithstanding the constant alarm sought to be created by the cry that the democratic party was in favor of repudiation, and sought the overthrow of the government? Can any one explain why it is that if the democratic party is a "revolutionary and treasonable" organization, so many of the leading men of the republican party should have come over to the democratic party and be now engaged in battling for its success, employing their best talents and energies to accomplish the overthrow of the party with which they once acted—why it is that the national party is so solidly co-operating with the democratic party in its efforts to reform the government, and inaugurate a new policy upon which its operations are to be conducted?

We would like a statesmanlike, philosophic answer to these questions. We might increase the number, but let the above suffice for the present.

The Front Gate.

[New York Times.]

In all ages the front gate has been recognized as an indispensable element of real courtship. Of course, girls have been courted in brown stone houses devoid of front yards and of every species of practicable gate, but in such cases the poetry of love-making is lacking. According to Buckle and Darwin and Spencer, domestic happiness exists only in countries where front gates abound. Why is it that the French marriages are arranged by the parents of the bride and groom, and are hence based, not upon love, but upon convenience? and why, in our favored land, are marriages arranged without the slightest references to the old people? It is plainly because in France the front gate is rare, and its true uses are unknown, while in our rural towns every house has its front gate, and the merest child knows its uses. French marriages, contracted with the sweet influences of the gate, are too frequently unhappy, but with us the path of domestic bliss lies through the front gate, and is too plain to be easily missed. Among the Romans the wife was little better than a slave, and on Sunday nights the young unmarried Roman, instead of spending his evening in the "dim, religious light of the back parlor,' as Milton beautifully says, went to the circus or the amphitheater to witness a gladiatorial walking match or the antics of the Talmage of the period. The discovery of Pompeii explains why courtship was a lost art among the Romans. There was not a gate of any kind in the whole city wall, and we have every reason to suppose that nothing analogous to our front or back gates existed throughout the wide extent of the Roman Empire.

It is in our western states that the front gate has reached its highest development of an aid to courtship. As is well known, there are two schools, which differ radically in their theory of the true method of using the gate. The Concord school, of which Mr. Ralph Waldo Emerson is the leader, holds that both the young men and the young women should lean on the same side of the gate—the inner side being regarded as preferable. The western school, on the other hand, insists that the young lady should lean on the inside of the gate while her lover leans on the outside. Though the western school lacks a leader of the fame and experience of Mr. Emerson, it has by far the greater number of adherents, and to the unprejudiced mind there can be but little doubt that its doctrine is the true one.

It is easily to comprehend how the front gate originally came into use. The original pair of lovers who first utilized it had doubtless sought a place where they could enjoy privacy, and, at the same time perceive, while yet afar off, the unsympathetic father and the wayfaring small boy. The locality of the front gate, commanding as it does a full view of the house from which the father may emerge with his heartless boot, and the public street, along which the casual small boy may wend his whistling way, would naturally be selected, even by lovers wholly without engineering instincts. Experience soon showed that the front gate possessed other unequaled strategic advantages. To the eyes of the public the lover on the outside of the gate always seemed to be in the act of going away. When any one except the avenging father drew near, the lover would remark, "Well, as I was saying, I must really go;" and then, when the objectionable person had passed on, the sweet sorrow of prolonged parting could begin again and last until the appearance of an elderly gentleman with a club at the front door seemed to point to the propriety of an immediate and real parting.

The Moquis Indians.

The Moquis Indians of Arizona, numbering 1,700, live in seven villages on the tops of three cliffs or headlands that rise more than 600 feet above the plains. Why they choose these unhandy places is a mystery. On reaching the villages, says a recent visitor, one finds one's self on a flat ledge of bare rock which extends out from the main table nearly half a mile in length, and from 10 feet to perhaps 800 feet in width. The sides are almost perpendicular. The most populous of these villages, Wal-la-pi, is on the extreme end of the rocks, where the width is not over 100 feet. All the water for all purposes is carried in earthen vessels on the backs of men and women from a spring near the foot of the mountain, a distance of nearly a mile, while the wood is brought eight miles. Here these people have lived longer than they can tell, even from their traditions, and hither-to they have been averse to a change of location, notwithstanding the difficulty of obtaining their necessary supplies and the distance from their fields and herds.

Those Who Have Received Him.

Gen. Grant, during his famous tour around the globe, now happily ended, was received with distinguished honors by the following princes, potentates and powers of the earth, besides many others not mentioned:

Queen Victoria, of England.
King Leopold, of Belgium.
The Khedive of Egypt.
The Sultan of Turkey.
King Humbert, of Italy.
Pope Leo XIII.
President MacMahon, of France.
The King of Holland.
Emperor William, of Germany.
Prince Bismark.
King Oscar, of Sweden.
The Emperor Alexander, of Russia.
The Emperor Francis Joseph, of Austria.
King Alfonso, of Spain.
President Grevy, of France.
M. Gambetta.
Viceroy Lytton, of India.
King Thebau, of Burmah.
Prince Kung, of China.
The Emperor of Siam.
The Mikado of Japan.—Philadelphia Press.

A Model Statesman.

Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks is so unlike blatant demagogues of the Blaine and Chandler type, and so little given to pushing himself before the public and blowing his own trumpet—after the manner of Sherman and Logan, and Woodford and Butler—that it is assumed by many people that he is a man of little force or account. His modesty like Washington's, is equal to his merit, and he is hapily endowed with the moderation which is the usual accompaniment of wisdom. He does not belong to the fussy, noisy, self-seeking class of politicians, and is a total stranger to the intrigues and machinations by which the "still hunt" school of managers compass their ambitious and selfish project. He is an old-fashioned statesman, in some respects resembling Webster, and in others strangely like Abraham Lincoln. His recent speech at Cleveland is an admirable illustration of his comprehensive views, his clear and vigorous sense, his conservative bias, and above all, his devotion to the interests of the country, and to the success of the democratic party as a means to secure the prosperity and advancement of the nation. There is no passion in what he says, no appeals to partisan prejudice, but calm reasoning in addressing the reason of his auditors. He seems to feel that the interests at stake are too important to be declaimed about; and what people need is not fever heats of passion, but the clear, cold light of truth and judgment. This is the true theory, and Mr. Hendricks illustrates in a striking way the methods which genuine statesmanship adopts in dealing with political agitations

Why the South is Solid.

Ex-Gov. Walker's speech at Cooper Institute.]

The south is solid, and the republicans made it so. There is scarcely a respectable white man in the south, no matter what may have been his nativity or previous political proclivities, who does not of his own free choice vote the conservative of democratic ticket. It is also true that this remarkable phenomenon is the direct logical and legitimate result of republican teaching and action. Were there no republican party, there could be no "solid south." Dissolve the republican to-day and the solidity of the south would melt away like frosts before the rising sun. The south became solid from a necessity created by republican misconduct and misrule. By disfrachising the whites and enfranchising the blacks, and through oath bound secret societies and infamous "Union leagues" banding the negroes together in solid phalanx in avowed hostility to the whites, the republicans established the "color line." By a system of wanton and unconstitutional legislation such as never disgraced the statute books of any nation, originated and enforced by the republican party for the declared purpose of making the negro the ruling race of the south, they forced the whites into close union and harmony of action among themselves as a matter of self-preservation. As the hardy pioneer of our border settlements, when assailed by their savage and bloodthirsty foes band themselves together for mutual defense and protection, so the whites of the south, when they found the integrity of government and security of life, liberty and property, and the very existence of society itself assailed by the ignorant and incapable negroes, consolidated and led on by republican leaders, were compelled to unite together for the protection and preservation of all they held most dear. Not until the republicans by their manchinations had established the "color line," and by it sought to republicanise the entire south—not until several states had long endured the terrible [illegible] of riot, robbery and rapine of negro or republican rule—did the southern whites arouse themselves to the absolute necessity of united action to stay the tide of ruin and desolation which was rapidly overwhelming them. Ah! I envy not the record made by the republican party in this southern business. Like the ghost of Banquo, it will be eternally rising up in condemnation of their deeds, and will not down at their bidding. Do you wonder at the "solid south?" Do you not rather wonder that in this enlightened age there could be found a body of men who could be guilty of such terrible wrongs and oppressions as the republicans inflicted upon the south, and that there existed a people who could so patiently submit? Self-preservation is the first law of nature, and this great first was the parent of a "solid south." This united action of the southern whites has been productive of great good. It has redeemed their country from wrong and corruption and inaugurated honest and efficient governments, with laws as well enforced and order as fully maintained as in the other sections of the country. Crimes are no more frequent than among a like amount of population elsewhere. The "solid south" is a terror to none save stalwart republicans, and their terror is inspired solely by the present and prospective loss of political power. Any other pretense is hollow hypocracy and bald misrepresentation.

Position in Sleep.

A new work on "Sleep and Sleeplessness" says: A constrained or uncomfortable posture will often prevent repose. Lying flat on the back with the limbs relaxed would seem to secure the greatest amount of rest for the muscular system. This is the position assumed in the most exhausting diseases and is it generally hailed as a token of revival when a patient voluntarily turns on the side; but there are several disadvantages in the supine posture which impair or embarrass sleep. Thus, in weakly states of the heart and blood vessels, and in certain morbid conditions of the brain, the blood seems to gravitate to the base of the back of the head, and to produce troublesome dreams. In persons who habitually, in their gait or work, stoop, there is probably some distress consequent on straightening the spine. Those who have contracted chests, especially persons who have had pleurisy and retain adhesions of the lungs, do not sleep well on the back. Nearly all who are inclined to snore do so when in that position, because the soft palate and uvula hang on the tongue, and that organ falls back so as to partially close the top of the windpipe. It is better, therefore, to lie on the side, and in the absence of special chest disease, rendering it desirable to lie on the weak side so as to leave the healthy lung free to expand, it is well to choose the right side, because when the body is thus placed the food gravitates more easily out of the stomach into the intestines, and the weight of the liver does not compress the upper portion of the intestines. A glance at any plate of the visceral anatomy will show how this must be. Many persons are deaf in one ear, and prefer to lie on a particular side; but if possible, the right side should be chosen, and the body rolled a little forward, so that any saliva which may be secreted shall run easily out of the mouth, if not unconsciously swallowed. Again, sleeping with the arms thrown over the head is to be deprecated; but this position is often assumed during sleep, because circulation is then free in the extremities and the head and neck, and the muscles of the chest are drawn up and fixed by the shoulders, and thus the expansion of the thorax is easy. The chief objections to this position are that it creates a tendency to cramp and cold in the arms, and sometimes seems to cause head-aches during sleep, and dreams. These small matters often make or mar comfort in sleeping.

How Shot are Made.

A correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal has been to the top of the shot-tower (212 feet) in Chicago, and describes the process of making shot:

I had a dim idea that lead was melted below; that this molten stuff was hauled to the top of the tower, then dumped down into the water below, and that this made shot. The real process is this: As pure lead will not make perfect globules, it is necessarially "tempered." This "temper" is prepared by the addition of ingredients, of which arsenic is the main property, below; run into bars convenient for use, and with the pig-lead, hoisted to the very top of the tower, where both are melted in proper proportion together. Mr. Gates and myself, back to back, and very much humped, entered the small, though powerful elevator, not over 3½ feet by 20 inches in size, and went up, up, up, with a horrible din roaring all about us. At the very top are two little circular rooms not over eight or ten feet in diameter, one about 12 feet below the other, and each containing two huge kettles in which the pig-lead and the "temper" are melted. In the busy season these are run at night, and the flame, away up there in the darkness, reminds one of signal torches upon towers in the feudal days. From one or the other of the two kettles in both rooms—as each room has a separate shaft—streams of shot are constantly flowing. At the bottom of each kettle the molten stuff pours into square pans perforated at one side. These perforations are large or small, according to the size of shot desired, and separate the mass into distinct, delicate, gleaming streams which, in turn, as they come in contact with the atmosphere, separate into perfect globules, or shot, which are cooled in their 200 feet journey and the water into which they fall below.

But now come what, to me, were still more interesting processes. Out of the shot pit, up through the water, an endless belt, with cups attached, carries the wet shot, depositing it in a huge revolving heated cylinder, where the globules are thoroughly dried. From this they pass out upon a descending series of slightly inclined tables the lower edge of each one being a few inches above, and distant from, the succeeding table. The perfect globules, from their specific gravity, go bounding over these spaces; but the imperfect shot are gradually forced along until they reach them, when they fall into receptacles, and being remolten, go over the same journey again. From these sorting tables the shot are carried to a series of sizing-sives, with perforated sheet-brass bottoms. Moved back and forth by machinery, the shot of a smaller size pass through these perforations, larger shot of different sizes, from the motion of the sives, and from their weight, gradually sorting themselves with absolute perfection. From the sorting-sives the shot pass into polishing barrels, containing a preparation the main constituent of which is plumbago, and, emerging from these, burnished like silver, find their way into repositories in the story below, to the mouth of each of which is attached a delicately adjusted automatic scale, which will discharge precisely 25 pounds of shot into the bags beneath. Each bag, however, is tested, and after being sewed up, these shot, which have arrived at their absolute perfection of form and finish, seemingly through much of their own act and volition, are ready to be sent forth to the hunter and sportsman on their death-dealing mission.

All Dead.

[Detroit Free Press.]

Six months ago a colored man living on Indiana street gave a white man living on Third street his note of hand for $20, due in six months. A white man living on Beaubein street indorsed it, and the holder soon sold it to a man living on Twenty-fourth street. The note fell due last Saturday and was in the hands of a widow, whose husband died four weeks ago. In tracing up the note it was found that the maker, the indorser and the two men who had held it were all dead, though every one was in good health when the note was made Learning of this state of affairs, the widow made no effort to collect payment, but tore the note in pieces, fearful that some bad luck might come to her.

A Lucky Woman.

The publishers of the HOUSEKEEPER are bent on the general introduction of that helpful and beautiful household monthly, and they make some extraordinary offers in their premium list—gloves, ties, napkins, table cloths and spreads, tidies, silver thimbles, and a variety of articles which ladies like. But the most liberal offer is this: They will send the HOUSEKEEPER one year and three months, that is to January 1, 1881, free to the first lady, from any postoffice, who encloses 25 cents in postage stamps, which barely covers the cost of postage and mailing. Any lady who sends and fails to be first, will receive the monthly four months, or her money back as she directs. The regular subscription price of the monthly is 75 cents a year and cheap at that. Sample copies with full particulars free.

Address, THE HOUSEKEEPER,
Minneapolis, Minn.

—Heavy silk fringes, silk velvets, velveteens, corduroy, trimmings, silks, and a large assortment of embroideries at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-2t.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, OCT. 23, 1879.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

WESTON'S share of the profits of the New York walking match have been decided exempt from attachment by his creditors. Mrs. Weston paid his initiation fee, and claims the money, the court sustaining the claim.

BY a collision on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, near Wheeling, W. Va., an engineer and fireman lost their lives—also, two lads who were stealing a ride.

THE leading pedestrians in the last New York walking match are: Murphy, 505 miles; Howard, 500; Faber, 482.

THE death of the venerable Henry C. Carey, of Philadelphia, is announced, at the advanced age of 86 years. He was the best-known of American writers on protection.... Dr. Le Moyne, the cremationist, who built the furnace at Washington, Pa., died lately, and was burned in his own crematory.... Henry H. Farnum, President of the National Bank of Port Jervis, N. Y., died a few days ago, aged 71 years. He was married six days before, and leaves to his widow $1,000,000.

BONDS to the value of $28,000 were stolen, last week, from a safe in the office of Merritt Trimble, a well-known iron merchant, in the Coal and Iron Exchange, New York, by three strangers, who came apparently on business. No clew to the robbers.

THE remains of the late Dr. Le Moyne were reduced to ashes at Washington, Pa., in the furnace of his own invention, in which, under his direction, the body of Baron De Palm was burned. Before the remains were committed to the retort, a post-mortem examination was made, the chief result of which seems to have been the ascertainment of the fact that the doctor's brain weighed less than that of the average man. The disposition of his remains according to the mode of which he was an enthusiastic advocate, it seems, does not consummate his designs in that regard. By his will it is provided that his heirs shall assent to cremation of their remains after death, and should they refuse to give such assent they are to be disinherited.

A GREAT crowd assembled at Chautauqua lake, N. Y., on the 16th inst., to witness a rowing match between Hanlan, of Canada, and Courtney, of New York. During the preceding night some rascals broke into Courtney's boat-house and sawed his two boats in twain. Having no suitable boat at hand, Courtney refused to row, and Hanlan pulled over the course alone and claimed the race and the stakes. The stakeholder, however, refused to turn over the money.

THE WEST.

TWO PASSENGERS were killed at Maywood, Ill., by a collision between an accommodation and a gravel train on the Northwestern railroad, the other evening.

TWO MEN who are believed to have been of the party of masked desperadoes who robbed the express car on the Chicago and Alton railroad at Glendale last week have been arrested at Holden, Johnson county, Mo. The circumstances attending their capture indicate that the detectives were not mistaken in their men.... Lachutte, an Indian, for the murder of a Chinaman, was hanged at New Westminster, Cal., a few days ago.... Thirty-nine Mexicans were killed by the Apache Indians at Hillsborough, New Mexico, last week, and their bodies burned. Santa Fe has organized for defense against the savages.

THE SOUTH

DISPATCHES of the 12th inst., from Grayson, Ky., give the situation of the Underwood war at that date as follows: "Jesse Underwood was shot in the door of his father's house, known as Fort Underwood, yesterday morning. The Holbrook party surrounded the house, threatening to kill anybody who would dare to bury Jesse's body or rescue George, who is badly wounded, and with the women and children, all that remains of the unfortunate Underwood family, inside of the house. George today sent word to the County Judge, praying for help and protection. The Governor has been appealed to, but has not responded. This is the fifth murder within the last three weeks in Carter county, four of the murdered men being Underwoods and a member of the Holbrook tribe, and nothing has been done to check this fearful bloodshed."

A MEMPHIS dispatch of Oct. 16, says: "Total yellow-fever deaths to date, 584. Rev. Jacob J. Peres, who died yesterday, was the learned Jewish divine, well known all over the country. Concordia, Miss., has lost sixteen out of forty-eight cases. There is no hope of the fever abating during the continuance of the present warm weather."

POLITICAL.

A. C. WOODWORTH has been put upon the Massachusetts Greenback ticket for Lieutenant Governor, in place of Wendell Phillips.

ELECTIONS were held in Ohio and Iowa for State officers and members of the Legislature on Tuesday, the 14th of October. In Ohio there were three candidates for Governor—Charles Foster, Republican; Thomas Ewing, Democrat, and A. Saunders Piatt, Greenbacker. The vote of the State in recent years has been as follows:

Year.	Rep.	Dem.	Grbk.	Proh.
1879	274,120	279,966	86,538	5,674
1877	249,105	271,625	16,401	4,836
1876	330,698	323,182	3,057	1,636

At the election held on the 14th inst. the entire Republican ticket was chosen by a plurality of about 20,000. The Greenback vote was unexpectedly small. Following is a list of the State officials elected:

Governor	Charles Foster.
Lieutenant Governor	Andrew Hickenlooper.
Supreme Judge	William W. Johnson.
Attorney General	George K. Nash.
Auditor	John F. Oglevee.
Treasurer	Joseph Turney.
Member of Board of Public Works	James Fullington.

The Legislature is Republican in both branches by small majorities, which insures the election of a Republican United States Senator to succeed Mr. Thurman.... In Iowa there was also a triangular contest, John H. Gear having been nominated by the Republicans for Governor, Henry H. Trimble by the Democrats, and Daniel Campbell by the Greenbackers. Gear is elected by a majority of upward of 30,000 over both of the other candidates. The vote of Iowa in recent years has been as follows:

Year.	Rep.	Dem.	Grbk.
1879	134,544	1,899	123,577
1877	121,546	79,353	34,228
1876	171,382	112,121	......

The Republicans this year secure the Legislature by the usual heavy majority.

WASHINGTON.

THE question of transferring the Indian Bureau from the Interior to the War Department is being again agitated.

RETURNS to the Department of Agriculture for October show an average condition for the cotton States of 81 per cent., a decline since Sept. 1 of 4 per cent. Compared with October, 1878, there is a decline of 9 per cent. The condition then was 90. Storms of great severity visited Louisiana and Mississippi, causing great damage. Insect injuries are not reported to any great extent; although almost universal, their appearance was too late to do much damage. Unfavorable weather in Alabama and Georgia, in September, was reported. Drought in Texas has shortened the prospect in that State nearly 25 per cent.

FORTY-SIX MILLION gallons of petroleum and petroleum products were exported from the country during August, the value of which was $4,[illegible],102.

GENERAL.

GEN. CROOK has written a letter in regard to the Indian question, in which he declares that the Indian policy of the nation is all wrong in allowing dishonest persons to rob the tribes and incite them to war. The letter concludes as follows: "The true, the only policy to pursue with the Indian is to treat him just as one should a white man. If he makes war on our frontier settlements, punish him; but after he has been reduced to submission protect him in life and property. Keep white thieves from plundering him; let him see that peace means progress; that he has a market for every pound of beef and every hide, and every sack of grain, and, my word for it, he will make rapid advances. Self-interest will impel him to imitate us, to send his children to school, to adopt clothing, perhaps our language, and to devote his attention to raising cattle and horses, and eventually to qualify himself for citizenship."

GRAIN in sight in our cities: Wheat, 18,147,000 bushels; corn, 10,559,000 bushels; oats, 2,542,000 bushels; rye, 687,000 bushels; barley, 1,706,000 bushels.... Exports from seaboard ports last week were: Flour, 107,400 barrels; wheat, 4,203,605 bushels; corn, 1,100,673 bushels; oats, 2,351 bushels; rye, 84,896 bushels; pork, 5,460 barrels; lard, 2,987,109 pounds; bacon, 9,882,359 pounds.... Shediac, a town in New Brunswick, has suffered by a fire which destroyed most of the principal business houses. Thirty-six buildings were destroyed.

GEN. POPE in an official order compliments Capt. Dodge, as follows: "The Department Commander takes peculiar pleasure in exercising his privilege thus publicly and formally to express his high appreciation and hearty commendation of the gallantry and soldierly conduct of Capt. Francis S. Dodge, Ninth cavalry, and the officers and men of his company, D, Ninth cavalry, in forcing a junction with the forces under Capt. Payne, Fifth cavalry, which were beleaguered by the hostile Indians. The report in which this result is announced is written with the severest brevity, and shows that Capt. Dodge, in addition to his other qualities, possesses that perfect modesty which should always characterize the true soldier. His conduct is held up for the emulation of the officers in this department, and will be duly brought to the notice and consideration of the Government."

AN agreement between Germany and this country has been concluded relative to postoffice money orders.... The city of Chihuahua has been captured by Mexican revolutionists.

THE complications between the Mexican States of Chihuahua, Durango and Coahuila, concerning jurisdiction over the Sierra Moyada mining district, have been solved by action of the Congress, erecting the district into a Federal Territory, thus bringing it directly under the jurisdiction of the General Government.

FOREIGN.

THE Clyde ship-builders have advanced rates for construction of new vessels about a sovereign a ton, to meet the advance in prices of iron.

IN the Afghan war a British force sent to cut off the retreat of the enemy, on the road between Bamian and Rohistan, captured seventy-eight guns in Shalpur. The guns were found in an abandoned cantonment, and among them are seventeen Armstrongs.

A SIMLA dispatch of the 12th says: The public entry of Gen. Roberts into Cabul took place yesterday. The number of guns captured thus far is 140. The troops, during their march on Cabul, worked splendidly, although they were obliged to carry their rations with them, and owing to the want of transportation, they were several days without tents. Roberts has issued a proclamation to the people of Cabul, warning them against resistance, and promising punishment to the guilty only. The Ameer is strictly guarded.... The recent great trial of Nihilists at St. Petersburg has been completed. Mirski, Gen. Drentein's assailant, will be hanged, and Weimar, concerned with Solovieff, who attempted the life of the Czar, will be banished to Siberia.

LONDON advices are to the effect that the emigration fever is spreading rapidly throughout the country, and large numbers of farmers are making preparation to go to America. The land reform and tenants' rights agitation in Ireland is increasing, and the Government is preparing for the prompt suppression of anticipated turbulent demonstrations.... The ship-builders of Middlesborough, Hastlepool and Stockton have struck against a reduction of wages.... A dispatch from Berlin states Prince Gortschakoff will take up his residence at Baden Baden and remain there until December. This, it is believed, indicates that Baden Baden will become the head-center of all the Russian foreign diplomacy. It is said to be a fact that the actual direction of Russia's political movements has been placed entirely in the hands of the Minister of War.... The Town Talk, a London publication, has been sued for libel by Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. West, the two famous beauties.

RUSSIA has sent a fleet of privateers into Chinese waters, and English merchants are becoming excited in consequence.... Thirty persons have died lately in a small town of Southern Russia from eating poisoned fish.... Gen. Roberts entered Cabul, on the 12th inst., accompanied by the Ameer and his suite. British troops of all arms lined the road, and the artillery fired a salute when the British standard was hoisted at the entrance to the city.

A DISPATCH dated Simla, Oct. 14, says the camp at Ali-Kheyl has been attacked by large numbers of neighboring tribes. The attack was repulsed. Twenty-three Afghan corpses were found, and it is believed many more were carried off. The British casualties were only five wounded.... The tenant-farmers in two counties of Ireland are practicing as well as preaching. Five hundred agriculturists met in County Mayo and solemnly pledged themselves to pay no rent until a reduction shall be granted proportionate to the great fall of prices of all kinds of produce.

THE British Gen. Roberts, on entering the city of Cabul, made a speech to the following effect: It will be necessary to inflict severe punishment. The buildings of the Bala Hissar and of the city, interfering with the proper military occupation, will be destroyed. A heavy fine will be levied on the citizens. A military Governor will be placed over the city and country within a radius of ten miles. All the inhabitants under his jurisdiction will be required to surrender their arms within a week on pain of death if they fail to do so. Rewards will be paid for the denunciation and conviction of any person concerned in the massacre of the British Embassy.... It is feared the help which the Hungarian Government proposes to afford the distressed agriculturists will come too late to permit of autumn and winter sowing. Throughout the country thousands of people lack money with which to purchase food, as the tax-gatherers have seized all their possessions.... A London dispatch says that considerable dissatisfaction is expressed at the leniency of the Government toward the agitators in Ireland. Strong public and private appeals are being made to put a stop to the anti-rent demonstrations, and the prosecution of Parnell is threatened. It is stated that Parnell will visit the United States in November, in response to numerous pressing invitations.... Shocks of earthquake continue in South Hungary. The people are in continual suspense.

The Michigan Railway Horror.

The Michigan Central railroad has plumed itself for years upon its freedom from accidents, but its time for mourning arrived on the morning of the 10th of October, at 1:20. At that hour the Pacific express, due in Chicago at 8 a. m., was rounding a curve at Jackson (Mich.) Junction just east of the last switch at the high bridge east of the junction, when the engineer, Milton Gilbert, saw, through the fog, an engine and train [illegible] a few rods ahead on the main track. The whistle sounded for brakes, and it is supposed the engine was reversed and all effort made by the engineer and fireman to save their own lives and the mass of living freight behind them; but they do not live to tell the tale.

The engineer and fireman on the switch-engine, which thus mysteriously stood upon the main track just as the express might be expected, jumped and saved their lives. They had just pulled out of the big switch, which forms the gateway to the Jackson yards, to back on the side-track, and were preparing to back, when the express appeared, coming at full speed around the curve.

The express train was composed of the engine, baggage-car, smoking-car, in which there were twenty passengers—two carloads of emigrants, mostly French Canadians going up to the lumber woods of Northern Michigan; one first-class and seven Wagner coaches; twelve cars in all. The engines grappled like two living monsters, each piled over the other, the lighter switch-engine uppermost, and both fell to the north side of the track, a mountain of iron, burying beneath it the crushed bodies of the engineer and fireman. The baggage and smoking-car and tender were broken to pieces, and, most miraculously, both the express messenger and baggageman escaped with their lives, though badly injured.

The next car to the smoking-car, the first second-class, was the one in which the terrible carnage took place. The car in its rear left its trucks and telescoped through it and six feet beyond, crushing over and through the seats, and killing and wounding the occupants in a manner that cannot be described, as scarcely any eye-witness from that fated car is left able to tell anything. Out of at least fifty passengers it contained, there are fifteen deaths known to have resulted. There were none in that car that escaped death or serious injury. In the car that telescoped this one and did the fearful work there were none killed, but many were injured. Back of this there were none hurt, as the force of the collision carried the entire wreck several rods, and the long line of rear cars lost the great force of the shock and kept on the track. Indeed, there were many in the sleeping coaches who did not even wake up.

Some idea of the horror of the wreck may be obtained from the fact that the trucks of the five cars were all crowded close together upon the track, and occupied less than one-fourth of the length of the cars they belonged to.

The train was manned as follows: I. Ladd, of Detroit, conductor; Milt Gilbert, of Detroit, engineer; E. B. Smith, of Detroit, fireman; John Howell and William Pringle, brakeman; E. Bennett, baggageman; and M. Carlisle, express messenger. The only ones killed of this list were the engineer and fireman. The express and baggage men were badly bruised, but had no bones broken.

The work of getting at the dead and wounded was at once commenced by a large force of railroad employes, and continued through the night. The wounded who needed care were taken as quickly as possible to the Hurd and Hibbard Houses, at Jackson, and the dead bodies to the different undertaking rooms. Nearly all the wounded had friends among the killed, and moans of anguish from the sufferers in both mind and body were agonizing beyond description. A full corps of physicians and surgeons and many noble ladies were busy all night, making the wounded as comfortable as possible, while the undertakers were assisted in performing the last offices of the dead for those who were identified.

The number of dead bodies recovered from the wreck was seventeen, while over 300 persons were more or less injured, of whom several will die.

General Manager Ledyard and several other officers of the road resolved themselves into a council of investigation. It appears that the man engaged in making up the freight-trains at the east end of the yard went to the telegraph office at the junction and got information that the Pacific was nearly fifty minutes late. He reported to Jones, the engineer of the switch-engine, that they had forty-five minutes of the Pacific's time in which to make up a freight-train, and it was this work they were engaged in when the collision occurred. Engineer Gilbert had made up at least twenty minutes of his lost time, and came tearing along at full speed through the fog, to destruction, fifteen minutes before he was expected.

The Ute Indian War.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 12.

Gov. Pitkin received to-day telegraphic advices from Los Pinos Agency, via Lake City, which are accepted as reliable. They state in substance that Sapenaro, one of the most influential sub-chiefs, who was sent by Chief Ouray to the White River Agency after the first news of the uprising, has returned to Los Pinos. He says he saw white men and children at White River Agency in charge of Chief Douglass, and saw one of the employes who was present when the Indians made the attack on the agency. This latter man killed one of the Indians and wounded another. Sapenaro thinks that three or four other employes are also alive, as their tracks were seen around the agency building. They may have fled to the woods. Father Meeker was killed.

CHEYENNE, Wy. T., Oct. 12.

The latest news from Merritt's command is of a startling nature. A courier comes into Rawlins with important dispatches from Merritt, the nature of which the courier is not aware, except that mountain howitzers are asked for. The courier states that heavy fighting has been going on since Tuesday morning. At that time an attempt was made to dislodge the Indians, who were located on commanding bluffs. Their position was too strong. The whole force of troops was brought out, and the Indians retired to a line of natural fortifications about three miles nearer the White River Agency. Gen. Merritt took advantage of this move and transferred his camp to open ground on Milk creek, where the hostiles could not reach them from any surrounding bluff. The stench at the other camp compelled the change, and a better position was secured, and near water.

RAWLINS, Wy. T., Oct. 13.

Two couriers from what was the White River Agency have arrived, with the following particulars of Gen. Merritt's advance:

Gen. Merritt advanced upon the agency on the 11th inst. On his way he found many dead bodies. Among others he found the body of Carl Goldstein, an Israelite, who left here with Government supplies for the Utes at White River Agency. He was found in a gulch six miles this side of the agency. He was shot twice through the shoulder, and was about two miles from his wagon. A teamster named Julius Moore, who was with him when he left here, was found about 100 yards from Goldstein, with two bullet-holes in his breast, and his body kicked and mutilated with a knife or hatchet. As the command advanced through the canyon, they came to an old coal mine, and in it was found the dead body of an agency employe named Dresser. He had evidently been wounded, and crawled in the mine to die. His coat was folded up and placed under his head for a pillow.

On entering the agency a scene of quiet desolation presented itself. All the buildings but one were burned to the ground, and not a living thing in sight except the command. The Indians had taken everything except flour and decamped. The women and children were missing, and nothing whatever could be found to indicate what had become of them. They have either been murdered and buried or else taken away as hostages. Their dreadful and unmentionable fate calls forth the most profound sympathy.

The dead body of Father Meeker was found about 100 yards from his house, lying on his back, shot through the head. The left side of his head was mashed in with some blunt instrument. A piece of a barrel-stave was driven into his mouth, and one of his hands and arms badly burnt.

The dead body of Mr. W. H. Post, Father Meeker's assistant, was found between the building and the river with a bullet-hole through the left ear, and one under the ear. He, as well as Father Meeker, was stripped entirely naked.

Another employe named Eaton was found dead. He was stripped naked, and had a bundle of paper-bags in his arms. His face was badly eaten by wolves. There was a bullet hole in his left breast.

Frank Dresser, a brother to the one found in the coal mine, was found badly burned. He had, without doubt, been killed instantly, as a bullet had passed through his heart.

The bodies of Eaton, Thompson, Price, Eskridge, and all other employes not named, were also found. Eskridge was found two miles this side of the agency, stripped, and a bullet hole through his head.

In the position occupied by the Indians during Thornburgh's battle, in a breastwork made of stones, was found the dead body of an unknown white man dressed in buckskin. He was sitting on his knees and had his gun in position to fire. He was shot through the forehead. From this it appears that the Indians are not alone in their hellish work. The supposition is that the Indians have gone south to join the Southern Utes, and the impression among the officers of Merritt's command is that the Indians who fought Thornburgh numbered at least 700.

DENVER, Oct. 16.

Word is received from White River Agency that the women and children, the money and the papers at that agency when the outbreak occurred are all safe with Mrs. Meeker, and are shortly to be sent to Los Pinos Agency. The troops at White river have been reinforced, and water and provisions are plenty. At Los Pinos no fears are felt of any trouble with the Indians, unless trouble is caused by the whites, who since the White river uprising are more than ever determined that "the Utes must go." If this determination creates trouble, there is likely to be plenty of it, for nothing is more certain than that the immense region in Colorado now occupied by a few hundred worthless Indians will soon or late be cleared of these incumbrances and obstructions to settlement and development.

RAWLINS, Wy. T., Oct. 16.

A courier just in from Merritt's command reports that the troops are at the White River Agency; that they have been scouting throughout the country for fifty miles about them, and have been unable to find a single Indian. It is evident that the Indians have gone south and split into small bands, going into the various agencies. The troops will have an all-winter campaign to ferret out those of the savage tribe who brought on the trouble.

Frightful Indian Depredations in New Mexico.

A Denver (Col.) dispatch of Oct. 16 says: "Nothing was heard of the Apache Indians under Victoria after the 5th ult., until last Tuesday, when news came of the massacre of citizens near Hillsboro, the scene of former difficulties. The dispatch states that the Indians made their appearance in Messila valley last Saturday, and continued murdering and fighting on Saturday, and on Sunday a party of thirty men were attacked by about 100 Indians, and so far but one escaped. It is reported that nine men and two families, with the exception of two persons, were killed at McEver's ranch, fifteen miles from Hillsboro, the women being outraged previous to the killing, and the bodies of the men burned. Loyd's ranch near by was burned, and several Mexicans killed. It is believed the Indians scattered before the advance of the soldiers and consolidated in the rear, committing the depredations reported. There are some 350 soldiers in the field, and authority has been granted to enlist twenty-four Navajo scouts. Companies are forming at Las Cruces and at Mesilla. On Tuesday there was a meeting held in the office of Gov. Wallace, at Santa Fe, and a committee of safety appointed. The Territorial officers joined with the Governor, and telegraphed to the Secretary of War and Gen. Pope for rations for 500 men for sixty days."

A dispatch from Tuscon, Arizona, says: A special to the Daily Star from Silver City, N. M., says: "The Indians have been committing terrible depredations in the Rio Grande valley and southwest of Fort Cummings. For several days past the people of Colorada have been besieged, and have been fighting since Saturday. They appeal loudly for aid. On Sunday a volunteer company, of thirty men, under Capt. John C. Crouch, went from Mesilla and Cruces to their aid. They met 100 Indians near Colorado, eighteen miles from Slocum's ranch, on the side of the road. After a severe fight the volunteers were compelled to fall back. They had a running fight into Slocum's ranch. The killed in this fight were W. T. Jones, County Clerk of Donohue county, and four Mexicans. On receipt of the news at Messila two companies of eighty men were raised by Col. Rynerson, composed of the best men in Messila valley. Two trains were captured yesterday on the west side of Slocum's. In one of them eleven men, one woman and one child were killed. In the other all hands escaped. Both trains were scattered and some of the oxen were killed and others left standing in their yokes. The corpses lie all along the road. The stage from the east arrived this morning two hours late, and reports that a number of people are known to have been killed within the past four or five days."

Verdict of Manslaughter.

The Coroner's jury on the Adrian fair-ground disaster has just been made public. Their deliberations resulted in finding that Architect Siger was guilty of gross negligence in preparing the plans and specifications; that the Armstrongs were guilty of gross and criminal negligence in undertaking such a building, being incompetent mechanics, and that there was gross negligence shown in the work of constructing the same; that Lawrence exercised gross negligence in the employment of such incompetent parties, further negligence in not having suitable superintendence, and further negligence in not himself examining the method and principles on which the building was being constructed, said negligence criminally causing death. Immediately upon these findings being known, Prosecuting Attorney Underwood appeared before Justice R. B. Robbins, and swore out warrants for the arrest of Siger, H. H. and E. R. Armstrong, and W. T. Lawrence on the charge of manslaughter under the findings, which are quite lengthy and prepared with minute care. The parties would be amenable to the charge of murder or manslaughter, at the option of the prosecuting officer.

Coinage.

The annual report of the Director of the Mint will show that during the fiscal year just ended there were coined, in gold, of double eagles, $37,234,340; of eagles, $1,031,440; of half-eagles, $1,442,130; of quarter-eagles, $1,166,800; of three dollars, $109,182; and of dollars, $3,020. The silver coinage shows the following result: Dollars, $27,227,500; half-dollars, $225; quarter-dollars, $112 50; dimes, $45. Prior to the beginning of the last fiscal year there had been a total coinage of silver dollars of only $16,619,338. During the last fiscal year alone, therefore, there were coined of silver dollars some 10,000,000 more than had been coined in the entire history of the Government to that time. The total number of silver dollars coined and in circulation July 1 last was $43,846,888. It will be seen that almost the entire time of the mint was devoted to the coinage of the standard silver dollars, and of dimes there were coined but $45 during the year, and of quarter-dollar pieces but $112.50. The total result of the operations of the mint for the last fiscal year was as follows: Gold, $40,986,912; silver, $27,227,882.50; minor, $97,798. Total $68,312,592.50.

Postal Expenses.

The estimates for the Postoffice Department for the next fiscal year have been completed. The total expenses of the department are estimated at $39,920,900; its revenues at $32,210,000, leaving a deficiency to be provided for out of the general treasury of $7,710,900. The amount so provided for the current year was $5,457,376.10. The estimate for inland railroad transportation is $10,000,000, an increase of $1,000,000 above the appropriation for the present year. That for the stage routes, $7,375,000, an increase of $1,475,000 over the current year's appropriation.

Female Barbers.

"Female barbers!" said Snodgrass, repeating a paragraph announcement he had just read in the paper, "I don't believe in 'em." "Why not?" we asked. "Because I remember what trouble Samson got into by letting a woman cut his hair!"

Military Myths.

The growth of military myths is a curious yet familiar phenomenon. Men who are sober and dispassionate enough in other things, who in the general business of life, or when dealing with matters of science or events of ordinary history, take nothing for granted without sufficient evidence, surrender all critical faculties as soon as an incident of war comes on the scene. The French, so calm and precise when treating on scientific subjects, are notoriously untrustworthy when they come to write about military events. Victor Hugo's romance of Waterloo was almost equal in absurdity to Lamartine's account of the battle, in which we are told how Napoleon stood over a shell at the point of bursting in order to encourage the army, as if the whole army could see him perform this ridiculous feat; and how he made his cavalry—the whole of them apparently—dismount and unfasten the curb-chains of their horses' bridles, in order to give a greater impetus to their charge. Thiers' accounts, also, of any battles in which the French were engaged are for the most part thoroughly untrustworthy. But the creation of myths is not limited to the French. We flatter ourselves that we are a common-sense people, not given to brag and bluster; but the way in which some of our newspapers talk about the army is enough to make the readers ashamed of themselves. A newspaper, for example, in describing the arrangements for the Duke of Connaught's marriage, tells us how "that true soldier, the Red Prince," is sure to go into raptures of delight on seeing our magnificent Horse Guards; as if it required one to be a true soldier in order not to see that magnificence does not consist in a horse being obviously over-weighted by the long-legged man who bestrides it. It is an article of faith with most English people that the French cavalry actually charged our squares at Waterloo, and were repulsed at the point of the bayonet; and we have been told over and over again that our troops in the Indian mutiny went through the campaign with compressed lip and flashing eye.—Saturday Review.

Pay of School Teachers.

The following is the average monthly pay of female public-school teachers on a rising scale, according to States and Territories. The figures are taken from the Bureau of Education at Washington: $22, Utah and Vermont; $23, Alabama; $25, New Hampshire; $26, Choctaws, Maine and Wisconsin; $27, Michigan, South Carolina and Virginia; $28, Minnesota; $29, Iowa, Mississippi and Tennessee; $30, Kansas, Missouri, North Carolina and Washington Territory; $31, Delaware; $32, Illinois, Nebraska, Pennsylvania and West Virginia; $33, Massachusetts; $35, Oregon, Louisiana and Kentucky; $36, Connecticut; $37, New Jersey; $39, Indiana; $40, Creeks and Arkansas; $42, Maryland; $43, Cherokees; $46, Rhode Island; $50, Arizona and Seminoles; $51, Colorado; $53, Texas; $64, Montana; $70, California; $71, District of Columbia; $72, Wyoming; and $85, Nevada.

The lowest sum paid to male teachers is $23 per month, in Alabama. The highest sum paid is $113 per month, in Nevada. The average monthly pay for male teachers ranges as follows: $23, Alabama; $26, Choctaws; $28, South Carolina; $29, Mississippi and Tennessee; $30, Missouri and North Carolina; $31, Delaware; $33, Kansas and Virginia; $37, Minnesota and Pennsylvania; $38, New Hampshire; $40, Creeks, Kentucky, Washington Territory and Wisconsin; $42, Maine and Maryland; $43, Cherokees and Michigan; $45, Louisiana and Utah; $46, Illinois; $50, Arkansas, Oregon and Seminoles; $53, Texas; $61, Indiana; $64, Montana and New Jersey; $65, Connecticut; $72, Wyoming; $76, Massachusetts; $81, Rhode Island; $84, California; $96, District of Columbia; $100, Arizona; and $113, Nevada.

The Struggle for Life in France.

The dream of every young Frenchman whose pockets are empty is to marry a girl who has from £2,000 to £4,000, and to earn about £200 a year for himself by means of a situation affording a fixed salary. It is not an extravagant dream, and, to do the Frenchman justice, he is quite happy if he realizes it. Having got £300 or £400 a year, he does not seek to enlarge his income, but lives prudently within his means, and invests some savings every year with commendable judgment. The very fact, however, that most Frenchmen should pitch their ambition so low as to require nothing more than what an Englishman would call a little competency shows how keen the struggle for life here is, and when one reflects that the thousands of men who covet the position of petit rentier are joined annually by 20,000 young recruits fresh from the schools, and with all their talents whetted according to the newest systems for the social fray, one cannot wonder at the large number of educated young men who find their way into jails. The last annual report of the Ministry of Justice dwells upon the increasing number of well-educated persons who are imprisoned for offenses against property. M. Victor Hugo and his friends, who used to laud education as the panacea for all social and political ills, may find this a hard fact to digest, but there it lies; and one may add that for determination in offenses against life, as well as in swindling, the highly-trained young men who have been through the best lycees are quite equal to the uncultured rough.—Pall Mall Gazette.

England's Debt.

Kate Field, in a letter from England to the Chicago News, writes: "We often hear of the extravagance of the United States Government. That greater economy might be practiced is true. But how do our expenses compare with those of this country? Mr. Saunders shows us that the cost of the General Government of the United States, with 3,500,000 square miles of territory and 47,000,000 of population, amounts to £59,750,000, or 25s 5d per head, while that of the United Kingdom, with 121,000 square miles of territory and 35,000,000 of population, exceeds £70,000,000, or 42s per head. The indebtedness of the United Kingdom is £875,061,000, or £23 10s per head of the population. The indebtedness of the United States shows £13 6s 11d per head, or $60.75 per head in favor of our Government. We are paying off our national debt; England is adding to hers."

The Heat of the Sun.

Since astronomers have computed with scientific accuracy the vast amount of heat radiated into space by the sun, they have been puzzled to account for its unfailing supply. Whatever be the nature of the heat, or however boundless the capacity of the sun to furnish it, exhaustion is inevitable, unless sources of supply exist outside of the sun.

As there has been no perceptible diminution of heat since the time of the Babylonian and Greek astronomers, it is evident that such sources of supply must exist, and it is the task of science to find them out.

Prof. Peirce, of Harvard University, who stands at the head of American mathematicians, has no doubt that meteorites are an unfailing fountain of supply. He thinks our system is crowded with them; that they are perpetually falling upon the sun's surface, and the arrested motion is converted into heat.

The theory is plausible, and in harmony with what we know of the vast number of meteorites that have their orbits within our system, as shown by the meteoric showers of August and November. But it would seem that there must be a slow accretion in the mass of the sun in the course of centuries, disturbing the order of the system by the inevitable laws of gravity. If there is substance enough in the meteorites to develop heat, there must be substance enough to increase weight.

Beaconsfield.

Lord Beaconsfield never passes a favor unnoticed, never forgets a friend, and considers no man his enemy, save Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Lowe. He knows that majorities are made up of units, and that a unit abstracted from the opposition benches counts two in a division. Thus, when in the House of Commons, if his watchful eye observed wavering on the part of an individual opposite, he somehow or other, before twenty-four hours passed, managed to come in personal contact with the waverer. The roughest member knows the sound of the friendly voice and the touch of the soft, white hand. There is a good deal of human nature in the House of Commons, and human nature prefers Disraeli's manners to Gladstone's.

A French Story.

A domestic attempted self-destruction by drowning, but his master arrived on the spot just in time to save him, and thereupon ordered another of his man-servants to keep an eye on the would-be suicide, and prevent him, in case he should renew the attempt. The unfortunate servant being unable to drown himself, although closely watched, accomplished his desired end by hanging. His master, returning, was greatly surprised that the man in charge had not prevented the rash deed, and upbraided him reproachfully, to which he made reply: "Upon my soul, sir, I thought he had hung himself up to dry!"

A Lively Widow.

Mrs. G. A. Taylor, of Greenville, Miss., is a widow. She was the plaintiff in a case before the Mayor, and it was observed that she kept one hand constantly in her pocket. She was asked if she wished the witness then testifying to believe that she had a revolver and would use it if matters took a turn not to her liking. She replied that the witness could think what he pleased, but that it would be well for him to be careful. Upon this she was made to draw forth her hand, and with it came a pretty pistol, loaded with half a dozen ball cartridges. Fifty dollars fine.

A BOY pointed a loaded gun at a little girl at Somerset, Md., and threatened to shoot. "All right," she said, confidently, "it couldn't hurt me, 'cause ma says if I'm a good girl nothing can hurt me." The boy pulled the trigger and the girl was killed.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.

BEEVES	$6 50 @10 00
HOGS	3 [illegible] @ 4 37
COTTON	10¼ @ 10¾
FLOUR—Superfine	5 00 @ 5 60
WHEAT—No. 2	1 38 @ 1 44
CORN—Western Mixed	55 @ 57
OATS—Mixed	35 @ 41
RYE—Western	84 @ 87
PORK—Mess	9 60 @10 00
LARD	6¼ @ 6½

CHICAGO.

BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 50 @ 5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 10 @ 3 25
Medium to Fair	3 75 @ 4 00
HOGS	3 00 @ 3 80
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex.	6 00 @ 6 75
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 00 @ 5 75
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 14 @ 1 15
No. 3 Spring	1 07 @ 1 09
CORN—No. 2	39 @ 40
OATS—No. 2	28 @ 29
RYE—No. 2	73 @ 74
BARLEY—No. 2	76 @ 77
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	24 @ 26
EGGS—Fresh	14 @ 14½
PORK—Mess	9 90 @10 60
LARD	5¾ @ 6

MILWAUKEE.

WHEAT—No. 1	1 17 @ 1 18
No. 2	1 14 @ 1 15
CORN—No. 2	39 @ 40
OATS—No. 2	28 @ 29
RYE—No. 1	71 @ 72
BARLEY—No. 2	71 @ 72

ST. LOUIS.

WHEAT—No. 2 Red Fall	1 24 @ 1 26
CORN—Mixed	35 @ 36
OATS—No. 2	26 @ 27
RYE	71 @ 72
PORK—Mess	10 25 @10 50
LARD	5¾ @ 6

CINCINNATI.

WHEAT	1 23 @ 1 25
CORN	44 @ 45
OATS	30 @ 33
RYE	70 @ 78
PORK—Mess	9 90 @10 00
LARD	6 @ 6¼

TOLEDO.

WHEAT—Amber Michigan	1 30 @ 1 31
No. 2 Red	1 29 @ 1 30
CORN—No. 2	44 @ 45
OATS—No. 2	33 @ 33

DETROIT.

FLOUR—Choice	6 25 @ 7 00
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 29 @ 1 30
No. 1 Amber	1 28 @ 1 26
CORN—No. 1	45 @ 46
OATS—Mixed	30 @ 31
BARLEY (per cental)	1 15 @ 1 50
PORK—Mess	10 75 @11 25

EAST LIBERTY, PA.

CATTLE—Best	4 80 @ 5 30
Fair	4 00 @ 4 50
Common	3 10 @ 3 50
HOGS	3 70 @ 4 00
SHEEP	3 00 @ 4 25

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED, JOS. J. LOWRY, Editors.

THE oil business "booms" with other trades. The production for the first eight months of this year is a fourth larger than in a like period last year; so are exports. The amount in stock is a third larger, which shows that there is so far no increase in the home demand. Meanwhile sinking wells goes on out of all proportion to the profit in the oil trade, whose business is already overdone.

AN Indiana Judge has decided that courts have nothing whatever to do with the records of churches. John Wagner, of Indianapolis, had gone to court to ask that Father Schnell be required and compelled to produce in court the books and records of his church containing the baptismal records of a little daughter of Wagner, who was baptized in his church according to the rules and rites of the Catholic Church, in July last, by and with the consent and at the request of the mother, Mrs. Wagner, who was then in the city on a visit, and that Father Schnell, in the presence of the court, be required to erase, cancel and destroy said baptismal. The Judge refused to make such an order.

THE biography of James Buchanan, ex-President of the United States, is in danger of never being finished. The work was first intrusted to the hands of the late William B. Reed, but he was obliged to give it up when it became necessary for him to remove from Philadelphia to New York. Then it was transferred to the late Hon. John Cadwalader, but his other duties prevented him from making much progress in it. Now a contract has been made with George Ticknor Curtis, of New York, to write the life and have it ready for publication in 1880. Mr. Curtis is to have charge of its printing and publication, and is to receive $8,000 for his literary labors and one-half the copyright of the work.

THE Troy Steam-Heating Company have commenced laying pipes to convey steam through the streets of that city. The iron pipes are first covered with hair felting, and are then run into wooden logs. These logs lie only about four feet below the surface of the ground It is intended to lay four miles this season. The boiler-house, situated on the bank of the Hudson river, with a large coal-yard in the rear, is nearly completed. The boilers are now being made in Syracuse, and are to be twenty-two feet long with twenty-eight flues six inches in diameter. The first boilers will be set with the Jarvis furnace, to burn screenings for fuel. It will require about forty boilers to heat the entire city.

THE late Maj. Cavagnari, the victim of the Cabul massacre, was a man of great strength, great nerve, and great calmness. He one day was obliged to settle with a dozen stalwart and armed Afridis some vexed land question. They surrounded him with angry vehemence, some with hands on their daggers; Cavagnari stood quiet, fearless, impassive. Suddenly the biggest of the Afridis measured his length upon the ground, and the Major returned his hand to his pocket with unruffled composure. The swift thoroughness of that knocking down cowed the fierce hillmen. Presently Cavagnari said apologetically to a friend who had watched the scene from a distance: "It was absolutely necessary. Please don't think I lost my temper; I was perfectly cool; but I was forced to maintain my ascendency;" and then he added meditatively, "and I wanted also to save my life."

A YOUNG man in Brooklyn got drunk some time ago, and while in that reckless condition he got married, or, rather, as he explains it, a young woman had herself married to him. Of course, just as soon as he recovered his senses he was surprised and indignant at what had taken place. He hasn't the slightest idea how it came about, and, as he doesn't particularly fancy the girl who was picked out by somebody or another to be his wife, he is around the courts asking for a divorce. The probability that he will succeed in getting one will tend to interfere with the development of this kind of marriages. There is a popular supposition that no young man in his right mind gets married these days, and the temptation on the part of young women to administer some sort of stimulant, under the action of which the important ceremony can be performed, is very great. But if young husbands who are captured in this way are going to make a fuss about it, just the moment they come to themselves again, some way will have to be devised which will keep them in a condition of insensibility all the time. That is the only safe thing.

THE race of the Pacific railroads to the Western coast is likely to become spirited. The Northern Pacific is being pushed through Dakota; the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe is working rapidly into Arizona, and we now have assurance that work on the Texas Pacific will shortly commence from a point west of Fort Worth, in Texas, to San Diego, on the coast of Southern California. It is creditable to Col. Thomas A. Scott, the projector of the latter road, that during his visit to Europe, in search of rest and renewed health, he took occasion to interest a number of capitalists in the enterprise, from whom, it is affirmed, he procured all the necessary means to construct the road. The western half of the United States occupy such a vast expanse of territory, so sparsely settled in the main, that we clearly need additional lines of telegraph and railroad to tie them together more closely. One transcontinental road is not enough. Four will not be too many. The one we now have has been of incalculable advantage to the country. The wonderful development of our Western domain is largely of its procuring. So it will be with these new lines. All along what is now a wilderness will spring up a series of villages, towns and cities; the commercial sympathy between the East and the West will be deepened, and the interests of the different sections become more homogeneous.

A Pennsylvania Hermit.

There is an interesting hermit named Austin Sheldon in the wilds of Pike county, Pa. He is 72 years old, totally deaf and lives in a cave, which he has rudely fitted up for a habitation. His only companion is a tame rat. His personal appearance is startling. He is about five feet in height, and his hair and beard are as white as snow. His clothes are worn and patched, and he wears a waistband made of a hickory withe to support his garments. For his defense against wild beasts he carries a long knife, as sharp as a razor, which he manufactured by grinding down an old file. He says that his parents were Connecticut farmers. In early manhood he fell in love with an accomplished girl, and they were engaged to be married. Her parents broke off the match by secretly sending her away to boarding school. This so preyed upon Austin's mind that he gave up business and started out to find her. He traveled from State to State, but in vain, and finally, when his money was nearly spent, he resolved to settle down in Pennsylvania. He fell into the hands of land speculators, who soon got what cash he had, and deeded him the barren tract of land upon which he now lives. His astonishment when he saw the "farm" that had been deeded him may be imagined. He found nothing but a forest, and as a storm came up he was obliged to take refuge in a cave in a ledge of rocks. This cave he has ever since inhabited. For nearly twenty years he subsisted upon wild fruit and nuts, and in the winter he trapped game and fish. For three years the hermit never saw a human being. Previous to beginning life as a hermit he was proud of his personal appearance, but he grew negligent, and a thick, shaggy beard covered his face, and his hair grew long, far down below his shoulders. From the time he began his hermit life he had never drawn a razor across his face. But he has grown tired of that kind of life, and lately told a Philadelphia Times correspondent that he intended to return to civilization to die.

Petroleum as Fuel.

Hundreds of attempts have been made to use crude petroleum as fuel, but for some reason or another they have all failed, although every inventor knew there was millions in it, if he succeeded in making the thing work. The Journal of the Franklin Institute thinks the problem has at last been solved. It says:

Air, steam and oil-spray are injected into a suitable fire-box. The result is an inflammable gas, burning with a smokeless flame which produces intense heat. Into the fire-box is passed a tube which branches into two pipes. One of these connects with the boiler, and the other with the oil-tank. Valves peculiarly constructed regulate the quantity of steam or oil admitted to the furnace. No other machinery is required. A preliminary blaze of wood under the boiler is needed to raise the steam necessary to start the burner into operation. Upon the first practical test of this new fuel the safety-valve was blown off at 120 pounds pressure twenty minutes after the burner was ignited. But this terrible flame can be regulated by a turn of the hand. A barrel of crude oil is worth about $1, but its heat-producing capacity is much greater than that of a dollar's worth of coal. Assuming that oil will remain cheap, and that its supply will be unlimited, the possibilities of this new burner in ocean and railway traffic are simply incalculable. The labor and cost of firing up are dispensed with. The danger from sparks and cinders is eradicated. Neither smoke, dirt nor ashes attend its use. The space occupied by oil, as compared with an equal value of coal, is hardly anything, and leaves valuable room for cargo. A moderate oil-tank, situated remote from the furnace in a ship, would hold fuel enough for a double trip, and would supplant the great coal-bunkers with their attendant dirt.

Good Ink.

A commission lately appointed by the Prussian Government to investigate the best class of inks to be employed for official uses states that aniline inks are not suited for this purpose, because they can be easily washed away, especially by preparations of chlorine. Inks in the composition of which alizarine (Adrianople red) is employed can be obliterated less easily. But they are of opinion that the best of all is made from gall nuts and a salt of iron, the old description of ink.

FARM NOTES.

STORE potatoes in a dark, cool place, and in shallow bins.

A BETTER understanding is needed between farmers and millers.

TAKE the topmost ear of corn for seed, and select it from those stalks which bear the greatest number of ears.

IF strawberry beds are to be protected this winter, it is of importance that the material used should not cover the soil with seeds. Probably straw or even the sheaves and small stalks of corn are as good as anything that can be used.

MR. VICK says that every farmer should have a supply of willows for binding bundles of trees. For binding cornstalks, straw and for many other purposes, they will be found of great value when their utility is once known.

THE hens at Rural Grounds are all confined in picket inclosures—ten to an area of about thirty feet square. We give a teaspoonful of ground bone or bone flour every two or three days mixed in their food. We have never yet found a thin-shelled egg.—Rural New Yorker.

HERE agriculture is pulling the nation out of the Slough of Despond and all its financial difficulties; in England a revival in manufactures is promising to help farmers a little and the country a good deal. We are a nation of farmers; England a nation of mechanics and shop-keepers.

THE present prospects are that we shall have a surplus of from 160,000,000 to 175,000,000 bushels of wheat for exportation; and that the wheat-importing countries in Europe will require from 280,000,000 to 300,000,000 bushels, so that there is a fair margin for the surplus products of other nations also.

PICK grapes when fully ripe and during pleasant weather. Leave them under cover for a week or so until dry. Pack in shallow boxes, six inches or less in depth, a foot long. Cut out all imperfect, decayed, dry or green berries. Pack as closely as possible without injuring them, and then nail on the covers. Then they should be placed in a cool, dry room.

FOR hedges we know of no more ornamental and effectual plant than the Japan Quince. Choose the white, rose and deep-red for colors. This will bear pruning to any desired extent while its leaves are of the greenest and firmest of textures. In early spring, no other hedge would equal it in beauty. It is very hardy, and, though not an evergreen, of course, its bare branches in winter can scarcely look more dreary than the lifeless-brown color of Arborvitæ.

GROWING STRAWBERRIES IN WINTER.—Strong plants from runners that appeared early in the summer, and which are now in six or seven-inch pots, can readily be made to fruit in any greenhouse or warm plant-room, where they can get plenty of sun. Keep the plants in an open shed, where they will be exposed to the frost and can still be kept dry, until the latter part of December; then they should be thawed out, the upper two inches of the soil scraped off and replaced with well-rotted manure, and henceforward treated as growing plants.

POULTRY VERMIN.—There are many recipes for driving vermin away from poultry and houses. The inventors of these are shrewd; they know that people are naturally indolent in both body and mind; that they never guard against invasion, but wait till the enemy is upon them, and then buy up all the new-fangled nostrums, kill all the lice and half-kill the hens and chickens, and at once begin to do some tall crowing. All poultry vermin delight in moist or damp places; in fact they can't live anywhere else. That's the principle. Now what does it suggest: Why, the suggestion is obvious; don't have any damp places, and that means a dry chicken-house, a dry earth floor to it, a dry roof, no manure allowed to accumulate on the floor or under the perches, because that is always damp, and absorbs dampness from the air. Build two chicken houses—one in a low, damp, ill-ventilated place, the other on a high, dry, sunny, airy spot, and let your flock choose; the most miserable old hen "that ever was" knows better what she wants than the most dignified, dandyish, intellectually civilized poultry-fancier that the hen-feverhas ever produced. Remember, a water-tight house, a ground or sandy floor, plenty of sunlight and fresh air, and your children will have to go to college to learn the entymology of the hen-house, instead of brushing vermin off of every egg they bring to the housekeeper.—Rural New Yorker.

The Gourmand at the Public Dinner.

The individual gourmand is not yet an extinct being. There are few dinner tables which his presence does not offend. The waiters know him of old; they scent him from afar. He is acquainted with the excellences and the defects in the cooking of every tavern of note in the city. He knows the quality of every dish upon the menu; there is no mystery for him in the most incomprehensible of French names. He takes his seat at the table with the manner of one who has a great duty before him, and who intends filling it to the uttermost. He opens his menu, places it against the decanter in front of him, and tucks his napkin under his chin. By these preliminaries you may know him, and it will be well that you should recognize him at first, so as to spare yourself the trouble of trying to engage him in conversation, for he is there not to talk, but to eat. Running his eye down the card, he ticks his favorite dishes, and, buttonholing the waiter, begins to worry him forthwith: "Now, don't forget; and mind, I can't touch it underdone. Crisp, you know, crisp and brown. What's that you say—no more asparagus? Why, you've only brought me twice! Ah! guinea fowls, eh? Well, if there's one thing I have a weakness for, it's a larded guinea-fowl, but where are the peas? Oh, hang it, waiter, you know this will never do—guinea-fowl and no peas! Why, you'll want me to eat spring chickens without York ham next time I come here. There; take it away! I shan't get over this for a week; no peas, eh! Oh, yes! Look here; I'll have some peaches a la Conde, and let them be a la Conde, and not a la anything else. It's not a week ago that a fool of a waiter brought me suedoise de creme and swore it was ice pudding. He thought I didn't know an ice pudding when I saw an ice pudding; but he made a mistake. And I say, none of your Stilton for me, you know; don't try to come any fresh stuff over me, because it won't do; real ripe, with a dash of old port over it, that's about my form." Heaven help the waiter! His assailant won't give him more than sixpence.—University Magazine.

Correct Pronunciation.

At the meeting of the Teachers' Institute, held at the Girls' Normal School, on Friday last, Mr. Jacob H. Sides, principal of the Belmont Grammar School, was assigned the duty of illustrating correct pronunciation by pronouncing fifteen words. Being allowed but five minutes' time, the gentleman was only able to struggle with thirteen words, which are frequently mispronounced even among those who have been liberally educated. It is charitable to suppose that the errors committed by this class are the result of carelessness rather than ignorance.

The words pronounced by Mr. Sides were in this order: Pronunciation, which should be pronounced as if spelled pro-nun-she-a-shun; association should be pronounced as if the third syllable were spelled she, instead of ci, with the accent on the last a.

"I was surprised," remarked Mr. Sides, "to hear the word so universally mispronounced by the members of the Teachers' National Convention, which met recently in this city." The word telegraphy should be pronounced te-leg-ra-phy, not tel-e-graph-y. Squalor, frequently pronounced "squoller," should receive the long sound of a, as in mate—squa-lor. The word vagary should be divided into three syllables, va-ga-ry, with the accent on the a in the second syllable. In recess the accent falls on the last syllable, and is pronounced re-cess. The n in government is too often omitted, as the word is pronounced guv-ern-ment. Enervate is pronounced e-ner-vate, not en-er-vate. Indisputable is pronounced both in-dis-pu-ta-ble and in-dis-pu-ta-ble, but the former mode of pronunciation is the correct one. The word isolate should be pronounced is-o-late (the a as in mate), not i-so-late. Allopathy is pronounced al-lop-a-thy, not al-lo-path-y. Rise, when a noun, pronounced "rice," but when a verb is pronounced rize. The last word referred to by the expositor of correct pronunciation was laugh, which created considerable merriment, so much so that the listeners laffed and they loffed and they larfed, when the proper thing for them to have done was to have struck the sound of a as in far, and they would have been just right.—Philadelphia Record.

Opposed to the Telegraph.

The strongest opposition to a telegraph line from uncivilized races is always met with when it is first erected. Fear of the strange thing, and jealousy of territorial encroachment, naturally excite the savage mind to resent the innovation; and most construction parties in wild countries have to be protected by an escort of troops. The great trans-Australian overland line, recently completed, was carried for hundreds of miles through desert solitudes, unharmed by the blacks; but on the Macdonald range a band of hostile natives were encountered, and the electricians gained a bloodless victory over them by connecting the poles of a powerful battery to a wire, and administering shocks unawares to those of the natives who were prowling curiously around. The mysterious power, which seemed to them like a thunder-stroke, inspired them with a wholesome terror of the wire, and they gave it a wide berth after that. Both in Australia and New Zealand, several erecting parties have been attacked by the aborigines and massacred. Of late, however, in New Zealand, the Maoris have shown a different spirit, probably because of better management on the part of the whites; and Maori squatters now help to build the line, which they look upon as a triumph of their scientific abilities.

A Female Gambler.

Educated, pretty and fashionably-dressed women were not common in Nevada City, Cal., in 1854. Therefore the arrival of Madam Dumont in that mining town caused considerable excitement, for she was attractive in the three mentioned particulars. Besides, she was not more than 20 years old. She at once hired a corner in a large saloon and opened a faro game. The novelty of a woman dealing the cards drew many gamblers to her table, and her success was so great that she soon opened a large establishment, where a dozen games were kept going night and day. She gained the reputation of dealing honestly, was always smilingly polite, and the miners liked her—even held her in considerable respect. But her luck changed at last from good to bad, and she lost all her money. She spent a few years in other business in San Francisco, but could not recover into prosperity. A few weeks ago she borrowed $500 from an old friend and started for the mining region of Nevada, contemplating a new career as a gambler. She opened a faro game at Brodie, but it lasted only a few hours, when the bank was broken. She paid her losses in the old smiling manner retired to an ante-room, swallowed poison and died.

Fertilizing Plants.

Plants which are cultivated in pots or tubs on balconies require a great deal of water, and, if they thrive well, should have stimulating fertilizers. For hard-wooded, slow-growing plants, very fine bone—flour of bone—sold by seedmen for the purpose, is perhaps the best; a few table-spoonfuls being forked into the soil of the pot. For soft-wooded, quick growers, a liquid fertilizer may be used. This may be guano, a teaspoonful to a gallon of water; soot, two tablespoonfuls to a gallon, or the water of ammonia (liquid hartshorn) of the drug stores, an ounce to the gallon. Water the plants with either of these, instead of clear water, once or twice a week, as the condition of the plant requires. No invariable rule can be given.

What's in a Name?

When Lord Dundreary gave his servant half-a-crown to buy three "tenpenny nails" he displayed no more than a pardonable simplicity in accepting the literal interpretation of the name applied to the particular article which he desired to purchase, and probably few of those who have laughed at the famous joke could correctly fix the origin of the term "tenpenny" as applied to nails. It really means that the nails weigh ten pounds to the thousand, the original expression being "ten-pound nails;" this in time got contracted to "ten-pun nails;" and this in its turn corrupted into "tenpenny nails;" "sixpenny" and "fourpenny" nails are nails weighing six or four pounds to the thousand. There are many other similar terms, "familiar as household words," which are in daily use, and convey a very false impression if accepted literally. A scientific contemporary takes the trouble to give a list of many household articles whose names, when analyzed, go far to justify the skptical inquiry of the amorous Juliet. Salad oil, for instance, is not oil for making salads, but oil for cleaning sallades, i. e., helmets; while an equally familiar instance of incongruous ideas is presented in the use of the term "German silver," this metal being neither silver nor an alloy of silver, and not having even been invented by a German. Ladies who button up the dozen or more buttons of their gloves probably seldom pause to think that their "kids" are more likely made of the skins of lambs, or even of rats, than of those of young goats; and still less likely is the housemaid, or even the young housewife, to reflect that the common "blacklead" is as innocent of lead as it is of gold; or the knowing city clerk to consider that his blacklead pencil contains a natural composition of carbon and iron. Instances of the misnaming of things might be multiplied from among objects in daily use, whose names are accepted and passed from mouth to mouth with scarcely a moment's thought of their incongruity or their origin.—Dictionary of Slang.

How the New York Sub-Treasury Is Guarded.

The sub-treasury contains at present $164,000,000—$11,000,000 in silver, $130,000,000 in gold and $23,000,000 in greenbacks. The new silver vault, which has been in use some months, will store $40,000,000, and the prospects are that it will soon be filled. The silver is placed in bags containing $1,000 each, and the different issues of coin are kept separate. Gold is held in bags containing $5,000, and greenbacks in packages of $1,000 notes. In addition to the silver vault there are two other vaults on the main floor, each of which is built on the plan of a first-class safe. They contain the gold and greenbacks, the lock combination being held by Mr. Ashley, the specie clerk, and Mr. Brittan, the cashier, and once a month the Surveyor of the Port makes an examination of the treasure on hand. At night four men, suitably armed, are put on guard and patrol the main hall. Eight men are engaged in this service, their tour being alternate nights. During the day there are two policemen in uniform in the hall; two detectives in ordinary citizens' dress also keep watch. One of these (Thomas Sampson) is an expert of high order of skill, and commands a salary of $1,800 a year. The watchmen receive $75 per month. They come in at 5 o'clock in the afternoon (when the detectives leave), and lock up and remain until relieved in the morning. In addition to this the treasury has lately been put in a condition of defense against the attack of a mob. The windows are protected by steel bars and the inside shutters are perforated with loop-holes. The entire clerical force is seventy, for each of which a musket is kept in the armory. In addition to this, Gatling guns will be stationed on the roof, which will insure the safety of the place against popular violence.—New York letter.

A Shot at an Incoming Duck.

Mr. C. A. Zimmerman, a noted sportsman, writes as follows in Scribner:

To stop an "incomer," raise the gun carefully in the line of his flight; move quickly ahead of the duck, when you judge him to be in range; and, when you lose sight of head and bill over your gun, pull instantly. The flight of a duck is ordinarily at the rate of about sixty miles an hour; but, when accelerated by fear, or a brisk wind, or both, it is nearly double, and must be experimented upon to be fully appreciated. To become a good "pass shot," some of the requisites are: to be able to judge distances quickly and accurately; to be able to cover well the moving bird, and not to check the motion of the gun at the moment of discharge. Because it is necessary for most men to hold some distance ahead of swiftly-flying game in close range, it does not follow that this is the best thing to do; it shows, rather, that such a one is in the habit of checking or arresting entirely the motion of his piece as his finger presses the trigger. Most sportsmen flinch at that supreme moment, and, unless the habit is entirely overcome, they cannot expect ever to become good wing shots. The "choke boring" of guns, in limited use long ago, has only very recently come into favor and rather more general use. Upon the pass or elsewhere, it adds at least one-fourth more distance to the killing range of the gun. This is done by the effect it has upon the "pattern" made by the shot, causing the gun to throw a greater number of shot pellets into a given circle than can be done by the cylinder, or straight bore. One barrel of the duck-hunter's gun should surely be bored in this manner.

THE 700th anniversary of the Bavarian dynasty is to be celebrated at Munich, Sept. 16, 1880.

PASSING AWAY.

We are passing away, passing away,
  Like the raindrops after the shower;
We may be blessed with health to-day,
  To-morrow the cold grave ours.

We are passing away, passing away,
  Like the dew before the sun;
Then let us help along life's way
  Some weary, toiling one.

We are passing away, passing away
  From this world of care and sin;
Then let us strive from day to day
  The goal of life to win.

We are passing away, passing away—
  Life's sands will soon be run;
Then may we hear the Savior say,
  "You have the victory won."

OTTAWA, Ill. WEEPING WILLOW.

PITH AND POINT.

A PIECE congress—A quilting party.

SLEIGHT of hand—Refusing a marriage proposal.

ICE-DEALERS may also be called members of the cold trade.

THE watch lacks self-respect; it is always trying to run itself down.

THE Indian war-whoop was the first instance of base bawl in this country.

A GIRL said of her bow-legged beau that she "didn't like to waltz in brackets."

WONDER if it screamed? A sporting paper says: "The yacht came down on a tack."

WHEN the mower stops to sharpen his scythe, is it a sign of more whet weather?

A MICHIGAN man has a beard seven feet long. He ought to have been a Mane man.

A WYOMING man won $10 in a wager by eating twenty pigs' feet. This was a pig's feat, indeed.

THE King of the Fiji islands is said to relish "Baby Mine" very much. He likes it well done, too.

A CORRESPONDENT wants to know what to do when a dog shows signs of hydrophobia. Climb a tree.

IF the apothecary does not sell his goods, it is certainly not for want of effort, for he always keeps laudanum.

THERE is a great difference in milkmaids. The milk made in the country is not the same as the milk made in the city.

IT is a mean man who would fool a fish by wearing a white choker and clerical coat when strolling along the banks of a brook on Sunday.

THE most remarkable of recent opinions concerning divorce (by a woman, of course): "Divorce is all very well in its way, but I prefer widowhood; it's surer."

DISTRACTED mother: "If you children make such a noise I shall go out of my mind." Young rip: "Go on, mother; I'll mind the young 'uns while you're gone."

WOMAN will make any compromise for peace with tyrannical man, but she absolutely refuses to take in a single reef in the four-story bonnet she wears to the theater.

AN inquisitive young lady asks: "What is the most popular color for the bride?" The New York Star answers: "If we were going to marry, we should prefer a white one."

AN Irish crier at Ballinasloe, being ordered to clear the court, did so by this announcement: "Now, then, all ye blackguards that isn't lawyers must lave the court."

A YOUNG man went into a restaurant the other day, and, remarking that "time is money," added that, as he had half an hour to spare, if the proprietor was willing he'd take it out in pie.

IT is against the law to carry concealed arms, yet the Rome Sentinel says it is nothing uncommon on moonlight evenings to see young ladies with half-concealed arms around their waists.

"HEALTHY place here?" asked a visitor who was prospecting in the vicinity of Denver, Col. "Stranger, yes," was the reply; "ten years ago we had to kill two old men to get seed enough to start a cemetery."

"I just came in to ask a scent
  From you, dear Mrs. Rhyme."
"Why, certainly; you're welcome, friend
  Here is just half a dime."
"Good joke—ha! ha!—you do not see
  On what I am intent."
And plucking here a fragrant rose—
  "This is the scent-i-meant."

HE had vague ideas of house furnishing, and he asked her what kind of carpet he should get for the parlor. She answered, "Axminster." And then he warmly protested that it was none of the minister's business.

A LITTLE girl was visiting the country, and for the first time witnessed the operation of milking. Watching the proceedings intently for a while, she inspected the cow minutely, and launched the poser: "Where do they put it in?"

YOUNG lady, to recently-married friend—"Is he all you hoped for?" "Why, of course." "Fine fellow, genteel?" "More than that—elegant. He talks like a book." "Well, when you come to volume second, send him to me."

SAYS Joaquin Miller, writing of the River Thames: "By the side of this great commercial artery of the earth broods London—broods and broods and broods." He might have added, with equal force and truth, that it broods and broods and broods and broods and broods and broods and broods and broods.—Rockland Courier.

A Valuable Servant.

Paddy said that the toad was a "beautiful bird," and really there is nothing so very objectionable about the little fellow, who is certainly very useful in his way. Toads live upon beetles, bugs, flies, grubs, and such small game. They are easily tamed, and will learn to accompany a weeder about the garden and pick up such morsels as squash-bugs, rose-bugs, cut worms and potato-beetles as are thrown them. A toad has been known to put away within him over a hundred different kinds of bugs and flies, and then wink for more. Such services as this surely ought to be recognized, and such a servant accommodated with board and lodging in the garden. No animal is more inoffensive or minds his own business more closely. He is a valued assistant, and should by all means be encouraged.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, OCT. 23, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

Garfield has the pole at the present time for United States senator from Ohio.

The election news were slow in coming in from Ohio.—Republican.

The Republican must have lacked enterprise. We had all the news we desired early the next morning after the election.

The Lawrenceburg (Ind.) Register files notice for Indiana, as follows: "Indiana still stands faithful, and is entitled to the honor of naming the next candidate for the presidency, a fact which we desire the cast to bear in mind."

The trial of John Clare, charged with stealing $111.00 from the residence of Mr. Joseph Gender, near Butler, on the 8th day of last August, was finished yesterday. Clare addressed the jury in his own behalf in a two hours speech, if he had bored the jury an hour longer they would have sent him up for life, as it was he only got 7 years.

Two ex-soldier republican editors in DeKalb county indulge in considerable bombast concerning their soldiery. Two other ex-soldier republican editors in DeKalb county prefer to let their actions tell of their bravery. Is there a soldier in the county that would have any trouble in deciding, without knowing the history of either, which couple made the best soldiers?

Cora Flickinger, the little girl so badly injured at the junction turntable some time ago, is getting along finely. She will be taken to her home in Whitley county in a week or ten days, if she continues to improve. It was feared at first that her limb would have to be amputated, but by the skill of surgeons and careful nursing, it has been saved.

The republican party can save money in 1880 by sending a slaughtering committee into each of the southern states to commit an occasional murder. The victims may be either black or white, republican or democrat, and every murder will have more effect in the north than a hundred speeches. Though cold blooded murders are committed in the north by the score every day, they don't count.

No stone was left unturned by the republicans in the Ohio campaign, to revive the old sectional feeling between the north and south. There is no denying the fact that the leaders in the republican party are intent upon destroying the Union, with a view to establishing a centralized government which will approach a monarchy as nearly as is thought advisable by such leaders as advocate Grantism. The attempt at centralization will fail, and with it the republican party will sink into oblivion. Americans have chosen to be freemen, regardless of the dictates of any section of the country, east, west, north or south.

We are constrained to correct our cotemporary, the Auburn COURIER, when it asserts that it is the "only democratic paper in the county." This is a mistake. While that paper is an able exponent of democratic principles, it is by no means the only one that trains under the glorious democratic banner. Though, perhaps, not so consequential, still our co-laborer in the common cause, and the rest of mankind will take notice that the Head Light is unqualifiedly, uncompromisingly—unbought and unbribed—the champion of the democracy, and under all circumstances whatsoever, in the night and tempest of adversity, or in the sunshine of prosperity, we will stand by the flag and never be found among the skulkers.—Head Light.

We stand corrected Joe, and grant to the Head Light unbounded territory for the dissemination of its democratic doctrines.

The Auburn Courier does not seem satisfied with the speeches of the radical orators at the soldiers re-union recently held there. It has long ago become a settled fact that all kinds of celebrations, soldiers' re-unions or any public occasions managed by republican politicians is taken advantage of by them to make capital for the republican party, and democrats, we think, are very foolish if they expect anything else with the experience before them. Fourth of July celebrations have become a perfect nuisance on this account. The political twaddle on those days has become offensive even to very many republicans, and they too are heartily disgusted with it. Suppose the people just ignore the efforts of demagogues to institute these occasions and they will have no more of the blatherskiting.—Warsaw Union.

The remarks of the COURIER, above alluded to, were to the effect that "certain speakers at the re-union had placed the committee in a false position, inasmuch as all the citizens irrespective of party had contributed liberally to the enterprise, with the express understanding that it was to be a nonpartisan affair. We took no exception to anything that was said concering the war or the soldiers, but we did, and do yet condemn the efforts of a few of the speakers to make republican stump speeches entirely foreign to the occasion. We made no attack on the members of the committee, and if R. H. Weamer still insists on "giving them away," it is no fault of ours.

Hendricks for 1880.

[State Sentinel.]

Manifestly, the result of the Ohio election brings ex-Governor Hendricks more than ever prominently to the front for the nomination in 1880. The drift of opinion is setting strongly toward Mr Hendricks. It would be supreme folly to deny it or attempt to obscure the fact. We propose no parallels between Mr. Hendricks and Mr. Tilden, or other distinguished statesmen. We indulge in no panegyrics; Mr. Hendricks' record does not require it. The peer of the best of all who adorn American statesmanship, he is everywhere recognized by political friends and foes as the man for the democratic nomination in 1880.

A dispatch from Washington says, several subjects of considerable importance demand the attention of Hayes on his return. The English and Russian missions are to be filled. The general impression seems to be that Galusha A. Grow will be given the mission to St. Petersburg. Who will be the minister to the Court of St. James's is not known. Some circumstances lead to the belief that Mr. Evarts may accept the post. A desperate effort will be made to induce Mr. Hayes to remove Capt. Phelps, one of the district commissioners, and appoint another and more competent man in his place. A delegation in the interest of Sayles J. Bowen, ex-mayor of Washington, will call upon Mr. Hayes, on Tuesday morning, to press that gentleman for the office of commissioner. A collector of internal revenue, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Collector Freeland of Brooklyn, is to be appointed soon after the de facto president returns. On Mr. Hayes depends the official existence of Postmaster Tyler of Baltimore, against whom serious charges have been preferred. There are various other matters of importance awaiting the attention of the fraudulent president.

The following extracts from the address of Hon. A. P. Edgerton, at Hicksville, are suggestive, and to the point. Concerning negligent and lazy farmers, he says: "As an effective way of advertising their idea of thrift and profit, some farmers summer-fallow their sleds and sleighs in rainy weather or sunshine, and winter kill their plows, and drags, and reapers, and drills by leaving them in the corners of fields just where last used, unhoused and unprotected; and road scrapers are planted by supervisors at the roadsides, ready for the next season's use. This course is profitable to the manufacturers, and commends itself to the young who will honor their fathers by following their example. "To train up a child in the way he should go—follow it yourself," is the best saying of Josh Billings." He advises every person to take their home newspaper, which of course we think is a good suggestion. Here is his advice upon that subject. "Support your own newspapers as the organs by which your own sentiments should be expressed and your interests defended.

Are you a republican? Take the county paper which advocates the principles of your party.

Are you a democrat? Then take your democratic paper.

Do you believe neither party to be exactly right? Then take the paper which supports neither, but gives to each an equal showing. Anyway, let the first paper you read be your own town and county paper, and strive yourself to make it instructive and entertaining.

If you don't believe in anything, and don't want to know anything, then take no paper at all, and you will go on knowing less every day, and—be buried without a funeral."

The following reasonable conclusions concerning the political situation in New York, we find in the Sun: "As was remarked by us a few days ago, it has been a striking feature of democratic feuds in this state that the warring factions, the very next year after they had spent their fury upon each other, ceased quarreling, struck hands again, and thoroughly beat their foes.

It does not by any means follow, however, that what has occured in the past is sure to happen again next year. Indeed, we look upon it as very unlikely. It is not true that history always repeats itself. The breach which is now being made in the democratic party is opened much more easily than it can be closed.

If the republicans carry the state of New York this autumn, the prestige of success will be with them next year, and will be of vast advantage to them in the presidential election.

If the democrats should carry the state this year, even then they would not be too sure of it next year, with the republican tide rising, as it has obviously been of late all around us.

The important influence which the election of governor now will exert over the presidential election next year is fully recognized by all intelligent politicians. Mr. Cornell and Col. Geo. Bliss have written letters within a few days past emphasizing this point. The republicans at least understand that next year as well as this they may reasonably expect to reap a rich harvest from the democratic feud Mr. John Kelley is now organizing. Because other quarrels have been quickly made up it does not follow that the Kelley feud will be short lived. It promises to score more than one defeat for the democratic party—more than one victory for the republicans."

Make a Note of This.

The agricultural schedule annexed to the act of 1850, which is also made a part of the act of March 3, 1879, providing for the tenth census, requires a report of the chief productions of agriculture "during the year ended June 1."

By the act approved March 3, 1879, it is provided that the tenth census shall be taken and completed during the month of June, 1880.

As the enumeration commences on the first of June and closes on or before the thirtieth, all the crops which are gathered once a year will fall pretty clearly on one side or the other of the dividing line.

Thus the cotton crop reported in the census will be that of 1879, gathered in the fall of that year; while the wool clip or "wool crop" will be that of the spring of 1880—except in portions of California and Texas, where both a fall and spring clip are secured.

For certain of the productions of agriculture, however, there is no harvest, in the usual sense of that term; but the product is gathered week by week, or day by day, as it matures—milk, butter, cheese, meat fall into this class.

In view of the requirements of the law, and of the great importance of accurate statistical information relative to agriculture, it is deemed to be highly desirable that farmers should prepare themselves in advance to give the information with promptness and accuracy. It is urgently recommended, therefore, that all persons engaged in agriculture make notes from time to time of the quantities and values of their several crops gathered, and the number of acres of land planted, in order that their statements, when made to the enumerators, may be of the highest possible value.

To remove any doubts that may arise concerning the crops to be returned in the census, the following table presents the several crops specifically mentioned in the agricultural schedule, arranged accordingly as they fall into the calendar year 1879, or that of 1880, or are to be returned for the twelve months beginning June 1, 1879, and closing May 31, 1880.

PRODUCTION OF AGRICULTURE DURING THE YEAR ENDED JUNE 1, 1880.

I. OF THE CROP OF THE CALENDER YEAR 1879.

Wheat	Acres. Bushels.
Corn	Acres. Bushels.
Rye	Acres. Bushels.
Oats	Acres. Bushels.
Barley	Acres. Bushels.
Buckwheat	Acres. Bushels.
Peas and Beans	Acres. Bushels.
Rice	Acres. Bushels.
Tobacco	Acres. Pounds.
Cotton	Acres. Bales.
Potatoes	Acres. Bushels.
Ochards	Acres. Value of products, $
Vineyards	Acres. Value of products, $
Small fruits	Acres. Value of products, $
Hay	Acres. Tons.
Clover seed	Bushels.
Grass seed	Bushels.
Hops	Acres. Pounds.
Hemp	Acres. Tons.
Flax	Acres. Pounds.
Flaxseed	Bushels.
Bees	Number of hives. Pounds of wax. Pounds of honey.
Sugar cane	Acres. Hogheads of sugar. Gallons of molasses.
Sorghum	Acres. Pounds of sugar. Gallons of molasses.

II. OF THE CROP OF THE CALENDER YEAR 1880.

Wool	Number of fleeces. Pounds.
Maple sugar	Pounds.
Maple molasses	Gallons.

III. OF THE YIELD OF THE TWELVE MONTHS, JUNE 1, 1879, TO MAY 31, 1880.

Butter	Pounds.
Cheese	Pounds.
Milk sold	Gallons.
Value of animals slaughtered, dollars.
Market gardens	Acres. Value of products, $
Value of forest products, dollars.
Value of home manufacture, dollars.

Important to Debtors.

The experience of the past few years conclusively proves that all debtors should make provision for payment of their obligations, whether they expect to live long or die soon. This can be accomplished by securing an Endowment and Annuity Bond Contract in the Union Central Life Insurance Company of Cincinnati. The past record and established reputation of this large and strong financial institution fully entitles it to the confidence of the American people. Mr. Thos. H. Sprott, Auburn, Ind., is agent of this county.

The Western Rural

Comes to us in an entirely new dress, greatly improved in appearance, though having been for years one of the most enterprising and best papers of its class published. Current topics are discussed with ability, and its Literary and Fireside departments are much enjoyed by the women folks. See our club rates in another column.

We have before us, in pamphlet form the masterly address of Hon. A. P. Edgerton, delivered at the Hicksville fair. The importance of agriculture, and the subject of taxation, both of great interest to the people, were carefully considered from an intelligent standpoint. The address is not dry and stale as agricultural addresses usually are, but full of eloquence and bright ideas such as these: "Man may be placed in the purest air, in the bright sunshine or the pleasant shade; springs and pure running waters may flow at his feet; beautiful flowers with sweetest fragrance may bloom around him; and the songs of birds everywhere greet him; and earth and sky together meet as on a bridal day; and yet, in the midst of all this loveliness, dependent man must labor for his food or perish. Every attraction and beauty of nature may adorn his pathway and his resting place, yet he must work or die by the wayside, for there is no life-giving element in nature's beauties of earth or air unless man work to secure it. God's law governing man's existence here, has inexorably fixed the conditions upon which alone he can live and prosper. Bread is his need and by the sweat of his face must he eat it. Neither kings, nor powers, nor principalities, nor decrees, nor laws, nor arts, nor science, nor devices of any kind, can change that law of man's existence." Mr. Edgerton takes strong grounds against the taxation of agricultural lands, cultivated and used annually for the production of crops. He argues that "Such taxes are a tax on the labor and industry required to make lands productive; and their annual product is an addition to the wealth of the country which does not escape taxation. I do not include in this proposition wood lands, timber lands, or any lands not actually cultivated as farms. They should be taxed.

I cannot give you, on such an occasion as this, the reasons in full, nor the statistics, which would prove the justice and necessity of this proposition; but I can illustrate it by a reference to your own experience, and you can make your own arguments and draw your own conclusions. A man buys a piece of uncultivated land, 'wild land,' as we call it, and uses his means in paying for it. He goes upon it, puts up his cabin, moves into it, and commences his improvements. The only additional value given to his land is the result of his own labor, or the results of like labor by his neighbor similarly situated. But so soon as this increase in value, which to him has been no source of profit, is discernable and becomes known to the assessor, it is listed for taxation; and so on, for year after year, are taxes imposed upon him because he thus improves his land, and cultivates the soil for the public good. The government gives him no encouragement to labor, and no protection to his industry. A failure of crops for one or two years exhausts the savings of the farm, but the law does not come to his relief, and remit or lessen his taxes. If a temporary building on a farm is burned down, the value is deducted from the assessment, but if the crops, year after year, are destroyed, no deduction is made on the taxes on the land." He favors taxing all kinds of bonds and securities, as well as church property of every description, and suggests the ballot box as a remedy for existing evils, though "A man who of his own volition seeks and clamors for office, is not the man to have it."

The Columbia City Post and the Auburn Courier do Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks no good by denouncing Mr. Samuel J. Tilden. If the democratic national convention should nominate Hendricks in 1880, and retire Tilden, the former might probably want the latter to help him to carry the state of New York. There is no sense in such abuse. Mr. Tilden will be nominated and elected, and neither Mr. Brown nor Mr. Reed will be hurt by it. Mr. Hendricks will be slaughtered in the convention by his over-zealous friends. Mark our prediction.—Valparaiso Messenger.

We are somewhat surprised that our esteemed friend of the Messenger should adopt the stereotyped cry of Tildens followers, i. e. "Hendricks will be slaughtered in the convention by his over-zealous friends". Speaking for the COURIER, we desire it to be distinctly understood, that WE ARE IN FAVOR OF MR. HENDRICKS for reasons heretofore expressed. We are not over-zealous in his behalf, nor is he the only man that we could cheerfully support. We do not question the right of democratic editors of Indiana to support Tilden, but we would like to see them advocate his cause frankly and openly, because if they are for Tilden they are opposed to Hendricks and the interests of their own state. We are no more in favor of Hendricks, than we are opposed to Tilden, neither do we oppose Tilden because we are in favor of Hendricks. Our objections to Tilden are numerous, and as we think, well founded. We neither expect to be hurt or benefitted by Tildens nomination and election, the former is barely probable and the latter is not possible.

The Young Folks' Monthly.

That interesting Young Peoples' Magazine, the Young Folks' Monthly, is upon our table, full of pleasure and profit to the class for which it is intended. Dialogues for schools and other entertainments, a series of drawing lessons, etc. It contains 32 large pages and is no doubt the cheapest Magazine for the price. See our club rates in another column.

$50,000! $50,000!
$50,000
WORTH OF CLOTHING!
Which was manufactured for southern trade, is now offered at
Sixty Cents on the Dollar.

We bought these goods of a large New York house, which manufactures for, and depends principally on southern trade. Owing to the fever raging so furiously south, they could neither sell nor ship their goods, and were obliged, therefore, to dispose of their entire stock to northern dealers at a big sacrifice.

We took advantage of this rare chance by buying only for cash, and therefore are enabled to sell these entire new goods at 65 cents on the dollar.

SAVE MONEY BY FAVORING US WITH A CALL.
SAM, PETE & MAX, Managers.
Star Clothing House, FORT WAYNE, IND.,

ROOT & COMPANY

We beg leave to announce that we have now in stock the most elegant line of

FALL DRESS GOODS!

That we have ever before displayed. Our Novelties are new in design and colorings and are simply exquisite. Some of the new effects this season are more beautiful than any that have been before produced. Besides an unusually fine variety of

COLORED SILKS,

In all the desirable shades, we have a line of elegant

Colored Brocades,

Plain Black Silks, in all the best known foreign and domestic brands. In this line we have several special bargains, among which will be found heavy Gros Grain Silk. Eighteen inches wide, 75c; Nineteen inches wide, 90c; Twenty inches wide, $1.00. Most excellent goods for the money. We make a specialty of all kinds of consisting in part of all the fashionable shades of plain, stripe and fancy Velvets, Black and Colored Silks and Satins, Pekin Satin Stripes and Satin Moire Stripes, etc. We have some new, elegant and tasteful goods in this line not to be found elsewhere. Our stock of Black and Colored

TRIMMINGS,

FRINGES,

will be found unusually large and exceedingly elegant

Button, Button, who's got the Button?

is no longer an open question. Everyone knows that Root & Company have always got the particular button that anyone may want, especially if it be rare and elegant. Our assortment is really almost without limit. New Garments in Black and Colors in all the fashionable shapes.

Root & Co., Calhoun Street,
FORT WAYNE, IND

Another Car-Load
OF PARLOR AND COOKING
STOVES
Received at the Hardware Store of
KIBLINGER & CO.
They were purchased before the advance, and will be sold at
Old Prices!
30 per cent. less than the advance now.
W. H. KIBLINGER & COMP'Y.,
North of court house, 1st door west of McQuiston & Ralston's double store.
AUBURN, - - IND.

Auburn Courier.

SUBSCRIBE NOW,

The "Courier" Clubbing List.

For cash in advance, we will send the COURIER and either of the following periodicals, to any subscriber in DeKalb county, for one year, at the price named below:

STATE SENTINEL (weekly)	$2 00
WESTERN RURAL "	3.00
YOUNG FOLKS' MONTHLY	2.35

Sample copies of the above can be seen at this office.

The publishers of the publications named below, offer the balance of 1879 free to all who subscribe now.

WESTERN RURAL, YOUNG FOLKS' MONTHLY.

The Dog Days.

A correspondent asks what is meant by "dog days." It might signify that "every dog has his pay." That is also a popular method of expressing an idea and is has about as much good sense in it as the other, and more truth than poetry. "Dog days" signify the period of the greatest summer heat, which is between the first week in July and last in August. In the Mediterranean country, where the idea originated, the period corresponded with the date the dog star rose with the sun. The ancients ascribed to this period nearly all malignant influences. It was natural to get low-down for a name to characterize it, hence the evil days were called "dog days." This latter interpretation is modern, but to one who regards the average dog as the synonym for all that is mean, it is a good one. We like this interpretation the best of any yet given. —Indiana Farmer.

How to Detect Poison Ivy.

[Syracuse Herald.]

The annoying casualty which confined Judge Noah Davis to a sick room the other day might have been avoided if the eminent jurist had paid as much attention to the small as to the large things of life. The poison ivy and the innocuous kind differ in one particular which is too easy of remembrance to be overlooked by any one who is enough interested in the brilliant hued leaves of autumn to care for gathering them; the leaves of the former grow in clusters of three, and those of the latter in fives. As somebody has suggested in a juvenile story book, every child should be taught to associate the five leaves in a cluster with the fingers on the human hand and given to understand that when these numbers agree they can be brought into contact with safety. It may spare our readers no little suffering to bear this point in mind during their October rambles in the field.

County Institute.

MESSRS EDITORS—As the time for holding our county institute is drawing near, I would like to put a few questions and make a few suggestions to the teachers of the county, for their consideration and discussion at the institute. Can we not devise some means of creating a greater interest at our township institutes? How will we secure a large attendance? I will suggest that the teacher at whose school house the institute is to convene, continue his school at least one half day during the institute. I think in this way we could form better ideas of the methods of others, in conducting recitations and presenting the different subjects, and would probably command a greater interest.

A TEACHER.

P. S.—We would like it R. R. would give an explanation of what he meant by the pupils of Cedar Creek school getting into a racket. If by "racket" he meant a quarrel, he is surely mistaken, as the school has passed off nicely without any disturbance whatever.

Pause, Ponder and Peruse!

The invention of that Superior and Complete Sewing Machine (The Family Sewing Machine), marks one of the most important eras in the history of machinery and when we consider its great usefulness and extremely low price ($25). it is very difficult to conceive of any invention for domestic use of more or even equal importance to families. It has great capacity for work; beautiful, smooth, and quiet movement, rapid execution, certainty and delightful ease of operation, that at once commends it above all others The working parts are all steel, strong and durable, and will last a life time; the bobbins hold 100 yards of thread; the stitch is the firmest of all the stitches made, neat and regular, and can be regulated in a moment to sew stitches from an inch in length on coarse material down to the finest, so infinitesimal as to be hardly discernable with the naked eye, and with a rapidity rendering it impossible to count them as fast as made; it has more attachments than any other, and it does to perfection all kinds of heavy, coarse, plain, fine, or fancy needle-work with ease, and far less labor than required on other machines. It needs no commendation, the rapid sales, increasing demand and voluntary encomiums from the press, and the thousands of families who use them, amply testify to their undoubted worth as a standard and reliable household necessity, extending its popularity each day. Machines sent anywhere to be examined before any money is paid. Agents wanted by the Company, Address them for information. Family Sewing Machine Co., 755 Broadway, New York. 43-1y.

—The county commissioners were in session this week for the purpose of receiving the reports of the township trustees. Full report in next week's COURIER.

Local and Miscellaneous

—MORTGAGES,

—WARRANTEE DEEDS,

—QUIT CLAIM DEEDS,

—GUARDIAN'S RECEIPTS, (bound),

—ADMINISTRATOR'S RECEIPTS (bound),

—For sale in large or small quantities at the COURIER office. tf.

—Ripe oysters at Hollisters.

—Gents underwear from 40c. suits up, at McQuiston & Ralston's.

—The boss hats and caps at McQuiston & Ralston's.

—That Gasteline at Abright's the jeweler, is immense.

—Go to Abright's the jeweler and examine his necklaces.

—Mr. Bab Lewis and family are visiting in Richland county, Ohio.

—Tarney can suit you in choice cuts of beef, veal, pork or mutton.

—Ladies, call and examine the ladies' friend, in the shape of a glove buttoner.

—Don't buy your ladies' cloaks till you have seen McQuiston & Ralston's.

—The best assortment of dress goods in the city at McQuiston & Ralston's.

—Vacant houses are hard to find in Auburn. One year ago they were plenty.

—Clocks, clocks, clocks. The largest stock in northern Indiana at Abright's, the jeweler.

—The Stamets hotel, recently removed to the junction, will soon be ready for occupancy.

—"Dr. Lindsey's Blood Searcher' cured my son of erysipelas." Mrs. E. Smeltzer, Larimer, Pa.

—Frank Culbertson is managing the back line to the entire satisfaction of the traveling public.

—Silver knives, forks and spoons at bottom prices at Abright's the jeweler. No charge for marking.

—The patent process flour manufactured by Duncan Bros., at Waterloo, is the best in the market.

—"Worth their weight in gold" is what "Sellers' Liver Pills" are said to be. If you don't believe it, try them.

—Children and ladies' underwear, children, misses and ladies' hosiery at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3t.

—The Republican indulges in more self laudation than all the other newspapers in the county combined.

—Sam Hench, Esq., prosecuting attorney of Allen county, was in town yesterday, assisting in the Hazzard prosecution.

—Hazzard appears to be advertising the Swineford House. He boards around and picks his teeth in front of the hotel.

—Mr. Steve A. Martin and wife, of Whitley county, spent several days last week with Mr. J. J. Martin and family at the junction.

—Preaching at the Baptist church next Sabbath morning and evening, and regularly thereafter once in two weeks, by Rev. R. C. Ray.

—Work has commenced on the Fort Wayne water works. The contracts have all been let, amounting in the aggregate to $236,865 86.

—Heavy silk fringes, silk velvets velveteens, corduroy, trimmings, silks, and a large assortment of emproideries at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3t.

—Abright the jeweler ahead again. Having bought a large stock of watches before the advance, will sell them for the next 30 days at the old price.

—Every body says McQuiston & Ralston have the largest stock of goods ever brought to Auburn. Call and see them. 42-3t.

—The Courier advocates a county fair at Auburn. Now, what has the Press to say to this recruit?—Republican.

Recruit! We smile.

—Prepare for cold weather. Cotton flannels 16 yards for $1.00, also a large assortment of all wool flannels at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3.

—S. U. Tarney still gives his personal attention to the selection of fatted stock for slaughtering purposes, that is the reason he always has good tender meat.

—Mr. J. E. Bodine, of West Manchester, Ohio, called on his numerous friends in Auburn a few days since. He made the COURIER office happy two dollars worth.

Miss Allice McKay and her friend, Miss Kittie Henderson, of Fort Wayne, entertained a number of their friends at the residence of the former, Saturday evening last.

—The case against Adam Mullen of this county, who was indicted by the grand jury of Allen county for assault and battery, was dismissed by Pros. Atty. Hench last week at Ft. Wayne.

—Remember the meeting at Ensley's hall next Saturday evening in the interest of the Auburn fair. Let everybody turn out and lend their influence. Would be glad to see as many farmers present as possible.

—Our young friend, John Schaab, has gone to Ohio to commit a rash act. He will return with Mrs. Schaab the first of next week, when the boys will give the newly married couple a grand reception and have a jolly time.

—A large and select lot of personal property, consisting of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, wagons, harness, reaper, plows, carpenter's tools, bees, household goods, etc., will be sold at public auction at the late residence of Anthony McEntaffer, deceased, near Waterloo, on Friday the 31st inst.

—Mr. Adam Deets, of Richland township, has just completed a very fine country residence, said to be the best in the township. Messrs. Steele & Canon, of Auburn, does the painting.

—The employes of the COURIER office can testify to the excellent quality of apples raised by Mr. John Boots, of Jackson township. A basket full left in the office by Mr. Boots, vanished as it by magic.

—List of unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Auburn, October 20, 1879: Grace B Desouza, Rob't. Fluke, John W. Hartman, Mrs. Kittie Mosier, Joseph M. Snyder, Charles Williams.

JOS. RAINIER, P. M.

—We have been asked by a number of school teachers who take the COURIER, why we do not publish the educational articles of the county superintendent. For answer, we refer them to Mr. MacIntosh.

—There should be an effort put forth by the citizens of Auburn to have a course of lecturers this winter. Scarcely a day passes that we do not receive proposals from some celebrity, offering their services at from $30 to $50 for one evening. Matilda Fletcher can be had Nov. 14th, for one lecture.

—MARRIED,—At the Catholic church in New Haven, by Rev. Wedon, at 9 o'clock a. m., on Tuesday the 21st inst., Mr. John A. Schaab, of Auburn, and Miss Aline Beugnot, of Cecil, O.

With the above came an abundant supply of cake, for which the COURIER boys return thanks. "Here's your good health, and your family's, and may you all live long, and brosper."

—Uncle Jake Hoover concluded to take a hand in the Hazzard bussiness the other day, and gobbled up Hazzards overcoat and satchel to satisfy a $59,00 claim for delinquent taxes. An examination of the property satisfied the treasurer that the whole outfit was not worth over two or three dollars, and would not cover the expense of sale, so the property was returned to the owner.

—It is well known that all goods manufactured of iron are rapidly advancing in price. Material for the manufacture of stoves has advanced 60 per cent. Mr. John L. Davis, of the Pioneer hardware store, ought to consider himself very fortunate in being able to purchase a car load of stoves, of all kinds, at the old prices. He informs us that he will sell the new stoves just received without any advance, and at the old rates. Now is the time to buy.

—The Courier has treated the fair association very liberally this year.—Press.

But the Courier wants a county fair at Auburn. What has the Press to say now.—Republican.

The COURIER prefers to speak for itself concerning the fair, which it will do when the proper time comes. Several years experience in managing agricultural associations has learned us a few things in that connection. But we favor a fair.

—The criminal cases of Geo. Hazzard came up for trial in the Circuit court last Tuesday. A change of venue was taken from the judge, and the time for trial set for next Wednesday before Judge Lowry, when it is expected that the cases will be disposed of. There are eight cases in all, for larceny, perjury and false pretenses. The defendant is under bond of $1,000 in each case. Judge Mellet of Newcastle appears for the defense, and Samuel Hench, of Fort Wayne will assist in the prosecution.

—Owing to the large edition, increased size, double frontispieces, etc., of the November number of Scribner's Monthly and St. Nicholas, it has been found necessary to appoint the day of issue later than usual. Scribner's Monthly (edition 100,000) will be ready October 22d. It will be "an agricultural number," containing half a dozen papers of the highest interest to farmers and others interested in rural life, besides a portrait and copy of bass-relief of Bayard Taylor, and the beginning of a new serial story by George W. Cable. St. Nicholas, permanently enlarged, printed on heavier paper, with wider margins, and having many special attractions, will be issued on the 25. New volumes of both magazines are begun with these numbers.

—Last Saturday was the 65th birthday of Mrs. Walborn, who resides three miles west of Auburn. The old lady was completely surprised by her children and neighbors, who congregated at her house at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, each bringing a nice present or something good to eat. All her children were present except two sons living in Kansas and one daughter living in Michigan. The children and grandchildren present numbered twenty-three The neighbors present were Mr. and Mrs. Wash. Teeters, Mr. and Mrs. Dan'l Swihart, Mother Swihart, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff. Clark and children, and Mrs. Fred. Imler. At 12 o'clock the company surrounded a very large extension table in the dining room, which was loaded with turkey, chicken, cakes, pies and other substantials and luxuries, all of which was relished by the company, as each person present seemed to have a good appetite, but there was plenty for all, and some to spare, notwithstanding 'Squire Walborn and several other big eaters were present. After dinner the party engaged in a social chat, and a general good time was had by all. It was an enjoyable occasion, and will long be remembered by Mother Walborn.

Spencerville.

—Mr. D. Zahner, of Waterloo, was in town on Saturday.

—Prof. Zimmerman has a new musical instrument. It's a girl.

—Mrs. A. Depew, of Mich. is visiting her parents near town.

—A Murphy club was organized at the M. E. church Friday evening.

—Rev. J. M. Wolverton has gone to Richmond to attend a sick child.

—J. W. Garman, late of Republic, O., and family, have returned to Spencerville

—A. Kinsey took in the Chicago exposition, also made purchase of a stock of furniture.

—We are glad to see that deacon Billy has resumed his old position with Mr. Kinsey.

—Mr. P. Bishop visited the exposition, and while there purchased a fine line of dry-goods, etc.

—Mrs. S. Barny arrived home on Friday, from a visit of several weeks among friends in Kansas.

—The Masons have completed their hall and secured the necessary fixtures for successful operations.

—Rev. Stackhouse, the new Methodist minister, with his family, took possession of the parsonage last week.

—The suit before Esq. Fales, wherein Henry Myers was plaintiff and J. R. Nichols defendent, resulted in favor of the defense

—Our school, under the management of Mr. F. Walters, has proved very successful, with a large attendance of scholars from a distance. We have heard no complaints from patrons or scholars during the term, which is something new for our school. The fall term closes in two weeks. Mr. Walters will have charge of the school during the winter.

—Spencerville has now attained to the position of a perfect town after years of conflict between the moral and respectable portion of her people, and the element that loves its slops and swill. The latter have succeeded in getting a saloon opened, to their evident satisfaction, where they can now slack their thirst in large or small quantities.

St. Joe.

—Hank shelled out the cigars on Friday.

—Another blockade at the St. Joe elevators.

—Jerry Andrews is shipping apples from this place.

—Marion Dermott is afflicted with chills and fever.

—Dad Strong has another position on Pete's fast train.

—Charlie Ables has emigrated to the wild woods of Michigan.

—O. H. is somewhat indisposed, owing to the change in the weather.

—It is rumored that one of the Barny Brothers (Mark) will soon be in town with a stock of goods. Who next?

—S. S. Barr, at the telegraph office, has an assistant, and the two together make a team. Two as big hearted boys as ever shook a dice box.

—Bro. Bell still keeps watch over the river bridge. We fear if he is not released soon there is danger of his blowing away. So poor! oh, so poor.

—E. Case, of Spencerville, has associated himself with Mort Olds in the dry goods and grocery business, and will open out a bran new stock of goods this week.

—A. Donaldson, building contractor, is busily engaged in finishing up his buildings, having no less than four on hand.

—The building to be used for a drug store by the Mitchell Brothers is nearly completed, and soon St. Joe. will be blessed with another M. D.

—H. H. Fales, of Spencerville, is putting up a two story frame building to be used as a furniture store. That the business men of Spencerville see in St. Joe the rising star, is clearly settled.

—The three story brick to be used by J. D. Leighty as a dry goods emporium, is nearly completed, and we thinkit the finest building in the south half of the county.

—War was declared in the west part of town on Saturday morning last. It is claimed by a resident of J. S. Francis' addition that on the night of the general shake up, a certain young man insulted a married woman. Learning of the fact the husband started out fully armed to look up the offender. Not finding the boy that night, his wrath somewhat cooled off, and instead of the pistol, he concluded to wreak his vengeance with a club. The y. m. not knowing that there was any danger was perambulating around kind of loosly, when the husband slipped up and dealt him a blow with a club which sent the young man to grass. It is said that after coming to, the y. m. done some tall running and loud hallooing, and was around about noon trying to buy a pistol, but Jake did not have any and the matter was settled at the 'squire's office. If it had not been for the dance there would not have been any insult, if there had been no insult there would have been no broken heads.

—Cashmeres from 15c. to 75c. per yard at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3

The Auburn papers contain flaming reports of the soldiers' re-union at that place on the 19th and 20th. The number present is variously estimated at from 7,000 to 8,000, probably the largest crowd that ever before assembled at the county-seat. The re-union was a grand and imposing demonstration, and as such will long be remembered by the veterans who met there to recount the scenes of camp and battle-field. The only thing that occurred to reflect discredit on a portion of the proceedings, was the conduct of certain galvanized politicians of the more radical type, who improved the occasion to step over the line and indulge in a political harangue in the course of their speeches. This was designed as a non-partizan meeting, and political hash not down in the bill; it was in very bad taste, but nothing else could be expected from political shoulder-strikers who manage somehow to make conspicuous asses of themselves on general principles.—Headlight.

AGENTS WANTED!

THE NEW STYLE

$25 FAMILY SEWING MACHINE.

THE USUAL $65 MACHINE REDUCED TO $25.

$150 per Week Made Easy.

Horse and Wagon Free to Agt's

The CHEAPEST and BEST in the World.

Too Long in Use to Doubt its Superior MERITS.

No Money to Pay until Machine is Delivered to you and Examined.

It makes the shuttle, double-thread, lock-stitch, (the same on both sides of the work), which received the highest reward at the Centennial exhibition, Philadelphia, Pa., 1876. And is complete with a larger assortment of attachments for fine work than any other machine, and reduced to only $25.

It is an easy and pleasant machine to operate, requires the least care, produces every variety of work, and will last until the next century begins. Strong, simple, rapid and efficient.

Use it once and you will use no other. The money cheerfully refunded if it will not outwork and outlast any machine at double the price.

Agents sell them faster than any other in consequence of their being the "best at the lowest price."

Each machine throughly warranted with written guarantee for five years. Kept in order free of charge; money refunded at once if not satisfactory.

It is the most solid, reliable, and satisfactory machine ever invented for all kinds of family work. It is an acknowleged unequivocal mechanical success, thoroughly tested and used in thousands of homes. An efficient, silent, rapid, reliable and ever-ready helper to the weary wife or seamstress, it will do the work of a family for a lifetime, or it will earn from $4 to $5 per day for any one who wishes to sew for a living. This machine costs less than half the price of any new machine of like quality. Has extra long, large-sized shuttle, easily removed. Extra large-sized bobbins, holding 100 yards of thread, doing away with the frequent rewinding of bobbins. It is built for strength and constant hard work. Interchangeable working parts, manufactured of fine polished steel. Will run for years without repairs; is simple to learn, easy to manage, understood perfectly in an hour, and always ready in a moment to do every description of heavy or fine work, at less cost or trouble than any other machine at any price ever did or can do. It will sew anything a needle can pierce, from lace or cambric to heavy cloth or harness, with any kind of thread, and will run off twenty yards per minute; it uses strong, straight needles, and never breaks them It cannot miss or drop a stitch, ravel or break the thread. If you have any other machine, buy this and have a better one. The ease and rapidity of its motion and quality of its work, are its best recommendations. It will hem, fell, tuck, braid, cord, bind, gather, quilt, ruffle, pleat, fold, scallop, shirr, roll, baste, embroider, run up braids, etc., with elegance, ease and quickness, unsurpassed by any machine ever invented.

BEWARE OF IMPOSITION.

The price for our new machines are less than those asked by dealers in second-hand, rebuilt and refinished machines, or those selling out old stock to close up business, many such inferior and old style machines being offered as new at reduced prices; beware of imposition and only buy new machines. There are no new first-class machines offered as low as the "FAMILY," by many dollars.

Machines Sent for Examination Before Payment of Bill.

Extraordinary inducements offered to clergymen, teachers, storekeepers, etc., to act as agents. Horse and wagon furnished free. For testimonials see descriptive books, mailed free with samples of work, liberal terms, circulars, etc. Address,

FAMILY SEWING MACHINE CO.
43-1y 755 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

GUGERLI;

THE FASHIONABLE

Merchant Tailor,

Has just received the largest and finest assortment of

Foreign and Domestic

Goods in his line, ever opened in DeKalb County. The very latest patterns in

FRENCH CASSIMERES,
BROADCLOTH
DOESKIN,
CHEVIOT,
DIAGONALS,

And all kinds of fancy suitings. Beaver and chinchilla

OVERCOATINGS.

Of all colors, the finest ever brought to this market. A fine line of Beaver for

LADIES' CLOAKS,

Which the ladies are requested to examine. Cloaks cut, fit, trimmed and made at very low prices and

WARRANTED TO FIT.

No trimmings used on either gent's or ladies' wear, except the very best. Call and examine goods and leave your measure at

J. H. GUGERLI'S,

North Main street, opposite Dusk's furniture store, Auburn, Indiana.

Read. Read.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county, who is authorized to sell the Singer Machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office in Stamets' store, second door south of First National bank. 30-tf.

Vacation of Alley.

Notice is hereby given of the pendency of a petition before the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, to be heard at their December session, 1879, praying the vacation of an alley running North and south along the entire west side of Park's addition to the town of Auburn, in said county. The persons to be effected by said proposed vacation are Joseph H. Ford, Christopher Goodbreak William Snell, Charles Snell, John H. Weaver, Minnie Garver, John Otto, George H. K. Moss, John Sawyer and Joseph K. Lanning.

W. H. DILLS, Att'y, GEORGE H. K. MOSS, And others.

Oct. 21st, 1879. 43-t.

GET MARRIED!

There is a place in this State where wedding outfits for gentlemen,

CLOTHING

Furnishing Goods,

Hosiery, Hats, &c.

is a specialty. Parties contemplating

MatrimonY

will consult their interest if they wish

Stylish Garments

artistically constructed to visit this place. Besides we carry the largest, best made and finest trimmed stock of Men's Boys and Children's Clothing in the State. Be sure and find

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

C. O. D.

one price, fine clothiers

Opposite North Door Court House.
FORT WAYNE, IND.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line.

75 Miles Shortest to Indianapolis, Louisville and all points South. 58 Miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas, Texas, and all points West. Direct Route to Detroit and all Michigan and Canada points.

TIME CARD IN EFFECT OCT. 12, '79.

SOUTH.	MAIL.	EX.	ACC.
Bay City	....	6 30am	....	....
Saginaw	....	7 15am	....	....
Lansing	....	10 07am	....	....
Grand Rapids	....	6 00am	12 15pm	....
Detroit	....	7 00am	3 55pm	....
Ann Arbor	....	8 40am	5 20pm	....
Jackson	6 00am	11 58am	6 40pm	....
Jonesville	7 10am	1 00pm	8 37pm	....
Bankers	7 27am	1 15pm	9 05pm	....
Reading	7 39am	1 27pm	9 30pm	....
Angola	8 02am	2 10pm	11 05pm	....
Waterloo	9 11am	2 50pm	12 10am	....
Auburn	9 25am	3 02pm	12 43am	....
Auburn Junc.	9 27am	3 05pm	12 45am	....
Ft. Wayne	10 20am	3 55pm	2 00am	....
Indianapolis	6 25pm	10 55pm	....	....
Cincinnati	7 00pm	....	....	....
Louisville	11 00pm	8 20am	....	....
St. Louis	7 30am	7 30am	....	....
Washington	....	8 00pm	....	....
Baltimore	....	9 20am	....	....

NORTH.	EX.	MAIL.	ACC.
Baltimore	....	7 10am	....	....
Washington	....	8 35am	....	....
St. Louis	8 00am	7 00pm	....	....
Louisville	7 30am	6 50pm	....	....
Cincinnati	9 00am	....	....	....
Indianapolis	11 50am	4 05am	....	....
Ft. Wayne	5 00pm	11 35am	1 20am	....
Auburn Junc.	5 55pm	12 30pm	2 45am	....
Auburn	5 59pm	12 34pm	3 15am	....
Waterloo	6 14pm	12 46pm	3 40am	....
Angola	7 19pm	1 20pm	4 50am	....
Reading	8 08pm	2 10pm	6 15am	....
Bankers	8 22pm	2 22pm	6 45am	....
Jonesville	8 37pm	2 37pm	7 10am	....
Jackson	9 45pm	3 40pm	9 00am	....
Ann Arbor	2 06am	5 10pm	10 35am	....
Detroit	3 35am	6 20pm	11 50am	....
Grand Rapids	7 10am	10 05pm	1 00pm	....
Lansing	....	8 45pm	....	....
Saginaw	....	9 10pm	....	....
Bay City	....	10 00pm	....	....

Accommodation going north daily except Monday. All other trains daily except Sunday.

For information as to routes and connections apply to

P. B. LOOMIS, Pres't & Gen'l Manag'r.
S. K. HOOPER, Gen'l Ticket Ag't.

E WIFE'S PRAYER AND THE DRUNKARD'S RESOLVE.

BY BYRON B. LONG.

Hush, my dear! the winds are moaning
Through the ragged window pane,
And the rotten roof is groaning
'Neath the torrent-falling rain;
Close thine eyes and let them slumber
Through the darkness of this night,
And hear not the awful thunder
That will roll before the light.

Hark! seems now I hear a footfall;
Ah! 'twas but that hingeless gate
Dashed again by storm-king's fury,
Dealing out its dues of fate.
Sleep, my child! the lightning's flashes
May but calm thy sweet repose;
But thy mother's tired lashes—
When they'll rest but Heaven knows.

Ah! upon my eyesight painted,
Holy scenes of long ago,
With the sparks of radiance tainted,
Sweet as clearest sunset's glow;
When, within the harvest garnered,
I a blushing bride was seen,
With a youth whose brow was tarnished
Not with sin's dark, loathsome screen.

But the change! oh, tearful wailing!
My poor heart can scarce contain
All the woe that lies there railing,
In its bitter, sad refrain;
When the tempter, vile and sullen,
Tore the splendor from that brow—
Swept the luster from eyeballs—
Darkened orbs of misery now.

Yes, he comes! I hear him stumble;
Oh, my God, but bear me up!
'Mid the thunder's pealing rumble,
Help me drag this bitter cup;
Help me still the wail of anguish
That seems bursting from my breast;
Blessed Jesus, waft me heavenward—
Let me on Thy bosom rest!

Ah! the door behind him closes;
Seems he walks with firmer tread,
And those eyes seem not as burning
As when tinged with Satan's red;
As before the grate he's standing,
In the firelight's fading glow,
Seems I see a manly picture,
One I'd seen long years ago.

"Wife!" He turns, and o'er his features
Gleamings of angelic light
Seem to float in waves of splendor,
Driving out the horrid night,
Sifting from my care-worn bosom
All the loads of sorrow there,
Filling up that hour with gladness,
Banishing all thoughts of care.

"Ere to-night you hushed the sobbings
Of our boy in yonder bed;
Ere you'd brushed the golden ringlets
That are shrouding his young head;
While you were with tears bemoaning
That this home should be his fate;
When thou saidst the winds are roaring,
And the night is dark and late;

"I beneath the eave was listening—
Listening to thy offered prayer;
Heard you sobbing o'er our offspring,
Heard and trembled standing there;
As I heard the cold rain pattering
On the roof above my head,
I resolved to shun the tempter,
'Ere another tear was shed.

"There I kneeled beneath the window,
Gazing toward the clouded heaven,
Asking God, if e'er his aid
Unto mortal man was given,
That He'd let it strengthen me,
Through this scene, my hour of need;
Help me save my labor's worth,
The mouths of wife and child to feed.

"And He heard me, wife: I've conquered;
I no more will touch the cup,
That with hell's dark doom is mantled,
That has burnt my earnings up!
I no more on earth will cause thee
In thy loneliness to shed
Tears of anguish o'er our offspring,
That now lies on yonder bed.

But while heaven is all aglowing,
And all earth's a bounteous store,
I will try to be more grateful
Than I've ever been before;
I will try to heal the rupture
That has torn thy heart in twain;
I will try to soothe thy sorrow,
And receive thy smile again."

APPLETON, Ohio.

THE WRONG PIG.

A Physician's Story.

Old Dr. Johns lived in a small village of Honeyhurst, and for forty years he had been the sole physician in the district where he resided. No one cared to enter the lists against him in that locality, for the simple inhabitants fully believed that there was not such another master of the healing art in the known world, and so he drove his red-wheeled gig over the lanes and by-ways of the country side without a rival, and dared and bullied the inhabitants in his rough and kindly fashion to his heart's content.

The doctor lived in a great rambling house, half way down the village street, with a wide expanse of lawn in front, and his little brick office in one corner next to the sidewalk. His wife had died many years ago, so his household was conducted by a housekeeper. But, as the doctor's family was small and he loved society, he was hardly ever without a student, to whom he taught the healing art in the back office. Thus it was Charley Horton came to Honeyhurst to study medicine with the doctor, and, as his predecessor had done before him, occupied the back office and the northwest chamber. He came from a town somewhat distant, and was unknown to the town folk, and, like every stranger that came among them, was made the subject of much critical examination, as he walked up the broad aisle of the village church the Sunday evening after his arrival.

"Well, doctor, how are you?" said Farmer Smith, as he leaned over the gate of his cornfield, next morning, as the doctor came driving by.

"Ah, Smith, how do you do?" replied he, as he drew rein on the gray mare and stopped. "How's your folks?"

"Toler'ble, thank'ee; wife's a little ailin' this mornin'. See you've got a new young man; see'd him yesterday at church. Goin' to make a doctor out o' him, eh?"

"Yes, I think so," replied the doctor.

"Think ye ain't got the wrong pig by the ear, eh, doctor?" said the farmer, laughing.

"Well, don't know," replied the village Æsculapius; "can't tell yet."

Now, "getting the wrong pig by the ear" was one of the doctor's great expressions—in fact, his favorite one. Like Shakspeare's Justice, he was "full of wise saws and modern instances," and had a proverb or apt quotation upon every occasion. With him, if a man made a mistake, it was "getting the wrong pig by the ear." Of course this peculiarity was well known throughout all the country about where he practiced, and hence the quotation of Farmer Smith.

Time passed on, and Charles Horton became fully domesticated in the doctor's household. He was a fine young fellow, somewhat over-confident, perhaps, and needed the rein a little. This the doctor was not slow to put on, and he mingled his instructions in the healing art with admonitions about "getting the wrong pig by the ear," until Charles was heartily tired of the homely proverb. But he was a good fellow, nevertheless, and a great favorite.

Two years passed away, and Charlie's studies with the old doctor were drawing to a close, when suddenly the idea popped into his head that he would go to Paris and finish his medical education with a course through the continental hospitals. Dr. Johns pooh-poohed the idea, and thought it utterly useless.

"Why, boy," said he, "what do you want to be gallivanting off to France for? What bee have you got in your bonnet now? Can't you be satisfied with home learning, but must go and tack on some new-fangled foreign tomfoolery that will knock all your sensible knowledge out of your head? Go to Paris? Nonsense! Don't get the wrong pig by the ear!"

But Charlie was not to be talked out of his new ideas. He was bound to go to Paris to study and see the world, and so one day he packed his trunks, bade his friends good-by, and, mounting the stage coach, was wheeled out of the village world.

But before going the old doctor called him into his office, and, shutting the door, thus began:

"Now, Charlie, you are off to foreign parts, and I hope you will enjoy yourself. Stick to your books and get what knowledge you can out of those fellows over there, although I don't suppose they know so much more than other people. But, nevertheless, you may learn a few things. I don't suppose you'll be apt to go acting, as you have been too well brought up for that; and now I've got something here that I want you to take with you. It's a recipe that it has taken me a good many years to find out. You will find it of great value in your practice. It will cost you £5."

And the doctor, with a very grave face, held out a huge yellow envelope sealed with red wax and tied with a blue ribbon.

Charlie was rather tired of his long-winded harangue, for, although he liked the doctor, he considered him something of an old fogy. But the offer of his recipe excited his curiosity. What was it? So he paid the £5 and became the happy possessor of the huge envelope and its mysterious contents.

"Take good care of it, Charlie, and don't open it till you are out of the country."

A day or two after, when at his hotel at Folkestone waiting for the steamer, he bethought himself of the mystic recipe, and, hastening to his room, he locked the door and opened his valise.

There it was, safe and sound, in all its glory of yellow envelope, red seal and blue ribbon. Charlie took it out; turned it over. It was very solemn and ponderous; a perfect panacea for all the evils that flesh is heir to. He turned it over and over, and finally untied the ribbon, and, breaking the seal, drew out a sheet of foolscap carefully folded. Taking it to the window he read as follows:

Don't get the wrong pig by the ear.
DR. MATTHEW JOHNS.

Dashing the paper to the floor, Charlie burst out:

"The old swindler, to cheat me out of £5 in that way! I'll come up with him, though. See if I don't pay him off." So he contented himself with concocting a scheme for vengeance in secret.

Three years passed away before Charlie Horton finished his studies and returned home. Meanwhile he had changed greatly, and, from a smooth-faced stripling, with the merest suggestion of a mustache, he was now bearded like the pard, and looked so different that his own mother hardly knew him. But he had not forgotten Dr. Johns, nor his promised revenge.

It was Saturday night when the stage coach set Charles Horton down at the door of the village inn at Honeyhurst. He gave a false name to the landlord, and smoked a cigar with him after supper, and inquired about the village, without that functionary once suspecting his identity.

In the course of the conversation Charlie asked "Who it was that lived in that large house with a front garden down the street?"

"That's Dr. Johns—been here a good many years; clever man. I'll introduce you to him, if you wish. The doctor and I are pretty good friends."

"Well," slowly replied Charlie, as if considering it; "he ought to know his danger, and it would be best to tell him. It may not be too late yet."

And on they started down the street, toward the doctor's residence.

"What did you say was his name?" asked Charlie, as they marched along.

"Dr. Johns."

"Johns—Johns," said Charlie, thoughtfully; "I knew a fellow in Paris—Charlie Horton by name—who said he had studied with Dr. Johns, an old man, and somewhat of a character. I wonder if your doctor is the same man?"

"To be sure he is," replied the innkeeper, "I knew Charlie Horton well. He went to France three or four years ago. So you know him, do ye? Is he there yet? The doctor will be doubly glad to see you if you bring news from Charlie. He thought a great deal of him."

By this time they had reached the doctor's office, and he greeted the landlord heartily, and looked inquiringly at the stranger.

The landlord introduced Charlie as Dr. Holmes, and added that he brought news from Charlie Horton.

At this Dr. Johns was overjoyed, urged the pseudo Holmes to come in, and inquired affectionately about his old pupil.

Conversation was carried on for an hour, when Charlie, looking the doctor earnestly in the face, said:

"Dr. Johns, how is your health now?"

"First rate, sir—first rate. Never felt better in my life!" and he certainly looked it.

"You don't find old age creeping on, do you, sir?" blandly inquired Charlie, but still looking very intently into the doctor's face.

"Well, a little stiffish in the joints now and then; but—bless you, sir—I can ride as many miles and as many hours as I ever could."

"Doctor Johns," said Charlie, very impressively, "do you ever meet in your practice people who look and feel the perfect embodiment of health, and yet whose constitutions are being sapped by a fatal disease and they not conscious of it?"

"Well, yes, I have met such cases," replied the doctor.

"And did you ever apply them to yourself, sir?" asked Charlie, in solemn tones.

"Why, Dr. Holmes, what do you mean? Do you think that my constitution is undermined by a secret disease? Nonsense, man!" and he laughed outright.

Then Charlie began. He told the old doctor all that he had told the landlord, and much more. How he had many such cases. He knew the doctor felt his age, and he cleverly used those symptoms, twisting them about, showing that it was not age, and in two hours' time the doctor was so thoroughly frightened that he believed his end liable to occur at any moment, and besought "Dr. Holmes" to do whatever lay in his power to give him relief. Dr. Holmes promised to think it over during the night. Dr. Johns would not hear of his returning to the inn, but insisted upon his taking a bed at his house.

Charlie, with a grave face, finally consented; but, before going to bed, he advised the doctor to take an "anodyne," assured him that there was no immediate danger, and cleverly managed to slip an emetic into the doctor's glass of rum and water, which he always took before retiring, and had done so with great regularity for thirty years.

About the middle of the night the old housekeeper called Charlie up in great haste and terror. Dr. Johns was very sick, and had asked her to call Dr. Holmes as soon as possible. Charlie went to the bedroom and found him tossing around and groaning at a great rate. He felt now he had an attack of the disease mentioned by Charlie, and besought him to do what he could speedily.

Charlie made an examination, looked grave and shook his head.

"Bad, is it, Dr. Holmes?" asked Johns, faintly; "tell me the worst, sir."

"It is a bad case, Dr. Johns," said Charlie. "I can only do one thing, and that is a costly one. I can give you a prescription, but it will cost you £20. I am obliged to ask that for it, as I obtained it under peculiar circumstances. It may give you relief. I have seen it used with very good results."

"Twenty pounds?" asked the old doctor, eagerly. "All right; I will give it, sir. What is the prescription? Here is the money."

Charlie wrote on a slip of paper, folded it up, and handed it to the doctor. He received it eagerly, opened it with trembling hands, and, by the light of the bedroom lamp, read:

Don't get the wrong pig by the ear.
DR. CHARLES HORTON.

With one bound the doctor was out of bed, but "Dr. Horton" had vanished.

"Charlie," said Dr. Johns, next day, "I'm getting old; you must come and take my practice. Your £20 will help to give you a start."

The doctor says he never got the "wrong pig" but once.

What It Cost President Lincoln to Be Severe.

Mr. Lincoln did not always give way to his natural feelings of pity and tenderness. In his high position as a ruler and executive, he could not. But the firmness in him that sent a fellow-being to death ever caused him a bitter struggle. Judge Bromwell, of Denver, who visited him in March, 1865, reports Mr. Lincoln's own words. Mr. Seward and several other gentlemen were also present, and the President gradually came to talk on decisions of life and death. All other matters submitted to him, he declared, were as nothing in comparison to these, and he added:

"I reckon there never was a man raised in the country on a farm, where they are always butchering cattle and hogs, and think nothing of it, that ever grew up with such aversion to bloodshed as I have, and yet I have had more questions of life and death to settle in four years than all the men who ever sat in this chair put together. But I've managed to get along and do my duty, as I believe, and still save the most of them, and there's no man knows the distress of my mind. But there have been some of them I couldn't save—there are some cases where the law must be executed. There was that man ——, who was sentenced for piracy and slave-trading on the high seas. That was a case where there must be an example, and you don't know how they followed and pressed to get him pardoned, or his sentence commuted; but there was no use of talking.

"And then there was the case of Beal, on the lakes. That was a case where there must be an example. They tried me every way. They wouldn't give up, but I had to stand firm on that, and even had to turn away his poor sister when she came and begged for his life, and let him be executed, and he was executed, and I can't get the distress out of my mind yet."

As the kindly man uttered these words the tears ran down his cheeks, and the eyes of the men surrounding him moistened in sympathy. There was a profound silence, in which they rose to depart. Three weeks after, the President was killed.

Woman Smokers.

Tobacco has some distinguished female devotees in Europe. Emily Faithful, it is declared, smokes like a Michigan tugboat; the Duchess of Edinburgh takes a quiet puff now and then, and the Princess of Wales keeps a little cigarette case, which she hides profoundly from the smoke-abhorring nose of her royal mother-in-law, while the list might be extended by naming Elizabeth Thompson, the artist, Madame Ratazzi, of Italy, and others.

WHITTIER, the poet, is said to be failing in mental health. He will soon be 72 years of age. In his letter-writing he continues to use the old Quaker pronouns "thee" and "thou."

PERILS OF BALLOONING.

Donaldson and Grimwood's Fatal Voyage—La Mountain and Wise's Thrilling Ride Over Lake Ontario.

The loss of Prof. Wise and his companion, George T. Burr, of St. Louis, recalls the last aerial voyage of Prof. Donaldson, a noted American balloonist. Donaldson was originally a tight-rope performer, and took up ballooning about the year 1870. Between that time and 1875 he made 139 successful ascensions, and had many hair-breadth escapes. His 139th and last ascension was made at Chicago, on July 15, 1875. The balloon was the P. T. Barnum. She carried 88,000 cubic feet of gas and 800 pounds of sand. Mr. Grimwood, of the Journal, and Mr. Maitland, of the Post, were to go with Mr. Donaldson.

Mr. E. E. Wood, a brother reporter, approached Mr. Grimwood a few moments before he entered the basket. "I only care to go this once, just for the experience," said Mr. Grimwood.

"The wind's unfavorable, but perhaps an upper current will make that all right," Mr. Wood remarked.

Grimwood laughed. "It won't work," he said, with a shake of the head. "They're trying to frighten the reporters by saying that Donaldson expects to be carried into Michigan, with the chances of being gone two or three days. It won't work."

"Well," replied Mr. Wood, "what's the difference? If you should fly over to Michigan the trip would be all the more interesting, and you'd have a chance to spread in the Journal."

"That's so," said Grimwood. "Come to think of it, I'd like to land in Michigan. But if I'm going so far from home I ought to have more money."

He borrowed a $10 bill from a Mr. Adams, another reporter, saying, "I guess that'll do."

Mr. Wood then gave Grimwood a field glass to aid his observations while in mid-air. A life-preserver was thrown into the car. Grimwood said: "If I should see that we're settling into the lake, I'll pull off my boots, and slap on the life-preserver. I'm a good swimmer, and can stand a good deal."

The two reporters stepped into the basket. Donaldson followed. The balloon was overburdened, and he said that only one reporter could accompany him. He called for a volunteer to remain behind. Neither reporter moved. Maitland pulled a copper from his pocket and flipped it in the air, and Grimwood shouted "head." Maitland won, and Grimwood was reluctantly crawling from the car when Mr. Donaldson's agent interfered. "Gentlemen," said he, "the lots must be cast in the usual way, under my direction." He wrote "First choice" and "Second choice" on slips of paper, and shook them in a police officer's hat. The hat was held aloft, and the officer drew the decisive slip. It was Grimwood's death-warrant. He stepped back into the basket with Donaldson, and Maitland despondently withdrew.

The balloon rose gracefully to an altitude of about 5,000 feet, and floated steadily to the northeast, out over Lake Michigan, and in a direction that would, if followed, take them near Grand Haven, Mich., 120 miles distant. Thousands of upturned eyes watched the Barnum as it moved steadily before the breeze at a rate of about fifteen miles an hour. At 6¼, one hour and a half from the time of starting, many eyes were yet fastened upon the balloon.

At 7 p. m. the Little Guide, a small craft standing out some thirty miles from the Illinois shore, sighted the balloon. It was then occasionally dipping its basket in the lake, only a mile and a half away. The schooner headed for it, but before it could overtake it there seemed to be a sudden lightening of the car, and the balloon shot upward to a great height, and soon disappeared.

This was the last ever seen of the balloon. That night a terrific storm swept down upon the lake. How the two men met their fate was never known; but on the 16th of August the body of Grimwood was found on the east shore of Lake Michigan, near Stony creek. The body was fully identified. It was completely clothed, except that the hat and boots were missing, and around the body was a broken life-preserver. His watch, papers, letters, fruit-knife, a certificate of membership in the Chicago Public Library, and the field glass that was so kindly furnished by Mr. Wood were also found upon his body.

Nothing has been heard of Donaldson, nor have any remains of the balloon been discovered. The finding of Grimwood's body, however, established the fact that they lost their lives in the lake. There was nothing to indicate as to how death was met; whether the balloon was struck by lightning and collapsed in mid-air; whether the balloon struck the water and was burst, leaving the men to battle with the waves, only at last to be drowned. From Donaldson's knowledge of gas, and his mode of managing his balloon, we might infer that he found that he must trail upon the water, as he was compelled to do but a few weeks before on Lake Ontario, and that they prepared for the worst by throwing out all ballast, then their boots, and to meet the last they put on their life-preservers. The basket, coming down into the water, filled, and was virtually at anchor. The hurricane and furious wind would soon tear the balloon to pieces, and the two men, left at the mercy of the angry waves, must soon have succumbed to a watery grave.

The great aerial voyage from the Mississippi to the Atlantic coast began on July 1, 1859. It was the longest trip ever made in a balloon. The adventurers were John La Mountain, a noted aeronaut, O. A. Gager, John Wise and Wm. Hyde, of the St. Louis Republican. Mr. Hyde described the trip in a long letter to his journal. He said that they left St. Louis at 6¼ p. m. The cargo consisted of 900 pounds of sand, in bags; a large quantity of cold chickens, tongues, potted meats, sandwiches, etc.; numerous dark-colored, long-necked vessels, containing champagne, sherry, sparkling Catawba, claret, Madeira, brandy and porter; a plentiful supply of overcoats, shawls, blankets and fur gloves; a couple or three carpet-bags; a pail of iced lemonade and a bucket of water; a compass, barometer, thermometer and chart; bundles of the principal St. Louis newspapers; an express package, directed to New York city; cards of candidates for clerkships in several of the courts; tumblers, cups, knives and other articles.

The balloon, the Atlantic, with its four passengers, sailed off in a northeasterly direction, and in less than two hours, at a height of about one mile, struck the current that the aeronauts had declared was always flowing in the upper regions from west to east. The discovery greatly elated Prof. Wise. There broke from his lips a little cough, and saying, "Boys, let's sing," he struck up the stirring national anthem, "Hail Columbia," in which all joined, though the frigidity of the atmosphere put quite a damper on patriotism and melody.

A little after midnight there were momentary flashes of lightning on all sides of the horizon. The milky way appeared like luminous phosphorescent clouds, and heaven's jeweled tiara of stars glistened below and above. Night's queenly brow shimmered with the mellow light of the new-born crescent moon. The mighty scroll of the cerulean-pillared firmament glittered all over with gorgeous heraldry.

Day broke at 3 o'clock, and dogs began to bark. At 4:15 they sailed over Fort Wayne, Ind., and could hear the shouts of its inhabitants. At 5:15 they descried in the east what at first appeared to be the reflection of the sun on the sky. One of the party asserted that they were not many miles from a lake. The noble air vessel was rushing along at a brisk rate, dragging its shadow on the ground encircled in fantastic colors. There was no doubt that what had at first seemed a brilliancy of the eastern heavens was nothing less than an immense body of water. The aeronauts concluded that it could only be Lake Erie, and they were right, for, tracing the shore and observing the little islands, its contour corresponded almost precisely with the map.

A sublimer scene now broke on human view. Lake Erie has a surface of 7,800 square miles, and, although they could not behold the whole of it, the view lost none of its magnificence. Groups of white clouds, like great puffs from a steam pipe, floated languidly on every side, unfolding their gauze-like robes, and passing off in eddying currents. There was a collection of houses huddled together at the mouth of the Maumee. It was Toledo. There, in that great bend, dotted with specks of land, Perry gained his victory in 1813.

At 7:25 they swept over Sandusky, and floated out on the bosom of the lake. At 9:30 they overtook a Buffalo steamer and were hailed with a shrill whistle. They were about 500 feet high, and held a conversation with the passengers. At 9:50 they were over Long Point, Canada, the scene of the great fight between Morrissey and Heenan. So they had traversed nearly the entire length of Lake Erie, a distance of 250 miles, accomplishing it in three hours.

At 10:30 they had Lakes Erie and Ontario both in sight. The balloon had again attained an altitude of nearly a mile. A terrible storm was surging beneath them, the trees waving and the waves dashing against the shore of Erie in an awfully tempestuous manner. Now, like a gurgle, came the subdued sounds of the plashing and headlong cataract of Niagara.

At 11 o'clock, having skimmed over the lake shore, still bound eastwardly, the balloon brought them in sight of Buffalo and Niagara falls, as also the Welland canal. They had reached a height of over a mile, the barometer marking 23.6 inches. At 12:30 they were nearly between the falls and Buffalo, inclining rather to the left of the latter. The famous falls were quite insignificant. There was to the voyagers a descent of seemingly about two feet, and the water appeared to be perfectly motionless. The spray gave the whole an appearance as of ice, and there was nothing grand or sublime about it.

Passing the western terminus of the Erie canal, the balloon was borne directly toward Lake Ontario. The ballast was now nearly exhausted, and to have determined on crossing the second lake would have been sheer recklessness and hardihood. Here it was debated whether it were better to land Messrs. Gager and Hyde and in their stead take in a sufficient quantity of new ballast and again steer for the Atlantic ocean. The air ship was lowered, but was immediately caught in the hurricane which was then raging, and carried very near the tops of trees, which were bending and swaying to and fro by the force of the wind. Mr. La Mountain at once threw over the buckets and their contents, and the lift this gave them kept them from being crushed in the woods.

Like a bullet they shot out into the lake. The boat was got in readiness, and the trooping winds sent them out of sight of land. They were in a dreary waste of 7,000 square miles of water. At length they neared the dashing billows. The steering machinery was cut away, and they arose like a feather. For a time the ship was buoyed out of the way of danger, but she frequently darted downward, as though bent on destruction. Carpet-sacks, overcoats, provisions, everything was pitched into the lake. La Mountain finally cut away the lining of the boat. The oars were sent after the lining. Everything had now gone but an overcoat and two blankets, which were saved to be used as a final resort. A propeller, Young America, bore down to their relief, but they scudded some hundreds of feet before her bows, and that hope failed.

Finally, after skirmishing within thirty feet of the dark waves for a distance of not less than fifty miles, and perhaps more, they were out of danger of drowning, but a new peril was before them. The hurricane blew them into a dense forest which skirted the lake, and threatened to tear them limb from limb. Mr. Gager had thrown out the anchor, a heavy iron one, with three hooks, each an inch and a quarter in thickness. So rapid was their flight that this stood out nearly straight from the car. As the grapnel swung against the trees of moderate size, the velocity of the balloon and its terrible strength would tear them down and fling it to the ground. One by one the hooks broke off, and they were again at the mercy of an all-sweeping wind. Messrs. La Mountain and Hyde held on to the valve rope, endeavoring to discharge the gas, but were quickly compelled to release their grasp, and cling to the concentrating hoop to avoid being thrown out.

The balloon actually went through a mile of forest, and, tearing down trees and breaking branches, pursued its resistless course, dashing the party in the willow car to and fro, against trunks and limbs, until the stout netting had broken, little by little, and the balloon itself had no longer any protection, when, striking a tall tree, the silk was punctured in a dozen places, and rent into ribbons, leaving the car suspended by the netting twenty feet above the ground. The course of the balloon through the woods left a path similar to that of a tornado. Trees half the size of a man's body were snapped in twain as though they were pipe-stems, and huge limbs were scattered like leaves.

The landing was made within 150 yards of a settlement, and the crash was so great that the people ran to the spot to see what had happened. Singular as it would appear, there was only one of the four injured, Mr. La Mountain receiving some slight contusions about one of his hips. The remainder escaped without a scratch. When they got down, partly by ropes and partly by means of a broken tree, several persons were standing around, with open mouths and eyes staring out in wonder. They then learned that they had landed on the farm of Truman O. Whitney, near Sackett's Harbor, in the town of Henderson, Jefferson county, N. Y. By Mr. La Mountain's watch the time was 2 o'clock and twenty minutes.

They had been nineteen hours and forty minutes traveling a distance which cannot be computed at less than 1,200 miles.

ALL SORTS.

RATHER act than follow examples.

REFINEMENT is within the reach of the poorest.

BISMARCK is beginning to look old. He is 65.

TEXAS hasn't enough water for her wild ducks to swim in.

MOST of the mummies of Egypt have been ground up into paint.

DR. BOCK, of Leipsic, holds tea and coffee accountable for nervousness and peevishness.

FRANCIS MURPHY is lecturing on temperance this season under the auspices of a bureau at $50 per night.

BISMARCK says that if he had not drifted into statesmanship he would have chosen to be a backwoodsman.

GOOD miners experience no trouble in procuring work in Utah. Wages are $3.50 per day, and board $1 per day.

THE St. Petersburg courts have decided that the law recognizes no difference between spiritualism and conjuring.

SWEDEN imports annually about 1,000,000 tons of coal. The yield of the Swedish coal-pits for 1876 was about 90,000 tons.

THE London Society of Arts intends awarding a gold medal for the discovery of the best means of protecting ships from fire and from sinking.

THE heading of the Greeley (Col.) Tribune is an exact simile of Horace Greeley's handwriting. No other paper that we know of in the Union flourishes a fist for a head.

A BOSTON druggist sold an ounce of laudanum to a boy who brought a written order for tincture of rhubarb, and the widow of the man killed by the blunder has obtained a verdict of $5,208 damages.

THE tusk sent by Cetywayo to Lord Chelmsford to intimate his wish for peace is now at the Colonial Office. It is seven feet in length and about half a yard thick at the broadest part. It is pronounced the finest ever seen in England.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, JR., has rented the house of Gen. Jeffries at the corner of K and Fifteenth streets, in Washington, and will reside there during the winter hereafter. "Corneil," as he is familiarly known, has received the $1,000,000 from his brother in settlement of the will contest.

NOTHING now remains to be done to Cologne Cathedral but to place the massive stone caps of the two great towers and to fix the huge crosses that surmount the whole. But this is all very difficult and dangerous work, and, though the scaffoldings have now been carried to the top of the towers, it is still possible that the prediction against the completion of this magnificent edifice may be fulfilled.

MARGARET ROBERTSON, or Duncan, the oldest woman in Scotland, died at Coupar Angus a few days ago. She was born in 1773, and her husband, a weaver, died fifty years ago and left her with a daughter, who is still alive and over 60. Mrs. Duncan was a heavy smoker, and, until recently, when she became blind, was in possession of all her faculties. Her last illness was only of a week's duration.

WIDOWED.

She did not sigh for death, nor make sad moan,
Turning from smiles as one who solace fears,
But filled with kindly deeds the waiting years;
Yet, in her heart of hearts, she lived alone,
And in her voice there thrilled an undertone
That seemed to rise from soundless depths of tears;
As, when the sea is calm, one sometimes hears
The long, low murmur of a storm, unknown
Within the sheltered haven where he stands,
While tokens of a tempest overpast
The changing tide brings to the shining sands,
So on the surface of her life was cast
An ever-present shadow of the day
When love and joy went hand in hand away.
—A. B. Bogle, in Scribner.

IN the midst of the performance of an extravaganza at a Boston theater an old man rises in the parquet and says he is displeased with his seat, as he is unable to hear well. One of the actors invites him to sit in a chair on the stage, which he does, and finally takes a ludicrous part in the acting. It is not until near the close of the piece, so clever is the imposition, that the audience sees the old man is a member of the company.

SABBATH READING.

Prof. David Swing on Science and the Idea of Immortal Life.

In projecting upon the world its exact form of thought, natural science has interfered with some of the former methods of proving the fact of a second life for man. It has interfered also with the almost universal assumption of the second life, for the tending of the exact sciences is toward the overthrow of assumptions of all kinds and toward a reliance upon demonstrative forms of evidence. There are fashions or habits of argument just as there are fashions of dress, or architecture, or decoration. Some ages argued from persons in authority, and a proposition was true because some man great in place had said it in profound dignity. As children want no more perfect proof of anything than that they heard father or mother so declare, so there have been simple, childlike ages which asked for no evidence except that their learned man, their squire, or bishop, or priest, had told them to such a purport. In those times anything in song or history was true, for a book was such a rare and noble thing that it was not dreamed of that an error would live and thrive in such a holy place. Thus the fashion of evidence has changed, and now we find ourselves living in an era of exact sciences, and all the brains in the world will be gradually led into a form of reason more careful about premises and conclusions than were the ages of ignorance or the ages of war or of crusades or of romance.

The exact sciences, therefore, may be looked upon as carrying the human family from an old habit to a new one, just as the last century was busy in carrying society from despotism over to constitutional government, and just as our century is carrying labor across from a hand to a machine. In all this transplanting some harm is done. Our builders of new homes transplant great trees from forest to lawn—trees that are a quarter or half century old. Be the care ever so great that the roots may be saved, and that a ton or two of the mother earth may go along with the tree, yet many of these abducted sons of the woods die in their new homes, being unable to endure such blazing sunlight, or such a weak soil, or such wild winds. So in the removal of mankind from one custom to another, many fail to breathe well in the new air, some dying of communism when transplanted to liberty, and some dying of vanity when carried to riches, and some dying of atheism when removed from the credulity of the simple-minded Puritans and monks. Not that the weakest ones perish in the transfer, but that in all these ebbings and flowings of thought there is not only a disturbance that brings good, but one also that brings ill. It may be that the largest genius may bend along with the smallest under this strange influence of a new form of thought.

It will be admitted by all that the new method of argument sprung upon society by the scientific mind must have exerted, or must be exerting, some influence upon the idea of immortality. That form of study which invites man to reconsider his tenets about creation and the Bible and the existence or nature of God must, of course, command that a new argument be found for the hope of any career after this one shall have ended. We need not confess that man's faith has been in the least shaken or need be shaken, but we do need to confess that some of the old assumptions and data must be pushed aside to receive new ones, and perhaps more enduring ones, in their stead. Pushed aside as being not influential, even if not false.

It was once felt by us all in early life that the fact that the flowers died in autumn and grew again in the spring was an argument that the soul would bloom after the body had gone down into the winter of the grave. In such resemblances we found warrant for a part of the great conclusion. We got along well enough until a more exact method of thought came to remind us that the tree and the rose bush do not die in the autumn. They retain their life all winter. When the dead rose bush or the pine timber in our houses shall have budded and blossomed, then the analogy between the vegetable world and the world of man will be complete. What was once an argument becomes thus only a beautiful illustration of the resurrection, whose real basis must be sought far away from any bed of budding or dying flowers.

And so the difference between what is called mind and what is called matter served for generations to confirm society in a perfect belief in a second existence. Our wise men said: It is not the flesh that reasons and loves and remembers, and which exists in full power when the body is quite wasted away, for, even when the limbs are paralyzed and the body almost dead, this mind blazes on like a sun at noon. This served well for generations, but along came the exact form of thought, and called attention to the word "almost," and asked us whether the mind ever blazes forth when the body is not almost, but altogether, dead? For the question is not raised over man when almost dead, but over man when dead wholly and turned to dust. So here fails one more argument of the careless yesterday.

Again, this exact science continues to be pitiless, and it reminds us that our distinction between mind and matter is not a conclusive proof, for the faithful dog when dying, when paralyzed in every limb from an injury from a wagon wheel or falling tree, will to its last second look lovingly toward its master, and will kiss his hand till life is gone. Thus the strange difference between matter and mind does not involve our future life, unless we are like the Indian, and in the fields of the blessed our faithful dogs are to bear us company. Some of our philosophers saw that their distinction between matter and mind proved more than was desirable, and, rather than give up their argument, they asked what objection it is if in that second arena of man he shall be surrounded with the creatures which so loved and cheered him here? But unfortunately the argument would not include affectionate animals only, but all brutes which possess mental action.

Thus on this side and that the old pleadings have been modified, and the hope of endless existence seeks other warrants for the present and future existence of the soul. And while the more severe form of reasoning is thus driving the public toward the old repose; it is further disturbed by the appearance and greatness of certain persons who have sown over the civilized lands the seeds of annihilation. Quite a large group of illustrious minds are now seen gathered around the tomb of man in their gloomy service of perpetual death. Were they wicked people, or were they noisy, rude orators attempting avowedly to destroy all religious ideas, they would be so powerless for ill that they would need no special mention as parts of the present religious situation; but there is a group of minds, educated, moral, peace-loving, and noble, which group is affecting somewhat for ill the common hope of reunion of friends beyond the grave. Miss Sara Hennell, John Stuart Mill, Harriet Martineau, Prof. Clifford, and others of almost equal genius, stand quite stubbornly opposed to the thought that man will live again; and such is the dignity and moral worth of this family of intellects that one who seeks to know the present attitude of this one article of faith must mention at least these gifted souls.

We have now found a few elements of discord existing between society and its old arguments, and we must mention one more. The church, mistaking Paul's argument for the resurrection of the soul to be a statement of the resurrection the body, has in most of its branches taught that man's body would be recalled to life. We have all heard sermons that went to show that God would find the scattered limbs of the dead soldiers, or the atoms of the martyrs consumed by the flames—teachings which helped to unfit the present for that perfect surrender of the body and that perfect isolation of the soul from the earthly body which must be a part of modern religious belief. To many the science which shows the mortality of the body seems also to be implying a parallel mortality of the soul. Many minds naturally hostile to religion and not willing to think calmly or wisely, and unable to think deeply, hasten to declare Christianity overthrown when the doctrine that this body shall ever rise is being abandoned. Whereas the Bible never taught the new life of this body, but only the immortality of the person, and, as our fleshly atoms play no part in our personality here, they will play no part in the personal identity of the future.

Having marked some of the causes of change and unrest in the common thought as to any other world than this, let us seek the actual attitude of this idea so full of precious human hope, and weigh rapidly the new witnesses against this hope.

Science has taken away the rose-bush argument and the argument from the simple existence of a difference between matter and mind. It can find no essential immortality in man any more than in the horse, the dog, and the bird. And it has helped the church interpret better its Bible doctrine of a resurrection, but beyond this it has not gone. It may think that it has destroyed the expectation, or hope, or fear of an eternal world, but, if so, it will not be the first time in history when more conclusions have been assumed than the premises would warrant. One of the most common things in the world is for a logical verdict to be made to expand too much, and become a false verdict by too wide an application. When the patriots of France found a logic which led to liberty, the Red Republicans attempted to spread the beautiful flag over murder and license, and the blood of the best men drenched the soul of France. So that grand conclusion which our nation wrung from England in 1776, and which has put on new and truer qualities ever since, has been too much inflated by the Communists, and has often been asked to hold all the forms of idleness and a confiscation of private goods. It has always been easy to make that flag, once woven by bleeding hands and dying eyes, to wave for liberty, to wave also for the inspiration of license and anarchy. So science, having made some great steps forward, and having, indeed, found a new land of thought, set up its banner of conquest, but in its exuberant pride it has claimed too many of the adjacent lands and continents. As some of the early heroes of Queen Elizabeth sailed with great pomp to take possession of America in her name, and to that end landed on the Carolina coast, and set up a flag—and then hurried back to claim the Queen's smile—which flag one savage or one coast-storm could remove; so our scientific heroes have, as they think, taken possession of vast continents of thoughts, and have raised emblems, as though those domains could never revert to Christianity.

Madagascar.

Although Madagascar is known to be the third-largest island in the world, its actual size and extent is not very generally understood. It is easy to see how misconception on this point arises, for in maps the island is usually seen only in connection with Africa, and that great continent is so large that it dwarfs by comparison with itself everything in its near neighborhood, so that the really-large island sheltering under its southeastern side appears but an inconsiderable appendage to its vast neighbor. If, however, we take a good-sized map of Madagascar, and put by its side the outline, to the same scale, of another country with whose dimensions we are familiar, such, for instance, as England, we begin to realize how important an island it is as regards size, being nearly 1,000 miles long by about 250 in average breadth, so that it is nearly four times as large as England and Wales.—Nature.

About 650,000,000 pounds of butter are made in this country annually, and its value is estimated at $70,000,000.

The census enumerators next year are to do their work in June.

THE SUBJUGATION OF THE NORTH.

[From the Cincinnati Enquirer.]

The Republican party has lost its hold and its hope in the South. With the removal of the Federal bayonets from the control of the State Governments in that sunny, unhappy section, the Governments of the people rebounded in a day, like compressed, elastic things. Senator Blaine could easily show that three years ago there were only a very, very few Federal muskets in Louisiana, not enough to hurt much; but, few as they were, they were the State Government, for they were the symbols of the entire Federal authority, and, when they were taken away, the Nicholls Government—helpless before—instantly and noiselessly moved into power. It is not yet forgotten that the withdrawal of the Federal troops was so eminently just a thing that it was at the bidding of a Republican President that the last of the Federal forces were removed from their places of tyranny over the State Governments in the South. It was after more than ten years of peace that the last of the subjugated Southern States emerged from beneath the authority of the Washington bayonet—a bayonet that had turned out and installed Governors and Legislatures at the imperial pleasure, the historic will of the sword.

Power in the South gone, the leaders of the Republican party, the few in possession of the political spoils—the masses have nothing to do in the matter—have seen the necessity of desperate measures to retain power in the North. The people of the Northern States are really not aware of the nature and extent of the plans for power which the few men in control of the machine at Washington have made and to which they cling with the energy of despair. Since the South can no longer be subjugated the North must be overcome by processes from Washington—that is, the North must be subjugated.

The Federal Election laws, known as the Deputy Marshal laws, authorize the Federal Government to move into cities of 20,000 inhabitants and over, and take charge of elections. In cities of as many as 20,000 people an unlimited number of United States Deputy Marshals may be appointed, all Republicans, each to receive $5 a day for as many as ten days, all clothed with power of arrest without warrant, all given authority to suppress all State authority, each one a political tyrant, paid from the Federal treasury, and rendering no service save to the Republican party. What does this power mean?

This is not a power to be exercised in the South, though it is doubtful if the law could have been passed had it been announced that its purpose was to control elections in Northern cities. When the last census was taken, there were but eight cities in the South that had a population of 20,000. In 1876, when the money paid for Deputy Marshals and Supervisors was $275,296.60, only $44,774.60 were expended in the South. In 1878, out of an expenditure of $202,091.09, only $24,639 were expended in the South. The Deputy Marshal laws are not now meant for the South, and the money hitherto expended in the execution of these laws is but a fragment of what will be expended if those laws remain on the statute books and money can be had to execute the laws.

What does this power mean in the North? It means that this hideous Deputy Marshal power may cover, and doubtless is at once to cover, sixty-seven Northern cities. There are seventy-five cities in the United States which have a population of 20,000—all liable to be slaves of this law. There are more than that now, as the next census will show. Sixty-seven of the seventy-five are in the North. These sixty-seven cities had, years ago, a population of 5,661,749, more than one-eighth of the population of the country. The ability to control them is an enormous power. The cities that fall under the operation of these statutes elect, or control the election of, ninety-five members of the House of Representatives. This number is almost one-third of the entire body. Is it a little thing to place the control of the suffrages of 6,000,000 of people in the centers of our civilization, and of ninety-five—now more than ninety-five—Congressional districts, in the hands of a political machine engineered from Washington, and in the interest of one party, no matter which party? Wherever the law has been applied the control of the election has been placed in the hands of the most abandoned classes. To men of lowest lives the purity of elections has been intrusted. The power has been corruptly used. It has been used for none but partisan purposes.

The Deputy Marshal government has moved into only one city in Ohio. A recent Congressional investigation has shown how corrupt and infamous, as well as insolent, were its workings in this city. The Republicans holding office, or eager for office, will presently move the obnoxious statute into Cleveland, and Toledo, and Columbus, and Dayton, and soon Sandusky, and Hamilton, and Portsmouth, and Zanesville, and Akron, under this statute, will be helpless in the hands of the Washington mill. From the worst classes in these cities men will be selected by the office-holders in control of affairs at Washington to take charge of the ballot boxes and of the personal liberty of the citizens. Deputy Marshals in each of the cities where they have been appointed for election purposes have been men fit for, or just from, the work-house or the penitentiary. Even if Deputy Marshals were all saints, would it be safe to give the control of the election of ninety-five members of Congress, with the growing power of cities, to machinery selected by the machine at Washington?

We have spoken of one element in the plan of subjugating the free, thinking, liberty-loving men of the North. Another is found in the following circular:

The American Bankers' Association,
No. 247 Broadway, Room No. 4,
New York, Aug. 9, 1879.

To the Banks and Bankers of Ohio:

As members of the Executive Council of the American Bankers' Association, we desire to state that special measures will be taken to forward our interests in Ohio. It is desirable that all banks and bankers become members of the association for this year at least. Yours truly,

Wm. J. Dessler,
President National Exchange Bank, Columbus, Ohio.
A. H. Moss,
President First National Bank, Sandusky, Ohio.
[A 204.]

THE DIFFERENCE.

[From the Louisville Courier-Journal.]

The Cleveland Leader says: "The difference between the Democratic and Republican parties in their respective appeals to the constitution is that the former knows only the constitution as it was; while the latter appeals to the constitution as it is. The three amendments adopted after the war and embodying the results of the war are just as much parts of the constitution as those ratified in 1789. It is true that the more outspoken of the Democratic party in the South repudiate those amendments and threaten to tear them and all legislation made under them from the statute books, and that the less frank members of the party North and South preserve a discreet silence as to them, but the Republicans and the great mass of citizens at the North, if not elsewhere, hold the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments as much entitled to obedience and respect as the Tenth."

The real difference between the Democratic and Republican parties is that the Democrats fully and patriotically accept the constitution as it is, and the Republicans do not regard the constitution either as it was or is. Mr. Hayes, the head of the Republican party, is at this moment traveling about with great pomp through the country under the care of the General of the Army, who declares constantly in his speeches that the President is an "absolute" ruler. This of itself is sufficient proof that the Republican party does not accept the constitution as it is, for that instrument confers no shadow of absolute authority on the President. "Absolute" is an ugly word to be so proclaimed in a republic by a servant of the people. It marks, however, very distinctly the chasm between the constitutional Democratic party and the centralizing anti-constitutional Republican party.

The three amendments, which are fully accepted by the Democratic party, do not by any means destroy the constitution as it was. The tenth section remains in full force, and the relation between the State and Federal Governments is unaltered save in the one particular indicated by Chief Justice Waite, of the United States Supreme Court, who, in the case of the United States vs. Cruikshank, said: "In Minor vs. Haffersett, 21 Wallace, 178, we decided that the constitution of the United States has not conferred the right of suffrage upon any one, and that the United States have no voters of their own creation in the States. In United States vs. Reese et al., we hold that the Fifteenth amendment has invested the citizens of the United States with a new constitutional right, which is exemption from discrimination on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude. From this it appears that the right of suffrage is not a necessary attribute of national citizenship, but that exemption from discrimination in the exercise of that right on account of race, etc., is. The right to vote in the States comes from the States, but the right of exemption from the prohibited discrimination comes from the United States. The first has not been granted or secured by the constitution of the United States, but the last has been."

This "new constitutional right" the Democratic party fully indorses. Nobody in that party wants "to tear them and all legislation made under them from the statute books," but if the Democratic party gets into power some of the laws which have been pronounced unconstitutional by the highest tribunal and which are based not on the three amendments, but on the suppuration of a diseased partisanship, will undoubtedly be taken off the statute books. The amendments will stand and be enforced. The Republican State of Rhode Island has been for a long time the most persistent advocate of the right of a State to legislate voters from the polls. Among the legal voters thus excluded are many Union soldiers who fought faithfully through the war. It is needless to say that no Republican organ is addicted to trotting out Rhode Island as a State devoted to the "national-supremacy" doctrine, especially as one of her Republican Senators has declared that the State was free and sovereign, and could not be interfered with by the Federal Government in the matter of suffrage.

We need scarcely remark that the Democrats hold the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments as much entitled to respect and obedience as the Tenth. The Tenth will stand a bulwark against the unconstitutional centralism which has, by the Republican party, been falsely based on the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments.

The tenth section embodies the Democratic and constitutional doctrine of State rights, without which we would no longer have a republic. The Republicans in 1860 made extreme State rights a plank in their platform. To-day they would give a good deal to have the tenth section of the constitution wiped out.

Restaurantial Suggestions.

A restaurant is full of sad suggestions and pathetic possibilities, and we are constantly reminded of the flight of time and the mutability of all things. A young man, glowing with the fire of youth and radiant with its alluring hopes, enters and sits down to a table; a waiter approaches, receives his order, and departs. Years roll by; the young man becomes careworn and middle-aged. He eats his soup and orders a roast. The pitiless years shower their snows upon his head; he grows querulous and feeble, and he is carried away to his long home just as the waiter heaves in sight, and the proprietor steps up to ask if any one has taken his order. —Boston Journal of Commerce.

A Cleveland boy of 17 years is six feet nine and a quarter inches high in his stockings.

THE REPUBLICANS AND STATES' RIGHTS.

In 1860 the Republican party was in the buoyancy of youth, in the hope and pride of a sanguine ambition, and in the meekness of a good behavior, like that of a stranger seeking to make friends. Like most boys, it was full of good resolutions. Without patronage, it was compelled to make an appeal to conscience, to the sense of justice, to the judgment and reason, and it was forced to base this appeal upon the constitution, the fundamental law of the land. It dared not then openly and flagrantly defy the constitution, for it was humbly knocking at the gates of power. The constitution, even so short a time ago, was held in some respect and reverence. There was something fine in the spectacle of a young and lusty party, in a melancholy minority, without money to disburse or offices to dispense, pleading with millions of men to vote for it because it claimed to represent an idea within the constitution that hovered about freedom. The Republican party never before and never after occupied a position so eminent. It was not yet corrupted by power, and was, in some sense, made lofty with hope. It seemed to try to stand upon the constitution, and plead for liberty for all men. In that convention of 1860 were some of the men who have lent luster to the Republican party, and have been identified with its only glories. John A. Andrew was there from Massachusetts, brave, eloquent, lofty, tender, with convictions made beautiful by courage and flavored with sentiment. George S. Boutwell, from the same State, was there, tame but tenacious; somewhat dull but firm; not showy but tireless. Eben F. Stone, who was Temporary Chairman of the last Massachusetts Republican Convention, was a delegate, and William Claflin and Samuel Hooper, both since then prominent in the politics of Massachusetts, were delegates to this convention. Gideon Welles, of Connecticut, was a delegate at large, as were William M. Evarts and Preston King, of New York. George William Curtis was the first delegate from the First district of New York; and it was he, of the melodious voice and scholarly face, the gentle, cultured dreamer, then so much the hope of our literature, who asked the convention if it was prepared to go upon the record as voting down the words of the Declaration of Independence. William Curtis Noyes and James W. Nye were delegates from New York. David Wilmot was a delegate at large from Pennsylvania. Thad Stevens the indomitable, the heroic, was also a delegate at large. Wm. D. Kelley was there. Francis P. Blair and Montgomery Blair were delegates. Tom Corwin, the wit, the man of sunshine, was a delegate from Ohio. Joshua R. Giddings, fearless, devoted, conspicuous, was a delegate from Jefferson. Fred Hassaurek was there, an eloquent speaker. David Davis and O. H. Browning were delegates from Illinois. Carl Schurz, of course, was there, a delegate at large from Wisconsin. From what convention has this mercenary destructionist and place-seeker been absent since Europe spewed him into this country? Kasson and Allison, of Iowa, were delegates. Frank Blair, Jr., and Gratz Brown were delegates at large from Missouri. And Horace Greeley, that strange combination of guilelessness and intrigue, of ambition and modesty, of loving kindness and bitterness, of breadth and narrowness, of philosophy and fickleness, of humaneness broad as the sea and spites as little as the pebbles it washes on the whitened shore, a monument of tireless toil till he filled a grave of despair—Horace Greeley, the hater of Seward, the erratic man of unsurpassed sincerity, the weak man of power, was there as a delegate from Oregon. Such was the composition of the convention. George S. Boutwell, F. P. Blair, Joseph H. Barrett, of Ohio, Carl Schurz, J. A. Kasson and Horace Greeley were among the members of the Committee on Resolutions. The Republican party, let us believe, was then honest and earnest. What did this convention, in that hour, say about the rights of the States?

The second resolution in the platform of this convention declared:

> That the maintenance of the principles promulgated in the Declaration of Independence and embodied in the Federal constitution * * is essential to the preservation of our republican institutions; and that the Federal constitution, the rights of the States, and the Union of the States, must and shall be preserved.

The Republican party in 1860 was not content with this enunciation of the rights of the States. The fourth resolution of this platform was follows:

> That the maintenance inviolate of the rights of the States, and especially the right of each State to order and control its own domestic institutions according to its own judgment exclusively, is essential to that balance of power on which the perfection and endurance of our political fabric depend; and we denounce the lawless invasion by armed force of the soil of any State or Territory, no matter under what pretext, as among the gravest of crimes.

We appeal "from Philip drunk to Philip sober." It has become the Republican theory that, inasmuch as the late civil war destroyed all vestige of the alleged right of secession, no rights of a State remain; that all the rights of the States perished when the Union of the States was restored. We appeal from the Republican party in 1879 to the Republican party in 1860.

How the Fever Victims Die.

Many die easily, go calmly off to sleep, hardly having strength to raise the eyelids, but too many die a horrible death. The struggle is terrible. They have to be held down to bed until the last gasp, and the scene after death is too horrible for description. Another peculiarity of it is when the patient is in a state of delirium and is prevented from getting out of bed. Often he makes a desperate effort to bite those holding him. I have a lively recollection of thus having to exert all my strength to hold a yellow-fever patient in bed and keep him from biting me in the face. When he recovered his reason he wept with anger at not being able to get up, but at last said: "Hello! is that you? Let us lie down on the pillow and go to sleep." I was glad to do so. Entire families have been swept away. When the fever once enters a dwelling it seems almost impossible for any member of the family to escape. The dirtiest people often escape, and the cleanliest are often stricken down.—Memphis letter.

INDIANA NEWS.

Walter Edgerton, of Spiceland, has died suddenly.

The Christian Church in Indiana celebrated its anniversaries at Greensburg last week.

There is great excitement in Transitville and vicinity over a reported case of milk sickness.

The Trustees of the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan railway have ordered the sale of the road at Wabash, Nov. 5.

David T. Hunter, a brother of Hon. Morton C. Hunter, and a prominent citizen of Ripley county, fell dead in his field the other evening.

W. C. De Pauw, owner of the New Albany rail-mill, will add very largely to the building and machinery, making the mill the largest in the West.

A young man named Frank Carter, of Indianapolis, attempted to set a trout-line. Becoming entangled in the line beyond his depth, he was drowned.

Charles F. Tiffany, bigamist, who had just been sentenced to the State prison for three years, hung himself with a towel in his cell, at Lawrenceburg.

New Albany Ledger-Standard: Real estate is advancing in price in the upper end of the city. Property on Vincennes street is now held at $30 per foot which could have been purchased a year ago at $20.

New Albany, owing to the low stage of water in the Ohio, is enjoying the discomforts and expense of a coal-famine. Pittsburgh coal retails at 20 cents per bushel, the highest price paid in ten years, and Indiana cannel at 16 cents.

The medical department of Butler University, at Indianapolis, was opened last week, with 130 students. It represents a union of the old Indiana Medical College and the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Indiana, and is recognized by the medical profession of the entire State.

John Hopkins, Sr., an old farmer living ten miles south of Indianapolis, was dragged about his field by a team of frightened horses, while plowing. His arm was torn from its socket, and other injuries inflicted that will prove fatal. He was a prominent man in his community, and an old settler.

Lafayette Journal: It is evident that the State will soon have to make some provision for the care of the incurable insane. There is scarcely a week but that some unfortunate is sent home to this county from Indianapolis, incurable. This county has now in the county about sixty of this class. Fortunately this county can and does care well for them, but the same cannot be said of all the counties in the State.

The official report of Messrs. Sleeth, Work and Hushsteiner, appointed by the last Legislature for the purpose, upon the amount of money wrongfully withheld by ex-Attorney Generals Denny and Buskirk, is simply a formal statement of what was made public last winter. In the case of Buskirk they find that there are nearly $27,000 due the State, and that during his term of office he collected nearly $130,000, on which his legal commissions amounted to $22,000, but he retained $48,000.

In 1855 the bridge across the Wild Cat creek, in Tippecanoe county, on the line of what is now the Lafayette and Wild Cat gravel-road, washed away. It was rebuilt by a $1,500 donation from the county, a like sum from the Wabash and Erie canal, and liberal subscriptions by farmers. A few years later the gravel-road company was formed, and the County Commissioners, without consulting the wishes of the people, donated to the company the bridge. Mr. J. J. Singley now claims that the Commissioners had no right to make this donation, and that the company had no right to collect toll. He accordingly refuses to pay toll and has been sued by the company. The case is on trial at Lafayette.

Leonidas Bryson and William Toole, brothers-in-law, living at Williamstown, just across the line in Decatur county, drove over to Rushville last week, with their wives and Bryson's two children, to buy some furniture. They drank freely, and on the way home Bryson slapped one of his children severely, which led Toole to remonstrate with him. A quarrel followed, and in the course of it Bryson shot Toole three times. The wounded man was taken to a neighboring house, where he lingered until 7 o'clock next morning, when death ended his sufferings. Bryson is in jail at Rushville.

About 8 o'clock, one night last week, the residence of Frank Duplein, a Frenchman living eight miles north of Fort Wayne, was discovered to be in flames. The neighbors assembled to extinguish the fire, and, upon investigation, found Mrs. Frances Duplein, wife of the owner, lying dead in the barn with her throat cut from ear to ear. Duplein was hanging by a rope from a rafter of the barn, also dead. He had doubtless murdered his wife, then set fire to his house, and finally committed suicide. He was 45 years old, and his wife five years younger. Both were French. They had one child, a daughter aged 20, who was not at home when the tragedy occurred. Duplein and his wife had lived on bad terms for some time, but nothing is known as to what transpired between them immediately prior to the tragedy. Duplein has a brother now serving a two-years' term in the penitentiary for the attempted murder of his wife last April.

Olive Logan says: "I saw George Eliot walking in the Regent Park the other day. How sad and ill she does look, to be sure. I hear her physicians say she must never produce another novel."

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, OCT. 23, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

Brother Gardner on Family Government.

[Detroit Free Press.]

"Las' night, jist as de ole woman was grindin' up de butcher knife to cut her corns, dar cum a knock on de doah," began the president of the Lime-Kiln club as Paradise hall grew quiet. "It war de ole man Mosher, an' I could see right away dat he didn't feel in whoopin' speerits. I reckon you all knows de ole man, an' you knows he am hardworkin' an' honest. Well, he was ober dar for to see about his son Hunyadus. Dat Hunyadus am a powerful bad boy an' I know it, an' de ole man he sot down an' tole me dat de day had arrove when he could no longer control de boy. Yes, he sot dar on de sige of de wood-box an' cried like a chile 'cause dat Hunyadus had cum home an' cussed aroun', an' axed for money, an' declar'd he'd bust de hull family or hov it. I axed him how ole de boy was, an' he wiped his nose an' said 16. I axed him how much de boy weighed, an' he looked up at ceilin' an' said about a 120. Den I pushed de teakettle furder back on de stove an' I went for de ole man like a steamboat 'sploshun. De ideah of a boy like dat runnin' de house made me mad all de way up an' down, an' I tole Mosher if he didn't go hum an' flop dat Hunyadus outer his butes an' den mop him aroun' till he cried quits, dat he mus' nebber darken my gate agin. He got up an' he went, an' I was clus behind him. Dat boy was still in de house, bluffin' de ole woman aroun' an' kickin' de dog under de stove, an' de opportunity was all dat could be axed fur. De ole man bounced in, waltzed up to de wayward chile, and de way he made de fur fly tickled me all ober. When I lef' de winder Hunyadus was wipin' de tears away wid one han' an' eatin' cold pancakes wid de odder, an' de ole man had such a smile as I hevn't seen on his face fur eber seven years." After the applause had subsided the president continued: "Treat your boys kindly an' like a good fadder should, but when a son gits de big-head an' emagines dat he kin run de caboose widout help from ole folks, an' dat he am master of his days an' nights, sot right down on him like a bag of sand fallin' from de roof-top! Let him know who owns de cabin an' who brings in de purvishuns."

Rothschild's Maxims.

According to George Francis Train, the late Baron Rothschild had the following maxims framed on his bank walls:

Attend carefully to details of your business!
Be prompt in all things!
Consider well, then decide positively!
Dare to do right! Fear to do wrong!
Endure trials patiently!
Fight life's battle bravely, manfully!
Go not in the society of the vicious!
Hold integrity sacred!
Injure not another's reputation or business!
Join hands only with the virtuous!
Keep your mind from evil thoughts!
Lie not for any consideration!
Make few acquaintances!
Never try to appear what you are not!
Observe good manners!
Pay your debts promptly!
Question not the veracity of a friend!
Respect the counsel of your parents!
Sacrifice money rather than principle!
Touch not, taste not, handle not intoxicating liquors!
Use your leisure time for improvement!
Venture not upon the threshold of wrong!
Watch carefully over your passions!
'Xtend to every one a kindly salutation!
Yield not to discouragements!
Zealously labor for the right!
& success is certain!

A Singular Fight Along the Shore of a Georgia River.

[Americus (Ga.) Republican.]

C. S. S. Horne, while fishing recently in Flint river, was disturbed by the continual falling of some heavy body in the water. After listening for some time he concluded that something unusual was going on, and seizing his gun went forward to investigate. On the opposite side of the river he saw a white object with a large dark one attacking it. A boat being handy, he bailed it, and expeditiously and quietly passed over. He struck the bank about twelve feet above the cause of disturbance, seized his gun, and, as the boat swung around with the stream, fired at the head of the dark object. He then dropped the gun and as the boat drifted he lifted an immense logger-head turtle into it, after which he pulled in the other object, which proved to be a large sturgeon. Before he could recross the river, the turtle, which was only stunned by the bird shot, recovered and showed fight. The situation was lively and interesting. The boat was leaky, the water deep and swift, the turtle large, strong and determined on a fight. It advanced with open mouth, Cul's gun was empty. He gave the boat all the impetus possible, stuck the paddle in the beast's mouth, drew a little pen-knife from his pocket and tried to cut its throat. As the turtle kept its hold on the paddle, he succeeded in this after several efforts. He then carried his prize home and found that it weighed fifty or sixty pounds. The sturgeon, he supposed weighed thirty or forty.

Blackwood's Magazine for October.

Republished by the Leonard Scott Publishing Co., 41 Barclay Street, New York, has been received. The principal contents are:

I. "Sprig—Round about Damascus." The visitor describes his journey from Mukhtara to Damascus, and the visits that he made to places of interest in and around the city during a detention there of three weeks. The description of the performances of a certain miracle-working sheikh is as painful as it is wonderful.

II. "A Deadly Feud" is a simple little story, rather lacking in cheerfulness, written by Rudolph Lindau.

III. "Ion." A summary of the plot of the tragedy of Euripdes, together with a comparison with Talfourd's play of the same name, and Swinburne's "Erechtheus," giving many quotation.

IV. "Reata; or, What's in a Name." Part VII. The description of the dinner party gives an interesting picture of the customs that prevail among the "Polish landed gentry of the present day," customs of which the writer has been an eye-witness.

V. "The Demise of the Kaiserbund" is an account of the treaty entered into by the emperors of Germany, Russia and Austria in 1872, and their action during the "War in the East."

VI. "Contemporary Literature" describes the "how, when, and where" of the making of newspapers, with a full description of the office of the London Times, and a short notice of that of the New York Herald.

Price, $4 a year, and the postage is prepaid by the Publishers.

Harper's Magazine for November is an unusually attractive and varied number. All but two of its contributions are illustrated.

Mr. Benjamin completes his review of American Art with an instructive paper on our early painters.

The leading paper, by W. H. Rideing, is devoted to a subject of curious interest—the old National Pike between the east and west across the Alleghanies. The author, with his eloquence, assisted by Pyle's excellent illustrations, reproduces in vivid colors the lively pageantry of this great highway, which little more than a generation ago was the scene of a traffic that "seems like a frieze with an endless procession of figures."

An equally novel subject, and of greater present interest, is Mr. A. A. Hayes, Jr.'s, article on the "Cattle Ranches of Colorado," which is very entertaining reading, while it contains full information as to the methods and risks of cattle-raising. The illustrations by Mr. Rogers are capital.

Prof. H. W. Elliott's paper, "The Sparrow War," finely illustrated, will be read with gusto by every American farmer.

Mrs. Georgiana S. Hull contributes a thrilling story, "A Legend of All-Hallow-Eve," which is illustrated with three pictures by Pyle. and anonymous story of travel, "A Night on the Tete Noire," is full of humorous situations, characteristically illustrated by Fredericks.

The new serial novels, "White Wings," by William Black, and "Mary Anerley" by R. D. Blackmore, are continued, and there is a very interesting installment of Miss Mulock's "Young Mrs. Jardine." The November number closes the fifty-ninth volume, and the publishers offer to send to new annual subscribers beginning with the December number, 1879, the four previous numbers containing the early chapters of "White Wings" and "Mary Anerley."

WHAT PAYS BEST
AFTER HARVEST,

Is a serious consideration of its cost and profits, and how to economize by comparing your own experience with that of others in farm labor.

Only $1.15 a Year,

Will place you in possession of the only newspaper that gives the actual experience and experiments of practical farming.

"The Cincinnati WEEKLY ENQUIRER, is the medium through which producers of every class make known their own experience, and seek that of others."

"The best teacher of farming, is the farmer himself! A fact fully demonstrated in the department (two pages a week) devoted to the farmer and his household in the WEEKLY ENQUIRER."

"Every department is complete."

"It is worth $100.00 a year to farmers, but costs only $1.15."

"The best is the cheapest."

"It always has the news in advance of all others."

"There is none better."

"It is the best political friend the people have, advocating its democracy upon the principles of justice and equity to all."

"It is the original greenbacker."

Such are a few of the many compliments paid to the Cincinnati ENQUIRER, by the press throughout the country.

The merits of its editorials, agricultural, political, correspondence, literary, telegraphic news and commercial departments combine to make it all that is required in an A No. 1, first-class family journal.

WEEKLY ENQUIRER.

One copy, one year.......$1.15
One copy six months.......65
COPY FREE TO CLUBS OF SEVEN.

DAILY ENQUIRER.

	without Sun. issue.	with Sun. issue.
One year	$12.00	$14.00
Three months	3.25	3 75
Sunday's issue alone, per year		2.00
Any two day's issue " "		4.00
Any three day's issue " "		6.00

Specimens Free. Agents Wanted.

FARAN & McLEAN, Publishers,
41-3m CINCINNATI, O.

—We can not itemize all our stock look through before you buy your dry-goods, notions, clothing, carpets, groceries, dishes, etc., at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3t.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else. The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

Notice of Sale.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of an order of the DeKalb circuit court, the undersigned administrator of the estate of George S. Horr, deceased, will offer for sale at public auction on the premises, on SATURDAY, the 15th day of NOVEMBER, 1879, an equal undivided two-thirds of the following described lands:

The undivided two-thirds of a certain tract bounded as follows: Commencing at the northwest corner of the southwest quarter of section seventeen [17], in township thirty-four [34] north of range fourteen [14] east, running thence north until it intersects the north boundary line of the right-of-way of the Detroit, Eel River & Illinois railway, thence in a northeasterly direction along said right-of-way to the east boundary line of the west half of said southwest quarter, thence north on said east boundary line to the north boundary line of said southwest quarter, thence west on said boundary line to the place of beginning, containing about sixty acres of land. Also the following described real estate in said county; Commencing at the southeast corner of the west half of the said southwest quarter of section seventeen [17], running thence north to the south boundary line of the right-of-way of said Detroit, Eel River & Illinois railway, thence in a southwesterly direction along said right-of-way to the west boundary line of said west half of said quarter section, thence south to the section line between sections seventeen [17] and twenty [20], thence east on said section line to the place of beginning, containing seventeen [17] acres of land.

TERMS:—One third cash, the residue in equal payments at 12 and 18 months, with notes at interest, waiving valuation and appraisement laws, and secured by mortgage on said premises. Sale to begin at 2 o'clock p. m.

42-5 CYRUS C. WALTERS, Adm'r.

SUBSCRIBE
FOR THE AUBURN
Courier!
THE ONLY
DEMOCRATIC PAPER
IN DEKALB COUNTY.

JOB WORK!
NEATLY AND PROMPTLY EXECUTED AT LOW RATES.

"We Heard a Mighty Rumbling and Could'nt tell Where"

UNTIL WE HEARD OF

C. H. YESBERA

Coming to the front with the finest line of

Piece Goods and Suitings,

Gents' Furnishing Goods, Hats and Caps,

ever brought into DeKalb County. The acknowledged judgment of the proprietor renders it unnecessary to say that his stock has been selected with the greatest care and with a view to pleasing the tastes of his customers. Call and examine his goods and satisfy yourselves that is the cheapest, and that a suit furnished by him will outwear three ready-made suits and cost but a trifle more; besides you are always sure to get a good fit.

Custom Made Work

His Hats and Caps and Gents' Furnishing Goods are the very latest out. Call and see them, in the third room north of the Postoffice. AUBURN, INDIANA.

41—tf

FOR SALE
AT LOWEST PRICES AT
THE PHYSICIANS' DRUG STORE.

A full line of everything usually kept in a
FIRST-CLASS DRUG STORE,
—SUCH AS—
Pure Drugs, Patent Medicines,
Perfumery, Hair Oil, Fine Soaps,
Brushes, Lamp Chimneys, Coal Oil
And acomplete line of
Toilet Articles.
Liver & Kidney Pads,

Trusses, Shoulder braces. A choice selection of pure wines and liquors, furnished for medicinal purposes only.

A full line of Wall Paper and Window shades, with all the latest improved fixtures, will be sold at prices remarkably low. We ask a share of public patronage, feeling satisfied that we can offer inducements worthy of attention.

DAY'S KIDNEY PAD
THE GREAT DISCOVERY
FOR DISEASES OF THE
KIDNEYS, BLADDER AND URINARY ORGANS. A remedy that will positively cure DIABETES, GRAVEL, DROPSY, BRIGHTS DISEASE, HIGH COLORED URINE, INCONTINENCE AND RETENTION OF URINE, NERVOUS DEBILITY and FEMALE COMPLAINTS when nothing else can. Its success proves the efficacy of ABSORPTION. It saved the life of its discoverer and is saving the lives of thousands of others. For sale by Druggists or sent by mail on receipt of the price. ($2.00.)
DAY KIDNEY PAD CO.,
Sole Proprietors, Toledo, Ohio.
Send your address for our pamphlet, "How a Life was Saved."

CASEBEER & MATHENY,
First door South of First National Bank. Auburn, Ind.

ISAAC HAGUE'S
NEW SHOE STORE!
A NEW STOCK OF
BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen, we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,—first door east of McQuiston & Ralston' double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich. Southern R. R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Sep. 29 1878, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST.

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm.
Toledo	11 05 a m	12 45 a m	12 p m
Wauseon	12 10 "	1 08 "	"
Bryan	1 05 "	1 53 "	"
Butler	1 45 "	2 25 "	"
Waterloo	2 00 "	2 40 "	"
Sedan	2 10 "	2 50 "	"
Corunna	2 15 "	2 55 "	"
Kendallville	2 28 "	3 05 "	"
Ligonier	2 57 "	3 40 "	"
Goshen	3 30 "	4 10 "	"
Elkhart	4 00 "	4 35 "	4 35 "

GOING EAST.

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	3 05 "
Goshen	1 28 "	10 10 "	"
Ligonier	1 56 "	10 42 "	"
Kendallville	2 20 "	11 18 "
Corunna	2 40 "	11 32 "
Sedan	2 47 "	11 36 "
Waterloo	2 55 "	11 45 "
Butler	3 10 "	12 01 a m
Bryan	3 45 "	12 40 "	"
Wauseon	4 17 "	1 27 "
Toledo	5 40 "	2 40 "	9 30

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. R. CURTIS, Division Supt.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1878.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Nigh ex	No 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 12	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 13	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 20	7 35	11 20
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 30 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 40 am	11 48	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 25 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 20	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 45	4 55	6 50
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 00	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 6	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15 pm	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R.

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect November 10, 1878.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	1 50 pm	5 40 pm	....
Bluffton	2 12 pm	55 pm	....
Montpelier	2 52 pm	35 pm	....
Hartford	3 17 pm	56 pm	....
MUNCIE	4 05 pm	40 pm	....
Newcastle	5 00 pm	....	....
Cambridge City	5 37 pm	....	....
Connersville	6 17 pm	....	....
Cincinnati	9 20 pm	....	....
INDIANAPOLIS	6 15 pm	10 55 pm	....
Louisville	11 00 pm	6 21 am	....
Terre Haute	....	1 32 am	....
St. Louis	....	7 30 am	....

STATIONS	GOING NORTH Mail.	Express	Accom.
St. Louis	....	8 00 am	7 00 pm
Terre Haute	....	2 27 pm	1 32 am
Louisville	....	2 00 pm	6 30 pm
Indianapolis	....	6 40 pm	4 15 am
Cincinnati	8 00 am	....	....
Connersville	11 13 am	....	....
Cambridge City	11 46 am	....	....
New Castle	12 25 pm	....	....
Muncie	1 26 pm	9 20 pm	6 55 am
Hartford	2 13 pm	10 06 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	2 40 pm	10 31 pm	8 19 am
Bluffton	3 13 pm	11 00 pm	9 15 am
Fort Wayne	4 25 pm	11 15 am	9 45 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Detroit Eel River & Illinois R R

TAKE EFFECT DEC. 2, 1878.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	MAIL No. 2.	ACCOM. No. 6,	LOCAL FT No. 8,
lv. Logansport	8 30am	7 30pm	6 45am
Mexico	9 15	8 28	7 51
Denver	9 27	9 00	8 45
Chili	9 36	9 12	9 08
Roann	9 55	9 37	9 55
Laketon	10 13	10 00	10 38
N. Manchester	10 25	10 17	11 10
Liberty Mills	10 35	10 30	11 37
Collamer	10 51	10 50	12 20pm
S. Whitley	10 55	10 55	12 30
Columbia City	11 25	11 31	1 40
Collin's	11 48	11 55	2 25
Churubusco	12 00	12 12am	2 55
La Otto	12 25pm	12 42	3 55
Cedar Creek	12 8	12 53	4 15
Auburn Junct'n	12 50	1 12	4 55
Auburn	12 54	1 17	5 05
Butler	1 20am	2 00am	6 30pm

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1,	No. 5.	No. 7,
Logansport ar.	7 10pm	1 00pm	5 30pm
Mexico	6 33	11 55	3 55pm
Denver	6 23	11 36	3 30pm
Chili	6 17	11 27	3 10pm
Roann	6 00	11 08	2 30pm
Laketon	5 40	10 38	1 52pm
North Mancester	5 26	10 25	1 28pm
Liberty Mills	5 28	10 13	1 09pm
Collamar	5 15	9 55	12 40pm
South Whitley	5 11	9 48	12 30
Columbia City	4 46	9 12	11 25
Collin's	4 30	8 46	10 37
Churubusco	4 18	8 29	10 04
La Otto	3 55	7 57	9 03
Cedar Creek	3 43	7 45	8 42
Auburn Junction	3 25	7 23	8 00
Auburn	3 20	7 18	7 18
Butler lv.	2 45pm	6 30am	6 00am

FRANK J. BECKER,
Gen. Sup't.

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been appointed by the Judge of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Margaret Bell, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent. JOHN HARVEY, Adm'r.

October 13th, 1879.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

CHICAGO DIVISION.

TIME TABLE No. 4.

TAKE EFFECT MAY 18, 1879.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Exp's	[illegible]
Chicago		10 05pm	9 10am
Walkerton Junction		1 05am	12 10pm
Milford Junction	2 50pm	2 34	1 [illegible]
Cromwell	3 50pm	2 48	1 [illegible]
Albion	4 50pm	3 30	2 [illegible]
Avilla	5 30pm	3 50	2 [illegible]
Garrett ar	5 50pm	3 45	2 [illegible]
Garrett lv	6 15am	3 55	2 [illegible]
Auburn Junction	[illegible]	4 [illegible]	3 [illegible]
St. Joe	[illegible]	4 [illegible]	3 [illegible]
Hicksville	[illegible]	4 [illegible]	4 [illegible]
Defiance	[illegible]	5 [illegible]	4 [illegible]
Fostoria	[illegible]	7 [illegible]	6 [illegible]
Tiffin	[illegible]	7 [illegible]	7 [illegible]
Chicago Junction	[illegible]	9 00	8 [illegible]

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Exp's	Chic'o Exp's
Chicago Junction	5 30am	8 15am	6 40pm
Tiffin	5 20	9 [illegible]	7 50
Fostoria	5 55	9 55	8 34
Defiance	4 40pm	11 30	10 35
Hicksville	6 15	12 14pm	11 24
St. Joe	6 50	12 30	11 41
Auburn Junction	7 25	12 50	12 [illegible]
Garrett ar	8 00	12 58	12 10
Garrett lv		1 25	[illegible]
Avilla		1 40	[illegible]
Albion		2 08	[illegible]
Cromwell		2 27	1 [illegible]
Milford Junction		3 00	1 55
Walkerton Junction		4 05	[illegible]
CHICAGO		7	6 40

N. H. WOOD, Master of transportation Chicago Division, Garrett.

C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans, Ohio Division Chicago.

JUS TREEIV'D
—AT—
J. ABRIGHT'S

Fine Gold and Plated Jewelry.
Ladies Gold Watches,
American Watches,
Rogers & Bro. Silverware,
A splendid line of imported Vases
Watch Chains, magnificent
Holiday Gifts, Lockets,
Ladies Sets, Gents
GOLD & SILVER SETS
Sleeve and Collar Buttons, Jet
Shell and Horn Jewelry,
All at astonishingly
LOW PRICES.
Watches and Jewelry neatly repaired on short notice

SAVED!
TIME, PATIENCE & MONEY
By always taking the great
Wabash Route,
FOR ALL POINTS
orth, East, South or West
LIGHTNING TRAINS,
Invariably on Time, with Close and Sure Connections.

No changes of cars to St. Louis, Hannibal, Quincy, Keokuk, Peoria, Burlington, Kansas City, Atchison and St. Joe, and only one change to all points in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Arkansas and Texas, forming the

SHORTEST AND QUICKEST
—AND—
Only Direct Route

From the West to all points in the East, including New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

Through Sleepers from St. Louis to Boston, 1223 MILES,
The Longest Sleeping Car Line in the World.

A. L. HOPKINS, Gen'l Manager.
R. ANDREWS, Gen'l Sup't.
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen'l Passenger Agent, Toledo, O.

For Sale a Sacrifice.

A GEISER THRESHING MACHINE in good condition, offered for sale by Mr. D.D. Moody, at a very low price, and on time. This is an excellent opportunity to get a bargain. 27tf.

—For first-class job work, come to the COURIER office. Good work, good material and low prices guaranteed.

Read. Read.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please address G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county, who is authorized to sell the Singer Machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments furnished on short notice. 30-tf.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
135 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana.
9-28-1y.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 9. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, OCTOBER 30, 1879. Number 44.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills.

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promptly attended to.

Thos.H. Sprott.

REAL ESTATE, COLLECTION AND INSURance Agent. Loans effected on improved farms. Kansas lands for sale or trade.
Auburn, Indiana

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gonsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

D. J. Swartz, M. D.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO DISEASEes of the Eye and Ear, Fistula in Ano, Hemorrhoids or Piles and Chronic Ulcers. Office on Main street, over Shaffer's Furniture Store, Auburn, Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Mathany,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross. Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month; at Waterloo, the first and at Butler the second Saturday of every spring and fall month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.
W. H. MACKINTOSH,
Co. Sup't, of schools.

LIVE AGENTS WANTED.

To sell Dr. Chase's Recipes; or Information for Everybody, in every county in the United States and Canadas. Enlarged by the publisher to 648 pages. It contains over 2000 household recipes and is suited to all classes and conditions of society. A wonderful book and a household necessity. It sells at sight. Greatest inducements ever offered to book agents. Sample copies sent by mail, postpaid, for $2.00. Exclusive territory given Agents more than double their money. Address Dr. Chase's Steam Printing house, Ann Arbor, Michigan. 41-3m.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else. The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

Vacation of Alley.

Notice is hereby given of the pendency of a petition before the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, to be heard at their December session, 1879, praying the vacation of an alley running north and south along the entire west side of Park's addition to the town of Auburn, in said county. The persons to be effected by said proposed vacation are Joseph H. Ford, Christopher Goodbreak William Snell, Charles Snell, John H. Weaver, Minnie Garver, John Otto, George H. K. Moss, John Sawyer and Joseph R. Lanning.
GEORGE H. K. MOSS.
And others.
W. H. DILLS, Att'y.
Oct. 21st, 1879. 434-t.

Read. Read.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county, who is authorized to sell the Singer Machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office in Stainets' store, second door south of First National bank.
30-tf.

History.

[State Sentinel.]

Republicans are just now hilarious—they are gay. There is not a man in the party who is not carrying at least 900 pounds of boom pressure to the square inch. They are counting chickens before they are hatched. They see victory everywhere. They believe that their slap-trap has at last secured a solid north—that the bloody shirt symbolizes victory; that war is better than peace; that sectionalism is better than union; that hate is to be preferred to fraternity, peace, concord and good will. With these impressions the conspirators are happy. Having carried Ohio, they believe they can swoop down on all the northern states, and elect their man in 1880. Possibly, probably—indeed, certainly, there are a few weak kneed democrats disposed to surrender—men who do not read history, or, if they do, forget its teachings, who like Henri Watterson, have visions of bursted democratic brass-hooped piggins, and who see the "democratic milk" going sandwards with a rush. It will not do in "times that try men's souls" to trust to such men. They are not the men to tie to. Then can't be kept in line. They are "shaky." They are what the Indians call 'squaw men." They take no stock in the declaration that "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again." They do not believe in the mills of the gods. In prosperity they count, because they can shout, beat the bugs, and wear badges. In times of adversity they are worse than dead—they croak, they limp, they struggle, they discourage, demoralize, and are to be counted as doubtful. What is wanted now is a calm survey of the field to bury the dead, reorganize the living, count the odds. If retreat is necessary, fall back and reorganize; get a good ready, and when again taking the field, go in to win. The St.Louis Post-Dispatch says:

History repeats itself.

Just four years ago closed the hardest-fought political election that ever occured in Ohio. The whole nation seemed to be absorbed in the Allen-Hayes contest of 1875. People who have memories will remember that the interest outside of Ohio was even greater and more general in 1875 than this year. Everybody seemed to think that upon that contest turned the presidency of 1876.

Well, Allen was defeated. Hayes was elected governor of Ohio. Republicans were jubilant. Democrats were discouraged. And yet, what followed the year after?

Why, every republican almanac shows that the republicans lost the presidential election in 1876; that Mr. Hayes did not receive a majority of the electoral or popular votes, even with Ohio.

Every republican almanac shows that the democrats carried the majority of the states, of the people and of the electoral college without Ohio.

But if Ohio was not necessary to democratic success in 1876, why in 1880?

If, after the defeat in 1875, followed the great victory in 1876, why should the defeat of 1879 prevent victory in 1880?

Is there any difference between the situation of 1875 and 1879?

Yes. In 1875 several southern states, as well as Indiana and New York, were in doubt. To-day the 138 votes of the south and the 15 of Indiana are as good as already cast, or 153 out of the 185.

In 1876 there was really a contest for the entire 185 votes. In 1880 there will be practically no contest for 153 of them.

In 1876 Grant was president, and with all his faults Grant was a man who occupied the presidency legally and by the will of the people. But in 1880 the presidency is occupied by a sham, fraud and hypocrite; a man who was never elected by the people; who is in the White house by perjury, bribery, fraud and crime; who has broken every pledge he made, and is almost equally detested by all parties.

It seems to us that if there is any difference between 1879 and 1875, it is greatly in favor of 1879.

Possibly the republican conspirators may win in 1880; and win they will, if democrats permit their hearts to sink down into their boots—if they become as limp as shoestrings. There is eternal vitality in democratic principles that will survive the schemes of the republican party. To be a democrat is to have faith in the people, in the right, in the constitution, and in ultimate triumph. Ohio is, for the present, republican. New York, with the provoking divisions in the democratic party, may follow suit. If so, so be it. After that, organize and get ready for 1880. In 1876 the democratic party won. Why not in 1880?

The Census of 1880.

Provisions of the act of March 3, 1879, which relate to the formation of enumeration districts, the appointment of enumerators, their duties, compensations, &c.

SEC. 7. No enumerator shall not be deemed qualified to enter upon his duties until he has received from the supervisor of census of the district to which he belongs a commission, under his hand, authorizing him to perform the duties of an enumerator, and setting forth the boundary of the subdivision within which such duties are to be performed by him. He shall, moreover, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation:

"I, ——— ———, an enumerator for taking the ——— census of the United States, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will make a true and exact enumeration of all the inhabitants within the subdivision assigned to me, and will also faithfully collect all other statistics therein, as provided for in the act for taking the ——— census, and in conformity with all lawful instructions which I may receive, and will make due and correct returns thereof as required by said act, and will not disclose any information contained in the schedules, lists, or statements obtained by me to any person or persons, except to my superior officers.

(Signed) ——— ———."

Which said oath or affirmation may be administered by any judge of a court of record, or any justice of the peace empowered to administer oaths; and a copy thereof duly authenticated, shall be forwarded to the supervisor of census before the date fixed herein for the commencement of the enumeration.

SEC. 8. It shall be the duty of each enumerator, after being qualified in the manner aforesaid, to visit personally each dwelling house in his subdivision, and each family therein, and each individual living out of a family in any place of abode, and by inquiry made of the head of such family, or of the member thereof deemed creditable and worthy of trust, or of such individual living out of a family, to obtain each and every item of information and all the particulars required by this act, as of date June first, eighteen hundred and eighty. And in case no person shall be found at the usual place of abode of such family or individual living out of a family competent to answer the inquiries made in compliance with the requirments of this act, then it shall be lawful for the enumerator to obtain the required information, as nearly as may be practicable, from the family or families or person or persons living nearest to such place of abode.

SEC. 9. And it shall be further the duty of each enumerator to forward the original schedules, duly certified, to the supervisor of census of his district, as his returns under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 10. The compensation of enumerators shall be ascertained and fixed as follows: In subdivisions where the superintendent of census shall deem such an allowance sufficient, an allowance not exceeding two cents for each living inhabitant, two cents for each death reported, ten cents for each farm, and fifteen cents for each establishment of productive industry enumerated and returned, may be given in full compensation for all services; and no claim for mileage or traveling expenses shall be allowed in such subdivisions: Provided, That the subdivisions to which the above rate of compensation shall apply must be designated by the superintendent of census at least one month in advance of the enumeration; and no account of the time occupied in the enumeration shall be required for the purpose of ascertaining and determining the compensation of enumerators in such subdivisions. For all other subdivisions, rates of compensation shall be fixed in advance of the enumeration by the superintendent of census, with the approval of the secretary of the interior, according to the difficulty of enumeration, having reference to the nature of the region to be canvassed and the density or sparseness of settlement, or other considerations pertinent thereto; but the compensation allowed to any enumerator in any district east of the one hundredth meridian shall not exceed an average of four dollars per day of ten hours actual field work each; and the compensation allowed to any enumerator in any district west of the one hundredth meridian shall not exceed six dollars per working day of equal length. And the superintendent of census may prescribe a uniform method and suitable forms for keeping account of the time occupied in field work, for the purpose of ascertaining the amounts due to enumerators, severally, under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 11. The subdivision assigned to any enumerator shall not exceed four thousand inhabitants, according to the census of eighteen hundred and seventy. * * * * * * * * The boundaries of all subdivisions shall be clearly described by civil divisions, rivers, roads, public surveys, or other easily distinguished lines.

SEC. 12. That any supervisor or enumerator, who, having taken and subscribed the oath required by this act shall, without justifiable cause, neglect or refuse to perform the duties enjoined on him by this act, or shall, without the authority of the superintendent, communicate to any person not authorized to receive the same, any statistics of property or business included in his return, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall forfeit a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars; or, if he shall willfully and knowingly swear or affirm falsely he shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and on conviction thereof, shall be imprisoned not exceeding three years or by fine not exceeding eight hundred dollars; or, if he shall willfully and knowingly make false certificates or fictitous returns, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction of either of the last named offenses, he shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding five thousand dollars and be imprisoned not exceeding two years.

SEC. 13. That if any person shall receive or secure to himself any fee reward, or compensation as a consideration for the employment of any person as enumerator or clerk, or shall in any way receive or secure to himself any part of the compensation provided in this act for the services of any enumerator or clerk, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars nor more than three thousand dollars, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 14. That the superintendent, his chief clerk, supervisors, and enumerators are hereby authorized to transmit through the post office any paper or document relating to the census, by writing thereon "official business—census," and subscribing the same, with the addition to his name of his official title. But this privilege shall extend to nothing but documents and papers relating to the census, which shall pass free. And any superintendent, supervisor, enumerator, or clerk who shall use or exercise these this privilege for any purpose other than the legitimate discharge of the duties of his office shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall forfeit for each offense a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 15. Each enumerator in his subdivision shall be charged with the collection of the facts and statistics required by each and all the several schedules, with the following exceptions, to-wit: In cities where an official registration of deaths is maintained, the superintendent of census may, in his discretion, withdraw the mortality schedule from the several enumerators within such cities, and may obtain the statistics required by this act through official records, paying therefor such sum as may be found necessary, not exceeding the amount which is by this act authorized to be paid to enumerators for similar services, namely, two cents for each death thus returned. Whenever he shall deem it expedient, the superintendent of census may withdraw the schedules for manufacturing and social statistics from the enumerators of the several subdivisions, and may charge the collection of these statistics upon experts and special agents, to be employed without respect to locality.

Eaten by his Friends.

A Carthage correspondent of the Watertown Dispatch tells a queer story to the effect that Capt. C. L. Smith, formerly a stove merchant at that place was eaten by his friends, after casting lots, to escape starvation. Smith was an officer in the 2nd New York heavy artillery. In 1869 or 1870 President Grant appointed him consul at some point on the Amoor river, Siberia. Resigning he went into the fur business in China for a New York German firm. He made a fortune for himself and firm and with others started in a junk to intercept a vessel bound for America. The crew mutinied, robbed them and put them off on a barren island. They came near death's door, cast lots to see which should be killed and eaten, and Smith was the man. His friends ate him and were finally rescued. Smith's wife, who was with friends in Chicago after her husbands appointment, did not hear from him for years. She was found dead in bed before the story became known. When Smith was made consul he was in the stove business at Tennallytown, Md. The story of his death did not reach his friends until recently, when a Chinaman, who was one of the survivors, related the facts to a friend of Capt. Smith's.

[illegible]

The annual institute of DeKalb county will begin at 10 a. m., on Monday, Nov. 10th, 1879, at the town of [illegible] and will continue in session five days, closing with an examination of teachers on Saturday, Nov. 15th. Past experience has demonstrated the ability of our teachers to make these [illegible] profitable, beneficial and [illegible] for knowledge gained and social [illegible] course enjoyed. All who are [illegible] to become teachers are expected to come prepared to aid in institute work. Instructions in common school branches will require the participation of all teachers, and this instruction will be supplemented by class-drills and illustrative recitations. It is intended to give instructions in reading by classes, and a request is made that teachers bring with them McGuffey's Fifth Reader, and also, such other text books as are in use in the schools. In short come as a student, prepared to co-operate with your fellows in rising to the level of the standard of excellence for which our teachers are noted. Trustees make the selection as well as the employment of teachers; they will prefer those who are prompt and energetic in the institute, and whose grade shows a mastery of the thorough and difficult questions submitted for examination.

Cards of attendance will be given teachers on Friday p. m. On these cards will be recorded the per cent. of daily attendance, twenty a day will allow a possible one hundred which will thus become a material aid on the general average, preventing failure or lengthening the license per cent will be taken from presence at roll call, at 9 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. Teachers are expected to come prepared to take notes of the methods presented, with a view to their use in the school-room.

INSTRUCTORS.

C. A. Fyke, of Butler, will take the subject of English grammar; J. S. Otis and C. M. Merica, will take charge of arithmetic; S. M. Sherman will speak upon the subject of physiology; Lida Powers and Alla Shoub will instruct in geography; Lucinda Daniels has consented to conduct exercises in reading and elocution; and A. L. Lampert will present methods of instruction in history. Other instructors will be present and all book agents who visit us will find a hearty welcome, and will be expected to show their interest by their services. Opportunity for comment or inquiry will be given at the close of each exercise, and our teachers will avail themselves of it.

Variety will be given to the exercises by essays, rehearsals, songs and answers to written questions on educational matters.

Township and school trustees are invited to attend the institute so far as possible, to observe teachers and become enabled to make good selections for their schools.

Teachers should be present by 10 a. m., Monday, and be as prompt thereafter as if conducting school.

Arrangements are completed for evening lectures, speakers and subjects to be announced the day preceding.

Recalling the past success of our institutes, the harmony, and enthusiasm of our leading teachers, and realizing the immediate and prospective advantages to be secured by attendance, we feel justified in anticipating a quickening of thought, a cultivated unity of interest, an aroused professional spirit and a durable interest in new tried and better methods of teaching and government.

A meeting of the board of education will be held on the afternoon of Monday, the 18th of November. It is of importance that all townships be represented.

St. Nicholas for November

Opens the seventh volume of the magazine, with wider margins, thicker paper, twenty-eight additional pages, to frontispieces, a red-line title-page for the volume, sixty or more pictures, and fourteen short stories.

Among the chief features of the number are, a lively home story by Mary Mapes Dodge, the editor; a story by Sarah Winter Kellogg of "How some Dolls Broke the Law;" an indescribable story, "The Gudra's Daughter," written by Frank R. Stockton in his peculiarly funny style; a description of the Centaur Boys of Thrace and their games and "go-as-you-please" matches, with three illustrations by the humorous artist, F. S. Church; an ice-raft story of a boy who saved "Mrs. McGlinty's Pigs" from an icy death; an account, by a boy, of how he hunted Jack-rabbits in Kansas.

A new serial story of boy-pranks, fun and out-door life, written by William O. Stoddard, author of "Dab Kinzer," and entitled "Among the Lakes," is begun with a lively installment; and there is an exciting account by Frank H. Converse of a lad who was left "Adrift on the Ocean," visited a wonderful volcanic island, and had many strange adventures.

An article by Olive Thorne, illustrated with eleven pictures by Jessie Curtis describes the "Playthings" of all times and climes; and a clearly written paper with carefully prepared diagrams, tells how to make "A Very Pretty [illegible]" in Fancy Work.

The Very Little Folk have four pages of large type and four pictures to themselves; and the departments, [illegible] Pulpit," "Letter-box," [illegible] are crammed with [illegible] boys' and girls' letters, and riddles of all sorts.

The Cheapest Music House in America.

My Grandpa's Advice	35 cts.
Sleep on Sweetly, Little Darling	40 cts.
Father, Won't You Try?	30 cts.
I'll Tell Your Mother—comic	30 cts.
The Little Blind Match Seller	40 cts.
He Holds the Pearly Gates Ajar	35 cts.

We will mail all the above beautiful sheet music, on receipt of cash $1.00.
Address, W. L. THOMPSON & Co.
East Liverpool, Ohio.

AGENTS WANTED!

THE NEW STYLE

$25 FAMILY SEWING MACHINE.

THE USUAL $50 MACHINE REDUCED TO $25.

$150 per Week Made Easy.

Horse and Wagon Free to Agt's

The CHEAPEST and BEST in the World.

Too Long in Use to Doubt its Superior MERITS.

No Money to Pay until Machine is Delivered to you and Examined.

It makes the shuttle, double-thread, lock-stitch, (the same on both sides of the work), which received the highest reward at the Centennial exhibition, Philadelphia, Pa., 1876. And is complete with a larger assortment of attachments for fine work than any other machine, and reduced to only $25.

It is an easy and pleasant machine to operate, requires the least care, produces every variety of work, and will last until the next century begins. Strong, simple, rapid and efficient.

Use it once and you will use no other. The money cheerfully refunded if it will not outwork and outlast any machine at double the price.

Agents sell them faster than any other in consequence of their being the "best at the lowest price."

Each machine thoroughly warranted with written guarantee for five years. Kept in order free of charge; money refunded at once if not satisfactory.

It is the most solid, reliable, and satisfactory machine ever invented for all kinds of family work. It is an acknowledged unequivocal mechanical success, thoroughly tested and used in thousands of homes. An efficient, silent, rapid, reliable and ever-ready helper to the weary wife of seamstress, it will do the work of a family for a lifetime, or it will earn from $4 to $5 per day for any one who wishes to sew for a living. This machine costs less than half the price of any new machine of like quality. Has extra long, large-sized shuttle, easily removed. Extra large-sized bobbins, holding 100 yards of thread, doing away with the frequent rewinding of bobbins. It is built for strength and constant hard work. Interchangeable working parts, manufactured of fine polished steel. Will run for years without repairs; is simple to learn, easy to manage, understood perfectly in an hour, and always ready in a moment to do every description of heavy or fine work, at less cost or trouble than any other machine at any price ever did or can do. It will sew anything a needle can pierce, from lace or cambric to heavy cloth or harness, with any kind of thread, and will run off twenty yards per minute; it uses strong, straight needles, and never breaks them It cannot miss or drop a stitch, ravel or break the thread. If you have any other machine, buy this and have a better one. The ease and rapidity of its motion and quality of its work, are its best recommendations. It will hem, fell, tuck, braid, cord, bind, gather, quilt, ruffle, pleat, fold, scallop, shirr, roll, baste, embroider, run up braids, etc., with elegance, ease and quickness, unsurpassed by any machine ever invented.

BEWARE OF IMPOSITION.

The price for our new machines, are less than those asked by dealers in second-hand, rebuilt and refinished machines, or those selling out old stock to close up business, many such inferior and old style machines being offered as new at reduced prices; beware of imposition and only buy new machines. There are no new first-class machines offered as low as the "FAMILY," by many dollars.

Machines Sent for Examination Before Payment of Bill.

Extraordinary inducements offered to clergymen, teachers, storekeepers, etc., to act as agents. Horse and wagon furnished free. For testimonials see descriptive books, mailed free with samples of work, liberal terms, circulars, etc. Address,

FAMILY SEWING MACHINE CO.
45-1y 755 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Notice of Sale.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of an order of the DeKalb circuit court, the undersigned administrator of the estate of George S. Horr, deceased, will offer for sale at public auction on the premises, on SATURDAY, the 15th day of NOVEMBER, 1879, an equal undivided two-thirds of the following described lands:

The undivided two-thirds of a certain tract bounded as follows: Commencing at the northwest corner of the southwest quarter of section seventeen [17], in township thirty-four [34] north of range fourteen [14] east, running thence north until it intersects the north boundary line of the right-of-way of the Detroit, Eel River & Illinois railway, thence in a northeasterly direction along said right-of-way to the east boundary line of the west half of said southwest quarter, thence north on said east boundary line to the north boundary line of said southwest quarter, thence west on said boundary line to the place of beginning, containing about sixty acres of land. Also the following described real estate in said county: Commencing at the southeast corner of the west half of the said southwest quarter of section seventeen [17], running thence north to the south boundary line of the right-of-way of said Detroit, Eel River & Illinois railway, thence in a southwesterly direction along said right-of-way to the west boundary line of said west half of said quarter section, thence south to the section line between sections seventeen [17] and twenty [20], thence east on said section line to the place of beginning, containing seventeen [17] acres of land.

TERMS:—One third cash, the residue in equal payments at 12 and 18 months, with notes at interest, waiving valuation and appraisement laws, and secured by mortgage on said premises Sale to begin at 2 o'clock p. m.
43-3 CYRUS C. WALTERS, Adm'r.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, OCT. 30, 1879.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

FREEMAN, the Pocasset (Mass.) fanatic who offered [illegible] sacrifice, has been indicted for murder in the first degree. No bill was found against Mrs. Freeman.

RT. REV. WILLIAM R. WHITTINGHAM, Episcopal Bishop of Maryland for the past thirty-[illegible] years, is dead, at the age of 78 years.... Mrs. Margaret Jennings, of Brooklyn, N. Y., met her death a few nights ago in a strange and shocking manner. She was sitting at her window watching the reception of a chowder party by a similar party. The street was illuminated, and many fireworks displayed. One of the rockets struck Mrs. Jennings in the face, under the right eye. The sharp point passed her cheek bone and broke her jaw-bone. The broken stick protruded three or four inches from the wound. Six inches of the rocket penetrated the head. The wound was an inch and a half in diameter. The lady expired without speaking.

THIEVES forced an entrance from the roof into the pawnbroking establishment of Friedenberg & Bro., of Philadelphia, and rifled a large safe of $40,000 worth of unredeemed stock, jewelry, etc.

THE tanneries of Webster Brothers and [illegible], together with several adjacent stores, at Malone, N. Y., were burned last week. Loss, $150,000; insurance, [illegible].

THE ashes of the cremated Dr. Le Moyne, of Washington, Pa., weighed seven pounds and were snowy white. The body weighed 200 pounds when placed in the crematory. The ashes were inurned, and will be kept in the late residence of the deceased.

THE jury in the case of [illegible] bank-teller, [illegible] of Armstrong, his coachman, returned a verdict of [illegible] after being out ninety-six hours....The Montauk cotton mills at Sag Harbor, Long Island, were burned last week. Loss, $300,000.

THE stock-speculation mania is nearly as wild in New York as it was in the days preceding the panic.

THE WEST.

GEN. GRANT left Oregon on the 16th inst., and returned to San Francisco, where he was entertained by the Forty-niners at Pioneer Hall, and presented with a certificate of membership in the Pioneers' Society.

THE nephew of Wise, the missing aeronaut, who was also his manager, has published his view of the fate of the men who went up in the Pathfinder. He is firmly of the belief that the balloon sailed beyond Lake Michigan and descended in some forest, and the aeronauts being injured, probably were starved.

WILLIAM HOWARD, late City Treasurer of Madison, Ind., in an encounter with Maj. Simpson, editor of the Madison Star, was shot, and, it is thought, mortally wounded, his thigh being badly shattered. The leg will have to be amputated near the body. Maj. Simpson claims that the shooting was done in self-defense......The Coroner's jury at Jackson, Mich., after a week spent in taking testimony concerning the terrible collision and slaughter on the Michigan Central railroad, has returned a verdict holding the yardmaster to be criminally culpable in ordering the switch engine on the track without definite knowledge as to the whereabouts of the express train, and censuring the switchman for permitting the engine to go, and the switch engineer for taking it upon the main track under such circumstances....George Baumgarten, who, a short time ago, horribly murdered a little boy named Sandy White, the son of a farmer near Janesville, Wis., for whom Baumgarten was working as a hired hand, has been tried, convicted, and sentenced for life to the State's prison.

GREAT preparations are being made in Chicago for the reception of Gen. Grant on the 12th of November, it being the intention to make the affair surpass the San Francisco reception. The railroads will undoubtedly offer reduced fares, and all soldiers are invited to attend. The managers of the military part of the affair desire the soldiers, where it is practicable, to form in companies or squads, and forward statements of the number of men to the Secretary of the Union Veteran Club, Chicago, so that they may be assigned, in advance, to their proper position in line; also to report whether accompanied with music.

A HORRIBLE murder is reported from Milton, Rock county, Wis., the victim being a one-legged tin-peddler named Edward Fogarty. Evidence points to Henry Christensen and the wife of Fogarty as the authors of the crime. After murdering their victim they carried the body some distance, placed it in a clover rick, and then set fire to the rick, partially consuming the corpse. Christensen confesses that he killed Fogarty, claiming that he acted in self-defense.

THIS week, at Haverly's Theater, in Chicago, Mr. Ben Macauley, supported by his own excellent company, appears in a play that has been very successful wherever produced, called "A Messenger from Jarvis Section." Mr. Macauley sustains the character of Uncle Daniel, which is a sharply-drawn and taking character part, and the play is well cast throughout. Haverly's many ventures all seem to be on the high road to fortune this season, as large houses and delighted audiences are reported from his traveling troupes in all parts of the country.

WILLIAM HOWARD, ex-City Treasurer of Madison, Ind., who was shot in an altercation with Maj. Simpson, editor of the Madison Star, died on the 18th inst. Simpson, who was out on bail, was rearrested; also John L. McFetridge, local editor of the Star, who is implicated in the affair.

THE determination of the authorities at Washington to abandon the campaign against the Utes has brought out indignant protests from the Governor and leading citizens of Colorado, and an expression of bewilderment and disgust from Gen. Sheridan. The people of the State in which the Indian reservation lies notify the Government, through an Inspector of the bureau, that the savages must be taken away, or they will be exterminated by the State itself, regardless of Federal law or officers. They complain that confidence can not be restored so long as the murderous devils infest their territory, and that their only hope for peace and prosperity lies in the removal, dead or alive, of the authors of all the late mischief.

PAPERS thrown by Prof. Wise from his balloon, which ascended at St. Louis several weeks ago, were found a few days since near Miller's Station, Ind., on the beach of the lake. They had been in the water for some time, but the writing was legible. This discovery is accepted as conclusive evidence that the balloon seen near this point on the night following the ascension belonged to Wise, and that it and its occupants are now in Lake Michigan.

A FRIGHTFUL tragedy was enacted in the city of Bloomington, Ill., on the 20th of October. At noon of that day William Hogg, an old and respected business man of Bloomington, entered his home, and, drawing a Smith & Wesson seven-shot pistol, shot his daughter Mamie, aged 18, probably fatally. She was stooping filling a valise with clothing, and fell over insensible, the ball entering just behind the ear and passing downward into the throat. Hogg then went into the yard, where his son Willie, aged 12, was playing, and, calling him to him, shot him in the same place. He then placed the revolver to his own head and fired, the ball entering his temple and lodging in the brain. Willie, not being [illegible] ran away. The father was [illegible] of the floor [illegible] with [illegible] in his right hand [illegible] the blood [illegible] terrible wound. Hogg [illegible] was absent at the time, but so [illegible] missed a terrible death. Hogg died in about one hour. Financial trouble is supposed to have caused the deed.

ADVICES from New Mexico indicate that the Indian war in that Territory is assuming threatening proportions. News from the scene of the slaughter [illegible] the remains of sixteen of the victims have been discovered, and that it is known five other persons were killed in the fight of the 13th inst. [illegible] from Mesilla and vicinity [illegible] of Indians, it now appears that only one of the whites escaped the massacre. Col. Morrow reports that he has troops enough to whip Victoria, if he can have two months time in which to do it, which indicates that it is no light business to undertake.... A dispatch from Los Pinos Indian Agency announces the arrival there of Gen. Adams, special Commissioner of the Interior Department, to effect the release of the women and children captured at the White River Agency, accompanied by Count Dornhoff, of the German Legation, Washington. They left immediately for the White River Agency. Chief Ouray was doing all in his power to assist Adams, and there was a fair prospect that the women would be immediately surrendered on his reaching the Indian camp.... A few nights ago a party of villains, in disguise, called at the residence of John Whipple, near Wilbur, Neb., took Mrs. Whipple from the house, stripped her stark naked, and applied coal-tar and feathers to her. The poor woman is almost dead from exposure and rough treatment. The only supposable cause is that she is a witness in a criminal prosecution to come off soon.

DURING the past two months fifteen of the best hotels in Chicago entertained 83,854 transient guests, an average of 1,397 a day. The largest business on any one day was transacted on the 8th of October, when at these houses 2,230 strangers were provided for.

THE Milwaukee Sentinel contains an account of horrible atrocities in the Milwaukee House of Correction. It is charged that the bread furnished the convicts, for which the county pays $4 per barrel, is damaged corn-flour, and cannot be baked, that the meat is putrid, and that the embryos of calves, dogs, and glandered horses are furnished as meat. Of the brutalities of the keepers, it is said the convicts are beaten and put in the black hole, which is too filthy for a dog-kennel, and is five feet four inches by five. A man cannot lie at full length in it. There is no ventilation, and the floor is covered with ordure and urine....A dispatch from Milk River Indian Agency says that Lieut. William B. Weir, Ordnance Officer, while out hunting, was killed and mutilated by Indians, some eighteen miles south of there.

THE Uintah, Snake and Ute Indians of Utah are on the war-path, and several settlers have been murdered....The architect, the builder and the owner of the grand stand at the Adrian (Mich.) fair grounds, the fall of which killed and crippled so many people, are held for trial on criminal indictments.

GEN. GRANT arrived at Sacramento, Cal., Oct. 22, and was accorded an enthusiastic reception. He was escorted from the depot to the Capitol by a procession numbering 12,000 people, and spoke as follows: "Of all the hospitality bestowed, all the honor conferred, there has been nothing so grateful to my heart as the receptions I have received at the hands of the people here. I would not say what has been done abroad. It has been all that could be done for mortal, but it has not been for me. It has been done for the people whom I see before me—for the people of a great country that is recognized abroad as one of the greatest countries of the world. If we all, every one of us, could see other countries as I have seen them, we would make better citizens, or, at least, the average of our citizens would be better." In the evening Gen. and Mrs. Grant held a reception in the Capitol and shook hands with 9,000 people. The city was illuminated, and there were arches, fireworks, calcium lights, and all that sort of thing. On the 23d, the ex-President attended a barbecue and military review of the veteran soldiers and sailors, and dined with Senator Booth.

THE SOUTH.

A RECENT telegram from Milledgeville, Ga., says: "A band of men, numbering probably ten or twelve, after committing murder and arson, openly defy arrest and continue their work of depredation. The reign of the gang is so absolute over the people that they will not dare to tell any human being of their knowledge of the desperadoes. They have plenty of arms, money and friends. The Governor is determined to capture these men, if it takes a regiment of soldiers."

A DISPATCH from Sparta, Ga., states that the accounts of the outlaws in the eastern portion of Baldwin county have been greatly exaggerated. The trouble is a political one. The outlaws burned the gin and cotton-houses and fodder-stacks of Mr. Robson for the purpose of drawing him out of the house to shoot him. They killed a negro man for reporting them to the Grand Jury. They burned the tannery and barns of Luke Robinson and whipped a colored woman and her daughter in Hancock county. The gang have taken refuge in the swamps of Oconee and Ogechee.

THE ninety-eighth anniversary of the surrender of Cornwallis was celebrated in a spirited manner, on the 23d of October, by the people of Yorktown, Va., where the memorable event transpired.

AN extensive gang of counterfeiters has been broken up at St. Louis by the arrest of the chief operators....A dispatch from Grayson, Ky., relates that 200 men rode into Martinsburg, Scott county, Ky., surrounded the jail, overpowered the jailer, took two prisoners—John W. Kendall and William McMillan—to a tree near by, and hanged them until dead. The men hanged were known to belong to a gang of outlaws.

POLITICAL.

OFFICIAL returns of the late election in California show the vote on Chinese immigration to have been: In favor, 883; against, 154,638.

THE Republicans of Louisiana met in State Convention at New Orleans last week, nominated a full State ticket, headed by Taylor Beattie for Governor and declared for Grant for President in 1880.

A WASHINGTON dispatch says that "Secretary Sherman has made known his purpose to his friends not to be a candidate for the United States Senate in Ohio as the successor of Mr. Thurman. The interpretation put upon this by them is that he does not care to compromise his candidacy for the Presidency with the State contest."....The official returns of the Ohio election have been published. They show that Foster's plurality for Governor is 17,129. Stewart, the Prohibition candidate, received 4,145 votes, and Piatt, the National (Greenback) nominee, 9,129. The majority of Foster over all is 3,855. The total vote for Governor was 668,667.

WASHINGTON.

THE commission appointed by the President to visit Cuba and investigate the yellow fever has returned to Washington, having spent three months on that island. The Commissioners say that it would be impossible at this time to furnish for publication any intelligent synopsis of the work of the commission, because of the great mass of material which must be classified and collated. They state, however, that the commission discovered, beyond all controversy, that yellow fever permanently dwells in Cuba, and that hospital and other statistics in the possession of the commission show that during the period embraced between 1856 and the present time scarcely a single month has passed without deaths from yellow fever occurring on the island....The Chief of the Bureau of Statistics reports that the value of exports from the United States of live animals of all kinds increased from $6,344,[illegible] during the fiscal year [illegible] to $11,487,754 during 1879. Of the total exports of live animals the last fiscal year [illegible] per cent. was sent to Great Britain. The value of exports of cattle increased from $3,896,818 during 1878 to $8,379,200 in 1879.

IT is understood that a bill is being prepared for introduction at the opening of Congress [illegible] refunding operations. On the first of December, 1880, there [illegible] 6-per-cent. bonds; on the 1st of May, 1881, there is redeemable $505,440,350 5-per-cent. bonds, and [illegible] holders of these bonds can not be forced to surrender them at any earlier date than that already fixed by law, but it is believed a bill can be framed and passed which will make it advantageous to holders of such bonds to fund them at once.... Speaker Randall states that the committee charged with the revision of the rules have completed their task. They have reduced the number of the present rules from 160 to fifty, and have so simplified them that it will be in the power of every member of ordinary capacity to understand them, which is considerably more than can be said for the present rules.

THE Supreme Court of the United States has sustained the constitutionality of the Pacific Railroad Funding law passed in May, 1878, by which the Pacific railroads who are in arrears upon their obligations to the United States Government are required to set apart a certain portion of their earnings each year for the extinguishment of such debt. Dissenting opinions were filed by Justices Strong, Bradley and Field.

GENERAL.

A TELEGRAM from Portland states that, upon leaving the Pacific coast, Gen. Grant will go direct to Galena, where he will remain until the time of the reunion of the [illegible] of the Tennessee at Chicago.

SIR FRANCIS HINCKS, [illegible] the Canadian Minister of Finance, and latterly a member of the Board of Directors of the Consolidated Bank, has been found guilty upon a criminal indictment charging him with having signed false returns as to the condition of that now collapsed institution.

THE British ship, Naturalist, 259 days out from Calcutta for San Francisco, is given up for lost, and the insurance companies having risks on her have paid them, aggregating $116,500.

ABOUT thirty gentlemen, representing different States, met in New York city last week, to discuss a proposition of forming a national agricultural society. It is intended to organize a society for the protection and advancement of agriculture in America. The plan is to model the society after one which came to an end at the beginning of the last war, and to adopt many of the excellent features of the Royal Agricultural Society of England.... The latest exodus seems to be setting in, not from the South but from New England, and the great West is the objective point. No less than 550 emigrants from Vermont and Maine passed through Montreal for the West in one day of last week.

THE increase in the volume of business, as indicated by the Clearing House returns for the week ending Oct. 25 is unprecedented. The aggregate clearings for the week reached the enormous sum of $1,088,000,000, being more than $300,000,000 over the corresponding week of last year, and an increase of over 50 per cent. In New York the increase is 84.8 per cent.; Chicago, 53.5; Philadelphia, 55; Boston, 41.1; Baltimore, 46.5; Cincinnati, 26.6; St. Louis, 17.20.

THE Captain of the steamer Louise H., which arrived at New Orleans last week, from Algiers, reports the picking up in the Bahama channel seventeen survivors of the burned steamer Nuevo Pajaro del Oceano, including Capt. Diaz and two mates. The steamer had a crew of about forty-two, and about twenty passengers aboard when the calamity occurred. The rescued were in a terrible state of exhaustion, they having been clinging to the floating debris for eighteen hours....Bethany College, at Bethany, Brooke county, W. Va., has had a narrow escape from destruction by fire. The building was fired by an incendiary, who confessed the crime and has been arrested.

FOREIGN.

A FIERCE hurricane, accompanied by extraordinary rainfall, swept through the valleys of the rivers Mundas and Segura, in Spain, followed by destructive inundations. A vast amount of property was destroyed, and there was also great loss of life. Some estimates place the number of people drowned at 300.

THE Ameer, Yakoob Kahn, has announced his intention to abdicate. The British commander in Afghanistan has advised the Ameer to reconsider the matter, but he is fixed in his resolution....The late floods in Spain were almost as extensive and destructive to life and property as were those of last spring in Hungary. Hundreds of dead bodies have been recovered from the swollen streams, and houses and barns almost without number have been carried away. In one district alone the money loss is approximated at 30,000,000 francs. It is believed that over 1,[illegible]00 persons perished.... The entire Turkish Ministry has resigned, and a new one is now directing the affairs of Turkey....The new treaty of defensive alliance, the making of which has excited so much bitterness in Russia, was last week signed by the Emperors of Germany and Austria.

A DISPATCH from Afghanistan reports that the magazine of Balahissar, at Cabul, has been blown up. Twenty-seven of the British force and many Afghans were killed by the explosion.

UPON the opening of the French cable line, for business, the Anglo-American Company will reduce its tolls to 6 pence per word. The latter company will shortly lay an additional cable, and the prospect is that the day of cheap trans-oceanic telegraphy is not far distant....Russia's expedition to explore the ancient bed of the Oxus with a view to connecting it with the Caspian sea has been abandoned, the difficulties in the way having been found to be insurmountable..... Emigration is still the watch-word of the workless and breadless artisans of Great Britain. The weavers at Preston will meet on the 11th of November to consider the subject of removing to a more prosperous country....A dispatch from Paris says the total damage by the recent floods in Spain is estimated at 60,000,000 francs. Three thousand five hundred houses and 120 mills were destroyed.

A CABLE dispatch announces the death of Ernest Von Bulow, the distinguished German statesman and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs....Madrid advices announce that the commission on Cuban reform has united upon a recommendation that the slaves be fully emancipated in seven years from the passage of the bill.... The St. Petersburg Golos expresses astonishment at the tone of hostility toward Russia pervading the speech of Lord Salisbury at Manchester. It says: "If the reported Austro-German alliance proves to be a reality, Russia must secure to herself allies to act in the rear of the enemy in the eastern emergency. Lord Salisbury's speech not only opens Russia's eyes, but gives her freedom of action."..... The young King of Spain has done a generous and manly act, and one that his subjects will not be liable soon to forget, in decreeing that all contributions by municipalities and individuals toward the public celebrations upon his approaching marriage shall be devoted to the relief of the sufferers by the late inundations which devastated the provinces.

IN a dispatch from Cairo, Egypt, Lieutenant Commander Gorringe says: "I have been presented to his Highness the Khedive as authorized by the State Department to receive and remove to America the obelisk of Alexandria, known as Cleopatra's needle, which was presented to the city of New York, through the Department of State, by his father, the late Khedive, Ismail Pasha. His Highness received me with [illegible] courtesy, expressed pleasure at the acceptance of the gift, and authorized the commencement of the work of removal at once. The machinery of removal is under way and work about to begin."... The committee of the Beefsteak Club of London has vindicated the respectability of that organization by requesting the withdrawal of Edward Levy Lawson, of the Telegraph, and Labouchere, of the Truth, whose recent altercations, wordy and muscular, have evinced blackguardism of [illegible]....Cremation is neither ridiculed nor regarded with idle curiosity at Berlin, but as a practice to be encouraged on public sanitary grounds, and the Municipal Council has recommended its general adoption....[illegible] Herzegovina is becoming serious. The Christians refuse to pay rent to the Turkish landlords, and threaten to shoot them if they try to collect. It is believed that the Christians are being supplied with money and arms from Montenegro.

THERE is increased activity in the English iron trade, under the stimulus of large orders from the United States. The wool market is also looking up....A large number of mill operatives and silk weavers sailed last week from England for the United States. Others will follow....Three of the crack English bicyclists and the French champion are on their way to the United States....The bill for the abolition of slavery in Cuba, to be presented to the Spanish Cortes, provides that slaves aged 55 years and over shall become free immediately; those aged 50 in September, 1880; those aged 45 in 1882; those aged 40 in 1884; those aged 35 in 1886; those aged 30 in 1888, and all others in 1890. From 1880, 100,000 pesetas will be charged on the Cuban budget for defraying the expenses of emancipation....A St. Petersburg dispatch says it is evident that the state of siege in the disturbed districts of Russia will be maintained for another year at least.

A National Militia.

Gen. Benet, Chief of Ordnance, in his annual report, makes a novel recommendation with respect to a national militia. He recommends the passage of such laws as will make an efficient national militia of some 200,000 men. The proposition in substance is that the militia of the several States, when they have arrived at a certain degree of efficiency, and have complied with certain conditions, may, according to the pleasure of the respective States, be enrolled as a national militia, in which case they shall be maintained at the expense of the General Government. The degree of efficiency is to be determined by the reports of officers to be called Inspectors of Militia, who shall be appointed partly from the regular army and partly from civil life. Col. Benet, the Chief of Ordnance, recommends that one-half shall be selected from among those who have served in the Union army and one-half from those who have served in the rebel army. This is the first time that a proposition of this kind has ever proceeded from any bureau officer. To obviate any objections that might arise on the ground of State rights, it is proposed that any State shall be at liberty to withdraw its militia from the national enrollment in its own pleasure, subject to certain regulations. Among the conditions of admission to the national enrollment are that the State shall consent that, under certain circumstances, its militia shall be subject to the order of the General Government. Col. Benet recommends an appropriation of $4,000,000 to put into effect any law that may be enacted upon this subject.

No Yellow Fever in Dallas.

A man in Dallas, Tex., visited a neighbor, whom he found with a chill. He immediately gave him a dose of oil and a mustard bath, wrapped him in half-a-dozen blankets, and then rushed off to the Mayor with his report of a yellow-fever case. The Mayor listened very attentively until the man had finished his alarming report, when he astonished him with: "You miserable scoundrel, I tell you there is no case of yellow fever in Dallas, and never has been, and never will be. You have only thought so, and for thinking it—mind you, just for thinking it—I fine you $50 and send you beyond the city limits for a month, until all such thoughts shall have vanished. You shall not think such a thing. And if you or anyone else shall dare to say such a thing, I will put you in jail and keep you there until it shall be entirely forgotten." The poor fellow had nothing to do but submit, and there is no yellow fever in Dallas.

Bankruptcy Statistics.

Dun, Barlow & Co., in their quarterly report, just issued, make a favorable report of the state of trade for the third quarter of the year. The failures in the United States in the last three months number 1,363, less than one-half those for the third quarter of 1878, the precise decrease being 1,591, while the liabilities show even a much larger proportionate reduction, being less than one-quarter of what they were in the same period of last year. The figures for the quarter just ended, therefore, add another to the many indications of the wonderfully improved conditions of trade throughout the country. For the nine months of the two years the comparison is almost as favorable as for the quarter just closed, the failures for the past three quarters in 1879 being 5,820 in number, as against 8,678 for the nine months of 1878. The liabilities are $81,000,000 for the first nine months of 1879, as against $197,000,000 for the same period of 1878, a reduction in liabilities of more than one-half.

The Ute Indian War.

DENVER, Oct. 20.

In accordance with orders from army headquarters, the troops now at White River Agency will, with the exception of a small force left at the agency, return to their respective stations. A force will be concentrated at some point in the southern portion of the reservation to conduct operations against the Utes should they fail to deliver up the parties engaged in the killing of Maj. Thornburgh. Gen. McKenzie, commanding the Fourth cavalry, will be placed in charge of the latter force. Thus it is seen the campaign against the savages is virtually abandoned. The danger of a winter campaign in that country is given as the reason of the order.

Tabby Opens a Door.

In the Alexandria (Va.) Gazette is a story of a cat owned by James P. Machen, who lives near Centerville. Mr. Machen has been troubled for some time by the mysterious opening of the door of his house. He watched the other night, and saw that "it was the cat." Tabby was in the habit of climbing up the door, holding to the knob with one foot and turning it with the other until the door opened.

M. GALTIER, a learned professor at Lyons, has been inoculating rabbits with the virus of mad dogs, in order to find whether the malady will yield to any treatment he can devise, but has not been successful. The madness shows itself in the rabbit in about three weeks. M. Galtier finds that the virus of a mad dog will be as powerful, when preserved in water, twenty-four hours afterwards, as it was at first.

IT is rumored that Ulysses S. Grant, Jr., is to be married to Miss Flood, daughter of the San Francisco bonanza king.

THE KENTUCKY WAR.

The [illegible] of the Underwood[illegible]—The Horrible Sight [illegible] the Fort.

A recent letter from Louisville, Ky., says: The Sheriff's posse, which was to leave here last night to bury the remains of Jesse Underwood, and to rescue George Underwood, lacked the courage to undertake their dangerous journey, [illegible] even the Governor seemed to turn a deaf ear to the earnest prayers of our citizens for protection.

Only one man, Frank McFerren, had the courage to go up to the fort, yesterday evening, to bury Jesse, and the scene when he opened the door of the log house was really a fearful one. Not only was Jesse's body lying before him, poisoning the air from the stench of its decay, but he also found there the corpse of George Underwood, who had been murdered the night before.

It seems five armed and masked men had then surrounded the fort, and, after promising George Underwood safety for his life, they entered the house to search it for John Martin and Clabe White, whom they had a suspicion of being sheltered there. They took all the arms, consisting of a sword, six guns, three bowie-knives and several guns, and were leaving after an unsuccessful search, when one of the party, turning on the threshold, aimed his rifle at old George Underwood, and, shooting him through the nipple, inflicted a wound from which he died in twenty minutes.

Frank McFerren could not induce anybody to help him bury the dead, and he, therefore, alone with his daughter, Agnes, had to perform this terrible duty—the only man of the whole country possessed of humanity and courage enough to perform a Christian duty.

Now that the last male Underwood has been killed the war may said to be over, but it is more than likely that the friends of the Underwoods will take up the gauntlet and revenge their murdered friends on the Holbrook tribe.

Six murders have now been committed within the last two months in this deplorable conflict. Five of them were Underwoods, one a Holbrook, and, so far, none of the officers of our State have taken any steps to prevent these outrages. Is there no law in Kentucky? Are there no officers to protect the peaceable citizens? The country is in feverish excitement, and several notices have been given intimidating persons from going up into the Underwood country.

The editor of the Greenup Independent has thus been notified, just because he has been stating in his paper the truth, regardless of the feelings of either party. The Lord only knows where this will end.

Goose-Shooting from Stubble in Minnesota.

To have anything like sport in the pursuit of the common wild goose (Bernicla Canadensis) the ordinary methods of hunting water-fowl hardly answer here; besides, the lakes they frequent are not large enough to justify the use of the bay-shooting tactics from sink-boats, and from blinds near the water. These birds are exceedingly wary when upon the fields, and are very seldom bagged by stalking. In their watchfulness they have but one rival, and he an effective ally, in the sand-hill crane, which often feeds in their midst, thus adding to the difficulty of approach within effective range. The difficult problem of their successful capture was at last solved for us by Col. Sam Doughty, of Lake City, Minn., who introduced shooting over decoys from pits dug in the stubble of new breaking, where it has been ascertained geese are in the habit of feeding. The decoys are of the simplest construction and greatest portability, being merely flat forms in good outline painted in imitation of the wild goose; these when seen at right angles to their flat surfaces, at ordinary shot-gun range and beyond, are well calculated to deceive not alone his gooseship, but even amateur sportsmen.

Two flights a day are made by the geese from the large lakes in search of food, one taking place at daybreak in the morning, and lasting, perhaps, an hour, and the other at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, occupying about the same length of time. On these flights they are often accompanied by the snow-goose (Anser hyperboreus) and the white-fronted goose (Anser Gambelii), which are here called respectively white and black brant, though they do not much resemble the true brant of the sea-coast (Branta hemida), which may be found occasionally in the midst of flocks of the other kinds, yet are by no means common.

From about the latitude of Kandiyohi county to the Red river of the north the different species of the wild goose hold high revel and, upon the approach of the cold weather, may be seen in countless thousands massing for the southern flight. An early morning drive along the wheat-fields which they frequent will disclose them feeding either upon stubble or breaking. They must be allowed to depart not only unmolested, but of their own accord, when an examination of the feeding-ground is carefully made, and the pits may then at once be sunk. If there are two shooters, as many pits are necessary, and they are best circular in form, about thirty inches in diameter and forty inches in depth. The earth of the excavation may be partially utilized in constructing a slight embankment around the edges of the pit. The surface of the soil about the pit-openings must be manipulated until it accords in appearance with the natural surroundings. The pits may be near enough to permit of a whispered conversation between the occupants when the game is approaching. The decoys, to the number of a dozen or more, being flat, must be placed at such angles that when viewed from any point of the compass a few apparently solid geese are seen.—C. A. Zimmerman, in Scribner.

A Boy's Advice.

A man piling wood on the wharf near the foot of Third street, yesterday, fell into the river, and when hauled out one bystander advised him to be more careful in the future. A second one advised him to take a stout drink of whisky to keep a chill off. A third thought he had better hurry home and change his clothes, and a fourth cautioned him to get the water out of his ears. When all had spoken a boot-black came forward and said:

"I hain't got much to say about this 'ere case, but my advice to this feller is to do more kickin' with his heels and less hollering with his mouth if he ever falls in again. Shine yer butes for 5 cents.—Free Press.

Cat and Looking-Glass.

Many years ago, at Carne farmhouse, where relatives of mine were then living, the household cat was observed to enter a bedroom in course of being spring cleaned. The looking-glass being on the floor, the cat, on entering, was confronted with its own reflection, and naturally concluded that he saw before him a real intruder on his domain. Hostile demonstrations were the result, followed by a rush to the mirror, and then, meeting an obstacle to his vengeance, a fruitless cut round to the rear. This maneuver was more than once repeated with, of course, equal lack of success. Finally, the cat was seen to walk deliberately up to the looking-glass, keeping its eyes on the image, and then, when near enough to the edge, to feel carefully with one paw behind, for the supposed intruder, while, with its head twisted round to the front, it assured itself of the persistence of the reflection. The result of this experiment fully satisfied the cat that he had been the victim of delusion, and never after would he condescend to notice mere reflections, though the trap was more than once laid for him.—Nature.

How a Dog Fooled His Master.

A newspaper that is printed in the town of Palmyra, Wis., the Enterprise, tells a story about a dog which it says is true, every word of it. The dog, whose name is Tiger, belongs to a surveyor, now at work for the United States Government in that part of the country. One day, not long ago, the surveyor saw that Tiger was asleep near the edge of a thicket, and he thought he might have some fun with him. So the surveyor shouted, "Catch him, Tiger; at him, old dog!" and jumped into the thicket, as if a deer, or at least a rabbit, had been seen. Tiger, of course, went bounding and barking in, but very soon returned with his tail between his legs, seeing that a trick had been played upon him. Now comes the good part of the story. Tiger made believe that he was going to sleep again. In about three hours he all at once sprung up, set his ears and eyes in the direction of the thicket, gave a loud bark and leaped forward. The surveyor followed, thinking that Tiger had found some game. When Tiger saw his master parting the bushes curiously he gave a peculiar "Ah-wooh," and went back to his sleeping place, wagging his tail and satisfied that he had paid the surveyor back for fooling him.

A Wonderful Dog.

In last August Mr. Charles Norman moved his family from the town of Flowery Branch to Elberton, more than 100 miles distant. But in the hurry of moving Mr. Norman forgot to let his dog, Watch, out of the kennel or dog house, and did not think of it until he and all the family were in the cars bound for Elberton. Little Willie Norman was very sorry, for he and Watch were particular friends, and, though the Gazette doesn't say so, it is likely that Willie cried over leaving Watch. One week went by, and the Normans had nearly forgotten Watch, when the dog suddenly appeared while the family were at dinner at Elberton. Watch entered the room with an air of injured innocence and was soon welcomed by all hands. The strange thing about it is how in the world Watch could have found the family. He probably followed the trail to the depot and into the same car, and then rode in the car under the same seats that had been occupied by the family, until the train stopped at Elberton.—Elberton (Ga.) Gazette.

MR. AND MRS. STRATTON (Tom Thumb) live at Middleboro, Mass., in a three-story wooden mansion. The house is luxuriously furnished, and, among other objects of interest, are a diminutive sewing machine and the General's grand piano, two feet high.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
Beeves	$6 50 @$10 00
Hogs	3 90 @ 4 37
Cotton	11 @ 11¼
Flour—Superfine	5 25 @ 6 00
Wheat—No. 2	1 35 @ 1 43
Corn—Western Mixed	61 @ 63
Oats—Mixed	42 @ 44
Rye—Western	[illegible] @ 93
Pork—Mess	10 25 @ 10 35
Lard	6½ @ 6¾
CHICAGO.
Beeves—Choice Graded Steers	4 80 @ 5 00
Cows and Heifers	2 10 @ 3 25
Medium to Fair	[illegible] @ [illegible] 90
Hogs	[illegible]
Flour—Fancy White Winter Ex.	[illegible] 75 @ 7 00
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 75 @ [illegible] 25
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	1 19 @ [illegible]
No. 3 Spring	1 [illegible] @ [illegible] 21
Corn—No. 2	47 @ 49
Oats—No. 2	32 @ 34
Rye—No. 2	76 @ 77
Barley—No. 2	83 @ 85
Butter—Choice Creamery	25 @ 28
Eggs—Fresh	15½ @ 16
Pork—Mess	11 50 @ 11 75
Lard	6 @ 6¼
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—No. 1	1 22 @ 1 23½
No. 2	1 20 @ 1 21
Corn—No. 2	47 @ 48
Oats—No. 2	32 @ 33
Rye—No. 1	80 @ 81
Barley—No. 2	76 @ 77
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red Fall	1 21 @ 1 23
Corn—Mixed	39 @ 40
Oats—No. 2	28 @ 29
Rye	77 @ 78
Pork—Mess	11 00 @ 11 50
Lard	5¾ @ 6
CINCINNATI.
Wheat	1 [illegible] @ 1 24
Corn	49 @ 50
Oats	[illegible] @ 37
Rye	89 @ 90
Pork—Mess	10 15 @ 10 25
Lard	5¾ @ 6
TOLEDO.
Wheat—Amber Michigan	1 [illegible] @ 1 27
No. 2 Red	1 26½ @ 1 27½
Corn—No. 2	50 @ 51
Oats—No. 2	35 @ 36
DETROIT.
Flour—Choice	5 75 @ 6 00
Wheat—No. 1 White	1 [illegible] @ 1 [illegible]
No. 1 Amber	1 [illegible] @ 1 [illegible]
Corn—No. 1	48 @ 49
Oats—Mixed	31 @ 33
Barley (per cental)	1 15 @ 1 45
Pork—Mess	11 25 @ 11 50
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
Cattle—Best	4 90 @ 5 10
Fair	4 00 @ 4 60
Common	3 10 @ 3 80
Hogs	3 70 @ 4 00
Sheep	3 00 @ 4 [illegible]

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED,
ROB. J. LOWRY | Editors.

THERE are several remarkable towns in New Hampshire, but Newcastle seems to be the most remarkable of them all. If the Springfield Republican is correctly informed, Newcastle does not contain within its limits a single preacher, lawyer or doctor.

THE Canandaigua Journal says that a party of autumn sojourners at Canandaigua lake went boat-riding the other evening, there being among them a young lady who delighted in toying with the waves. Her hand was hanging alongside the boat, just under the surface, when she felt it closed upon by the jaws of a fish. Startled by the pain, the hand was jerked so quickly from the water that the fish was landed in the boat. The tempting bait, sad to tell, was lacerated badly.

ROME wasn't built in a day, but Deadwood has been rebuilt in a day, or a few days at least, which is all the same. Merchants rehung their signs while the ashes were yet hot, and in more than one case the carpenters blistered their hands at work on new buildings in the midst of smoldering debris. In answer to a Chicago inquiry as to whether help was needed an enthusiastic reply was shot over the wires as follows: "Ours is a land of gold. Save your money for Memphis. Deadwood is able to contribute to more needy cities."

THE Berlin Society for the Propagation of Christianity among Hebrews, in its fifty-sixth report, gives the following statistics: The total number of Hebrews in the world now is about what it was in the time of King David, viz., 7,000,000. Of this number there are in Europe about 5,000,000; in Asia, 200,000; and in America, 1,500,000. Among European countries Russia has the largest number of Hebrews—2,631,000—and Norway the smallest, twenty-five. In Africa the Hebrews are found mainly in Algeria, in Abyssinia, and in the oases of Sahara; they serve there as a kind of middlemen among the Mohammedans and Christians. In Palestine there are about 25,000 Hebrews, of whom 13,000 live in Jerusalem.

COLOGNE'S cathedral is to be finished next year, its first stone having been laid in 1248. It took three centuries to build its choir alone, and by that time the enthusiasm for great cathedrals had died out. Its construction dragged along till 1830, when Frederick William III. of Prussia undertook its repair, and the German Government and people have since furnished the means to finish the work. The nave, aisles and transept were consecrated in 1848, the interior was completed in 1863, and now nothing is to be done but the last and crowning decorations of the stately towers. The massive caps of stone-work have to be laid on, and then on their summits have to be fixed the gigantic "foliated crosses," almost thirty feet high, which are to crown the towers on this masterpiece of Gothic architecture—the largest specimen of that style of building in the world.

"OH! I was born yesterday; I am a mere baby!" exclaimed Cetywayo, the dethroned King of the Zulus, upon his arrival at Cape Town. He was looking with fixed gaze upon the soldiers at drill with the wonders of a civilized town around him. Cetywayo let loose his tongue to say further: "I was a child of the British Government. My father—the English—came to chastise me for wrong-doing. I caught the stick with which he wished to beat me and broke it. I did wrong to fight him and am punished. I am no longer a King. The English are a great people. They will not kill those who fought with them. I hope the great Queen will pardon me." He was accompanied to Cape Town by his four wives, four followers and a little girl. On one occasion during the journey thither he grew sulky and demanded that an entire ox should be roasted for his meal. He hopes that the Queen will send him back to Zululand, and allow him ten wives.

ALASKA has never paid a very heavy per cent. upon the money Uncle Sam invested upon that out-of-the-way corner of the world, but perhaps it is still destined to turn out a good speculation. Gold has been found in several places within fifteen miles of Sitka, and a genuine mining excitement is already starting up. A one-sixth interest in one mine was sold, a few weeks ago, for $7,500, and $20,000 was vainly offered for another mine. Among the advantages is the cheap Indian labor for rough work, the noble red man asking but a dollar a day and boarding himself. Then the climate is healthy, and "mild," too, as some people will doubtless be surprised to learn, the temperature in summer ranging from 58 to 69 degrees above zero, and in winter only from 30 to 49 below. Provisions are also represented to be cheap, and, altogether, Alaska threatens to run a serious rivalry with the Pacific slope as a mining center.

THE German criminal code contains some laws that have no counterpart in our statute books. Such is that which prohibits, under heavy penalties, the use of insulting language about the Emperor, a law under which there have been very many prosecutions in the past year. Another is the curious statute prescribing punishment for behavior in violation of the respect due the dead. This law is said to have been rarely made the occasion of prosecution, but a case has just been before the Circuit Court at Berlin in which it has been applied. Several months ago the widow Langenheim was interred in the churchyard at Weissensee. She had been possessed of ample wealth, but her numerous children, with one exception, were greatly disappointed in their expectations, the bulk of her property having been bequeathed to one daughter. Unable to restrain the rage and disgust aroused by this discovery, one of the sons-in-law of the widow, a provision dealer named Hackmeister, presented himself at the interment, and as the grave was about to be closed stepped up to it, and, in the presence of the priest and assembled mourners, with loud expressions of contempt, spat upon the coffin. He was arrested and prosecuted, the attorney for the Government demanding that he should be sentenced to six months' imprisonment. The court was merciful, however, in consideration of the rarity of such an offense, and imposed fourteen days' confinement.

Lassoing a Bear.

H. P. Fancher was trying to catch a horse, and was rapidly riding after him through a thicket of mesquite when he suddenly came upon a huge bear. A chase at once commenced, Mr. Fancher attacking with his pistol, and bruin, probably nearly overcome by heat, trying to make a successful retreat. Mr. F. fired five shots without bringing down his game, and having only one charge left concluded to change his tactics. Uncoiling the rope used as a lariat, which was tied to his saddle, he made a lasso and attempted to rope the bear. The first attempt was unsuccessful, the rope getting into the animal's mouth. The next proved a successful throw, the rope getting on the bear's neck. A quick movement on the part of the bear jerked the rope out of Mr. F.'s hand, and the bear resumed his retreat, closely followed by his pursuer on horseback. Finding it difficult to approach the bear sufficiently near to catch hold of the rope, Mr. F. dismounted and commenced the chase on foot. Seeing this the bear slackened his speed, evidently not caring if his pursuer did come up with him. He occasionally stopped and looked back, as if expecting company. Declining a hand-to-hand encounter with a large bear, Mr. F. returned to his horse, and called to his cousin, Mr. T. Fancher, resumed the chase. With the aid of a stick he possessed himself of the end of the rope, which was about thirty feet in length, and fastened it to the saddle. Now commenced the frantic actions of the bear in his savage efforts to release himself. He plunged in every direction, nearly throwing the horse, and showed evident intention to free himself at all hazards. But his captor managed to retain his prisoner, and at the same time keep his horse out of the way of the savage brute, until a shot from the six-shooter of his cousin put the bear hors du combat. The fore paw exhibited by Mr. Fancher, and left with us, is the largest ever seen in this section, and indicates, so old hunters tell us, that the owner, in good condition, would have weighed 600 pounds.—Baylor (Tex.) Cresset.

An English Dinner.

I saw a letter yesterday just received by a Brooklyn gentleman from his wife visiting in England. She dined with the wealthy proprietor of Addiscombe, at his pleasant home in Sydenham, and gives a description which I am permitted to copy: "The dining-room is across the hall from the drawing-room. First grace was said, then soup was served—a piece of bread being folded in each napkin. First, though, I must tell you how the table was laid. In the center of the table was a glass centerpiece filled with flowers. In front of this, on a raised fruit-dish, lay an uncut Spanish melon. On either side of the flower-piece was a dish of ripe English gooseberries and French cherries, and opposite the melon a dish of white grapes. Between the dishes of fruit stood a small vase of cut flowers. On the top of each dish of fruit was laid some kind of mossy green stuff from the conversatory, making it look very pretty. By each fruit-dish lay a golden spoon. After soup was brought boiled salmon with sauce; then plates removed and lobster patties were served; then plates removed and roast lamb placed before the master of the house. Potatoes and green peas were served with the lamb. Two kinds of pudding were next brought, with a red wine sixty years old. After pudding appeared two kinds of jellies and a dry white wine. After jellies came the fruit. Then the ladies retired to the drawing-room, where coffee was served, the gentlemen remaining in the dining-room to have their coffee and smoke."—Indianapolis Journal's New York letter.

A BOSTON child remarked, after gazing earnestly at a man who was bald but had heavy whiskers: "His head was put on upside down, wasn't it?"

HAYES ANALYZED.

Career as an Unaccountable Visitation of Divine Providence.

[Washington Letter in Louisville Courier-Journal.

One of the beatitudes which I do not find in the Bible, but yet has a basis of truth, is this: "Blessed are those who expect nothing, for they shall not be disappointed." In like fashion it may be asserted: "Blessed is he from whom nothing is expected; for if he speaks or acts foolishly the public will take it as a matter of course, and let him off easy." Then Mr. Hayes comes in with his usual luck. The public expects nothing from him. It simply accepts him as a fact, disagreeable it may be, but not wholly unendurable. He is regarded by them much as a pious Mussulman is said to regard a December fall of snow, namely, as "a cold, uncomfortable, unaccountable visitation of Divine Providence, sent for some good purpose to be revealed hereafter." People reckon that Mr. Hayes cannot do a great deal of harm while there is a Democratic Congress to hold him in check, and as he is to go out of office in a little over a year they are not concerned so much about him as they are about his successor in office. The one is a nuisance already gauged; the other a great unknown, with indefinite, mysterious possibilities of evil or of good.

The methods, the surroundings and the atmosphere, social, religious and political, by which such a man as Hayes is bred, would reward the study of a Dickens or a Thackeray. There are thousands of just such persons as he scattered all through the Northern States, though it so happens that only one of this class ever attained the Presidency. But they have been a power in public affairs. They have kept alive such papers as the New York Tribune and the Cincinnati Gazette. Unlike Grant personally, they yet exerted a large influence upon his administration, and probably upon Lincoln's also. The potations of the one and the smut of the other were not exactly in their line, but they could readily connive at such trifles when they had a point to gain. Over all they did there was an air of unctuous piety that disarmed criticism and imparted to the worst political knavery an air of apparent respectability. It was, indeed, an organized hypocrisy, but careful training had made every actor perfect and yet carries on the drama to its consummation. Given a certain amount of narrow-mindedness and bigotry, surface reading and catchwords without reflection, religious cant, political malignity, greed of office and money, and you have the materials for fashioning Rutherford B. Hayes, the Congressman, as he sat in the House of Representatives, not daring to take part in the debates, accepting as a natural thing the obscurity that made him simply an item of the yea and nay list; but yet a power with the many smaller men of his own party and sect who live and disgrace God's beautiful handiwork in rural Ohio. A singular conjunction of personal luck—the Republican Convention evenly balanced by the contentions of its great chiefs, gave him the opportunity to become its candidate, and subsequently the automatic recipient of the power snatched by the bold villainy of its more reckless and audacious leaders. This, and a demoralized, cowed populace, made such a President a possibility of this nineteenth century.

It is a mortifying exhibition, but still a wholesome one, that the person thus permitted to attain the high and exalted office of President should go around the country and make silly speeches. When the people listen to all this partisan drivel and these platitudes they should remember that the man before them is Chief Magistrate over 40,000,000 of people, and armed with a far larger actual power than the Queen of England or any crowned head in Europe, save the Czar of Russia, and then they may ask whose shame it is that he fills the chair of Washington.

I notice that Mr. Hayes, anxious to re-establish himself with the "Stalwarts," joins in their raid upon State rights. His willful perversion of the truth by asserting that the doctrine of State rights and the right of secession are equivalent terms, and held by the same persons, has, I believe, been already exposed in your columns. Such a perversion and an attempt to deceive would disgrace a village Radical newspaper or a store-box orator, and it is doubly disgraceful in a President. In his late speech at Springfield, Mr. Hayes reiterated this falsehood, and went on to criticise and object to the expression "State sovereignty," which he found on the State House, placed there long before his visit had been announced. He quoted Mr. Lincoln to show that "State sovereignty is not found in the constitution of the United States." When Mr. Hayes stole the Presidency there was just one little form that he had to go through which I presume he found rather irksome. He had to swear obedience to the constitution of the United States. Now, if he would read this constitution through, he would probably find that it recognizes both State and Federal rights. Every Judge, every great man of the past, the United States Supreme Court, over and over again, speaking by the mouths of Democrats and Republicans, have recognized State rights. I will not, however, be so absurd as to suppose that the text of the constitution or the decisions of the courts would weigh with a man who could deliberately take and keep an office and $200,000 of money that he knew did not belong to him. But even such a person as he is, a hide-bound partisan, might have some respect for the Republican platform of 1860, adopted by the convention that nominated Abraham Lincoln. That platform declares that "the Federal constitution, the rights of the States and the union of the States must and shall be preserved."

The same platform also declares that "the maintenance inviolate of the rights of the States and especially the right of each State to order and control its own domestic institutions according to its own judgment, exclusively, is essential to the balance of power on which the perfection and endurance of our political fabric depend." If this be true, the attitude of Mr. Hayes and his friends in seeking to prejudice and destroy State rights is moral treason, and the greater treason because it is done in a cowardly manner, under color of office, without risking their lives in battle.

But it is useless to talk of morals to such people as these. When the Spartans went forth to vanquish the Helots they did not take their arms, but whips with which they had scourged these Helots before, and the Helots promptly submitted. As Mr. Hayes has become a "rebel" to the Government he is sworn to support, and is openly plotting treason against the system on which our fabric of Government depends, and cannot be reached by moral considerations, the only remedy left us is to appeal to his fears. I beg leave to remind him that he has a master before whom he has already crouched in the past, and who will not tolerate such stuff as he is now putting forth. Speaking in the Senate of the United States, on the 24th of May last, Senator Edmunds, a stalwart of the stalwarts, discussing the distribution of power, spoke as follows:

"And the courts have said that that is a case of concurrent jurisdiction, that each State, having supreme and sovereign domain over the conduct of its own citizens, is not limited in the exercise of that dominion by the fact that there is another power that has a similar dominion in that particular case over citizens of that other power; that is to say, over citizens of the United States; and, therefore, the citizen is amenable to two jurisdictions; either may command him not to do a particular act, but each commands him in its own right, speaking directly to the fact of what he is to do, and not in reference to the laws of the other at all. In that instance, it is clear, according to the decided cases, and, I think, according to the philosophy of this singular Government which we have, that each sovereignty may exert itself according to its own notions of what is fit and reasonable against the same man for the same act."

Further on Mr. Edmunds says: "The State laws, consistently with the constitution of the United States and independent of it, and in a respect where the constitution of the United States does not touch upon the sovereignty of the State, and in regard to which the sovereignty of the State was never in any degree surrendered, may provide, as they do provide in many States, for the preservation of the health of the citizens of the State."

In other words, not only do the States have rights not surrendered, but in respect to these rights they are absolutely "sovereign." It is a great pity that among these precious rights of sovereignty, State or Federal, there is not also the power to furnish a person holding the office of President with a decent modicum of brains and honesty.

Mr. Hayes' object was not so much to propound his constitutional views as to fan the flame of prejudice against the South. The South was at one time disposed to give him a most generous interpretation. Unmindful of the fact that the policy of withdrawing the troops from the infamous office of upholding the carpet-bag governments had been resolved on and actually ordered by Grant before he went out of office; that the execution of the order was defeated by the Sherman influence in a covert and underhanded manner, so as to secure for Hayes the disposition of the whole question; that months elapsed before Hayes carried out Grant's policy, and then only after his own agents at New Orleans had endeavored to extort two United States Senators as the price of the concession of their right to choose their own rulers; the Southern people hastily assumed that the President meant to treat them fairly. But they were undeceived. They saw him dispensing the patronage of his office not to the best citizens, but to the worst, paying the Returning Boards and their affiliated miscreants for their dirty work, and then the confidence of the Southerners in him was shaken. Mr. Hayes found that he could not hitch on the South to the car of Radicalism, and now he has taken up the role of defamation, slander and persecution. Perhaps he may hope in this way to help the Sherman boom. His office-holders are at work in this city to secure a solid delegation from the Southern States for Sherman. Their object was unblushingly avowed, and has been published by the Republican correspondents in this city. But it looks as if the office-holders' boom would soon be drowned by the Grant boom. Already the California Republicans have spoken. The State Republican Convention in Colorado greeted Mr. Carl Schurz with a pronunciamento for Grant. Nebraska follows suit. These are but the pattering of the rain-drops. The office-holders may as well prepare to go. They will get even less mercy from Grant than they would from a Democratic administration. They will all have to walk the plank, and Mr. Hayes' side show, the Shermans, the monkeys and the elephants will be buried as forgotten rubbish.

OFFICIAL CORRUPTION.

Dishonesty in the Postoffice Department—Men in High Station Plundering the Treasury.

[Washington Cor. New York Sun.]

The amount of money expended by officeholders of the fraudulent administration in junketing tours at home and in pleasure travel abroad exceeds all former experience. This is done under the pretext of official business, which is a thin disguise for habitual raids on the treasury. James N. Tyner took his family and one or two more subordinates of the Postoffice Department to Paris to attend the Exposition last year, using as a cover for that trip a so-called international postal convention. He expended about $10,000, and made no report of any kind that can now be found on the files of the department.

Subsequently he made up a party for the Pacific coast, accompanied by the Third Assistant Postmaster General, A. D. Hazen, and his family, and chief clerk, ostensibly to look after improvement in the postal service, but really for amusement and recreation. They managed to spend some $6,000, and made no report, thus proving, as in the other case, that the whole thing was a sham, so far as public duty or public interest was concerned, but a costly reality to the taxpayers.

Tyner and Burnside, the prosperous Superintendent and disbursing officer of the Postoffice Department, were out on a hunting expedition in the Ute country when the fatal descent was made on Thornburgh's command, but got back unharmed, and are doubtless ready to start on another excursion. The bill for this last trip has not yet been rendered, but it will doubtless be relatively as big as the others.

Mr. Blackfan, Superintendent of Foreign Mails, has been several times abroad, professedly in connection with postal treaties, but actually for his own ease and comfort. Dr. McDonald, Superintendent of Money-Order System, is now in Europe examining, as is alleged, the foreign methods of paying money out by postoffice orders, upon which ours is modeled, and which are annually reported by all the Governments that have adopted this practice.

An excuse is readily invented whenever any of these or other postoffice assistants or superintendents or chief clerks or favorites want to make a European tour at the expense of the public. Erring Brother Key is not consulted. They come and go at their own convenience, and the cost is charged to some general fund, so that the personal items never appear in the official statements.

Year after year the deficit of the Postoffice Department increases, and no inquiry is made beyond the general receipts and expenditures. Tens of thousands are annually covered up, which form part of a systematic plunder, and when committees pretend to investigate charges that are known to be true they are whitewashed just as those against Tyner and others were in the last Congress, who had been flourishing about Washington and making the contingent fund pay for their parade. The Committee of Appropriations will do well to call for the extra expenses of all officials of the different departments before voting the regular supply bills for the next year.

SECRETARY EVARTS PROTECTING OFFICIAL THIEVES.

It has been semi-officially announced that John S. Mosby, United States Consul at Hong Kong, China, is to be recalled. The alleged reason for this is that he caused one of his dispatches to be printed in the newspapers, and that this, being a violation of the Consular regulations, is sufficient to warrant his decapitation.

The real reason, however, is that Mosby has made himself exceedingly active in ferreting out some of the frauds of the Seward ring in China. He had not been at his post two weeks before he discovered that David H. Bailey, his predecessor, had in one class of fees alone defrauded the United States Government of $30,000 or $40,000. He instantly reported this fact to the State Department. His dispatch on this subject was sent Feb. 20, 1879, and must have reached Washington long before Bailey, who had been nominated for Consul General at Shanghai, had been confirmed by the Senate.

There was ample time for Mr. Evarts to withdraw Bailey's nomination had he been disposed to bring a rogue to justice. But, in an authorized statement to the press in regard to the charges made by Mosby against Bailey, Mr. Evarts declared that he knew nothing of these allegations when the nomination was made.

At best this is a mere subterfuge, because he could still hav withdrawn the nomination. But the truth is that formal charges against Bailey had been made at the State Department by Mr. Wells, ex-Consul General at Shanghai, before the nomination of Bailey was sent to the Senate. Wells also tendered the evidence to prove that Bailey was nominated for this position at the special request of Minister Seward. It is a striking proof of the intimacy between Seward and Bailey that the latter refused to reinstate, on their return to Shanghai, the Marshal and office clerk who were called to Washington to testify by the House committee that investigated Seward's case, and who were compelled to testify against him.

That Mr. Evarts is determined, at all hazards, to prevent any further exposure of the criminal doings of the Seward ring in China is shown by his announcement that Mosby is to be recalled. He will not succeed, however. He was compelled to order an investigation of Mosby's charges, and the result has been that they are sustained by unimpeachable evidence, and the agent directed to make the inquiry has so reported to the department.

The Dialect of Colorado.

Not the least important thing is to familiarize one's self with the dialects of the State, which are getting to be widely used, and a knowledge of which is essential to understand an editorial in a Colorado newspaper. A friend accosted me one day as follows: "I say, Tom, are you going to the 'round-up' at Maj. B.'s to-night? Going to have a 'way-up' time. The pretty Miss H—— will be there. But they say Jim D—— has got her 'corralled.'" If you wish to express the demise of a friend you would say in Southern Colorado that "he'd gone over the range;" it would be more elegant to say that "he'd passed in his chips," while in Northern Colorado nothing would be so expressive as "he's struck bedrock at last." Cow-puncher, mule-skinner and bull-whacker each express honorable callings, while pot-slinger, hash-driver and grub-choker refer to the chefs de cuisine in the more-retired parts of the State. If you try to sell a horse, the first question will be, "Does he buck?" A prospector starting out will "pack his burro;" i. e., load his provisions and tools on a small species of donkey.—Denver Tribune.

GORTSCHAKOFF is 81 years old. He is the bitter enemy of modern Liberalism, and is sure that he shall never see a Russian Parliament. He won the portfolio of Chancellor by an anonymous competitive examination.

INDIANA ITEMS.

ROBERT MEEK, Mayor of Greensburg, is dead.

WORK has been commenced on the Johnson county Court House.

PIPE-LAYING for the Fort Wayne water-works will begin next week.

THE new iron bridge across the Wabash, on the Muncie road, is being built.

DAVID VESTAL, a pioneer of Ripley county, recently died. He served in the war of 1812.

A GREATER breadth of wheat will be sown in Southern Indiana this year than ever before.

STATE AUDITOR MANSON lost his pocket-book by pickpockets at the Vincennes Soldiers' Reunion.

POLES for the new American Union Telegraph line were being delivered between Lafayette and Logansport last week.

THE narrow-gauge, after long delay, is receiving the iron to finish the eight-mile gap east of Decatur, thus completing it to Delphos, Ohio.

A PENALTY of $5 may be collected against any person who hitches a horse or team to a shade-tree in any town or city in Indiana. This is a State law.

A SQUAD of twelve youths enlisted for the navy have been forwarded from Terre Haute to New York, in charge of Charles Thompson, son of the Secretary of the Navy.

BICKNELL, the New Albany Congressman, will use his influence to have the streams of Southern Indiana, such as Indian creek and Blue river, stocked with game fish.

MAJ. BURKE, late of Purdue University, Lafayette, has resumed his position as one of the new management of the Northern Indiana prison, under Warden James Murdock.

LIEUT. HAMILTON, of the Fifth cavalry, has been detailed as Military Instructor at Asbury, Capt. Wheeler, the former instructor, having been ordered to Fort Keogh, Montana.

WILLIAM HEILMAN, of Evansville, who employs several hundred men in his rolling-mill, has voluntarily raised their wages $1 a week since the recent advance in the market price of iron.

PROF. WM. COLGROVE, the daring young aeronaut, who fell from his balloon at San Francisco, during the gale, was the son of Judge Colgrove, of the Randolph County Circuit Court.

THE city of Lafayette is now called upon to defend herself against a $30,000 lawsuit, brought by Engineer Allen, who was blown up by the explosion of the steam fire engine. The case will attract some attention.

THE Union City Society for the Suppression of Vice and Enforcement of Laws invites all pastors throughouf the State to preach a sermon, sometimt during the month, against the vice oe gambling.

THE number of buildings and improvements going up in Evansville, at this time, are past count and actually surprising. Brick cannot be procured in sufficient quantities to supply the extraordinary demand.

NEW ALBANY Ledger: The only drawback to the most prosperous times known in New Albany for more than ten years will be a coal famine. If the river remains low for a few weeks longer, there is great danger that we will not get a supply of coal until next spring. In that event some of our manufacturers will be compelled to stop work.

MRS. GEORGE LARIMORE, who lives on a farm about one mile west of Beesons, near Connersville, opened the door to go out in the yard, when a tramp met her and tried to get into the house. Her husband came to the rescue, and gave the fellow a push, which caused him to fall and receive fatal injuries.

PRINCETON has had a breeze of excitement over the question of mixing the races in the public schools. The School Board decided to send the colored children to the schools with the white children, but the Superintendent, sympathizing with the dominant sentiment among the people, ordered them out. The School Board ordered them back, and there the matter rests.

THE Commissioners for the erection of the new State House at Indianapolis are preparing their ninth quarterly report to the Governor. In it they state that during the three months ending Sept. 30, $50,699.74 have been expended, making a total outlay since the commencement of the work of $153,665 56. Of this amount, $75,805.12 have been spent upon the foundation, and $40,251.81 for iron work.

The Trypograph.

A new instrument for multiplying copies of letters, etc., has been introduced into England under the name of the trypograph. It seems a modification of Edison's electric pen. A sheet of special paper is placed on a perforating tablet, and the writing is done with a firm hand and a steel-pointed stylus. This has the effect of piercing the paper with a number of very minute perforations, through which it is possible to force ink on the sheet of paper placed beneath. The making of the stencil is the most important part of the operations. A little practice will show the proper amount of pressure to put upon the stylus and the easiest way of writing, and, this once accomplished, it will be understood that the number of copies is limited only by the duration of the stencils, which can be stored away for future use, and brought out as required. No press is needed; all that is wanted is something with a flat surface, the means of holding the stencil firmly, and a squeegee for scraping the ink over the surface.

THE area of British India, exclusive of native states is 899,341 square miles, the number of inhabited houses 37,043,524, and the population 191,096,603. The area of the native states is stated at 575,265 square miles, and the population at 49,161,540.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, OCT. 30, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

The next Ohio legislature will have a republican majority of 31 on joint ballot. To the victors belongs the fun—of electing a United States senator to succeed Thurman.

It is said that the railroad accident at Jackson, Mich., will cost the Michigan Central company about $100,000, for loss of life and damages to wounded, besides a great loss of patronage.

Pedestrianism will soon have to give way to bicyclism in this country. Two of England's celebrities have already arrived, and two more are expected soon. When they are all assembled they will visit the larger cities and give a series of exhibitions.

The Fort Wayne Sentinel "booms" for Hon. Joseph E. McDonald as the democratic candidate for governor of Indiana. In our opinion no better selection could be made, but is it not possible that he may be called upon to accept a position of greater importance? The democratic national convention may desire to use his name.

Every "indicted" political perjurer, every "investigated" radical thief and every "pardoned" political convict in the land, will attend the grand receptions given Grant, and urge his condidacy for the third term. This class of Grant's followers alone are greater in numbers than all the followers of either of the other republican candidates for the presidency.

The Washington Republican says, that if the democrats are successful in the next presidential campaign, the result will be "AN AFFAIR OF ARMS." In other words, if the democratic candidate for president is elected, the republicans will engage in armed rebellion rather than yield to the rightful authority. Do the fair minded republicans of DeKalb county indorse such sentiments?

The official count of the votes cast at the recent election in Ohio, shows the following:

Foster, republican,.............	336,261
Ewing, democrat,..............	319,132
Piatt, national,................	9,129
Stewart, prohibition,...........	4,145
Foster's majority over Ewing,..	17,129
Foster's majority over all,......	3,855

In 1878 the national-greenback-labor ticket had a majority of 638 in Lucas county, the hot-bed of greenbackism; in 1879 the same party only polled 1550 votes, of a total vote of nearly 12,000. It is said that "Coming events cast their shadows before." Farewell, Mr. Fiat.

The republican party of New York, assisted by the leading republicans of the whole country, are making the political fight in that state on national issues. There is nothing said by the republican speakers concerning state government or state issues. The effort appears to be wholly against the south, against allowing the southern states to govern themselves, and in favor of troops at the polls and a strong government, by which they mean a one-man government, a Grant government. The Sun says: "The keynote of the republican canvass is Grant. The leaders are making it understood that every ballot cast for Cornell is a pledge that the voter is for Grant next year."

All agree that the late civil war fully and forever settled the question of the right of any state to secede from the Union, but when blatant radicals tell you that all the rights of states perished when the Union of states was restored, just refer them to the fourth resolution of the republican platform of 1860, which is the very ground upon which the democratic party stands, and ask him why it is not good doctrine now, if it was in 1860. Here is the resolution. "That the maintenance inviolate of the rights of the states, and especially the right of each state to order and control its own domestic institutions according to its own judgment exclusively, is essential to that balance of power on which the perfection and endurance of our political fabric depend; and we denounce the lawless invasion by armed force of the soil of any state or territory, no matter under what pretext, as among the gravest of crimes."

The Chicago Times wanted a man named Colvin nominated by the democrats of Chicago and Cook county, for county treasurer. Because the said democrats refused to comply with the demand, the Times indulges in the following republicanisms which prove beyond a doubt that the Times is thoroughbred republican.

"The democratic party in Cook county, after the manner of the democratic party everywhere else, have made damphools of themselves, and their county ticket will be beaten from top to bottom. Why this party still encumbers the surface of the earth, instead of having been buried out of sight, years ago, is unaccountable."

"And so it is. The democracy are joined to their idols; let them alone. They have done nothing but blunder for thirty years past. They are incapable of anything else, and will never do anything else. Their greatest blunder has been that they have refused to be buried, notwithstanding they have stank for these many years."

Lagro, in Wabash county, has a new and novel temperance organization, of which the Wabash Courier makes the following mention. "Some weeks ago Dora Freshour and John Young agreed to quit drinking, and each executed a note for $25 payable to the other in case the giver of the note should take a drink of liquor. Each has remained steadfast in his resolution to tamper no longer with the dangerous liquid; the plan of reformation has grown in favor, and so many of Messrs. Young and Freshour's friends expressed a desire to be bound up in the same manner that it was decided to effect an organization free to all to become members who shall conform to the rules and regulations. A meeting was held a few nights ago at which officers were elected and a thorough organization effected. Any person who desires to become a member must first give his note for $25 payable to the society whenever the applicant breaks his pledge. The money thus received goes into a general fund, and is to be used for the benefit of the organization. No man's note is received until it has first been endorsed with the best of security, thus rendering payment certain in case the giver yields to temptation. The members wear a green ribbon as a badge of the order."

The three white women and two white children whom the Utes carried off from the White River agency came into Gen. Merritt's camp on Friday. They report that the Indians have treated them with respect and kindness. After the killing of Meeker, Chief Douglass and two others took Mrs. Meeker and the rest under their personal protection until such time as they should be able to restore them to their friends.

As to the killing of Meeker and the agency employees, the White River Utes tell a consistent story, which is corroborated in part by other testimony. The ill-fated agent's hobby was to make these red men work, white man fashion; and the more sullenly they resisted the more imperiously he insisted. According to the Indians, he witheld their supplies, scolded them, threatened to put them in irons, and even to hang them, if they did not go to work. Finally he told them, they say, that Major Thorburgh was coming with a supply of chains to be used in binding them, as a preliminary to hanging them. This explains the chain found on Meeker's dead body. A committe, of the Indians went to meet Thornburgh. They say that he met them haughtily, would not say anything to allay their fears, announced that he was going straight to the agency, and seemed to want a fight. Presently runners brought the news to the agency that the fight had begun, and that fifteen of their brethren had been killed. Then the more hot-headed of them, against the remonstrances of Douglass and other chiefs, killed Meeker and his white workman, sparing, as we have seen, the women and children.

But for the prompt action of the head chief, Ouray, other branches of the tribe would have gone to the help of the White River Utes, and we should have had a bloody and costly war on our hands. The army officers and the Indians are agreed on this point.—New York Sun.

There are many honest and fair-minded republicans who do not favor Grant for a third term, not enough however to prevent his nomination, as a large majority of that party subscribe to the sentiments expressed by the Lamars (Iowa) Sentinel, which is undisputed stalwart authority. Every republican newspaper that favors bayonets at elections, favors Grant; every paper that flaunts the bloody shirt, favors Grant; every paper that favors a military, rather than a civil government, favors Grant; every whiskey thief in the land favors Grant; not all are government thieves that favor Grant, but every government thief is in favor of Grant; every addle-pated republican that looks to corrupt leaders for advice, favors Grant, and the Lamars Sentinel is the mouthpiece for the whole gang. Read the following editorial from that paper:

"Booming, booming, booming, for Grant. With the nation's capital in the hands of traitors, the low, but deep murmurs of a defrauded people grow in sullen reverberations that gather, gather, gather, and, rumbling over the graves of a million dead heroes, who seem to have died in vain that the nation might live. They roll grandly into the hearts of thirty million living patriots, and break on the ears of the world, booming, booming, booming for Grant in 1880. Transcendentalism gush, reconciliation, and all other tricks of reconstruction are played out. Exit doves, olive branches and fol-de-rol. Grant and gunpowder. Grant and bayonets. Grant and the gallows for traitors. Grant and the grand old Union army on the top shelf. Grant in the presidential chair, his congress and cabinet taken from the grim warriors who saved the Union to preserve it, and to stay there till the crack of doom, if the integrity of the republic requires it. It was the sword of the fathers that created the republic; it was the sword of their sons that defended it against foreign foes; it was the sword of their grandsons that rescued it from hellborn domestic treason. To the army we owe our creation, preservation and redemption; from the ranks of the civilian and the statesman have come the imbeciles and blathering impracticables, gushing sentimentalists, and diabolistic traitors. They may do when peach-blossoms and butterflies dance in the calm sunbeams of peace; but, when treason stalks at noonday in the nation's capital, the sword must be unsheathed, the soldiers must step to the front. Shot and shell, grape and canister are the only arguments traitors can understand.

It is said by many of our democratic cotemporaries that the Kelley bolt in New York is purely anti-Robinson, the result of grievous errors committed by Gov. Robinson detrimental to the democracy of New York city, and that the bolters are not governed by a desire to defeat the nomination of Samuel J. Tilden for the presidency. We do not take that view of the situation. While Kelley may desire the defeat of Gov. Robinson on personal grounds, we think there is little doubt about the bolt of Tammany being founded upon the ground that if Gov. Robinson is re-elected the nomination of Tilden will be assured. Kelley and his followers made a bitter fight against Tilden at the last democratic national convention, but were not successful, and now, rather than take the chances in another convention, Tammany is undertaking to settle the matter in advance and at home. If Robinson is defeated for governor, Kelley will consider Tilden out of the way, the party can be reorganized and the state of New York can be considered safe for any democratic candidate for president. If Tilden is nominated, Tammany will be driven farther away, without a hope of reorganization, and Grant or some other republican will have no trouble in securing the electoral vote of that state.

Concerning the observance of thanksgiving day in America, the Chicago News, says:

"It is usual to appoint the last Thursday of November as a day of thanksgiving. Why Thursday was originally chosen, in preference to other days, is not certainly known; but the best authority gives the reason that shortly after the landing of the Pilgrims, and while they were in sore distress, a vessel, bearing food and clothing, arrived on that day, for the selection of that day. At all events, occasional days of thanksgiving were held at Plymouth from 1621 to 1680. The custom became general throughout Massachusetts, and from there spread to the other colonies. There was no national thanksgiving day until 1784, when Gen. Washington called one to celebrate the ratification of peace after the Revolutionary War; in 1789, the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. The next year one was called on account of the suppression of insurrection. The successful close of the war of 1812 caused another day of national thanksgiving to be called, in 1815. Some of the days fell on Thursday, and some did not. New York has had a thanksgiving day since 1817 almost invariably called on Thursday, and the same is true of Virginia since 1855, and in eight other southern states since 1858. President Lincoln issued proclamations recommending days of special thanksgiving for victories in 1862, '63, and '64, and since that time the president has issued such a proclamation annually, which has been supplemented by the governors of many of the states. It is now the rule to call them on the last Thursday of November."

An independent republican exchange, thus speaks of the pretended love of the republican party of Ohio for the Union soldiers. It is not only applicable to the republicans of Ohio, but shows the hypocrisy of the bloody shirt republicans everywhere. It says:

A gallant Union soldier,
A brave and patriotic man,
An honest politician, and
An enemy of corruption,
Has been crushed,
Wiped out,
Sat-upon,
Squelched,
Annihilated,
Obliterated,
By the republican party of the state of Ohio.
Thus do we see,
In the year of our Lord 1879,
That Union soldiers,
Those who fought,
And bled,
And died,
For their country
Are no longer respected by the party of Abraham Lincoln.
Thus we see
That treason
With its ten hundred thousand poisoned fangs
Is stinging
The men who stood by the flag
And fought for it,
From the commencement of the bloody rebellion
Until the close,
The brave, the gallant Gen. Ewing
Has been shelved
By the party which professes love and devotion
For the Union soldier.

The republicans are endeavoring to get up a grand reception for Grant at Indianapolis, on the 20th of November, in order to help along with the Grant "boom" for a third term. The Sentinel of that city is not inclined to help along with the partisan affair, for the following reasons: "It is well-known that republican conspirators want Grant for president, that they may riot again in fraud and corruption, though quite willing, for the purpose of helping on his boom, to assume that the democratic party is even now plotting for the overthrow of the government, and that, therefore, the country needs a great soldier in the office of president to circumvent the treasonable schemes which republican conspirators allege the democratic party is now concocting and perfecting. Is it supposable that, under such circumstances, democrats should take special interest in helping to magnify Grant's third term boom? If General Grant is out of politics; if he is the great and good man his friends claim, if he has had honors enough thrust upon him, and if his fame, which has circled around the world, satisfies his ambition—if he regards his fellow-citizens of all parties his friends, worthy of his distinguished regard, let him say so. Let the Grant presidential boom die out. Let it be known that he will not again be a candidate, though the republican party offer him the bauble a thousand times. If he will do this, all men will be pleased to pay their respects. At any rate, democrats are not to be intimidated or buldozed into taking a prominent part in helping on Grant's third term boom."

October settlement of Township and School trustees, for the year 1879, showing receipts, disbursements and balance on hand.

	ROAD FUND.	TOWN'P. FUND.	SP. SCHL. FUND.	TUITION. FUND.	DOG FUND.	TOTAL.
BUTLER TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	571 16	368 93	3898 34	1288 62	63 95	5891 00
Disbursements..........	257 51	320 25	2780 34	813 00	63 58	4234 68
Balance on hand........	13 65	48 68	1118 00	475 62	37	1656 32
JACKSON TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	389 35	421 38	1215 40	2420 20	185 38	4631 74
Disbursements..........	123 68	302 85	959 39	1544 00	122 75	3052 67
Balance on hand........	265 67	118 53	256 01	876 23	62 63	1579 07
CONCORD TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	411 73	500 00	1583 80	2619 98	165 77	5281 37
Disbursements..........	259 95	149 45	1248 36	1857 33	72 50	3587 59
Balance on hand........	151 78	350 64	335 44	762 65	93 27	1693 78
NEWVILLE TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	134 65	300 38	1418 48	1329 44	59 63	3242 58
Disbursements..........	134 65	221 50	975 86	859 00		2191 01
Balance on hand........		78 88	442 62	470 44	59 63	1051 57
STAFFORD TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	106 54	300 96	675 46	992 68	47 88	2123 53
Disbursements..........	42 39	143 28	670 71	620 00	47 88	1524 26
Balance on hand........	64 15	157 68	4 75	372 68		599 26
WILMINGTON TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	557 81	1050 79	1872 89	3255 74	144 61	6901 84
Disbursements..........	405 08	335 70	1642 32	1977 50	27 25	4387 82
Balance on hand........	172 73	715 09	230 57	1278 24	117 36	2514 02
UNION TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	605 20	1260 90	1040 11	3540 16	232 56	6679 02
Disbursements..........	453 20	242 80	786 47	1710 00	232 56	3425 12
Balance on hand........	152 00	1018 10	253 64	1830 16		3253 90
RICHLAND TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	122 78	675 36	1516 47	2664 86	146 37	5125 84
Disbursements..........	120 71	226 50	1505 91	1712 70	96 37	3662 19
Balance on hand........	2 07	448 86	10 56	952 16	50 00	1463 65
FAIRFIELD TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	141 12	474 12	1652 14	3165 62	118 41	5551 41
Disbursements..........	118 02	390 45	609 33	1933 85	74 24	3125 89
Balance on hand........	23 10	83 67	1042 81	1231 47	44 17	2425 52
SMITHFIELD TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	98 17	390 22	1071 74	3101 46	91 65	4753 24
Disbursements..........	97 90	390 22	921 96	2067 76	17 61	3495 45
Balance on hand........	27		149 78	1033 70	74 04	1257 79
FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	101 84	531 58	1919 23	1844 79	168 39	4565 83
Disbursements..........	87 81	289 34	384 40	1547 80	21 00	2329 85
Balance on hand........	14 03	242 24	1534 83	297 49	147 39	2235 98
TROY TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	8 19	170 26	812 76	1055 33	127 43	2173 97
Disbursements..........	7 03	53 07	617 80	620 00	63 07	1360 97
Balance on hand........	1 16	117 19	194 96	435 33	64 36	813 00
KEYSER TOWNSHIP.
Receipts..................	216 04	634 30	1147 63	1948 42	148 97	4095 36
Disbursements..........	216 04	391 82	994 49	910 77	142 50	3655 62
Balance on hand........		242 48	153 14	1037 65	6 47	1439 74
AUBURN.
Receipts..................			772 83	3287 36		4060 19
Disbursements..........			746 93	2222 87		2969 80
Balance on hand........			25 90	1064 49		1090 39
WATERLOO.
Receipts..................			1698 64	3389 03		5087 67
Disbursements..........			1084 32	2777 53		3861 85
Balance on hand........			614 32	611 50		1225 82
BUTLER.
Receipts..................			1881 08	1068 21		2949 29
Disbursements..........			1252 98	1068 21		2321 19
Balance on hand........			628 10			628 10
GARRETT.
Receipts..................			778 25	1700 30		2478 55
Disbursements..........			686 24	1403 50		2089 74
Balance on hand........			92 01	296 80		388 81

$50,000! $50,000!
$50,000
WORTH OF CLOTHING!
Which was manufactured for southern trade, is now offered at
Sixty Cents on the Dollar.
We bought these goods of a large New York house, which manufactures for, and depends principally on southern trade. Owing to the fever raging so furiously south, they could neither sell nor ship their goods, and were obliged, therefore, to dispose of their entire stock to northern dealers at a big sacrifice.
We took advantage of this rare chance by buying only for cash, and therefore are enabled to sell these entire new goods at 65 cents on the dollar.
SAVE MONEY BY FAVORING US WITH A CALL.
SAM, PETE & MAX, Managers
Star Clothing House, FORT WAYNE, IND.

ROOT & COMPANY
We beg leave to announce that we have now in stock the most elegant line of
FALL DRESS GOODS!
That we have ever before displayed. Our Novelties are new in design and colorings and are simply exquisite. Some of the new effects this season are more beautiful than any that have been before produced. Besides an unusually fine variety of
COLORED SILKS,
In all the desirable shades, we have a line of elegant
Colored Brocades,
Plain Black Silks, in all the best known foreign and domestic brands. In this line we have several special bargains, among which will be found heavy Gros Grain Silk. Eighteen inches wide, 75c; Nineteen inches wide, 90c; Twenty inches wide, $1.00. Most excellent goods for the money. We make a specialty of all kinds of
TRIMMINGS,
consisting in part of all the fashionable shades of plain, stripe and fancy Velvets, Black and Colored Silks and Satins, Pekin Satin Stripes and Satin Moire Stripes, etc. We have some new, elegant and tasteful goods in this line not to be found elsewhere. Our stock of Black and Colored FRINGES,
will be found unusually large and exceedingly elegant
Button, Button, who's got the Button?
is no longer an open question. Everyone knows that Root & Company have always got the particular button that anyone may want, especially if it be rare and elegant. Our assortment is really almost without limit. New Garments in Black and Colors in all the fashionable shapes.
Root & Co., Calhoun Street,
FORT WAYNE, IND

Another Car-Load
OF PARLOR AND COOKING
STOVES
Received at the Hardware Store of
KIBLINGER & CO.
They were purchased before the advance, and will be sold at
Old Prices!
30 per cent. less than the advance now.
W. H. KIBLINGER & COMP'Y.,
North of court house, 1st door west of McQuiston & Ralston's double store,
AUBURN, - - IND.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—Mortgages,
—Warrantee Deeds,
—Quit Claim Deeds,
—Guardian's Receipts, (bound),
—Administrator's Receipts (bound),
—For sale in large or small quantities at the Courier office. tf.

—Mr. Ed. Eldridge is afflicted with erysipelas.

—The boss hats and caps at McQuiston & Ralston's.

—Hallow-een to-morrow night. Boys, get in your work.

—Gents underwear from 40c. suits up, at McQuiston & Ralston's.

—Mr. Garmier has removed his harness shop back to Albion.

—We notice Dr. J. J. Littlefield, of Jackson, Mich., in town.

—To Trade.—A good milch cow for a horse. See Hank Little.

—The brick work on Dr. Allen's new residence is about completed.

—A literary society was organized at the school house last evening.

—A "home-made" individual sojourned in the "cooler" Tuesday night.

—Mrs. G. W. Stahl, who has been ill for some time, is gaining slowly.

—Mr. Thos. Cool's meat market is now in running order. Give him a call.

—The best assortment of dress goods in the city at McQuiston & Ralston's.

—Cashmeres from 15c. to 75c. per yard at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42 3

—Don't buy your ladies' cloaks till you have seen McQuiston & Ralston's.

—To-day Mr. Edward Kelham enters upon his duties as county commissioner.

—Mrs. W. E. Rush spent several days last week at Pleasant Lake with her son.

—Miss Willie Widney returned last week from an extensive visit to the east.

—Miss Alice McKay made a brief visit to Fort Wayne the latter part of last week.

—The Neoteric Club will open their dances for the season two weeks from to-night.

—Mr. Daniel Lintz and Mr. Jonathan Rummel, will please accept our thanks for favors.

—Mr. Berry is now busily engaged in supplying our citizens with coal for winter use.

—Those of our boys who attended the dance at Garrett last week, report a good time.

—Read the advertisement of Messrs. Sprott & Wood, real estate, insurance and loan agents.

—Bro. Baxter, of the Press, called at the Courier office and had a social chat on Monday last.

—The ladies of the Presbyterian church will decide to-night concerning a thanksgiving dinner.

—"Carry the news to Mary!" Health and happiness are found in every box of Seller's liver pills.

—Children and ladies' underwear, children, misses and ladies' hosiery at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3t.

—If any of our subscribers desire to furnish us wood, we want it now. The wood must be solid and dry.

—"Dr. Lindsey's Blood Searcher," by purifying the system, softens the skin and beautifies the complexion.

—Sheriff Leas has secured a mate for his fine black mare, and now drives the gayest road team in the county.

—Every body says McQuiston & Ralston have the largest stock of goods ever brought to Auburn. Call and see them. 42 3t.

—A number from this place will attend the opening dance of the Winifred Club, at Waterloo, next Wednesday evening.

—The Presbyterian choir did well last Sabbath evening. The voluntary was a good selection, and was well rendered.

—T. C. Ford, our popular livery man, has moved into the property lately occupied by Mr. I. W. Martin, on east Seventh street.

—We have tried a sack of flour manufactured by Mr. Grosh, out of new wheat raised by Mr. Peter Shaffer, and find it excellent.

—A full line of ladies', misses and children's all wool hose, cheaper than can be found in north-eastern Indiana, at I. W. Martin's.

—Billy Shaffer visited Waterloo recently with the intention of "tapping a Till," which, we are informed, took him till one o'clock.

—The educational article on the first page was written by Superintendent MacIntosh. Our failure to credit properly was an oversight.

—Prepare for cold weather. Cotton flannels 16 yards for $1.00, also a large assortment of all wool flannels at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3.

—Heavy silk fringes, silk velvets velveteens, corduroy, trimmings, silks, and a large assortment of embroideries at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3t.

—Every man and woman in Auburn should attend the lectures of Prof. Clark on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings of next week

—Use Card's fever and ague cure and liver invigorator. For sale by F. E. Davenport and Casebeer & Matheny. 34-3m.

—Clyde Moore, who is attending the far-famed normal school at Valparaiso, will probably adorn the boulevards of his native village to-morrow.

—Mr. L. M. Montgomery, who has had charge of the elevator at Churubusco for some time, removed his family to that flourishing town this week.

—Rev. H. Johnson, of the Presbyterian church, has returned from Valparaiso, where he was in attendance upon the synod held at that point.

—James Anderson will shoe your horses for $2.50 per span, and do a first class job. All kind of repairing done on short notice and at low prices. 44-4t.

—Messrs. Sheffer and Rush are unable to supply the demand for goods in their line. Their harnesses give good satisfaction and every person wants them.

—Mr. Jas. E. McDonald, son of Col. I. B. McDonald, of Columbia City, will take Miss Laura Brand to be his lawful and wedded wife, on the 6th of November.

—The M. E. social will be entertained at the residence of Mrs. W. Rush, on Wednesday afternoon and evening Supper from five to six. All are invited. Mrs. J. Anderson, Sec'y.

—We can not itemize all our stock; look through before you buy your dry-goods, notions, clothing, carpets, groceries, dishes, etc., at McQuiston & Ralston's. 42-3t.

—Rev. N. Crary, of Hicksville, Ohio, will preach in the M. E. church on next Saturday evening, and on Sabbath at 2 o'clock p. m. A general invitation is extended.

—All in want of one of the old reliable Singer sewing machines, will do well to call at I. W. Martin's store and see what cash purchases will do over agents' prices.

—Mr. Thos. Newby, an important witness on the part of the state in the Hazzard case, was in town yesterday. Mr. Newby was at one time cashier of the First National bank.

—You can find as fine a line of goods at I. W. Martin's store, as this county demands, and as cheap as the cheapest, and we shall try to please all that may favor us with their calls.

—Messrs. T. C. Mays, N. Ensley, R. H. Weamer, J. L. Davis and Theo. Reed, constitute a committee to make all necessary arrangements for Prof. Clark's series of lectures.

—The old friends and former customers of Tom Cool, will find it to their advantage to give him a call when they want nice fresh meat. Shop on Main street, near the Central House.

—The Sentinel, at Fort Wayne, is having a big tussle with Columbia street, and so far as we are capable of judging—not having heard Columbia street's wail—the Sentinel is on top.

—The teachers' institute will be held at Garrett, this fall, commencing Nov. 10th. The citizens of that place will no doubt provide every accommodation for the teachers and visitors in attendance.

—The ladies' social of the Presbyterian church will organize for the winter by the election of officers this evening. The election will take place immediately after prayer meeting, at the church.

—Wednesday of last week Miss Sadie Hollister started for Huntington, West Virginia, where she will visit relatives for six weeks or two months. Her absence is felt by friends and "the loved ones at home."

—Rev. Johnson will occupy the pulpit at the Presbyterian church every Sabbath morning and evening for the next four weeks. He will preach at Waterloo every Sabbath afternoon during the same time.

—J. H. Copper, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, father of our efficient and very-much-married agent at the Jackson depot, has been amongst us for a week past, buying apples for shipment east. He goes home this week.

—The attorneys for John Clare, the party sentenced to the penitentiary for seven years, as reported in last week's Courier, came into court yesterday and made a motion for a new trial on the grounds of insanity.

—Green apples, carefully picked for winter use, find a ready sale in Auburn. Mr. H. H Stamets will pay the highest market price for one hundred car loads. He wants 1000 bushels of Phoenix apples to fill a special order.

—H. H. Stamets is buying live poultry of all kinds, for which he is paying the highest prices the market affords Call and see him, at the Odd Fellows building, before you sell your chickens, turkeys, geese and ducks.

—The suit for $10,000, damages, brought by Dr. J. B. Casebeer against Tom. C. Mays as former editor of the Courier, for defamation of character, was dismissed in the circuit court last Saturday, by agreement of parties, at plaintiff's cost. As a matter of course, Tom is happy. And so is the doctor.

—An article in another column headed "Pause, Ponder and Peruse" will be found interesting reading matter to those who want a new sewing machine, or those who want an agency. For further particulars read the advertisement of the "Family" sewing machine company, in another column.

—A brigade of Garrett hunters threw their skirmish line across Jackson confederacy, the other day, and gobbled up several wild turkeys loafing around the barn-yard of our friend Ferguson. A dollar apiece is not a bad price for a half-grown bird of this kind these flush times.

—Unclaimed letters in the Auburn postoffice Oct. 27, 1879.

Miss Eda Baker, Miss Nettie Cummins, Charles Folk, C. Houtman, Chas. L. Morgan, Henry Reinoehl, Alice Simmons, Michael Tresch.

Jos. Rainier, P. M.

—The enterprising hardware man, W. H. Kiblinger, has recently purchased the desirable lot on the corner of Main and Seventh streets, next to Sherm Hollister's restaurant, where he will next spring erect a substantial building to be occupied by his large and increasing hardware stock.

—The frequent publication in our exchanges of the advice to "drink whisky only in the months that have 'r' in their names" has caused reflection; and the result is, we think about twelve tenths of the fellows would spell this month Oktober. Then, too, there's Knowvember to fall back on. Knext.

—Sheffer & Rush turn out first-class light and heavy harness, and are unable to supply the demand for their work. They keep in stock a full assortment of lap-robes, blankets, whips, collars and horse furnishing goods of every description, and make the prices to suit the times.

—Skating on the creek yesterday was simply grand, the ice being about two feet thick and smooth as polished ivory. (Persons of ordinary intelligence will at once surmise that this is a lie, and we can't blame them; but our time is limited and items are scarce, and—we couldn't help it.)

—We have been asked to notify the teachers of DeKalb county that a special train will be run over the B. & O. railroad, from Auburn Junction to Garrett, during the week in which the institute is to be held at the latter place; and it will make connections with all trains reaching the junction during the day.

—Prof. John W. Clark, has been secured by a number of our citizens, to deliver a course of three lectures, commencing Nov. 6th. "Analysis of a landscape," is the subject for the first evening; "The constructive and destructive forces of nature," the second evening, and "Condensed sunbeams" the last evening. At M. E. church. Admission, 50 cents for the three lectures, 25 cents single lecture. Tickets for sale at Willis' book store.

—We regret to learn that Prof. Lane and family are about to remove to Peru. We fear it will be some time before Auburn is again favored with an instructor of as much ability as Mr. Lane, and parents who desire their children to have a musical education should have induced him to remain among us. The Courier commends the professor and his estimable lady to the citizens of Peru.

—On last Thursday Mr. John Wendouske and Miss Lida Schoudel were married at the Catholic church, by Father Young. After the ceremony, the newly married couple, in company with numerous friends, started for the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Michael Schoudel. When about one and a half miles from town, on the Spencerville road, some of the party concluded to indulge in a little sport in the way of a horse-race, which resulted in a smashed buggy and slight injuries to Mrs. Frank Wendouske and Mr. M. Schoudel, neither being seriously hurt. No damage done to the refreshments.

—The following allowances were made to the trustees of the several townships, for services, for the year ending Oct. 21st, 1879.

Butler	township	$157 00
Jackson	"	158 50
Concord	"	124 00
Newville	"	158 50
Stafford	"	54 75
Wilmington	"	126 00
Union	"	152 00
Richland	"	126 00
Fairfield	"	127 50
Smithfield	"	127 00
Franklin	"	98 50
Troy	"	170 00
Keyser	"	88 00

Newville Items.

—The railroad fever has somewhat abated.

—One of our republicans won fifty cents on the Ohio election.

—Mr. Oliver Filley left on last Saturday night for Michigan.

—Packing apples, and corn husking appears to be the principal business at present.

—We understand that the Rev. O. Q. Oviatt is to teach the upper department of the Newville school, and Alvin Beggs the lower department, —The Sunday school superintendent over the river did like the Israelites did when they left the land of Egypt, borrowed all that he could of his neighbors and left on Saturday night, not however across the Red sea, but for Michigan.

—Doctor Lawrence says that the thing that gets up the Newville items for the Auburn Republican lied when he said that the doctor slept under the bridge the night after the Ohio election; that was only a creature of the imagination that he conjured up in his brain; he only fancied he saw the doctor as he was on his way home with the chickens that were taken from the doctor's coop, as he lost some on that evening. The doctor says he would sooner sleep a month under the bridge, than to sleep in the republican party one night; he thinks he would be minus a shirt in the morning for they would no doubt follow the example of their illustrious leaders, Grant's Cabinet and Sherman's bank thieves, and steal him blind.

Alpha.

Political Fire-Brands.

The leaders of the republican party are busily engaged in sowing the seed of turbulence and discord, intended to disturb the peace and quiet of the country, of which the following are fair samples.

Chairman Hooton, of the Pennsylvania republican state committee, touched off the following fireworks in his recent address to the faithful:

"Remember this—any man who, on the night when the whole north was shouting over the surrender of Lee, had predicted that in fourteen years the democratic party would be in the majority in the United States senate and House of representatives, and that this democratic majority in each house would be composed of two rebel officers to one northern democrat; that the rebel General second in command under Lee at Appomattox would be a Senator from Georgia; that the Postmaster General and the Vice-President of the southern confederacy would be in the house, with more than a hundred rebel veterans, making laws to govern and to punish their conquerors—the man then making such a prediction would have been believed on the road to a madhouse, and yet what would have been considered insane ravings in 1865 is disgraceful history in 1879. With this fact in remembrance, who will dare to mark a limit to southern arrogance and democratic cringing?"

Bowman, a republican member of congress from Massachusetts, recently made a speech in Boston, in which he said:

"The people of the north were more stalwart than the republican members of congress and their leaders, and would hail the day when the great Captain shall lead them again to victory—by peace, let us hope, by war, if necessary."

He referred to "Captain" Grant.

St. Joe.

—W. Leighty is on a visit to Pennsylvania.

—John Engle and daughter are visiting friends in Ohio.

—By some means a rail fell on the leg of Thos. Warner, a section hand, and injured one of his walking sticks.

—Jerry Ulm has moved on the farm lately purchased by Geo. Houk. Gus. Hull will occupy the building vacated by Jerry.

—It is rumored that St. Joe will shortly lose one of its citizens. Whither they go we know not. Who weepeth in sack cloth and ashes.

—Two of the boys of Spencerville, Mark and Becks, have engaged in a new enterprise, that of buying and selling or hiring all kinds of dogs. Only a few on hand at present, but they have made arrangements with foreign dealers whereby they will at all times have a good assortment.

—When Jack sells his hogs he likes to be around when the hogs are taken out of the pen. Business is business with Jack, and he likes to see men who buy his swine act like men, if not he will try what virtue there is in the English language spiced up with numerous adjectives.

—Rumor has it that one of Spencerville's widowers has concluded to again try the luxury of a wedded life. Who the lady is rumor saith not.

A. A. A.

Union Central Life Insurance Company of Cincinnati.

This is a strong and prosperous Ohio Institution, possessing assets of over $1,500,000.00. Its interest receipts exceed its death losses. Its ratio of expenses is very low for a company of its age, and its ratio of losses and expenses for a period of ten years is lower than any other strictly life company. Its regular policies provide for a definite surrender value in paid up insurance in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date, or, if the applicant desires it, the policy will provide that the same shall remain in full force, without surrender, for such a length of time that its full value will equal the premiums thereon, upon a plan somewhat similar to what is known as the Massachussetts Nonforfeiture Law. No restrictions on travel in temperate zones. The Life Rate Endowment and Annuity Bond, issued by the Union Central, in addition to the above named advantages, provides for the payment thereof in full at death, or at its maturity during the life of the assured; or, if he does not elect to draw the same in cash at its maturity other than by death, then in that case he can draw a stated sum annually during the remainder of his life, for a sure support in old age, or take a paid up policy. The Life Rate Endowment and Annuity bond of the Union Central is especially adapted to the use of the American people. Mr. Thos. H. Sprott, Auburn, Ind., is the representative of this Co.

Pause, Ponder and Peruse!

The invention of that Superior and Complete Sewing Machine (The Family Sewing Machine), marks one of the most important eras in the history of machinery, and when we consider its great usefulness and extremely low price ($25), it is very difficult to conceive of any invention for domestic use of more or even equal importance to families. It has great capacity for work; beautiful, smooth, and quiet movement, rapid execution, certainty and delightful ease of operation, that at once commends it above all others. The working parts are all steel, strong and durable, and will last a life time; the bobbins hold 100 yards of thread; the stitch is the firmest of all the stitches made, neat and regular, and can be regulated in a moment to sew stitches from an inch in length on coarse material down to the finest, so infinitesimal as to be hardly discernable with the naked eye, and with a rapidity rendering it impossible to count them as fast as made; it has more attachments than any other, and it does to perfection all kinds of heavy, coarse, plain, fine, or fancy needle-work with ease, and far less labor than required on other machines. It needs no commendation, the rapid sales, increasing demand and voluntary encomiums from the press, and the thousands of families who use them, amply testify to their undoubted worth as a standard and reliable house-hold necessity, extending its popularity each day. Machines sent anywhere to be examined before any money is paid. Agents wanted by the Company, Address them for information. Family Sewing Machine Co., 755 Broadway, New York. 43-1y.

The several cases of the state vs Hazzard came up for trial in the circuit court yesterday morning, before Judge Lowry. Hazzard appeared in his own behalf, and made a motion for a change of venue from the county, which motion will be heard next Saturday. Hazzard also made application for the appointment of an attorney to argue the motion for a change of venue, and the court after hearing evidence as to Hazzards inability to pay an attorney, appointed L. J. Blair to represent the defendant, at the expense of the county.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

The "Courier" Clubbing List.

For cash in advance, we will send the Courier and either of the following periodicals, to any subscriber in DeKalb county, for one year, at the price named below:

State Sentinel (weekly)	$2 60
Western Rural "	3.00
Scientific American (weekly)	4.15
Young Folks' Monthly	2.35
Demorest's Magazine, (with premium)	4.60
Demorest's Magazine, (without premium)	3.20

Sample copies of the above can be seen at this office.

The publishers of the publications named below, offer the balance of 1879 free to all who subscribe now.

Western Rural, Young Folks' Monthly.

SPROTT & WOOD

Real Estate Agents.

See list of farms and town property for Sale and Trade!

In next week's issue of this paper.

Do you want to

BORROW MONEY

At 8 per. cent interest on long time?

Do you want to buy or sell Real or Personal property?

If you do apply by letter or in person to

SPROTT & WOOD,
Auburn, Ind.

Notice.

No visitors will be admitted to the county poor asylum except on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. 44-4w.

Jonathan Rummel, Supt.

GET MARRIED!

There is a place in this State where wedding outfits for gentlemen,

CLOTHING

Furnishing Goods,

Hosiery, Hats, &c.

is a specialty. Parties contemplating

MatrimonY

will consult their interest if they wish

Stylish Garments

artistically constructed to visit this place. Besides we carry the largest, best made and finest trimmed stock of Men's Boys and Children's Clothing in the State. Be sure and find

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.

C. O. D.

one price, fine clothiers
Opposite North Door Court House.
FORT WAYNE, IND.

$66 A WEEK in your own town, and no capital risked. You can give the business a trial without expense. The best opportunity ever offered for those willing to work. You should try nothing else until you see for yourself what you can do at the business we offer. No room to explain here. You can devote all your time or only your spare time to the business, and make great pay for every hour that you work. Women make as much as men. Send for special private terms and particulars, which we mail free. $5 outfit free. Don't complain of hard times while you have such a chance. Address H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-1y.

"We Heard a Mighty Rumbling and Could'nt tell Where"

UNTIL WE HEARD OF

C. H. YESBERA

Coming to the front with the finest line of

Piece Goods and Suitings,

Gents' Furnishing Goods, Hats and Caps,

ever brought into DeKalb County. The acknowledged judgment of the proprietor renders it unnecessary to say that his stock has been selected with the greatest care and with a view to pleasing the tastes of his customers. Call and examine his goods and satisfy yourselves that is the cheapest, and that a suit furnished by him will outwear three ready made suits and cost but a trifle more; besides you are always sure to get a good fit.

Custom Made Work

His Hats and Caps and Gents' Furnishing Goods are the very latest out. Call and see them, in the third room north of the Postoffice.

41—tf AUBURN, INDIANA.

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

Wm. ELLERY.
1071075
WALTHAM, MASS.

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,
SPOONS,
FORKS and KNIVES.

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains, Ladies Gold Chains, Castors, Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions,
Violin Strings.

special attention given to repairing fine watches.

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at
JOE. ABRIGHT'S,
Second door north of Postoffice, Auburn, Indiana.

THE VOICE OF ROBERT BURNS.

What would ye that I bring to ye
From the fields of shining clover,
From the glinting of the angel bowers,
That arch your Sabbath over?

There's a message o' the summer air,
That's freighted with such blessing;
There are beings ever bright and fair
That bend to your caressing.

Above the earth and fu' of love,
Ah, such a power I bring ye,
A' of that rapturous sight to prove,
This is the song I sing ye.

Out of a sphere that's fair and bright,
Where firm, unbroken ever,
Immured in glory of delight
No more our hearts to sever,

The angels sing their songs of love—
The glad love of the spirit,
The crown that every soul above
In heaven shall inherit.

No more the song upon the earth
Of souls in wrath eternal;
No more the darkness and the dearth
Kindled by flames infernal.

I find a' souls are filled wi' love;
A' hearts must heaven inherit
If they but a' their kindness prove
In affection to man's spirit.

I find that every man below
Is every man's ane brither;
We gain the path to heavenly life
By helping ane anither.

I find a' thoughts are linked with one,
The Eternal Loving Spirit,
Even as the splendor of the sun
Must a' the rays inherit.

Oh, brother, sisters, in your home
Borne down with passing pleasure,
Receive the joys that are to come
In this delightful measure.

From Prince and King, from chain and thrall
The angel bands release,
That you may hear the Heavenly call,
That they may bring you peace.

Behold the voice of Heavenly Love,
Behold the angel throng;
Behold a' souls are linked above
By action, which is song!

And now, as o'er fair Scotia's hills
The purple dews are falling,
As down the many glinting rills
The air of night is calling,

So in your hearts and on your shore
Is the voice forever pressing,
Freedom to man forevermore,
From cares and pain distressing;

Freedom from fear, from death, from gloom,
From a' that old-time terror;
For souls have risen from the tomb
And banished old-time error.

Freedom from a' that dread and doubt,
That fear of gods supernal;
For lo! within, around, without,
We hear the voice eternal.

God is the chiming of a bell
That rings from out the heaven;
God is the voice that aye shall tell
Of souls unto Him given.

God is the light of every heart,
Whose fair and perfect essence
At last His glory shall impart
In His supremest presence.

THE YOUNG DESERTER.

BY WILLIAM COMSTOCK.

A great favorite in our frigate and particularly in the maintop, was young Paul Edwards—as he was registered on the purser's books; though there were hints now and then thrown out that his real name was Stanley, and that he was the scion of a noted English family. It was said that very early in life he had quarreled with his high-born relatives and left them. Since then he had pursued a roving life with little prospect of ever being other than "a poor nursling of the storm," wearing out his life on the rolling billows, and finally sinking into an obscure grave, unhonored and unknown.

At least Paul seemed to have no ambition to be anything more than an active and enterprising maintop-man, first on the yard in a storm and the last to leave the post of danger, whatever it might happen to be.

He was still quite young, not more than 19. Had he no mother—no sisters—no brother? Had he no yearning for the companions of his childhood?

If so, he never mentioned them. Other young seamen would sometimes speak of a kind sister, a brother or a sweetheart whom they had left behind them, but Paul Edwards was silent as the grave in relation to his antecedents and the people among whom his early years had been passed. One might have imagined that he was a child of the sea, one who had never been on shore at all; for he never made mention of the land or anything that grew upon it.

All his thoughts—all his conversation were of the sea.

This might have continued to be the case with Paul Edwards till old age blunted his faculties, and the wheel at the cistern could no longer turn round, if nature had not implanted in the two sexes a mutual regard. If feminine beauty had not an attraction which nothing else earthly can withstand.

We lay at Callao. The crew had liberty on shore. A part of them went at a time, spending forty-eight hours in Callao and Lima.

When the maintop-men took their turn on shore, Paul was of the number.

In the evening Paul and several others visited the theater in Lima and witnessed the performance of "Rolla"—a very different play from our "Pizarro; or, the Death of Rolla."

When, in the last scene, the High Priest of the Sun stabbed himself with an arrow, there was a general laugh among the audience, as the suicidal ecclesiastic had been from the first the persistent enemy of Cora.

But Paul could easily distinguish from this general merriment a slight cry as of terror or sympathy, and, mechanically turning his head to see from whom it proceeded, his eyes encountered the loveliest features that he had ever looked upon.

It was the countenance of a young Spanish beauty from which the momentary trouble was just passing away, like a thin cloud from the morning star; and, as if suddenly recollecting that what she had witnessed was only simulated suffering, her features were lit up by a smile. She would, probably, have said, if questioned on the subject, that she was laughing at her own folly.

Paul did not speculate on the subject. He had simply witnessed Spanish beauty in two phases—the sad and the mirthful. All this passed in a moment, and yet on the mind of the young topman it left an impression never to be eradicated.

The immediate result was that when, at the end of their forty-eight hours, the maintopmen returned to the ship, Paul was not among them. At first it was surmised that he had been robbed and murdered, as the officers averred, one and all, that he would never be a voluntary deserter.

But scarcely two weeks had passed when a tall Spaniard or Cholar came off to us in his canoe and obtained an interview with the Captain of the frigate.

"That man is after blood money," said Bill Regan, Captain of the maintop, after having watched the motions of the stranger a few moments.

Scarcely had the informer left when the boatswain's whistle rang through the ship, and the name of W—— S—— was loudly called.

W—— S—— made his appearance in the gangway, and the Captain conferred with him a long time.

As it was remembered that Paul Edwards was last seen in the company of this W—— S——, the crew inferred that the Cholar in his canoe had come on board to inform against Paul, and had mentioned the fact that W—— S—— knew where he was concealed.

Be that as it may, the master-at-arms and a boatswain's mate went on shore that very day, and returned in the evening with Paul in their company.

Every one sympathized with the captured youth; even the junior officers seemed to be sorry that he had not made his escape; but martial law knows no mercy, and young Edwards was immediately ironed and thrust into the brig—a place on the forecastle, between decks, where prisoners are kept and guarded by a marine.

It was soon known that Paul Edwards had obtained an introduction to the young Spanish beauty whom he saw at the theater, and that her charms had tempted him to desert. A shipmate of his, named W—— S——, had pointed out the place where Paul was concealed—though not before a native called Paola had come on board and given such information as led to the capture of the unfortunate lover. This Paola was the tall Spaniard of whom I have spoken, who came off in his canoe, and who Bill Regan suspected was "after blood money." He had given the information which led to Paul's capture, and had received his reward in Spanish dollars, and that was the "blood money" of which the Captain of the maintop had spoken.

Paul and several other offenders were soon tried by a court-martial, and Paul was sentenced to receive three dozen lashes with the cat-o'-nine-tails for desertion.

Paul received his punishment, and, although he never winced, it was evident that he would not soon forget those who had betrayed him.

Paola lived near the shore, in a mud-walled house, to which was attached a small garden. His mates of the maintop noticed that whenever Paul cast his eyes in that direction he slowly shook his head and gritted his teeth.

On the Fourth of July we fired a national salute; a French frigate in the harbor ran up the American flag, and also fired a salute in honor of our independence.

As soon as the smoke cleared away a commotion was observed on the shore; several persons were seen running inland from the beach; and the quartermaster, upon looking through his spy-glass, announced that Paola's house had been overthrown, or, as he expressed it, had been "knocked into the shape of a cocked hat."

The officer of the deck then took the spy-glass, and, after looking through it a moment, said that the people on shore were looking off at our frigate, and shaking their heads in a manner which denoted that a round shot from one of our guns had done the mischief.

"Third cutter away!" was the order given, and an officer went on shore to ascertain whatever he could in regard to the affair. He soon returned with the intelligence that a shot had struck the house of Paola, knocked away one corner of it, and smashed the dinner-pot which had happened, at that moment, to be boiling over a pan of charcoal.

But that was not the worst of it. The beautiful Spanish girl who had won the heart of Paul Edwards was coming toward the beach at the time, probably in the hope of seeing or hearing something of Paul; and the shot, after passing through Paola's house, struck her full in the breast and killed her outright. The people on shore could not decide whether the shot came from our frigate or from one of the Frenchman's guns, as both salutes were fired nearly together.

Some of our men were inclined to laugh when told that Paola's house had been knocked over by a round shot; but, when the additional information was given that the young Spanish lady had been killed, all eyes were turned gravely upon Paul, who seemed thunderstruck by this intelligence, and, turning very pale, was unable to utter a syllable.

"Curses sometimes come home to roost," said our First Lieutenant, fixing his keen glance upon the face of Paul.

That somebody had put a round shot into one of the guns, when the salute was fired, could not be doubted; and it was pretty evident that more than one of our officers suspected Paul Edwards, as Paola was the man who had informed against him and caused his arrest. Who else but Paul could have wished to injure Paola? But the death of the Spanish girl was a serious matter; and the quarter-gunners, therefore, underwent a rigid examination.

As for Paul, he was a changed man. All his liveliness forsook him; he ate very little, and seemed to be forever brooding over the untimely death of the fair Spanish girl.

But was that all? Had he not to endure the sad reflection that in revenging himself upon Paola he had murdered the girl he adored?

Great pains were taken to discover who put that shot into the gun; and it was suspected that one of the quarter-gunners was in possession of the secret; but, if so, he never revealed it. Suspicion none the less rested upon Paul, who became more and more gloomy and emaciated every day, and life seemed to be a burden to him.

Such was the state of affairs, when, one morning, the startling fact was announced that W—— S—— had been found murdered in his hammock.

As this was the man who had told where Paul was concealed at the time he had deserted, no one doubted that Paul was the murderer. The Captain of the frigate called Paul to the mainmast and began to question him.

"Have you any idea who stabbed S——?" commenced the Captain.

"Yes, sir," answered Paul, in a careless tone.

"Indeed! Whom do you suspect of this wicked deed?"

"I am the man," said Paul.

"You!" cried the Captain. "And what could have induced you to run your neck into a halter in this manner?"

"He caused the death of the girl I loved," answered Paul.

"What! S——!" demanded the astonished commander. "Do you mean to say that S—— put the round shot into the gun?"

"No, sir."

"How, then, could he be guilty, since it was that round shot which killed your Spanish girl?"

"S—— betrayed me, sir, and Paola was equally guilty. I put the shot into the gun to kill Paola, and that shot killed my girl. But for S—— it could not have happened, as Paola did not know where I was concealed; he only knew that S—— could tell, and S—— did tell."

"But don't you know that you have only made things worse for yourself by killing S——?"

"You mean that I shall be hanged, sir."

"You cannot escape the punishment of death," said the Captain, solemnly.

"And death is just what I want," returned Paul. "Life is no object to me, now that that girl is dead."

Paul was tried for the murder of W—— S——, and was of course condemned to die. It was necessary, however, that the sentence should be approved in Washington, and before we could hear from there it was generally believed that the unhappy youth would succumb to his grief. He survived, however, but he was wasted to a skeleton when the day of execution arrived.

As we could not put a man to death in the harbor of Callao, we were obliged to weigh anchor and put to sea, and, having saved Paul from the trouble of committing suicide by hanging him, we returned to our moorings in Callao harbor.

Macauley's Annihilator.

On last Monday morning as Mr. Macauley, the actor, was about to get on board the train, a queer-looking man stepped up to him and asked for a few minutes' conversation, which was pleasantly granted by Mr. Macauley, who has less airs about him with strangers than any actor in the profession.

"I'd like to see that annihilator that you have—that gun that shoves out like a telescope."

"Certainly, sir; I have it in my valise. It frequently comes handy when strangers fool with me."

The actor went into the train, followed by the stranger, and soon produced his "annihilator," which the other grasped eagerly and began to work, his eyes gleaming with delight.

"That's a daisy, by Jove it is! What's its range?"

"I never really knew how far it would shoot. It carries a pound of powder to a pint of shot, and the charge spreads out in all directions."

"I've got a little racket myself!" said the stranger, pulling out an immense six-shooter from behind. "That's the boy that was the terror of Pioche for years."

"Ah! Are you the celebrated Pat Holland, poet and fighter of Pioche?"

"I am pretty well recognized in the sage-brush country by that name. When I haul this machinery out it clears the streets quicker than a squad of New York police could do it. I'd like to buy that annihilator of yours, for a sort of companion piece, as it were, to mine—something to balance me on the other side."

"To tell you the truth, Mr. Holland," replied Macauley, laughing, "this affair of mine is only a sham. It doesn't shoot at all—just meant for the stage, you know."

"Holy Moses! You don't mean to say that you can't kill a man with it?"

"Exactly!"

"Good-by, sir! I've been goin' to see you night after night, supposin' this weapon was the real cheese, and I'm sold. I used to dream about it night after night, and now to find out it's a fraud. It's too terrible!"

Here Pat sat down on a car step and wept like a child.—Virginia City Chronicle.

The Man Who Hadn't a Cent.

Says the Lewiston Gazette: Capt. Broughton, of Portland, tells a story which we think too good to keep, which is as follows: Some time in 1864 there were a number of army officers stopping at a hotel in Washington—among them a Capt. Emerson. There was also a Capt. Jones, who was a first-rate fellow, a good officer, and very pompous. Emerson and Jones used to have a good deal of joking together at the table and elsewhere. One day at the dinner-table, when the dining-hall was well filled, Capt. Jones finished his dinner first, got up and walked almost to the dining-hall door, when Emerson spoke to him in a loud voice, and said: "Halloa, Captain, see here; I want to speak to you a minute." The Captain turned and walked back to the table and bent over him, when Emerson whispered, "I wanted to ask you how far you would have gone if I had not spoken to you." The Captain never changed a muscle, but straightened up and put his fingers into his vest pocket and said, in a voice loud enough for all to hear him: "Capt. Emerson, I don't know of a man in the world I had rather lend $5 to than you, but the fact is, I haven't a cent with me to-day," and he turned on his heel and walked away. Emerson was the color of a half a dozen rainbows, but he had to stand it. He never heard the last of it, and it cost him more than $10 to treat on it.

It is stated in the London Daily News that the 60,000 camels which perished in the late Afghan campaign will cost the British Government over £1,000,000.

SELECTED MISCELLANY.

The greatest friend of truth is time.—Butler.

More things are wrought by prayer than the world dreams of.—Tennyson.

Of all thieves fools are the worst; they rob you of time and temper.—Goethe.

Would you have men speak well of you? Then never speak well of yourself.

The abuse or misapplication of truth is as blameworthy as the invention of falsehood.

"Once," sighed Madame Bonaparte, "I had everything but money; now I have nothing else."

Obscurity and comfort are frequently friends, but popularity and trouble generally go together.

No man ever regretted that he was virtuous and honest in his youth and kept aloof from idle companions.

To be wise is to feel that all that is earthly is transient, and to experience misfortune is to become wise.

A man's virtues should be measured, not by his occasional exertions, but by the doings of his ordinary life.

There are many men whose tongues might govern multitudes if they could govern their tongues.—Prentice.

It is always safe to learn, even from our enemies; seldom safe to venture to instruct even our friends.—Colton.

A weak mind is like a microscope, which magnifies trifling things, but cannot receive great ones.—Chesterfield.

Truth is the most powerful thing in the world, since fiction can only please us by its resemblance to it.—Shaftesbury.

Our striving against nature is like holding a weathercock with one's hand; as soon as the force is taken off it veers again with the wind.

Benjamin West.

West was of Quaker lineage. Such was the rude condition of the arts in the neighborhood at that time that his first initiation into art was as simple as that of Giotto. At 9 years of age he drew hairs from a cat's tail, and made himself a brush. Colors he obtained by grinding charcoal and chalk, and crushing the red blood out from the blackberry. His mother's laundry furnished him with indigo, and the friendly Indians who came to his father's house gave him of the red and yellow earths with which they daubed their faces. With such rude materials the lad painted a child sleeping in its cradle, and in that first effort of precocious genius executed certain touches which he never surpassed, as he affirmed long after, when at the zenith of his remarkable career.

How, from such primitive efforts, the Quaker youth gradually worked into fame, went to Italy and acquired position there, and then settled in England, became the favored protege of the King for forty years, and the President of the National Academy of Great Britain—these are all matters of history, and, as West never forgot his love for his native land, entitle him to the respectful remembrance not only of artists, but of all his countrymen. American art has every reason, also, to cherish his memory with profound gratitude, for no painter ever conducted himself with greater kindness and generosity to the rising, struggling artists of his native land. No sooner did our early painters reach London than they resorted for aid or guidance to West, and found in him a friend who lent them his powerful influence without grudging, or allowed them to set up their easels in his studio, and gave them all the instruction in his power. Trumbull, Stuart, Dunlap, and many others, long after they had forgotten the natural foibles of West, had reason to remember how great had been the services he had rendered to the aspiring artists of his transatlantic home.

Benjamin West appears to have been born with great natural powers, which matured rapidly, and early ceased to develop in excellence proportioned to his extraordinary industry and fidelity to his art.

But, while a general evenness of quality rather than striking excellence in any particular works was the characteristic of the art of West, together with a certain brick-red tone in his colors, not always agreeable, yet a share of genius must be granted to the artist who painted "The Departure of Regulus," "Death on the Pale Horse," and "The Death of Wolfe." It unquestionably implied daring and consciousness of power to brave the opposition of contemporary opinion and abandon classic costume in historical compositions. In this innovation he won to his side the judgment of Sir Joshua Reynolds and effected a revolution in certain phases of art. Notwithstanding this, however, West was emphatically a man of his time, molded by it rather than forming it, and inclined to conventionalism; when he entered the arena, art was in a depressed condition both in Italy, where he studied, and in England. When Reynolds and Gainsborough gave a fresh impulse to art, West's genius had already matured, and was incapable of making further progress.—S. G. W. Benjamin, in Harper's Magazine.

Claims That She Was Cured by Prayer.

A very peculiar circumstance has occurred in the town of Monmouth. Mrs. Sanford Plummer, who has been an invalid for nearly three years, and confined to her bed a large portion of the time, the muscles of one of her legs being contracted so much that it had been impossible to straighten it for some time, was suddenly restored to health, and her leg became natural at a time when she was very low and had been pronounced long past cure by physicians. She had been through her sickness a constant reader of the Bible and a faithful Christian, and by prayer, it is claimed, and faith, has been restored to health. She related her experience at the Methodist Church, at Monmouth Center, Sunday morning, Sept. 28, occupying some forty-five minutes. The manner in which her cure was effected and the sudden transition are truly remarkable. The church was full, and the audience appeared greatly astonished at the miraculous work.—Portland (Me.) Press.

A Ravenous Eagle.

We are in receipt of a letter from O. Wieland, Esq., Auditor of Lake county, of which the following is the substance:

"Yesterday afternoon, while little August Burr, aged 7 years, was playing with his sisters—one 5 years old and the other 3 years and 6 months—near by his father's house, an enormous eagle pounced down upon them, throwing the two girls to the ground. It immediately attacked the younger one, grasping one of the child's arms with the claws of one foot, while the claws of the other foot were deeply imbedded in the child's face, and it attempted to carry the child off, but was prevented by its struggles. Little August, seeing that he could do nothing with his own hands to help his sister, ran quickly into the house, got the butcher-knife and came out and whacked away at the eagle's legs, cutting one of them severely near the foot, whereupon the savage bird let go of the little girl and attacked the boy, knocking him over, tearing his pants, and giving him some severe scratches. In the meantime the screams of the children brought out their mother, whereupon the eagle flew off to the barn, on which he sat and looked as though he would like to renew the contest should a favorable opportunity present itself; but he staid there a little too long for his own good, as Joe Betzler, a neighbor, was called, who took down his gun and shot this great 'emblem of American freedom,' and his eagleship, when killed, was found to measure seven feet from wing-tip to wing-tip!

"The little girl who had this remarkable encounter is very badly scratched but not seriously hurt."—Duluth (Minn.) Tribune.

Remains of a Mastodon Discovered in Missouri.

Additional particulars have been received here regarding the discovery of the remains of a mastodon at a point a little north of Sedalia, in this State. In cleaning out an old spring the workmen struck huge bones, and were obliged to close their labors.

Subsequently more careful exhumation disclosed a mastodon's bones in good condition. Of the portions already recovered, the tusks are a little over four feet long. They curve downward a little at the points, but in other particulars resemble the tusks of an elephant. The jaws, one of which only was brought in—the right one—are about five feet long, and will weigh something like seventy-five pounds. The nerve cavity on the jaw bone is three-quarters of an inch in diameter. The molars, of which there are two in the jaw-bones, are over six inches long and four wide. Appearances indicate that the monster lived at one time where it died. Something like a bushel of nuts and acorns were found in such a position that leads to but one conclusion—that they came from the paunch of the animal. Two sections of the vertebræ were also brought in, and are of huge proportions. Two gentlemen of Sedalia have secured the privilege of unearthing the rest of the remains, and are at work with a force of men. Some fifteen years ago one of the largest mastodons ever found in the United States was exhumed while cleaning out a spring in Benton county, a point not far distant from the present discovery.—St. Louis Republican.

Western Titles.

The traveler who journeys westward in our favored land should make up his mind to accept without demur such military or judicial rank and title as may be conferred upon him. He may be quite sure, too, that when his brevet has once been settled west of the Missouri by proper authority it will cling to him as long as he remains in that region.

"I don't half like," once remarked a Scotch fellow-traveler of the writer, to a friendly group at Denver, "the promotion backwar-r-d which I receive. East of Chicago I was Colonel; at Chicago I was Major; at Omaha a man called me Captain, and offered me dinner for 35 cents!"

One of the group, after a careful survey of the face and figure before him, the kindly yet keen expression, and the iron-gray whiskers, replied: "You ain't Colonel wuth a cent. I allow that you're Jedge!"

And "Jedge" he was from that time forth. Nobody called him anything else. Newly-made acquaintances, landlords, stage-drivers, conductors, all used this title, until his companions began to feel as if they had known him all his life in that capacity.—A. A. Hayes, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

A Cruel Hoax.

Last evening, just before sundown, says the Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle, a gentleman who was sitting by his window on North B street casually remarked:

"There goes the woman that George Brown's dead gone on."

"His wife, who was in a back room getting supper ready, dropped a plate on the floor, stumbled over the baby, and ran like a quarter-horse to the window with:

"Where? where? tell me quick!"

"The one with the long cloak—just at the corner."

Then the woman at the window said in tones of deep disgust:

"Why, that's Brown's wife."

"Yes, exactly," remarked the brutal husband, quietly.

Then the disappointed woman went back and got the supper ready, but her usually-sweet disposition was soured for the entire evening.

"There is something inexpressibly touching in the fallen leaves," sighs an esteemed author. There is, there is. It's when you slip on one of the articles of a wet morning, and touch the unsympathetic pavement with the end of yourself.

ONE IN A THOUSAND.

"She's one in a thousand,"
Said old Farmer Gray,
As he waded knee-deep
In the sweet-scented hay;
"You won't find her like, ma'am,
From here to the town—
That woman out there,
In the calico gown.

"If you could have seen her
That morning in May,
When I stopped at her father's
And took her away—
A likely young bride, ma'am,
So blooming and fair,
And 'clipper' as that little lamb
Frisking there!

"When first we were married,
And all for my sake"
(And here the old farmer Leaned hard on his rake),
"She gave up her music
And gave up her books—
No nonsense about her
You know by her looks!"

"And, if you should lose her?"
I ventured to say.
The old farmer sighed,
And looked down at his hay.
"'Twould nigh break my heart!"
He replied with a tear;
"As now help's uncommonly
High about here!"

PITH AND POINT.

What did billet doux?

A cavalry charge is sometimes only a slay-ride.

Strange, but they don't reap the ice harvest with icicles.

A boy who was spanked said the sensation was thrilling to an extreme.

"Give me a center berth," she remarked. He center to the ticket office.

The boy who stole for the first time afterward concluded to steal for himself.

Games of chance would not be so awful naughty if a man could win every time.

Talk about getting a living! Why, Adam barely existed in the Garden of Eden.

Garlic is said to be a sovereign remedy for gout. There is no remedy for garlic.

The joker who intimated that he had some "nuts to crack" must have meant jest-nuts.

Some men are noted for their innability, and yet they go right on keeping a hotel.

If we may accept literally the scriptural teaching, the fool of the present will be the fuel of the future.

One writes illegibly to hide his bad spelling, as one contents one's self with a half smile to conceal poor teeth.

"What's jography, Bill?" "It's a telling of forrin lands that we know nothin' about by 'cute chaps that never seen 'em."

A bachelor, upon reading that "two lovers will sit up all night with one chair in the room, said it could not be done unless one of them sat on the floor. Such ignorance is painful.

Female guest—"Don't you know any better than to walk into my room without rapping? You see I am all undressed!" Servant—"Oh! you needn't excuse yourself, mum; I don't mind."

Some crusty, rusty, fusty, musty, dusty, gusty curmudgeon of a man gave the following toast at a celebration: "Our fire-engines—may they be like our old maids—ever ready, but never wanted."

A person who had obtained a free railroad pass asked the ticket agent if "he could not embrace his wife." "Probably," the official answered, "but I prefer to see her before promising positively."

At a funeral service in Slawson, Ct., the minister, in his remarks, was dwelling upon the loss to the husband of the deceased, when that worthy spoke up: "Never mind me. Just throw your heft on the corpse."

Prof. Wilder says: "If you are choked, get down upon all fours and cough." Oh, yes, Prof. Wilder, that is well enough; but suppose you have just stolen a horse, and you are being choked by a party of Texan regulators?

A little boy, whose sisters stroll in the woods for the bright-hued leaves of autumn time, saw them coming home, the other day, with a red-whiskered gentleman, whom he greeted with the remark: "My, you got autumn-leave whiskers, ain't you?"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Z., the painter, is drunk from night until morning. He drinks everywhere and everything. "Poor boy," says the tender-hearted Monselet, "he was disappointed in love. It was a great blow to him, and he drinks to drown his grief." "It seems, then," says some one, "that his grief knows how to swim."

In a circus, at Paris, Ill., a suddenly-crazed young lady ran into the ring, embraced the clown, and declared that he must become her husband. The audience said that it was the first original joke that they had heard in a circus ring for more than twenty years.—Norristown Herald.

A certain old gentleman, very rich and still more stingy, is in the habit of wearing his clothes to the last thread. One of his friends, meeting him, exclaimed: "They told me that you had a new hat, and I'll be hanged if you haven't!" "Oh, yes," said the miser, looking as if he were a trifle ashamed of himself, "you see, my wife kept telling me that the old one was a good deal worn out. Well, yesterday was my wife's birthday, and I got myself a new hat for her birthday present."

American Inventive Genius.

An English paper gives credit to American genius for at least fifteen inventions and discoveries, which, it says, have been adopted all over the world. These triumphs of American genius are thus enumerated: First, the cotton-gin; second, planing machine; third, the grass mower and grain reaper; fourth, the rotary printing press; fifth, navigation by steam; sixth, hot-air or caloric engine; seventh, the sewing machine; eighth, india-rubber industry; ninth, the machine for manufacture of horse shoes; tenth, the sand blast for carving; eleventh, the gauge lathe; twelfth, the grain elevator; thirteenth, artificial ice manufacture on a large scale; fourteenth, the electro-magnet and its practical application; fifteenth the composing machine for printers.

RELIGIOUS.

David Swing on Religion vs. Science.

There is an abyss on either side of the human mind—the abyss of origin and that of destiny; and as science has failed to bridge the chasm between man and creation or chaos, so it is unable to bridge the gulf between man and immortality. It can only pass and repass between the two well-known boundaries. It can no more proclaim that there is not a future life than that there is no God. It has no machinery, or implements of art by which it can examine the world previous to life, or the things subsequent to life. No spiritual inference can follow from its premises. It must begin its studies with an insect and end them with a physical man. It must take all its steps between the coral rock where an insect sleeps and the grave of man. Outside of these borders it cannot pass. We are not only prisoners in body, but we are prisoners in mind. As our bodies cannot fly away from earth, so our minds cannot escape from this little cage; and hence pure science cannot formulate for us any kind of religion. It is a study of physical phenomena only, and as such has no sphere of action except in the circle in which man here moves. In battling with the mysteries of the spiritual, we must not expect materialism to aid us, nor must we permit it to injure us. It must not be expected to be a friend nor suffered to be an enemy. It is grand in its department, but it can no more suggest a theology for you and me than the theology can suggest a coal [illegible] the rings of Saturn.

We must turn from the positive process to the moral process. We claim a second life not because man has a mind, for we confess that the horse and the dog have minds, but claim it because man's mind is peculiar; it is wholly unlike the spiritual essence of a brute, however noble the brute. Man holds the past in his soul. His dead are held there. His memory goes back and back, omitting no lost child, or husband, or wife. All his sentiments are thus founded upon the word forever. He hopes to meet his loved ones. His hope, like his memory, reaches out and mocks at the confines of the present. And besides this peculiarity of man he has a moral nature, which perceives a universe of rewards and punishments, and this perception distinguishes between him and the noblest of the brute tribe. The religious, therefore, do not base their religion upon that kind of mental force which a Spencer or a Darwin may find issuing from the ooze on the bottom of a primitive sea, but upon the moral quality of that mental force seen in man. The fact of a resemblance between the mind of a man and the mind of a noble brute would not, even when scientifically considered, involve the conclusion that man is mortal, for, while nature is full of analogies, it is also full of variations. For example, the leaves of the pine tree do not fall in winter, there are beautiful evergreens, the mistletoe and the laurel, which smile at all our poetry about the autumn leaf. They seem greenest in the depths of winter. Thus all through nature exceptions come, and so far as science may know man's mind may be one whose rich foliage of memory and love never falls. He may be an evergreen in the waving forest of life.

Leaving the study of the relations of material science to immortality, assuming that it really sustains no relations to the idea, let us repair to the only field outside the Bible on which this battle of argument can be fought—the spiritual field. The greatest minds which deny or ignore a future life are busy teaching the world that this life is adequate in itself. No life for humanity, for its peace and progress, is end enough for existence—no motive such as heaven or hell is needed. This idea was set forth by the French many years ago, was taken up by some English minds, and has of late years been redressed and reinspired by Huxley, and Prof. Clifford, and by Edwards. All these able writers have affirmed that man must simply live a "noble life," "a pure life," a life for the "good of society." The most full and logical answer to all this idealism of the Atheist has been given the public in the recent work of Mallock, in his discussion of the question, "Whether life is worth living." He most clearly of all sums up the defects of such an appeal. But this book which comes near being of inestimable value to the religious world is virtually ruined by its last fifty pages. Aside from this final collapse of the logical faculty of Mr. Mallock, which seems to have been worn out in the first part of the volume that it might die in the closing pages, he well expresses the folly of relying upon the ideal of a "noble life," and a "high taste," and the "good of society," after you shall have taken from humanity its belief or surmise regarding a God, and a future of rewards and punishment. Divest the human mind and heart of its religious sentiments, and in a few generations there would be no love of a "noble life" remaining. Such sublime sentiments in the soul cannot subsist upon nothing. They must have food. What sentiments are now extant in the world of that quality have been nourished chiefly by the moral surroundings of man. His God, his accountability, his grave with its subsequent resurrection, his church with its impressive services, his books of religion with their literature, embracing the Zend Avesta, the legends of all the nations and tribes, and the Holy Scriptures of the Hebrews, and the Christians, his poetry and his sacred art have combined to create for man, the conception of a noble life, and of the supreme good of humanity. And even after society has for many thousands of years been toiling hard at these spiritual motives to make them impressive, man is still slow to reach after a "noble life," a "righteous career," and the "supreme good of humanity." If the food which religion has been spreading before the soul for countless centuries has been slow in growing holy men and women, what a highly-developed logic indeed it would require to enable us to see a grand human race rising up from the teachings that man came from the slime of the sea and is on his way back to that slime. We must exchange all our altars, and hymns, and prayers, all our hopes of an endless life in the City of God, for a system of chemistry, and after that exchange we shall love greatness. We must declare ourself the equal of the dog or the horse, and then it will be easy to feel our personal worth and the grandeur of society; far more easy than when we had the chants of religion for our inspiration and Christ for our guide. This materialistic logic comes to me and says, "You have hitherto believed in a God; you have been influenced by the forms of religion; you have looked up into the sky as though your dead child, or dead husband, or dead wife were still living in some sunbright, deathless world; you have shed tears of faith and joy over the thought of a final reunion; but you will never meet those absent ones; there is no God; you are mortal and will soon cease to exist; and now I command you to live a 'noble life,' and follow a 'righteous career!'" With such painful nonsense some skeptics are now filling the world, furnishing us a dignified effort on the part of exact reasoners to double the result by diminishing the cause—an effort to make society more noble by diminishing the motives of nobleness.

The real truth, no doubt, is that all those ideas which the atheists place before us—ideals either of the individual or of society—were wrought out in the old shops of religion, and, but for the religious sentiment and belief, would never have come to that beauty in which they were seen by August Comte, and Harriet Martineau, and Mill, and their companions. For mark the foundations whence Comte drew his elevated views and feelings. Did he extract his early bias and inspiration from the belief in atheism and oblivion? On the opposite he was a faithful child of the church all through his youth, and became colored with a religious romance, of which materialism knows nothing. His wife, of whom he was almost a worshiper, redoubled his sentimentality, and, with his heart colored by early religion and by a semi-religious domestic love, he wrought out a worship of humanity as being the great pursuit of earth. Could the philosophy of atheism have so colored his soul? To this memory add now the fact that Harriet Martineau was a devout student and commentator of the Comte philosophy, and was herself reared in religion, and was 80 years of age before she parted company with the doctrines of the New Testament, and you will perceive that her high views of man and of society did not issue from the associations of pure chemistry and evolution, and matter, but had the help of those thirty of life's early and best years which were richly painted with the colors of the sanctuary. Subsequent years may have taken away all hope of a second life, but they could not remove those estimates of human greatness which had taken root and blossom in the early years of girlhood and womanhood.

Pass to John Stuart Mill. He was at once a deep student of the same August Comte, and of Harriet Martineau. Like the gifted woman, he too must edit the works of the Frenchman, and simplify and condense their tenets. Not that he espoused them all or rejected them, but that he did not acquire his lofty style from atheism, but came down out of a crumbling temple of piety, when the last hymns of worship were still haunting his sad spirit. Thus these three—two high priests, and between them one high priestess of the service of humanity—found their estimates of life not in the doctrines of no God and of mortality; they found their mental and moral jewels not in the bottom of the crucible of Tyndall, but sparkling on the holy altars of the church.

It is perfectly evident therefore that all those terms such as a "noble life," and "high aims," and the "highest good of society," are the remainders in the world of atheism, of a world of faith and hope, which has just passed before it, leaving like a meteor a shining train behind. It may be that this life would furnish motive enough of a noble existence, could we all be reared amid the holy voices and helps of piety, until we had passed the middle boundary of our three-score years. After such a deep coloring of the soul we might be able to be virtuous and kind, and sad men and women, but I shall ever look upon the significant past and into the relation of effect to cause, and declare that a philosophy without a God and an immortality within it cannot people earth with good men and cannot lead society toward its highest good. All the mental and moral grandeur we behold upon earth have come up like the sunbeams streaming up from the invisible throne of the Almighty. Those gifted unbelievers, Mill, Martineau, Clifford and their followers, all crowned in the temple of learning, are mountain peaks tipped in the beams of a setting sun. They thought their sun had become extinguished, and that what light they saw was coming from a new azure, unveiled by new hands, but what twilight they beheld, and what saved them from a deep midnight, was nothing else than the old orb of religious and spiritual sentiment, in kindness declining to be extinguished, and busy sending up from below the horizon its diffused and sweetly-tinted radiance. What they think to be a morning of science is the evening tint of religion, still refracted and reflected in the heavens of the soul.

Perishing on the Plains.

The dangers incident to travel across the trackless alkali plains of the West, unless the traveler is familiar with the route and well prepared for a journey, are well understood, yet people are found who undertake the hazardous experiment, and many leave their bones to whiten on the sands of the desert as a consequence of their rashness. As Deo Malcolm, who arrived in town on Thursday from his home in Tulare county, was crossing the San Joaquin plains, he found a man lying in the sand nearly dead from thirst. He was unable to stand or articulate, his tongue protruding from his mouth several inches; his eyes were wild and glassy, and his mind wandering. Deo moistened the man's lips and poured water on his face, but failed to restore him to consciousness. He then placed him in his wagon, administering the water from time to time until he reached an alkali pool some eighteen miles distant. The water being unfit to drink, Deo took out his man and gave him a thorough soaking, which seemed to revive him a little. He then proceeded with him about eight miles to Shaw's, on the Panoche, where there is an abundance of fresh water. Here, after a time o careful nursing, the man recovered sufficiently to be able to talk and walk, though still very weak and debilitated. He informed Mr. Malcolm that he had spent a few days in Hollister and had started for White's Ferry to look for a job of sheep-shearing. He had a small canteen of water, which he consumed the first half day out, and up to the time when found had not tasted water for forty-eight hours. It was by the merest accident that the man was discovered, as Malcolm was traveling an almost unused track. The spot where he lay was not far from where the remains of poor old man Jost were found a few months ago—another victim of thirst and exposure.—Hollister (Cal.) Enterprise.

Hotel Experience in Russia.

A traveler in Russia thus describes a night in a Moscow hotel: "Cleanliness, which, in the long run, I have learned to prefer to godliness, is still rare in Russian hotels, even in St. Petersburg and Moscow, while the filth and discomfort of hotels in smaller towns are indescribable. We had fine rooms in the 'Slavianski,' so far as furniture is concerned, and, after a fatiguing day of sight-seeing, we commended ourselves to the care of the Iberian Madonna and lay down to rest. It was midnight, and a 'deep sleep had fallen upon the earth.'

"In appearance, the lodgers in the Slavonski Bazar were all peacefully sleeping. But what is this? There is a sound of hurrying feet, shrill exclamations of disgust and words which would benefit an argument on eternal punishment. The light of candles break upon the gloom, and lo! upon the snowy coverings of the beds, and on the walls and curtains, and the robes de nuit are seen a swarming host of ——, but no, I will not mention them. From such another sight may all the Russian hunters of that night be ever spared! In fact, the rooms were full of that peculiar kind of vermin, the end and aim of whose existence seems to be to dispute with man the possession of a comfortable bed.

"Next morning I conversed on the subject of candle-hunting with the proprietor, animated by that warmth of feeling naturally inspired by a night spent either in the chase or hanging over the back of a chair. From him I gained the following information: 'My dear sir,' said the proprietor, 'it is a sad fact that, in all Russian hotels, you will have abundant occupation in the art of self-defense. In winter it is worse than in summer. The Russians who come here—you see I am French—from the extreme East, South and North are not over cleanly. Many of them do not remove their clothes when they go to bed. Most of them play the part of pasture-grounds to many parasites, and thus the mattresses, the walls, the paper and the canopies become actually zoological hanging gardens."

A Sagacious Newfoundland Dog.

A gentleman put a marked shilling under a stone by the roadside, first showing it to his Newfoundland dog. The gentleman then, with his friend, rode for three miles; and then the dog received his signal from his master to return back for the shilling. The dog turned back; the gentlemen rode home; but, to their disappointment and surprise, the hitherto faithful messenger did not return during the day. It appeared he had gone to the spot where the shilling was deposited; but, the stone being too weighty for his strength to remove, he had stayed howling at the place till two horsemen, riding by, and attracted by his seeming distress, stopped to look at him, when one of them, alighting, removed the stone, and, seeing the shilling, put it into his pocket, not conceiving it to be the object of the dog's search. The dog followed their horses for twenty miles, remained undisturbed in the room where they supped, followed the chambermaid into the bed chamber, and secreted himself under one of the beds. The possessor of the shilling hung his trousers upon a nail by the bedside; but when both travelers were asleep the dog took them in his mouth, and, leaping out of the window, left open on account of the sultry heat, reached his master's home with his prize; when, from memoranda in the pocket, everything but the shilling was enabled to be returned to the owner, and the singular circumstance elucidated.

Singular Freak of Railway Cars.

Probably one of the most singular occurrences in railway history took place yesterday on the Piedmont Air Line. The freight train going east when near the ticket office in this city came in collision with a cow, which precipitated two of the coaches from the rails. These two coaches ran on the ties nearly 200 yards, and when near the mouth of the bridge remounted the rails and thus prevented a fearful wreck. We doubt if such another instance where the mere favor of circumstances seemed to partake of the nature of intelligence ever occurred on a railway before.—Danville (Va.) Post.

THE ex-Confederate Gen. Beauregard is now receiver of a large bank in New Orleans, and also holds a position in connection with the militia forces of that State which yields a small income. He was in St. Louis a few days ago, and a short talk about Jefferson Davis convinced a reporter that the relations between Gen. Beauregard and his old Commander-in-Chief, never fraternal, had not changed.

MADAME THIERS lives a very quie life in London.

FARM NOTES.

IN the United Kingdom the average acreage of holdings is fifty-six acres. Of the tenant farmers, 560,000 in number, 70 per cent. occupy farms under fifty acres each; 12 per cent. between fifty and 100 acres; 18 per cent. farms of more than 100 acres each.

IT is estimated that at least 80,000 tons of wheat will be shipped from Eastern Oregon and Washington Territory this year through Walla Walla alone. This estimate does not include a vast stretch of territory where farmers must seek another outlet. It is evident that Eastern Oregon and Washington Territory will, in the future, contribute largely to the grain exports of the Pacific coast.

INDUSTRY, enterprise and intelligent observation are what make the good farmer. Such a man uses every means in his power to keep his land fertile, by clean cultivation, rotation of crops, and the application of such manures as may be adapted to the special wants of the crop he cultivates. He does more; he reads the best journals he can buy, having reference to their practicality in agricultural art.

TO PREVENT borers injuring young apple trees, take equal parts of blue clay, green cow-manure and soft soap, and make a wash so as to be put on with a brush or old corn-broom. Make the ground dishing around the tree; then tie birch-bark or paper (such as carpenters use under clapboard); draw dirt around the bottom of the paper, and you need have no trouble so long as the paper lasts. If borers are already in, and you can't get them out, bore in with a small bit slanting near where the destroyer is, fill the hole with kerosene and plug it, and he will die pretty soon. This plan worked well with me and did not injure the trees.—Cor. New York Tribune.

RYE FOR MANURE.—Until the West has become more thickly populated than it is at present, and land consequently more valuable, there will be but little effort made toward manuring the soil as it is done in the Eastern States. In fact, our soil does not require constant stimulating, if given an occasional rest; but constant cropping does cause a decrease in the value of crops grown. We know of no way in which soil that has been over-cropped can be sooner or more cheaply recuperated than by giving it a crop of rye in the fall, and then plowing it under in the spring. In this way, if the spring should be unfavorable or any accident happen whereby the plans for plowing cannot be carried out, the rye will make a crop valuable in itself. This "rye-manuring" is becoming quite popular, and we believe it is a good thing to invest in. During an open winter it will afford a great deal of pasture, and thus return more than its cost, besides making a crop of grain, if desired.—Chicago Tribune.

COUGH IN A HORSE.—I have a horse that has had a very bad cough for several months. It is only occasionally that he coughs, but when he does it seems to be very straining. I do not think his condition is as good as it ought to be with the treatment I give him. His hair looks rough. It may be his lungs. He eats heartily, and I think he coughs more when he is eating than at any other time. W. E. B. E. [Your horse is troubled with a chronic cough, and, when such a cough occurs after eating, the seat of the disease is evidently in the substance of the lungs. The stomach, distended with food, presses up the diaphragm upon the lungs. In the violent effort to discharge their function, irritation is produced, and the act of coughing is the consequence. Give a table-spoonful of the following twice a day for three weeks: Barbadoes tar, 12 ounces; digitalis, 1 ounce; sal nitre, 2 ounces; tincture of belladonna, 4 drachms; mix. Stir slightly when using. Rub the throat once a day, unless it is pretty well blistered, with the following: Spirits of turpentine, 4 ounces; raw linseed oil, 3 ounces; aqua ammonia, 2 drachms; powdered cantharides, ¼ ounce. Mix.]—Country Gentleman.

HOW TO SAVE CLOVER SEED.—One of our best clover-seed savers is just at our elbow, and he says: "Tell them the second crop is for the seed, and is really fit for no other purpose, as it salivates the stock fed on it; that the best time to cut for seed is a very nice point to determine. It should be cut when a majority of the heads turn brown, and before any begin to shed off the little seed pods, each of which contains a seed. Cut the second crop of clover just as though it were for hay, rake it into windrows, and let it lie and take one or two showers; and put into very small cocks while damp, about one good pitchforkful in a place, and when it is dry put into stacks and cap with something that will turn water; or what is still better, if you have a shed or barn, put it there and let it remain until you get a huller to take it out for you. There are hullers enough now in the State to hull all the seed needed for home use, and the owners of the hullers are willing and anxious to go to any section where work can be had. Let our farmers save all the clover seed they can, and thus help to make thousands of dollars for the State, now sent out each year for clover seed to sow."—Rural Sun.

A Wife's Love That Stood the Test.

A very singular affair has just occurred in this city. A sewing-machine agent by the name of Pendleton thought he would test the affections of his wife. He accordingly went to an upper story of his residence and opened the window. He then tied a stout rope around his body under his arms, fastened the end to something in the room, and stepped out of the window. He then made a noise which attracted his wife's attention. She came and beheld the perilous predicament which he was in. She felt the need of doing something at once to save her husband. In her excitement she seized a knife and cut the rope. The result was that he was precipitated some twenty-five feet to the ground beneath. Strange as it may appear, he escaped serious injury but it will probably be some time before he attempts a similar exploit.—Bangor (Me.) Commercial.

The Sparrow War.

Once upon a time a certain King of Prussia found fault with the sparrow, long before it was brought over here and subjected to the prevailing storm of unfriendly criticism that is now beating upon its hardy head and energetic struggle for existence. This magnate aforesaid was fond of currants, big red Dutch currants, and a row of richly-laden bushes, which his gardener was cultivating in confident pride for the ultimate delectation of the royal palate, was the subject of more attention from his Majesty than the gorgeous flower parterres or the clumps of semi-tropical foliage, transplanted to please the eye, here and there throughout the princely gardens. When the berries were almost blushing in full crimson beauty of ripeness, his Royal Highness made the unpleasant discovery that multitudes of sparrows not only coveted the fruit as much as he, but that they had eaten them all before he could muster an alarm, mount guard, and pick the clusters for himself.

A quaint chronicler tells us, thereupon, that the wrath of his Highness was not confined to a single or repeated explosions of disgust on the garden-walks, but that an edict was published at once ordering the extermination of the Pyrgita domestica; and, so thoroughly did the vassals of the crown carry out this law, that the unhappy sparrows were literally eliminated from the Prussian realms. Then this old historian goes on to say that, to the great surprise of "his Majestie" the currant bushes were not permitted, after the expulsion of these birds, to render service after their kind, for a strange fly next year followed, and "did eate ye leaves" so extensively that the shrubs again failed in bearing; and so on, season after season, until the King, weary of seeing its ravages, revoked the decree of death to the sparrow, and actually paid out of the royal treasury some $800,000 in the form of rewards to his people for their zeal in bringing the exiled birds back.

Thus the sparrow, which we have brought over from the continent, is no stranger to persecution, and the success with which he fights for a living here augurs well for his future; but, like all people of pronounced character, he has decided phases of good commingled with much that is as decidedly evil; hence his friends and his foes have arisen, and the overburdened refrain of their angry disavowals and recriminations is spread out within the columns of the press wherever men can read in this country.—Prof. H. W. Elliott, in Harper's Magazine.

Albert Gallatin.

It is probably impossible to discover in the history of this country any statesman who has left behind him a reputation so poorly proportioned to his ability and influence as has Albert Gallatin. Not especially attractive in life, he remains singularly uninteresting since his death. A chapter in Mr. Adams' book concerning his youth fails to introduce him in an agreeable light. Enjoying every advantage which the best social position, an excellent education, and a family only too kind could give, he yet chose at an early age to run away. This venture, if not altogether without an object, was at least devoid of any sufficient cause or excuse. He was evidently soon ashamed of it; but, as is the freakish habit of poor human nature in such circumstances, he visited the punishment for his folly upon the relatives whom he had injured rather than upon himself, neglecting to send the simplest information concerning his fortunes to those who never ceased to manifest a solicitude as tender as it was undeserved concerning these matters. This coldness of nature never wore off throughout his long life. The only evidence of warmth of feeling which we ever find in him was shown toward his second wife, who seems to have made his home thoroughly happy and attractive. In this respect, as in so many others, he offers a striking contrast to Hamilton, with whom it is impossible not to compare him. Both landed as strangers upon our shores. In less than a year after he arrived in New York, Hamilton had made more and warmer friends then Gallatin ever secured throughout his life, long, useful and honorable as it was. And, as years went on, Hamilton constantly and largely increased the number of those who, apart from their political faith in him, dearly loved the man. Gallatin never had so much as the nucleus of a personal following. People met him as he met them, with much temperateness both in affection and in hatred. In an age of vituperation he seldom used those potent epithets of abuse for which his contemporaries must have ransacked the dictionaries and synonym books; in return he enjoyed an exceptional freedom from the more scurrilous personalities then in vogue.—Atlantic Monthly.

A Cherokee Outlaw's Death.

Barker, the Cherokee desperado, who was recently hunted down and killed near Muskogee, in the Indian Territory, stood at the head of the list of Western outlaws. He was of white skin, though his blood was tainted and he claimed Cherokee citizenship. He was six feet tall, straight as an arrow, and of stout frame. Twenty-eight years of crime (for his life was full of it from the cradle) had stamped fiercely upon his Indian features the marks of the dare-devil who expected to die with his boots on and with the whistle of bullets in his ear. His first crime was that of wholesale cattle-stealing. So imperfect are the laws in the Indian Territory that Barker and his men rode with free boots and boldly for many years. Triplet, a half-breed Cherokee; Scogden, the Mexican, and Mason, the Texan, were his Lieutenants. Men were waylaid, murdered and robbed by them time and again. It is said that every citizen of the Cherokee country carried a special bullet in his pocket for Barker. The culminating atrocity of the band came about on the morning of the 2d of August last, when they galloped into the village of Caseyville, Kan., and in broad daylight sacked the place, driving the residents, men, women and children, like a flock of sheep, out into the woods. Two men who resisted were shot through the heart. Last Thursday ten Cherokees and two white men caught the outlaws in ambuscade. Scogden and Mason escaped, the twelve rifles cracking for Barker's benefit. Baker fell and offered resistance with the only limb that was uninjured, the left leg. His right leg and both arms were broken and all three limbs were amputated shortly before his death. Triplet crawled off through a corn-field, but limped into the house of his mother at Vinita on the following day, laid down at her feet and died.

Terrible Punishment of a Wife-Beater.

Our town is intensely excited over the tarring of a man named Young, on Saturday night, for beating and otherwise cruelly treating his wife. Young is a blacksmith, and three years ago married the daughter of a respectable manufacturer of Canal Dover. For some time past, the neighbors say, he has been treating his wife in a most shameful manner. He was threatened, if he did not cease his cruelties to her, he would be punished.

On Friday last the father came here and took his daughter away from Young. On Saturday night last Young was decoyed into a retired street, and at a given signal the gas was turned out and a squad numbering about twenty-five men surrounded him. A cloth was quickly thrown over his head, and he was marched off. He was terribly frightened, and yelled murder. Not a word was spoken by his captors, but they all worked according to signs given by one of their number, who appeared to be the Captain.

The prisoner was taken to the gasworks, in obedience to the leader, and laid under the coal-tar pump. His shirt-collar was first unbuttoned and warm coal-tar run down his back, filling his shirt. Then his pantaloons were unbuttoned and they were filled. To finish the job, they stood the frightened wretch on his head and pumped the warm coal-tar in copious quantities down his pantaloon legs. By this time he was well coated with warm tar from head to foot, and severely pummeled in the bargain. The mysterious squad then quietly disbanded, and Young was allowed to go his way.

By the time he reached home the tar had cooled and solidified in his hair and all over his body, sealing his fine clothing fast to his skin. Physicians were sent for, help called in, and the whole night spent in the severe and painful task of relieving him. Turpentine and carbon oil were freely used the entire night, and from the effects of scraping and rubbing the poor fellow's body is frightfully swollen, the blood fairly bursting from the veins. It took three hours to remove his clothing. His father, it is said, offers a reward of $500 for the apprehension of the tar-painters. It was a terrible punishment, and it is surprising that Young still lives.—New Philadelphia (Ohio) Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Cutting Out" on a Colorado Cattle Ranch.

Only the first purpose of the "round up" has been observed when the cattle are collected. Next the cows and calves must be "cut out," and we saw the "cowboys" ride into the herd, single out the cow (with calf following), and with great skill extricate her from the throng. The young calves are, of course, not yet marked, but the presence of one with a cow makes it imperative to place the cow's mark on it. Strayed calves, on the other hand (called "Mauvrics" from an old Frenchman in Texas who is said to have added largely to his worldly store by a systematic abstraction of these waifs and strays), are sold for the benefit of the associated ranchmen. "First catch your calf," as Mrs. Glass would say. Perhaps you may think that this is an easy task, but you would find, if you tried it, that you were never more mistaken in your life, for the ease with which the rancheros accomplish it has only come with careful training and long practice. The little animal runs wonderfully fast, springs, turns and dodges almost like a flash; but the cowboy never takes his eyes off of him, and the trained horse, now well warmed up and entering fully into the spirit of the chase, responds to, almost seems to anticipate, every turn of his rider's left hand and wrist. Meanwhile the latter with his right arm is swinging his noosed rope, or lasso, and in another moment he has thrown it exactly over the calf's head. Instantly the horse plunges forward, giving "slack" to the rope, and allowing it to be wound around the horn of the saddle; then he moves on, dragging the calf after him, and the little creature is soon in the hands of the men with the branding-irons. These have been heated in a hot fire, and are quickly applied, and in a few minutes the calf, now indelibly designated as the property of his master, is again running about.—A. A. Hayes, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

A Hen Hatches Young Alligators.

There is no doubt that the newspapers tell of queer things, but then it must be remembered how many queer things happen. Here is a story told by the Abbeville (La.) Meridional: "A lady residing at Crow island, in this parish, wishing to 'set' a hen, went into the field adjoining her residence, where some of her chickens had been 'laying,' and produced some seventeen eggs and placed them under the hen. When in the course of 'human events' the chickens were hatched, lo! and behold, there came forth four small-sized alligators. It is supposed that alligators from an adjoining marsh had deposited their eggs in the field, and she not knowing the difference placed them under the hen. And what is more strange the young alligators follow the mother hen around the premises as happy as a Colorado beetle in a potato patch.

PROF. WISE'S first ascension was made in Philadelphia, May 2, 1835; his last at St. Louis, Sept. 28, 1879.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, OCT. 30, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

Some Tough Yarns About Dogs.

The following is the last new dog story, as told by a correspondent of the London Once A Week, who says, apropos of a long correspondence; "I have noticed no allusion has been made to the wonderful power dogs have of remembering and calculating time. This faculty is possessed in a remarkable degree by a mastiff attached to a school not many miles from London, whose inmates are roused every morning at six o'clock by Rollo tugging at a bell immediately when he hears the clock strike the hour. On Sundays he will not do this till an hour later. Another useful office this sagacious animal performs is taking twenty pairs of boots round to their proper rooms. Rollo is sometimes rather perplexed when he finds a pair of new boots to deliver, but in this case he first carries round all the others, and then conveys the remaining pair to the vacant door-mat."

A Sagacious Newfoundland Dog.

A gentleman put a marked shilling under a stone by the wayside, first showing it to his Newfoundland dog. The gentleman then, with his friend, rode forward three miles, and then the dog received his signal form his master to return back for the shilling. The dog turned back; the gentlemen rode home, but to their disappointment and surprise the hitherto faithful messenger did not return during the day. It appeared he had gone to the spot where the shilling had been deposited, but the stone being too weighty for his strength to remove, he had stayed howling at the place till two horsemen, riding up and attracted by his seeming distress, stopped to look at him, when one of them, alighting, removed the stone, and seeing the shilling but in into his pocket, not conceiving it to be the object of the dog's search. The dog followed their horses for twenty miles, remained undisturbed in the room where they supped, followed the chambermaid into the bedchamber, and secreted himself under one of the beds. The possessor of the shilling hung his trousers upon a nail by the bedside; but when both travelers were asleep the dog took them in his mouth, and leaping out of the window, left open on account of the sultry heat, reached his master's home with his prize; when, from memoranda in the pockets, every thing but the shilling was enabled to be returned to the owner, and the singular circumstances elucidated.—Nature.

Training Shepherd Dogs.

The following extract gives Mr. Darwin's description of the method of training shepherd dogs:

"When riding it is a common thing to meet a large flock of sheep guarded by one or two dogs, at the distance of some miles from any house or man. I often wondered how so firm a friendship had been established. The method of education consists in separating the puppy while very young from its mother, and in accustoming it to its future companions. A ewe is held three or four times a day for the little thing to suck, and a nest of wool is made for it in the sheep-pen. At no time is it allowed to associate with other dogs, or with the children of the family. From this education it has no wish to leave the flock, and just as another dog will defend its master, man, so will these dogs defend the sheep. It is amusing to observe, when approaching a flock, how the dog immediately advances barking, and the sheep all close in his rear, as if round the oldest ram. These dogs are also easily taught to bring home the flock at a certain hour in the evening. Their most troublesome fault when young is their desire to play with the sheep, for in their sport they sometimes gallop the poor things most unmercifully.

The shepherd dog comes to the house every day for some meat, and as soon as it is given him he skulks away, as if ashamed of himself. On these occasions the house-dogs are very tyrannical, and the least of them will attack and pursue the stranger. The minute, however, the latter has reached the flock, he turns round and begins to bark, and then all the house-dogs take quickly to their heels. In a similar manner, a whole pack of hungry wild dogs will scarcely ever venture to attack a flock guarded by even one of these faithful shepherds. In this case the shepherd dog seems to regard the sheep as its fellow brethren, and thus gains confidence; and the wild dogs, though knowing that the sheep are not dogs, but are good to eat, yet when seeing them in a flock with a shepherd dog at their head, partly consent to regard them as he does.

A Dog in His Own Defense.

[London Telegraph.]

Averse from being convicted for grave misdemeanor and suffering the penalty of the law, a dog, belonging to one Theodore Gorkon, of Shepherd's Bush, has played a sensible part. It had been taken before Mr. Paget on the serious accusation of biting a lad's pantaloons, and the evidence on the charge of ferocity was going hard against it when the creature entered the court. Immediately comprehending the situation, it jumped on the Magistrate's desk, and, in lieu of a speech for the defense, fondled the representative of offended justice; then the dog settled down quietly upon a chair, where its unimpeachable behavior during the remainder of the case so wrought in its favor that, in place of being dangerous, it was declared playful, and liberated without even the necessity of finding bail. It is evident that, like Artemus Ward's kangaroo, this Shepherd's Bush mastiff was extremely intelligent. Had it bitten the Magistrate or worried the usher, or even barked at spectators who thronged the Court, it might have met with the direst fate. But the dog knew that there was a time for all things, and that in Hammer-smith Court an affable engaging manner would be perferable. In reviewing the conduct of this thoughtful animal one is almost tempted to regret that it can not imbue some of the lords of creation with equal sagacity. If some of them only knew when to be quiet, a great step would be gained.

The Oneida Community.

The Oneida Community seems to be fulfilling its recent announcement of the abolition of the mixed marriage system, and its adoption of the monogamic relation. Eight wedding ceremonies have already been performed, and those who married previous to entering the community are again living exclusively together. About eighty couples are yet single, but of these a number are young, and are required by their parents to wait for greater maturity. Others may not marry at all. Girls are not married without the consent of their parents, nor were young women, under the old complex marriage system married without their sanction. The number of young persons of both sexes in the community who have not been married is much greater than is generally supposed. The tendency toward monogamic marriage has been growing in the community for years, and the late pressure by the Methodist clergy against complex marriages simply hastened, in the opinion of the members, what would ultimately have occurred.

The functionary who links the couples is an Episcopal minister who has for fifteen years been a member of the community. Every wedding is celebrated with a due allowance of grooms and bridesmaids and the congratulations of all the associates. Every couple has had the advantage of knowing each other thoroughly by long acquaintance.

Thinking members say that, as one innovation generally follows another, wages will probably soon be paid for labor, and opportunities will thus be afforded for saving money for purposes of travel. Under the communistic system this pleasure can be enjoyed only by a few who may be sent abroad to gain instruction to be used for the community's benefit. To the majority communism is a despotism.

No one fancies that the Oneida Community will soon be dissolved. The advantages of social enjoyment and freedom from pecuniary care are not to be forgotten. Neither would dissolution now be feasible. The entire property of the Community, with that of its branch in Wallingford, Conn., would, it is estimated, sell for at least half a million, and this, if divided among the 300 members, would give them only $1,666 apiece. Furthermore, the Community would be required to return, without interest, a large sum to those who invested money on entering. The Community owns no property beyond what is invested in its lands, stock, residences, mills, and other structures. The Oneida domain comprises 600 acres, and that of Wallingford 300 both having valuable water power. Prominent among their industries are the making of plated ware, silk, chains, and traps, and the canning of fruits and vegetables. These have been more or less prosperous since their initiation, but are now especially so. Outside labor is largely employed upon all. Furnishing luncheons to visitors is no insignificant branch of profit. During the summer, these sometimes reach a thousand in a day. The only unprofitable industry has been that of the printing office, wherein works explanatory of the Community's theological and sexual doctrines have been published for about thirty years.

The Community was formerly under the control of Mr. John V. Noyes, its founder, but is now governed by a committee of ten men and ten women, who consider all questions arising, and direct all business. Any marriages contemplated are announced to them, but their control over these is only advisory. The wishes of Mr. Noyes, though still potent, are not often expressed, and he leaves the committee, in his advanced years, to rule without interference.

Scribner for November.

The November Scribner of which 100,000 copies are printed, opens with two frontispiece portraits of Bayard Taylor, one engraved by Cole from the large photograph by Gutekunst, the other by Juengling from a replica of the bronze bass-relief by the sculptor O'Donovan, which was executed for Cornell University.

An interesting feature of this number is the first installment of "The Grandissimes," Mr. Cable's new story (and first novel) of Creole Life, which succeeds Mrs. Burnett's "Haworth's" and is to be one of the principal attractions of the magazine for the next twelve months.

Ably supplementing the part of "The Grandissimes" relating to the river, is the paper on the "Mississippi Jetties," by Mr. E. L. Corthell, the resident engineer at Port Eads. A timely paper on "The Agricultural Distress in Great Britain" is contributed by Mr. P. T. Quinn, of the New Jersey State Agricultural Association, who concludes from personal observation of English farming during the past year, that it has irretrievably lost its prominence as an industry of the kingdom. A strong contrast to this state of affairs is presented by Mr. Henry King's "Picturesque Features of Kansas Farming," which incidentally shows an unexampled state of prosperity. Nine other papers give variety to the number.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, will full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. SHERAR, Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. 42-eow-6m.

SUBSCRIBE

FOR THE

AUBURN

Courier!

THE ONLY

DEMOCRATIC PAPER

IN DeKALB COUNTY.

JOB WORK!

NEATLY AND PROMPTLY EXECUTED AT LOW RATES.

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $5 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 10-1y.

WHAT PAYS BEST

AFTER HARVEST,

Is a serious consideration of its cost and profits, and how to economise by comparing your own experience with that of others in farm labor.

Only $1.15 a Year,

Will place you in possession of the only newspaper that gives the actual experience and experiments of practical farming.

"The Cincinnati WEEKLY ENQUIRER, is the medium through which producers of every class make known their own experience, and seek that of others."

"The best teacher of farming, is the farmer himself! A fact fully demonstrated in the department (two pages a week) devoted to the farmer and his household in the WEEKLY ENQUIRER."

"Every department is complete."

"It is worth $100.00 a year to farmers, but costs only $1.15."

"The best is the cheapest."

"It always has the news in advance of all others."

"There is none better."

"It is the best political friend the people have, advocating its democracy upon the principles of justice and equity to all."

"It is the original greenbacker."

Such are a few of the many compliments paid to the Cincinnati ENQUIRER, by the press throughout the country.

The merits of its editorials, agricultural, political, correspondence, literary, telegraphic news and commercial departments combine to make it all that is required in an A No. 1, first-class family journal.

WEEKLY ENQUIRER.

One copy, one year	$1.15
One copy six months	65

COPY FREE TO CLUBS OF SEVEN.

DAILY ENQUIRER.

	without Sun. issue.	with Sun issue.
One year	$12.00	$14.00
Three months	3.25	3.75
Sunday's issue alone, per year		2.00
Any two day's issue " "		4.00
Any three day's issue " "		6.00

Specimens Free. Agents Wanted.

FARRN & McLEAN, Publishers,
41-3m CINCINNATI, O.

FOR SALE
AT LOWEST PRICES AT
THE PHYSICIANS' DRUG STORE.

A full line of everything usually kept in a

FIRST-CLASS DRUG STORE,

—SUCH AS—

Pure Drugs, Patent Medicines,
Perfumery, Hair Oil, Fine Soaps,
Brushes, Lamp Chimneys, Coal Oil

And acomplete line of

Toilet Articles.
Liver & Kidney Pads,

Trusses, Shoulder braces. A choice selection of pure wines and liquors, furnished for medicinal purposes only. A full line of Wall Paper and Window shades, with all the latest improved fixtures, will be sold at prices remarkably low. We ask a share of public patronage, feeling satisfied that we can offer inducements worthy of attention.

DAY'S KIDNEY PAD
THE GREAT DISCOVERY
FOR DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS, BLADDER AND URINARY ORGANS. A remedy that will positively cure DIABETES, GRAVEL, DROPSY, BRIGHT'S DISEASE, HIGH COLORED URINE, INCONTINENCE AND RETENTION OF URINE, NERVOUS DEBILITY and FEMALE COMPLAINTS when nothing else can. Its success proves the efficacy of ABSORPTION. It saved the life of its discoverer and is saving the lives of thousands of others. For sale by Druggists or sent by mail on receipt of the price, ($2.00)
DAY KIDNEY PAD CO.,
Sole Proprietors, Toledo, Ohio.
Send your address for our pamphlet, "How a Life was Saved."

CASEBEER & MATHENY,
First door South of First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

ISAAC HAGUE'S

NEW SHOE STORE!

A NEW STOCK OF

BOOTS AND SHOES

Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.

MR. CHARLES RAUT

Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— first door east of McQuiston & Ralston double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.

16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich South'n R R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after [illegible] trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST.

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm.
Toledo	11 [illegible] a m	[illegible] a m	[illegible] p m
Wauseon	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bryan	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butler	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Waterloo	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Corunna	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Kendallville	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Ligonier	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Goshen	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Elkhart	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

GOING EAST.

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accm.
Elkhart	[illegible] p m	[illegible] p m	[illegible]
Goshen	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Ligonier	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Kendallville	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Corunna	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Waterloo	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butler	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bryan	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Wauseon	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Toledo	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tkt. Agt.
J. R. CURTIS, Division Supt.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. &C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. [illegible], 1878.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Night ex.	No. 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Rochester	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Alliance	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Orrville	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mansfield	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Crestline ar.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
" lv.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Forest	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lima	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Ft. Wayne	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Plymouth	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Chicago	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

GOING EAST

	No. 4	No. 2	No. 6	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Plymouth	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Ft. Wayne	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lima	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Forest	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Crestline ar.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
" lv.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mansfield	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Orrville	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Alliance	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Rochester	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Pittsburgh	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Saturday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agent.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect November 10, 1878.

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. 1 Mail.	3 Express
FORT WAYNE	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bluffton	[illegible]	[illegible]
Montpelier	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hartford	[illegible]	[illegible]
MUNCIE	[illegible]	[illegible]
Newcastle	[illegible]
Cambridge City	[illegible]
Connersville	[illegible]
Cincinnati	[illegible]
INDIANAPOLIS	[illegible]	[illegible]
Louisville	[illegible]	[illegible]
Terre Haute		[illegible]
St. Louis		[illegible]

STATIONS	GOING NORTH Mail.	Express	Accom.
St. Louis		[illegible]	[illegible]
Terre Haute		[illegible]	[illegible]
Louisville		[illegible]	[illegible]
Indianapolis		[illegible]	[illegible]
Cincinnati	[illegible]
Connersville	[illegible]
Cambridge City	[illegible]
New Castle	[illegible]
Muncie	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hartford	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Montpelier	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Bluffton	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fort Wayne	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.

Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and [illegible] and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.

All trains daily except Sunday.

Trains run on Columbus time.

Geo. W. [illegible], Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't. W. W. [illegible], Gen. Supt.

Detroit Eel River & Illinois R R

TAKE EFFECT DEC. 2, 1878.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	AC. No. 2.	ACCOM. No. 4.	LOCAL FT No. 6.
lv. Logansport	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mexico	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Denver	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Chili	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Roann	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Laketon	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
N. Manchester	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Liberty Mills	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Collamer	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
S. Whitley	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Columbia City	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Collin's	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Churubusco	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
La Otto	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cedar Creek	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn Junct'n	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butler	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1.	No. 3.	No. 7.
Logansport ar.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mexico	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Denver	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Chili	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Roann	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Laketon	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
North Manchester	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Liberty Mills	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Collamer	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
South Whitley	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Columbia City	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Collin's	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Churubusco	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
La Otto	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cedar Creek	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn Junction	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Butler lv.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

FRANK J. HECKER,
Gen. Sup't

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been appointed by the Judge of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Margaret Bell, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent. JOHN HARVEY, Adm'r.

October 15th, 1879.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

CHICAGO DIVISION.

TIME TABLE No. 4.

TO TAKE EFFECT [illegible], 1879.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Exp's	[illegible]
Chicago		[illegible]	[illegible]
Walkerton Junction		[illegible]	[illegible]
Milford Junction	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cromwell	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Albion	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Avilla	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Garrett, ar.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Garrett lv.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn Junction	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
St. Joe	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hicksville	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Defiance	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fostoria	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Tiffin	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Chicago Junction	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Exp's	Chicago Exp's
Chicago Junction	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Tiffin	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Fostoria	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Defiance	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Hicksville	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
St. Joe	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn Junction	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Garrett ar.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Garrett lv.		[illegible]	[illegible]
Avilla		[illegible]	[illegible]
Albion		[illegible]	[illegible]
Cromwell		[illegible]	[illegible]
Milford Junction		[illegible]	[illegible]
Walkerton Junction		[illegible]	[illegible]
Chicago		[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible], Master of Transportation Chicago Division, Garrett.

C. H. [illegible], Superintendent Trans. Ohio Division Chicago.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line.

75 Miles Shortest to Indianapolis, Louisville and all points South. 50 Miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas, Texas, and all points West. Direct Route to Detroit and all Michigan and Canada points.

TIME CARD IN EFFECT OCT. 12, '79.

SOUTH.	MAIL.	EX.	ACC.
Bay City		[illegible]
Saginaw		[illegible]
Lansing		[illegible]
Grand Rapids		[illegible]	[illegible]
Detroit		[illegible]	[illegible]
Ann Arbor		[illegible]	[illegible]
Jackson	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Jonesville	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Reading	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Angola	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Waterloo	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn Junc.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Ft. Wayne	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Indianapolis	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cincinnati	[illegible]
Louisville	[illegible]	[illegible]
St. Louis	[illegible]	[illegible]
Washington		[illegible]
Baltimore		[illegible]

NORTH.	EX.	MAIL.	ACC.
Baltimore		[illegible]
Washington		[illegible]
St. Louis	[illegible]	[illegible]
Louisville	[illegible]	[illegible]
Cincinnati	[illegible]
Indianapolis	[illegible]	[illegible]
Ft. Wayne	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn Junc.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Auburn	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Waterloo	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Angola	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Reading	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Jonesville	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Jackson	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Ann Arbor	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Detroit	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Grand Rapids	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Lansing		[illegible]
Saginaw		[illegible]
Bay City		[illegible]

Accommodation going north daily except Monday. All other trains daily except Sunday. For information as to routes and connections apply to

F. B. L[illegible], Pres't & Gen'l Manag'r.
S. K. HOOPER, Gen'l Ticket Ag't.

SAVED!

TIME, PATIENCE & MONEY

By always taking the great

Wabash Route,

FOR ALL POINTS

North, East, South or West

LIGHTNING TRAINS,

Invariably on Time, with Close and Sure Connections.

No change of cars to St. Louis, Hannibal, Quincy, Keokuk, Peoria, Burlington, Kansas City, Atchison and St. Joe, and only one change to all points in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Arkansas and Texas, forming the

SHORTEST AND QUICKEST

—AND—

Only Direct Route

From the West to all points in the East, including New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

Through Sleepers from St. Louis to Boston, 1283 MILES,

The Longest Sleeping Car Line in the World.

A. L. HOPKINS, Gen'l Manager.
R. ANDREWS, Gen'l Sup't.
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen'l Passenger Agent [illegible]

For Sale a Sacrifice.

A GEISER THRESHING MACHINE in good condition, offered for sale by Mr. D.D. Moody, at a very low price, and on time. This is an excellent opportunity to get a bargain. 27tf.

—For first-class job work, come to the COURIER office. Good work, good material and low prices guaranteed.

ROBERT OGDEN,

Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,

IRON AND LEAD PIPE,

BRASS GOODS

OF ALL KINDS.

135 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana
9-26-1y.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 9. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, NOVEMBER 6, 1879. Number 45.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5,00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills,

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY. Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House. Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

Thos. H. Sprott.

REAL ESTATE, COLLECTION AND INSURance Agent. Loans effected on improved farms. Kansas lands for sale or trade. Auburn, Indiana

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER Gunsaulhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

D. J. Swarts, M. D.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO DISEASES of the Eye and Ear, Fistula in Ano, Hemorrhoids or Piles and Chronic Ulcers. Office on Main street, over Shaffer's Furniture Store, Auburn, Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates.
T. D. Gross. Prop'r Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE, JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month; at Waterloo, the first and at Butler the second Saturday of every spring and fall month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACKINTOSH,
Co. Sup't. of schools.

LIVE AGENTS WANTED.

To sell Dr. Chase's Recipes; or Information for Everybody, in every county in the United States and Canadas. Enlarged by the publisher to 648 pages. It contains over 2000 household recipes and is suited to all classes and conditions of society. A wonderful book and a household necessity. It sells at sight. Greatest inducements ever offered to book agents. Sample copies sent by mail, postpaid, for $2.00. Exclusive territory given Agents more than double their money. Address Dr. Chase's Steam Printing House, Ann Arbor, Michigan. 41-3m.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else. The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

Vacation of Alley.

Notice is hereby given of the pendency of a petition before the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, to be heard at their December session, 1879, praying the vacation of an alley running north and south along the entire west side of Park's addition to the town of Auburn in said county. The persons to be effected by said proposed vacation are Joseph H. Ford, Christophr Goodbreak William Snell, Charles Snell, John H. Weaver, Minnie Garver, John Otto, George H. K. Moss, John Sawyer and Joseph R. Lanning.

GEORGE H. K. MOSS,
And others.
W. H. DILLS, Att'y,
Oct. 21st, 1879. 43-t.

Read. Read.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county, who is authorized to sell the Singer Machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office in Stamets' store, second door south of First National bank.
30-tf.

Politician, Agent, Reporter—An Intelligent Foreigner's Observations.

To the Editor of the Sun—Sir: Seven years ago I crossed the Atlantic Ocean, being attracted here by the world-wide praise of this great American republic. During these seven years I have tried my best to account for these praises. Many a romantic trait and rosy shade, created by enthusiastic European travellers who wrote of this country, have vanished before me; still, the reality looks even more attractive, more solid, and, above all, more characteristic than I had imagined.

Of all the original features of Yankee life, one particular point strikes me most of all—a point which, as yet, has not been noticed, or, at least, has not been brought to prominence by European travellers. The genius of the people of this country is personified, and, as it were, crystallized in three original and peculiar types not to be found in any other country of the world. These types are the politician, the agent, and the reporter—three representatives of the American political, industrial, and moral world. The spirit of freedom, energy, and enterprise is fairly divided among them; they are working, though independently, in the end harmoniously, and the result is the United States, as they are, the most charming country of our globe.

Wherever I have gone, whether west or south, or east, everywhere, even in the remotest village, I have seen and felt the vigilant power of the omnipotent politician, the incessant workings of the ubiquitous agent, and the irresistible influence of the omniscient reporter; these constitute the American Triad, so to speak. I have seen that when the efforts of this triad are harmoniously combined, new towns spring up, railroads are made, canals are dug, telegraph wires are stretched, bridges and tunnels are constructed, until the wild places are transformed into the homes of men. I have seen, also, that when these three forces are out of gear—when, for example, the omnipotent politician uses his power for some wrong end, or the ubiquitous agent is too selfish and greedy, or the omniscient reporter is destitute of a conscience—the bloodless wars ensue, in which are displayed an intellectual energy, skill, and courage alike on the part of corruption and of virtue that might well excite the envy of the gods of Homer, if they had shifted their dwelling from Olympus and Parnassus to the Alleghanies and Rockies.

I have seen politician; who commanded perhaps only one vote, strike out upon the platform at election time and argue their cause with their arms and legs more eloquently than with their tongue; the election over, they disappeared among the mass of the toilers for daily bread. But I have also seen politicians whose speeches might serve as choice samples of the oratorical art; who spoke of States as their own, who boasted of having thousands of votes in their pockets and who lived in palaces.

I have seen many agents whom indifferent persons called peddlers; and angry persons called thieves. But I have also known agents who were as lavish of money as princes; who did not write, but telegraphed; who traveled in palace cars, and who always stopped at the best hotels.

I have known reporters who tramped for eighteen hours out of twenty-four, hunting for news, who could not write the shortest item without making mistakes, and who earned barely enough to keep body and soul together. But I have also known reporters whose pen dictated opinions for millions of people and whose services could hardly be had for any money.

However insignificant some of the politicians, agents, and reporters may be, all of them are part and parcel of the complicated mechanism that moves the social system of this country. Imagine for a moment what America would be without politicians—that is, without politics. What would become of the national life? What of the people's liberties? Imagine America without agents—the drummer as extinct as the mammoth. Trade would vanish; industries would collapse; the United States would be another Russia, a great country inhabited by a torpid sluggish and hibernating people. Imagine America without reporters—that is, without newspapers. Crime would go unexposed; the people of one section would not know what was going on in other sections; the bonds of the Union would loosen and snap; the living spring that now prevents social stagnation would be dried up.

Yet these three forces are not appreciated by Americans. Their services are not celebrated by the American sculptors, painters, musicians, orators, and poets. This neglect smacks of ingratitude.

A. FOREIGNER.

Explaining Defeat.

It is a complete, great defeat. We have no desire to belittle the republican victory. We frankly acknowledge its fullest importance. But, what is a democratic defeat, it is no disaster; it may be the very turning point in democratic errors—the very thing to prevent disaster and secure success in 1880. Our readers cannot be surprised at the result. Our predictions proved unfortunately but too correct. We never for a moment thought the election of Mr. Ewing probable. His nomination was a mistake. It was not possible that the most conspicuous leader of the inflationists could openly bid for the greenback vote without loosing the support of conscientious hard-money democrats. It was not possible that a person like Gen. Ewing, who had denounced resumption, who had predicted every possible calamity and avowed the wildest notions of finance, should not suffer in popular support when returning prosperity and the great success of resumption are so apparent. It was not possible that the infamous murders of Dixon and Chisolm in the south, infamously used upon every stump, to inflame the popular mind against the south, should not have had great effect upon the voters this year. It was not possible that the revival of the war feeling, in which republican journals and leaders succeeded, and to which the extra session and the potential and peculiar relation of the south to the democracy largely contributed, should not have aroused the memories and passions of the war and thereby aided the republican cause. It was not possible that the republican party could lose this election without losing its very life and existence as a party.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

◆

Negroes for Indiana

[State Sentinel.]

It is well for northern people to understand the quality and condition of the negroes who are coming north in search of their right. This information, to some extent, is furnished by the colored relief board, organized in St. Louis about six months ago. The report of the treasurer of the board "shows that the receipts have been $8,581, and the disbursements $9,239, leaving the board $658 in debt. Besides this the commissary committee has issued over 70,000 rations, and distributed over 20,000 pieces of clothing among the refugees, which goods are estimated to have been worth about $12,000. The report says that about 20 per cent. of the refugees are still destitute, in some cases sick and superannuated, and even blind, and requiring constant help. The committee on transportation report having sent 6,311 men, women and children to Kansas and other states. The exodus still continues, and although greatly diminished, the arrivals average 20 to 30 families per week." Kansas long since got tired of the exodus, and hundreds of the poor deluded negroes got tired of Kansas. Hundreds have perished already, though the weather has been favorable for the poor, half-naked, half-starved blacks; and now the winter is coming on, hundreds more will likely freeze to death. But republicans do not care a fig for that. They believe the exodus will injure the industries of the south, create embarrassments, reduce the crop of cotton, and in many ways injure southern interests. Now that Kansas has got enough southern negroes, Indiana is to be Africanized. The agents are at work, and the army will move north in the spring. The lame, the halt, the blind, the old, the poor, the improvident are to come. As a matter of course a relief board will have to be organized to keep the poor creatures from starving to death. As a matter of course, the movement is set on foot by republican conspirators, the same class of men who organized the Freedmen's bank, and robbed every negro depositor who trusted them.

◆

What the Country Needs.

Fewer dogs and more sheep.

Fewer fences and more pastures.

Fewer bar-rooms and more schoools.

Fewer scrub cattle and more good ones.

Fewer wire pullers in popular conventions, and more industry.

Fewer men who seek office, and more men whom the office seeks.

Fewer loafers about railroad stations, four-corners stores and taverns.

Fewer impetuous young men, eager to rush into print and raise the devil generally.

Fewer juvenile statesmen, who are eager to rush into the places their seniors and betters ought to occupy.

Fewer "leaders" to knuckle to popular prejudices when wrong.

Fewer great men made to order and of small material, and thrust in front of great men who have capacity for greatness.

Of Interest to Pensioners.

The adjutant general reports that by a recent decision of the honorable secretary of the interior, soldiers are entitled to a pension during the time disabled to a pensionable degree of disability. Under this decision, many cases heretofore rejected can now be allowed, and those who have never applied can procure the pension for the time disabled, whether the disability now exists or not, providing application is made before July 1, 1880. Also that the law requiring biennial examinations of invalid pensioners was repealed, and now examinations will not be made except upon orders of the commissioner of pensions.

◆

Intoxication Among French Children.

Sylvanus Urban, in the Gentleman's Magazine, says: "I shall, I doubt not, startle not a few of my readers when I state that during a recent visit to France I have frequently seen French children intoxicated. Strange as such an assertion may seem, I deliberately make it and stand by it. Again and again at tables d'hote I have seen children scarcely more than babies suffering distinctly from alcohol. It is, as travelers in France know, the custom in all districts south of the Loire to supply wine gratis at two meals—breakfast and dinner—at which the residents in an hotel eat in company. Repeatedly, then, in the hotels in French watering places I have watched children of five years old and upward supplied by their mothers with wine enough visibly to flush and excite them. At Sables d'Olonne one little fellow, whose age could not be more than six, drank at each of two consecutive meals three tumblers of wine slightly diluted with water. The result was on each occasion that he commenced to kiss his mother, proceeded to kiss the person on the other side of him, continued by sprawling over the table, and ended by putting his head in his mother's lap and falling asleep. It never seems to enter into the mind of a French woman that water may be drunk at a meal. When long journeys by rail are taken, there is always in the neat basket in which the French mother carries provisions a bottle of wine or wine and water, out of which those of her children who have passed the stage of absolute infancy are allowed to drink. I can, indeed, say with truth that in the course of a pretty long series of observation of the French, chiefly made, I admit, in public vehicles and hotels, I have rarely, if ever, seen a glass of cold water, unqualified with any admixture, quaffed by a native. It is now the fashion to mistrust water, even blended with wine, for which purpose the various springs of the Eau St. Galmiler are largely employed.

◆

The Long Evenings.

What shall we do with our evening? This is the old question that autumn makes new again. It doesn't interest everybody, for some people have no more idea of the valuable time than an ox or a butterfly. Others who are given up to social dissipation, or whose leisure is devoted to public amusements find their perplexity in the shortness of the season. But in the quiet villages and more quiet country districts, and among the home-loving classes in our cities, the long evenings bring opportunities that frequently go to waste for want of a little planning and concert of action. For young people especially they should be entered upon with the resolve, first, not to waste them, and second, not to worse than waste them. To "kill time," says some one, is an expression that would have been ill-used by Methusalah in his 959th year." And to misuse time is the worst way of killing it.

One of the best ways of using the long evenings, if you are at the head of a family, is to make them happy and helpful to your household. Don't take your book or newspaper directly after supper—settle down in the warmest corner in a manner that warns everybody to keep still—read sulkily or selfishly until 10 o'clock, and then yawningly ask your wife if it isn't most "time to go to bed?" Some fathers are about as useful, and not half so ornamental, as a good quality of parlor boarder. There is a good bit of the evening left after the children's bedtime if they go to bed when they should. Help Tommy on his "home lesson," if the teacher has been permitted to put one upon him, or give an hour to games in which all can join. A little romp will help your digestion and spirits more than it can possibly hurt your dignity. Don't be afraid, good people, of a regular dose of fun in your home life. It is the best preventative going for restlessness, nervousness, irritableness, stupidness, and all other ill-nesses, that spoil home comforts.—Golden Rule.

JOHN MORRISSEY'S WIDOW—HOW SHE TAUGHT HIM.

[From a conversation reported in the Philadelphia Record.]

"I knew John as a ragged little boy about Troy, barefooted and belligerent, always looking for a fight. When we were married he could not read or write, and to tell the truth I was only a trifle better off in the matter of educational advantages. I told him we must learn to read, and he said I should teach him. Well, we established lesson hours. Every night before going to bed he would devote himself to the spelling book, and in the morning one hour to writing in a copy book. The rule of study was inflexible. We made it so. The morning after he fought John C. Heenan, when he was all sore and bandaged, and blind of one eye as well, I proped him up with pillows and made him write."

How long, Mrs. Morrissey, did you keep him a pupil?

"Till his fatal illness. Every night he studied something, and I studied during the day that I might be able to help him. Of course when I say I studied, I don't mean in the ordinary school children way. After we mastered the English branches we took up history, and when we were pretty well posted in that we made the living topics of the day a matter of investigation—the European news, the speeches of the great men. I read them in the daytime and John would go through them at night.

Then we took up such books as De Quincy, the writings of Carlyle, and, though John Morrissey was a gambler, and by his profession made many enemies who frowned upon him, he was possessed of knowledge on many subjects independent of city politics and horse racing, which would put to blush his sternest critic had they been in competition with him."

"Did Mr. Morrissey follow this line of study because of a natural bent of mind.

"I don't think so." He would say: "Now this is no good to me, Susie;" but I pressed him on and he would soon get interested. Then he had an indomitable preservance. When he found a thing he could not readily understand he would master it out of very spite. I remember once of his throwing down his arithmetic, shortly after we were married, and exclaiming pettishly: "I don't care about these fractions; they're only part of a thing, anyway! What's the use of all this study, Susie?" "John, if you don't beat those fractions you will never go to congress." "Oh, that's your lay-out for me, is it?" "It is, indeed, my boy." Then he took us his book again and said: "All right, my dear; we'll go to congress." And he went.

I could continue this talk of Mrs. Morrissey's, and much she said would be of interest, but I will only repeat her last remark as I left her: "We had 10 children. I sit here alone to-day. There are 10 little graves and one large one, where all my ambition for my own lies buried." The tears started to her eyes as she spoke.

AGENTS WANTED!

THE NEW STYLE

$25 FAMILY SEWING MACHINE.

THE USUAL $65 MACHINE REDUCED TO $25.

$150 per Week Made Easy.

Horse and Wagon Free to Ag'ts

The CHEAPEST and BEST in the World.

Too Long in Use to Doubt its Superior MERITS.

No Money to Pay until Machine is Delivered to you and Examined.

It makes the shuttle, double-thread, lock-stitch, (the same on both sides of the work), which received the highest reward at the Centennial exhibition, Philadelphia, Pa., 1876. And is complete with a larger assortment of attachments for fine work than any other machine, and reduced to only $25.

It is an easy and pleasant machine to operate, requires the least care, produces every variety of work, and will last until the next century begins. Strong, simple, rapid and efficient.

Use it once and you will use no other. The money cheerfully refunded if it will not outwork and outlast any machine at double the price.

Agents sell them faster than any other in consequence of their being the "best at the lowest price."

Each machine throughly warranted with written guarantee for five years. Kept in order free of charge; money refunded at once if not satisfactory.

It is the most solid, reliable, and satisfactory machine ever invented for all kinds of family work. It is an acknowleged unequivocal mechanical success, thoroughly tested and used in thousands of homes. An efficient, silent, rapid, reliable and ever-ready helper to the weary wife or seamstress, it will do the work of a family for a lifetime, or it will earn from $3 to $5 per day for any one who wishes to sew for a living. This machine costs less than half the price of any new machine of like quality. Has extra long, large-sized shuttle, easily removed. Extra large-sized bobbins, holding 100 yards of thread, doing away with the frequent rewinding of bobbins. It is built for strength and constant hard work. Interchangeable working parts, manufactured of fine polished steel. Will run for years without repairs; is simple to learn, easy to manage, understood perfectly in an hour, and always ready in a moment to do every description of heavy or fine work, at less cost or trouble, than any other machine at any price [illegible] needle can pierce, from lace or cambric to heavy cloth or harness, with any kind of thread, and will run off twenty yards per minute; It uses strong, straight needles, and never breaks them It cannot miss or drop a stitch, ravel or break the thread. If you have any other machine, buy this and have a better one. The ease and rapidity of its motion and quality of its work, are its best recommendations. It will hem, fell, tuck, braid, cord, bind, gather, quilt, ruffle, pleat, fold, scallop, shirr, roll, baste, embroider, run up braids, etc., with elegance, ease and quickness, unsurpassed by any machine ever invented.

BEWARE OF IMPOSITION.

The price for our new machines are less than those asked by dealers in second-hand, rebuilt and refinished machines, or those selling out old stock to close up business, many such inferior and old style machines being offered as new at reduced prices; beware of imposition and only buy new machines. There are no new first-class machines offered as low as the "FAMILY," by many dollars.

Machines Sent for Examination Before Payment of Bill.

Extraordinary inducements offered to clergymen, teachers, storekeepers, etc., to act as agents. Horse and wagon furnished free. For testimonials see descriptive books, mailed free with samples of work, liberal terms, circulars, etc. Address,

FAMILY SEWING MACHINE CO.
48-1y 755 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

F|O|R S|A|L|E

AT LOWEST PRICES AT

THE PHYSICIANS' DRUG STORE.

A full line of everything usually kept in a

FIRST-CLASS DRUG STORE,

—SUCH AS—

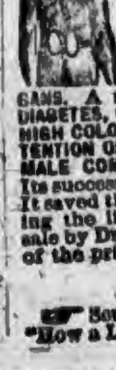
Pure Drugs, Patent Medicines,
Perfumery, Hair Oil, Fine Soaps,
Brushes, Lamp Chimneys, Coal Oil

And a complete line of

Toilet Articles.

Liver & Kidney Pads,

Trusses, Shoulder braces. A choice selection of pure wines and liquors, furnished for medicinal purposes only. A full line of Wall Paper and Window shades, with all the latest improved fixtures, will be sold at prices remarkably low. We ask a share of public patronage, feeling satisfied that we can offer inducements worthy of attention.



DAY'S KIDNEY PAD

THE GREAT DISCOVERY

FOR DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS, BLADDER AND URINARY ORGANS. A remedy that will positively cure DIABETES, GRAVEL, DROPSY, BRIGHTS DISEASE, HIGH COLORED URINE, INCONTINENCE AND RETENTION OF URINE, NERVOUS DEBILITY and FEMALE COMPLAINTS when NOTHING ELSE CAN. Its success proves the efficacy of ABSORPTION. It saved the life of its discoverer and is saving the lives of thousands of others. For sale by Druggists or sent by mail on receipt of the price. ($2.00.)

DAY KIDNEY PAD CO.,
Solo Proprietors, Toledo, Ohio.

☞ Send your address for our pamphlet, "How a Life was Saved."

CASEBEER & MATHENY,
First door South of First National Bank. Auburn, Ind.

AUBURN COURIER.

THURSDAY, NOV. 6, 1879.

WEEKLY NEWS REVIEW.

THE EAST.

SNOW fell along the Atlantic coast, in New York, New England and Canada on the 24th of October.

THERE was a great sale of trotting-stock at Mr. Robert Bonner's stables, in New York, the other day. Mr. Bonner sold eighty-six young trotters for a total of $81,740. The highest price paid for any one horse was $4,000 for Keene Jim, Mr. Dana, of the New York Sun, being the successful bidder.

COL. BOB INGERSOLL lectured on the Sabbath in Pittsburgh, in the face of a warning from the Mayor that if he should do so he would be fined for a violation of the Sunday ordinance. The threat was not executed as to Ingersoll, but the lessee of the hall where the lecture was delivered has been fined $50.

THE town of Parker, Pa., has been visited by a disastrous conflagration. About 100 buildings, comprising the principal business portion of the town, were burned, involving a loss of probably $200,000, upon which there is an insurance estimated at $30,000....Dr. Kimball and Mrs. Goodrich, who were found guilty of having caused the death by abortion of Jenny Clark, in Boston, have been sentenced, the former to six years in the State prison, while the woman goes to the House of Correction for ten years.

THE SOUTH.

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the advent of Jack Frost at Memphis, Yellow Jack makes his exit. The dreadful plague, which has raged all summer, placing a complete embargo upon trade, is over, and business is reviving again.

THE murderous vendetta in Carter county, Ky., between the Underwood and the Holbrook families, has raged, undisturbed by the authorities, until all male members of the Underwood family have been slaughtered in the cabin where they were besieged by the Holbrooks for some weeks. Now the assassins have sent notice to the women survivors of the Underwood family that they must abandon their homes and quit the country or they also will be butchered.

THE WEST.

A DISPATCH from Yankton, D. T., says: "Information from the Indian country is that, last Friday, fifty-six lodges of Minneconjou Sioux, under Chief Burnt Face, left the Cheyenne Agency and started out on the war-path. The only depredations thus far reported is a profitless raid on a Black Hills wagon train. Two companies of the Eleventh infantry are in pursuit.

SPECIAL AGENT ADAMS, who was sent out by Secretary Schurz to meet the hostile Utes, reports that he visited the camp of the hostiles between Grand and Gunnison rivers, and that, after holding a conference with them, the captive women and children were delivered to him without conditions. The captives were unharmed, and had not been subjected to any insult or injury. The Indians desire peace, and claim to have been forced into the outbreak. Gen. Adams also reports that after leaving the hostile country he met Indian runners who reported their "lookouts" had a fight, on the 20th of October, with a hunting party from Merritt's camp, brought about accidentally by the scouts firing on an Indian, in which a scout named Hume, Lieut. Weir, and two other whites and two Indians were killed. The Indians claim they were posted at the place to observe the movements of the troops; that they did not want to fight, and did not fight until Hume killed one of their number....Gen. Morrow, with a force of 300 soldiers, is now in hot pursuit of the murderous band of Indians who have been recently committing massacres and thefts in New Mexico. A band of Sioux is also reported to be on the war-path in Dakota, and two companies of the United States Eleventh Infantry are now in pursuit of them. Gen. Merritt's force in Colorado is being reinforced, and, if not prevented by heavy snow-storms, the probability is that the murderers of Maj. Thornburgh and Agent Meeker will be hunted down shortly with vigor.

THE body of George Burr, who accompanied Prof. John Wise in his balloon from St. Louis, four weeks ago, was found on the Indiana shore of Lake Michigan the other day. This clears up the mystery of the missing balloonists. They no doubt met their fate in Lake Michigan. It is a curious fact that the incidents of this St. Louis balloon voyage should be so close a repetition of the fate which overtook Prof. W. H. Donaldson and the reporter, Newton Grimwood, in the Chicago ascension four years ago. Now, as then, the balloon went into Lake Michigan at night, during a storm, no definite tidings coming to light until the body of the passenger accompanying the professional aeronaut mutely confirms the fears of all friends by appearance on the beach of the lake. Should the Pathfinder and the remains of Prof. Wise never be found, the resemblance between the two catastrophes would indeed be singular.

OVER 2,000,000 hogs have been slaughtered and packed in Chicago since the 1st of March.

GEN. GRANT bade farewell to San Francisco and turned his face Eastward on the morning of Oct. 26. The evening previous he was tendered a farewell banquet by the citizens of San Francisco, and, in reply to a toast by the Mayor, responded as follows:

"GENTLEMEN OF SAN FRANCISCO: The unbounded hospitality and cordiality I have received since I first put my feet on the soil of California has taken deep root in my heart. It was more than I could have expected, and, while it has entailed some little fatigue at times, I assure you I have only been grateful for it. I have previously been in California, and on the Pacific coast, but have been away a quarter of a century, and when I landed here the last time I found that none of the pioneers had grown old; but, if I should remain away another quarter of a century, I might be compelled to confess that some of you had grown old, and I want to see you again in your prime and youth. Gentlemen, in taking my departure, I want to thank you all for the farewell reception given me this evening, and to express the hope that, whether or not I am to have the happiness ever to visit your city again, I shall at least meet one and all of you elsewhere, and, if it should not be in this life, that it may be in the Better Country."

POLICEMAN LEWIS CHEW, of Atchison, Kan., attempted, a few days ago, to arrest a negro named Monroe Amos. The latter drew a revolver and shot the officer in the abdomen. Chew fell, recovered himself, drew a revolver and shot the negro, the ball entering just above the heart. The negro fell and died in a few minutes. Chew died the next day....One of Spotted Tail's Indians shot an agency employe last week, giving as an excuse that "his heart was bad." The Agent arrested him for the crime, whereupon the tribe withdrew to the hills and forced him to release the murderer by bombarding the buildings. On regaining his liberty the savage was presented by the admiring warriors with a wife and thirty ponies. There are no troops near the reservation, and an outbreak is feared.

THE Northwestern Transportation Company's steamer Amazon, from Milwaukee, carrying twenty-eight passengers and 875 tons of flour, and sundries, struck on a sand-bar while entering the harbor of Grand Haven, Mich., on the morning of the 28th ult. She grounded fast within a hundred feet of the pier, and was placed completely at the mercy of the waves. At last accounts she was badly broken, but it was hoped she would be saved in a damaged condition. The passengers and crew were all rescued and removed in the care of the life-saving station.

ADVICES from Arizona Territory report that the Navajo Indians have broken out, and that the troops at Fort Wingate have been dispatched against them. They stole all the stock, including the train mules. It is also reported that the Apaches captured a station on Jornado del Muerto, near Fort Craig, and killed thirteen persons.

MRS. AND MISS MEEKER and Mrs. Price and her two children, late captives among the Utes, have arrived in Denver. Mrs. Meeker is very feeble and ill....It is stated that Gen. Edward Hatch, Gen. Charles Adams, Special Agent, and Chief Ouray have been appointed a commission to investigate the Ute outbreak. ....R. G. Peters' large lumber-mill burned lately at Manistee, Mich., with a lot of lumber on the dock. It is estimated the total loss is $50,000. The mill was insured for $20,500.

POLITICAL.

A CINCINNATI correspondent says a partial canvass of the members elect of the Ohio Legislature has been made with reference to the choice for United States Senator to succeed Thurman. Of sixty Republican Senators and Representatives interviewed, thirty-four are for Garfield. This is two-thirds of the entire number, and twelve less than a majority of the Republican caucus. The others are divided between Sherman, Taft, Dennison, Matthews, Eggleston, and others. The declination of Secretary Sherman and Charles Foster to become candidates has greatly increased the probabilities of Garfield's election.

THE official canvass of the vote on General Assembly at the late Ohio election gives the Republicans 60 and the Democrats 45 members of the House, while in the Senate the Republicans have 22 and the Democrats 15—a majority on joint ballot of 31.

SOUTH CAROLINA Senators Wade Hampton and Butler have come out in favor of the nomination of Bayard and McDonald as the Democratic candidates for President and Vice President.

WASHINGTON.

IT is stated Secretary Sherman, in his annual report to Congress, will recommend the passage of a bill authorizing the issue of the 4 per cents. in exchange for the 5's and 6's before the maturity of the latter....At a conference the other day between the President and Secretary Evarts, concerning the vacant mission to England, it was determined to defer the appointment until after the meeting of Congress.

AT a Cabinet meeting last week, the Ute Indian troubles were discussed. Secretary Schurz and Gen. Sherman gave all the information in the possession of their departments. The discussion turned upon what steps should be taken toward the Indians, and it was decided that for the present only precautionary measures should be adopted....The Commissioner of Indian Affairs last week received a dispatch from Agent McGillycuddy at Red Cloud Agency, saying: "Twenty Sitting Bull Indians just in with a pass from Maj. Walsh (British officer at the nearest post across the border). Many more will come when the Missouri freezes. Do you want them fed?" To this Commissioner Hayt replied as follows: "The Secretary desires me to say that the Sitting Bull Indians returning must be looked upon virtually as prisoners of war. They must surrender their arms and ponies. The idea must not be permitted to spread that they can simply come back and be fed. Every one of them, if fed, must be made to earn his rations by work for the Government. Enforce this policy strictly, and keep them well watched."

GENERAL.

THE schooner Nancy was recently wrecked on Cariboo island, on the coast of Nova Scotia. The Captain, four seamen and a boy were lost.

IT is stated that Gen. Grant will make a tour of South America and Mexico before settling down to quiet life, and will make the journey after visiting New York city and Philadelphia.

THE American Missionary Association (Congregationalists) has just held a three days' session in Chicago.

AMERICA will soon have one of the great Cleopatra Needles. The Government of Alexandria has formally delivered the monolith to Commander Gorringe, of the United States navy, and it is expected that he will arrive in this country with it at an early date....Nearly $60,000,000 in specie has been imported into this country from Europe since the 1st of January last.

ON the arrival of the steamship England at New York from Liverpool, while unloading the cargo a man was found leaning against a crate, who faintly gasped out "Water." He was terribly emaciated and weak. He was asked if he had been all these days while the ship was at sea without food or drink, and he nodded once, shuddered and died. The England left Liverpool Oct. 15, and the stowaway must have been thirteen days without food or water.

FOREIGN.

THE price of copper ore in England has advanced nearly $50 per ton in the last five weeks....Heavy and long-continued rains in the island of Jamaica have caused fearful floods, attended by vast destruction of property and some loss of life.....The London News of Oct. 24 contains a remarkable article, which it says is based on thoroughly trustworthy information. It states that it has the best reasons for believing that early next spring Russia will dispatch two thoroughly-equipped corps d'armee, under the control of its most skillful and experienced officers, to Afghanistan.

DURING a debate in the Hungarian Parliament, the other day, one of the Deputies stated that there were 30,000 Hungarians starving to death, and that the number of people suffering for the necessaries of life was daily increasing....It is now said that the alliance between Germany and Austria is not in the usual form of a written treaty signed by the Emperors of the two countries, but simply a memorandum betwen Bismarck and Andrassy, which was approved by their respective sovereigns.

FIVE men have been hanged at Cabul for complicity in the massacre of the British Embassy. They include Kotwul, head of the city Mollahs, and two Generals, one of royal blood. One of the Generals, it is charged, dragged the head of Maj. Cavagnari from the British residency to Bala-Hissar. Official inquiry into the massacre is proceeding. The Ameer's father-in-law, the ex-Governor of Cabul, and the Minister of Finance are under close arrest....Adolphus Rosenberg, editor of the London Town Talk, has been sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment for publishing defamatory libels against Mrs. Langtry, and to six months' imprisonment on each of the indictments charging similar offenses against Mrs. Cornwallis West and Lord Londesborough, and at the expiration of his imprisonment he is to be bound over in his own recognizances in £1,000 for good behavior for eighteen months. Justice Hawkins regretted he could not add to the sentence hard labor....Dispatches received in London state that the defeat of the Russians at Geok-Tepe by the Turcomans was more disastrous than heretofore reported. The condition of the Russian army is pitiable, and they are in full retreat....There is no disguising the fact that the relations between England and Russia are in a very precarious condition. The allusions in Lord Salisbury's recent speech to the policy of Great Britain in the East have aroused the most bitter animosity in Russia, and the tone of the St. Petersburg press, both official and unofficial, is daily becoming more threatening and hostile to England.

THE terrible Peruvian iron-clad Huascar has at last been captured by the Chilians....A dispatch from Cabul says the Ameer has finally placed his abdication in the hands of Gen. Roberts....An Alexandria correspondent reports Cleopatra's Needle, while being removed for shipment to the United States, was seized by the creditors of the Egyptian Government.

IN Spain there have been more heavy rains, followed by destructive floods. Much property was swept away, and some lives lost. ....Advices from Afghanistan state that the population of Cabul is quiet, but it is a sullen calm. There can be no doubt that beneath it is a deep dread of British domination. The Cabulese are kept down simply by fear, and would rise if they saw any chance of success. By order of the Viceroy of India, Sir Frederick Roberts has issued a proclamation stating that, in consequence of the abdication of the Ameer and the outrage at the British Residency, the British Government has been compelled to occupy Cabul and other parts of Afghanistan.

LYNCH LAW.

The Shooting and Hanging of Bill Young by a Mob in Clark County, Mo.

A dispatch from Keokuk, Iowa, dated Oct. 30, says: "Bill Young, who was tried at Cahoka, Mo., for the murder of the Spencer family, was lynched at his home near Luray, Mo., yesterday. The raid was very systematically planned and carried into execution with desperate determination. The mob, to the number of 200 or more, met near Cahoka and arranged the details. On Sunday, the day following his acquittal, Young was married at Cahoka to Miss Bray, of Ohio, who has been in this locality most of the time since his arrest. They came to Keokuk Monday, and remained here until this morning, when they left for Young's home, near Luray. Young was warned along the line that a mob was assembling to hang him, but he refused to turn back. He said he had beat them once, and could do it again, and that he did not propose to run away or be frightened away.

The plan was to take Young from the train at Cahoka, but owing to a delay in a telegram the train got past that city before the mob assembled. They hastily followed to Luray, however, surrounded Young's house, and demanded that all but Young leave the building. J. C. Coffman, of Toledo, Ohio, one of Young's attorneys, and two ladies who were there came out, but Young insisted that his wife and children remain. Firing was then opened, but it is not known who fired the first shots. Young would open the door, fire into the crowd, and dodge back. This was kept up until Young had received four wounds—one in the wrist, one in the lung, one in the scalp, and one in the abdomen, which disabled him so that he ceased firing. The mob then piled hay around the house preparatory to burning it, when Young's children came running out and said that their father was dead. A number of men then entered the house, brought Young out, placed him in a wagon and drove under an arched gateway. They then called upon him to make a confession, but he is said to have asserted his innocence to the last. They proposed to him that if he would pay the costs of the prosecution, confess the murder and leave the country they would not hang him. He offered to pay the costs and leave, but refused to confess. His last words were that he was an innocent man. They allowed him to make his will, then drove the wagon out, and left him hanging until he was dead. The mob is variously estimated at from 200 to 500 men. They wore no masks, and made no attempts to disguise themselves. Many of them are well-known citizens of Clark county. Others are said to have been from Illinois and Iowa. Detective Lane was in the mob, and took an active part.

Swiss Prisons.

Prisons in Switzerland are anything but places of safe custody. From the jail in Lucerne nine prisoners escape on an average every year, and recently the number has been above the average. In 1861 two convicts, who were fettered with heavy chains, escaped from this prison. Excavating a tunnel from the floor of their cell, they succeeded in working a passage through a wall three feet thick, and thus gained the outside of their prison. They then broke into a neighboring smithy, and contrived with the tools they found there to rid themselves of their shackles. The establishment of a strong and properly-managed central prison, to which convicted offenders shall be sent from all the cantons to undergo their period of imprisonment, is now strongly advocated by the leading Swiss papers. The Canton of Uri has just led the way in the reintroduction into Switzerland of the punishment of death, its Landrath having passed a law which provides that persons convicted of willful murder shall be punished with death, and that the death-sentence shall be executed in the presence of certain authorities who are specified.—Pall Mall Gazette.

All He Could Afford for the Money.

Cham had prodigiously long legs, as all Paris knew. "One day," said he, speaking to a friend, "I called on a tailor who had been recommended to me. I selected the cloth for a pair of pantaloons, accepted the price—$9—which was demanded, and the tailor began to take my measure.

"With his tape in his hand he began to descend one of my legs, and his astonishment visibly increased as he descended. Down, down he went; but just as he got below the knee he suddenly stopped and put his tape in his pocket.

"'Well,' said I, 'are you going to stop there?'

"'Monsieur,' said he, 'that's as far down as we can go for $9!'"

Another Advance in the Price of Paper.

At a meeting of manufacturers of print and book paper, held in Cincinnati on the 23d of October, an advance of one-half cent per pound was made upon all grades of print and book papers. This, added to the advance made on the 1st of October, brings the price of paper up full twenty per cent. above the prices of the past six months. It will not be long before consumers who have not prepared for this advance by laying in a stock of paper will begin to feel the effects of the "rise" in the paper market. The following circular has just been issued by the manufacturers of fine paper, card-board, etc., and speaks for itself:

"The increased cost in all material used in the manufacture of paper makes it necessary for us to advance the price of our goods one-half cent per pound from this date, and if stock advances in price we will feel the necessity of a further advance."

"THE worst drunkard in America" has been booked in Bath, Me. He is sketched as a young tramp of a personal appearance that is rough and coarse to the last degree. But there rolls from his lips the most beautiful language ever heard. All the standard works of literature in the dead and living tongues come readily in quotations the most choice to his lips, and impromptu verses are dashed off with snap and bubble. A Bath merchant offered the young tramp, who is a graduate of Oxford, a clerkship, but the Bohemian refused, saying that he wouldn't give up his whisky for $1,000 a day.

THE MEEKER FAMILY.

Thrilling Story of Their Captivity—How Susan, the Ute Woman, Effected Their Release—How the Captives Fared During Their Life Among the Savages.

A correspondent of the Denver Tribune, in chronicling the arrival at Los Pinos Agency of the women and children captured by the Ute Indians at the White River Agency, gives the following highly interesting narrative of their captivity and final release:

The ladies look careworn and fatigued, as they naturally would after the experience through which they have passed during the past twenty-five days, twenty-two of which they were captives among savage Indians, in a wild country, and apparently cut off from succor. The ladies express themselves as most thankful for their early deliverance, which was almost more than they dared hope for. Said Mrs. Meeker, "I hardly knew what to expect. At times the Indians almost ignored us, and went forward with their councils without regarding our presence at all; again they jeered, and taunted, and threatened us; at other times they were comparatively pleasant. There was but one who seemed determined to protect us. This was Susan, Johnson's wife, who has shown herself, from the beginning to the end of the troubles, a woman of fine feeling, and genuinely humane and kind in her disposition to her fellow-creatures. I can never forget her or repay her kindness to myself and daughter, and our entire family. She is a good woman. Yes, as to the threats," said she, being requested to proceed, "we hardly expected to see the faces of our friends in a civilized land; yet we never lost hope, yet at times were very despondent indeed. We hoped, and yet we feared, at all times."

The entire story of the captivity is of interest. When Gen. Adams approached, which was noticed by the Indians, they rushed the captives into a secure place in the brush, where he could not see or hear them. They were securely guarded while the conference which was held was in progress. Their camp was on a tributary of the Grand river. Of course the arrival of Gen. Adams was hailed with joy, but five long hours passed before they knew whether he brought them deliverance or he would be compelled to go away and leave them with their horrid captors. The council which succeeded Gen. Adams' arrival lasted five hours, and was marked by great vehemence on the part of the Indian orators who took part. There were two parties—a peace and a war faction—and for a while war seemed bound to win the day. In the pow-wow Susan, the squaw, who is referred to above, took a leading part in the controversy, and she raised her voice for peace, and she did good work. Susan, besides being Johnson's wife, is a sister of the great chief, Ouray, whose counsel is still more weighty among the Indians. She was supposed to represent her brother in a measure. Her words were listened to with respect, and were allowed to have their full weight. Notwithstanding her entreaties and Gen. Adams' presentation of the case, it at one time seemed as if the Indians would refuse absolutely to surrender their captives. They were determined to keep and make the most of them.

Susan was followed by her husband, Johnson, who also made a speech advocating the release of the captives—in fact, made a strong appeal in favor of the women, setting forth their great grief and the advantage to the Indians in this release, which might secure special consideration for them when it should come to arranging a treaty. He quoted and dwelt with emphasis on Ouray's advice to the Northern Utes. It was a novel attempt, as may well be imagined, to see a squaw addressing the hardy warriors. Susan has taken first rank as a leader among them. The instance was the first one on record of a squaw joining an important council and taking a prominent part in it. As is well known, the Utes make slaves of the women, and, so far as their councils are concerned, impose the same silence on them that St. Paul did. It is supposed that in this case Susan was listened to because she was supposed to represent Ouray, and to Ouray the Indians now look to save them in procuring a peace. At any rate she obtained a hearing, and she pleaded well. Johnson, her husband, an influential chief, is supposed to have been brought by her to the advocating of a peace policy, for, as he will be and has been regarded as in a large measure responsible for it, now to see him come boldly forward and advocate lenient measures convinces one that resolution is possible even among savages. Notwithstanding their eloquent appeals, however, it is probable that the ladies would not be released had not Gen. Adams risen from his seat and told the Indians that they must give an affirmative or he would give immediate orders to the soldiers to pursue their own course toward the Indians. They then promised to release the prisoners unconditionally, with the hope that the General would use his best efforts to prevent the invasion of the soldiers for the present.

The history of the prisoners during their captivity forms a most pathetic chapter. After the killing of Agent Meeker, the women attempted to escape into the brush from the burning building. Mrs. Meeker was fired at, with the result of a flesh wound in the hip, four inches in length. Miss Meeker and Mrs. Price were called to by Indians: "No shoot white woman; stop; Indian no hurt." They were mounted; Miss Meeker, with Mrs. Price's eldest child, 4 years old, tied behind her; Mrs. Price, with her infant in her arms, and Mrs. Meeker, who is 64 years of age, and lame from her wound. When they struck the camp at midnight, Mrs. Meeker was dismounted, and fell to the ground unable to move, and the Indians surrounded her and added to the misery of the situation by jeering and taunting "the old white squaw." The next morning they were separated, Douglass retaining the charge of Mrs. Meeker, and Persune taking Miss Meeker, while Mrs. Price and children were in the charge of an Uncompahgre Ute.

The sufferings of Mrs. Meeker were indescribable during her stay with Douglass, whose squaw abused her by neglect, pushing, striking and taunts. On one occasion Douglass threw down blankets, and compelled Miss Meeker to dismount, saying they were going into camp. He then said they were going to stab them, and exhibited the butcher-knives to be used for the purpose. Then he placed a musket to her forehead, and said, "Indian going to shoot." The courageous girl never flinched, and laughed at the burly savage. He asked her if she was afraid, and her ready response, "I am not afraid of Indians or death," elicited the admiration of the red devils. They turned upon Chief Douglass in derision, and he slunk from the presence of the brave Miss Meeker. Soon after this they were placed in charge of Chief Johnson, and, through the instrumentality of Johnson's squaw, their condition was very much improved, and further indignities ceased.

Through the fearful ordeal of captivity Mrs. Price and Miss Meeker almost fought for the rights of poor old Mrs. Meeker. They could use a little Spanish and Ute, and their defiance of intruding Indians, and readiness to resist insult to the old lady, challenged the respect of even the blood-thirsty aborigines. They would push the savages right and left when interfered with, and, on making complaint to Susan, would face the Indians, while Susan laid down the law and penalty; and to this fact may be attributed the many favors of which they would otherwise have been deprived.

Susan proved to be the guardian spirit, and had it not been for her intercession the fate of the women would have formed one of the blackest pages of Indian deviltry.

Josie Meeker's Story—Vivid Details of the Outbreak and Massacre at the Agency—Sufferings of the Captive Women.

The first I heard of any trouble with the Indians at my father's agency was the firing at Mr. Price while he was plowing for Indian crops according to Government instructions. The Indians had the idea, and said, that as soon as the land was plowed it would cease to belong to the Utes. Two or three councils were held, and an Indian woman, Jane, the wife of Pauvitts, was the cause of the whole trouble.

The trouble seemed settled by two or three councils, secretly, however. The Utes were preparing for a massacre, for just before Eskridge left with the Indians a runner was seen rushing up to the tent of Douglass with what I since learned was news of soldiers fighting. Half an hour later twenty armed Indians came to the agency from the camp of Douglass, and began firing.

I was in the kitchen with my mother, washing dishes. It was afternoon. I looked out of the window, and saw the Utes shooting the boys working on the new building. Mrs. Price was at the door washing clothes. She rushed in and took Johnnie, the baby, to fly. We ran into the milk-room, which had only one small window, and locked the door, and hid under a shelf. The firing went on for several hours at intervals. There was no shouting, no noise, but frequent firing. We staid in the milk-room until it began to fill with smoke. The sun was half an hour high. I took May Price, 3 years old, and we all ran to father's room. It was not disturbed. We knew the building would be burned, and ran across Douglass avenue to a field of sage brush beyond plowed ground. The Utes were so busy stealing annuity goods they did not see us at first. About thirty of them, loaded with blankets, were carrying them toward Douglass' camp, near the river.

We had gone 100 yards when the Utes saw us. They threw down the blankets and came running toward us, firing as they came. Bullets whizzed as thick as grasshoppers around us. I do not think they intended to kill us—only to frighten us. Mother was hit by a bullet, which went through her underclothing, and made a flesh wound three inches long.

As the Indians came nearer they shouted: "We no shoot; come to us." I had a little girl, and an Indian named Persune said for me to go with him. He and another Ute seized me by the arms and started toward the river. An Uncompahgre Indian took Mrs. Price and her baby, and mother was taken to the headquarters of Douglass.

The Indian Persune took me where his ponies were standing by the river, and seated me on a pile of blankets. Indians are now on all sides. I could not escape. It was now sundown. Packing was finished at dusk, and we started for the wilderness of the south. I rode a horse with a saddle, but no bridle. The child was lashed behind me. Persune and his assistant rode each side of me, driving pack mules ahead. About twenty other Indians were in the party. Mother came later, riding bareback behind Douglass, both on one horse. She was 64 years old, feeble in health, wounded, and not recovered from a broken thigh caused by a fall two years ago. Chief Douglass gave her neither horse, saddle nor blankets. We followed the river, and, on the other side, Persune brought me a halful of water to drink. We trotted along until 9 o'clock, when we halted for a half hour. All the Indians dismounted, and blankets were spread upon the ground, and I laid down to rest, with mother lying not far from me. Chief Douglass was considerably excited and made a speech to me with many gestures and great emphasis. He recited his grievances, and explained why the massacre began. He said Thornburgh told the Indians he was going to arrest the head-chiefs, take them to Fort Steele, and put them in a calaboose, perhaps hang them. He said my father had written all the letters to the Denver papers, and circulated wild reports about what the Indians would do, and was responsible for all the hostility against the Indians among the whites West. While Douglass was telling this he stood in front of me with his gun, and his anger was dreadful. He said father had always been writing to Washington. Then he swore a fearful oath in English, and said if the soldiers had not come and threatened the Indians with Fort Steele and the calaboose, and threatened to kill other Indians at White river, the Agent wouldn't have been massacred. Then the brave chief, Douglass, who had eaten at our table that very day, walked off a few feet, returned, and placed his gun to my forehead three times, and asked me if I was going to run away. I told him I was not afraid of him nor of death, and should not run away. When he found his repeated threats could not frighten me, all the other Indians turned on him and laughed at him, and made so much fun he sneaked off, and went over to frighten my mother. All hands took a drink around my bed; then they saddled their horses, and Persune led my horse to me, and knelt down on his hands and knees for me to mount my horse from his back.

We urged our horses forward, and journeyed in moonlight through to the Grand mountains, with the Indians talking in low tones among themselves. It was after midnight when we made the second halt in a deep and somber canyon. Mother was not allowed to come up. Douglass kept her with him, half a mile further down the ravine. Then the squaws came, and laughed, and grinned, and gibbered. When I had lain down on the blankets two squaws sang and danced fantastically at my feet. Other Indians stood around, and, when the women reached a certain part of their recitative, all broke into laughter. Next day Persune went to fight the soldiers, and placed me in charge of his wife, with her three children. That same day mother came up to see me in company with a little Indian girl. Wednesday, next day, Johnson went over to Jack's camp, and brought back Mrs. Price and her baby to live in his camp. He said he had made it all right with the other Utes. We did not do anything but be around the various camps and listen to the talk of the squaws, whose husbands were away fighting the soldiers.

Sunday night Jack came, and made a big speech; also Johnson. They said more troops were coming, and recited what orders had been brought from Chief Ouray. They were in great commotion, and did not know what to do. They talked all night, and next morning struck their tents, and put them up again. Part were for going away, part for staying. We had a long ride. The cavalcade was fully two miles long. The wind blew a hurricane, and the dust was so thick we could not see ten feet back. Most of the Indians had no breakfast, and we traveled all day without dinner or water. Mother had neither saddle nor stirrups, but merely a few thicknesses of canvas strapped on the horse's back, while the young chiefs pranced round on good saddles. She did not reach Grand river until after dark, and the ride for an invalid and aged woman was long and distressing.

After marching south some days the Indians said they would stay at their camp, and, if the soldiers advanced, would get them in a canyon and kill them all. The Utes were now close to the Uncompahgre district and could not retreat much farther. Eight miles more travel in two other days brought us to the camping-ground where Gen. Adams found us. This was near Plateau creek, but high up and not far from the snowy range. Monday night an Uncompahgre Ute came in and said that next day Gen. Adams, whom they called Washington, was coming after the captives. Next day about 11 o'clock, while sewing in Persune's tent, his boy came in, picked up the buffalo robe, and wanted me to go to bed. Told him I was not sleepy. Then a squaw came and hung a blanket before the door and spread out both hands to keep the blanket down, so I could not push it away, but I looked over the top and saw Gen. Adams and party outside on horses. The squaw's movements attracted their attention and they came up close.

I pushed the squaw aside and walked out. They asked my name and dismounted; said they had come to take us back if we cared to go. I showed them the tent where mother and Mrs. Price were stopping.

Next morning we left for Uncompahgre in charge of Capt. Cline and Mr. Sherman.

JOSEPHINE MEEKER.

Seeing the Circulation of the Blood.

Dr. C. Huter, a German savant of Greifswald, has devised a simple arrangement which demonstrates the circulation of the blood in the human body by making it visible. The patient's head being fixed in a frame, on which is a contrivance for supporting a microscope and a lamp, his lower lip is drawn out and fixed on the stage of the microscope by means of clips, the inner surface being uppermost, and having a strong light thrown upon it by a condenser. When the preparations are completed all the observer has to do is to bring the microscope to bear on the surface of the lip, using a low-power objective, and focusing a small superficial vessel. At once he sees the endless procession of the blood corpuscles through the minute capillaries, the colorless ones appearing like white specks dotting the red stream. Dr. Huter asserts that from taking careful note of variations in the blood-flow and changes in the corpuscles he has derived great advantage in the treatment of disease.

SELECTED MISCELLANY.

HE who spends all his life in sport is like one who wears nothing but fringes and eats nothing but sauces.—Richard Fuller.

AS SINS proceed they ever multiply, like figures in arithmetic; the last stands for more than all that went before it.—Sir Thomas Browne.

THE authority of reason is more imperious than that of a master; for he who disobeys the one is unhappy, but he who disobeys the other is a fool.

THE difference between riding a horse and riding a hobby consists in this, that one can get off a horse at any time, but once on a hobby, a man can never get off.

WISDOM is better than riches. Wisdom guards thee, but thou must guard thy riches. Riches diminish in the using, but wisdom increases in the use of it.—Arabic proverb.

WE sometimes learn more from the sight of evil than from an example of good. We should learn then to profit by evil, since it is so common, while goodness is so rare.

"THIS is my plaything," say the children; "that sunny seat is mine." This is the beginning and exemplification of the selfishness and all the usurpation of the world.

ALL reasoning is retrospect; it consists in the application of facts and principles previously known. This will show the great importance of knowledge, especially of that kind called experience.—J. Foster.

TO FIND recreation in amusement is not happiness; for this joy comes from without, and is, therefore, dependent on accidents, which often cause inevitable affliction; but the happiness that is found in the soul itself is abiding.

How We Catch Cold.

This pertinent question is just now engaging attention, says the London Lancet. There is another question which should be answered first, namely: What is cold? The old idea of a "chill" is, perhaps, nearer the truth than the modern notion of "cold." The hypothesis would seem to be that a "cold" is something more than a cold, because, it is said, "You do not catch cold unless you are cold." The fact is, there are probably as many diverse occurrences grouped and confounded under the generic title of cold-catching as diseases covered by that popular term fever, which is made to comprise every state in which the pulse is quickened and the temperature raised. By a parallel process of reasoning "cold" ought to be limited to cases in which the phenomena are those of a "chill." When a person "catches cold," either of several morbid accidents may occur—(1) he may have such a chill of the surface as shall drive the blood in on the internal organs, and hamper some weak, or disorder and influence some diseased, viscus; (2) the cold may so impinge on the superficial nerves that serious disturbance of the system will ensue, and a morbid state be set up; (3) the current of air which causes the cold may in fact be laden with the propagating "germs" of disease; or (3) the vitality of the organism, as a whole, may be so depressed by a sudden abstraction of heat that recovery may be impossible, or a severe and mischievous reaction ensue. The philosophy of prevention is obvious to preserve the natural and healthy action of the organism as a whole, and of the surface in particular, while habituating the skin to bear severe alterations of temperature by judicious exposure, and natural stimulation by pure air, and clean water, and orderly habits of hygiene and health.

Power of the Press.

I love to hear the rumbling of the steam-power press better than the rattle and roar of artillery. It is silently attacking and vanquishing the Malakoffs of vice and Redans of evil; and its parallels and approaches cannot be resisted. I like the click of type in the composing stick better than the click of the musket in the hands of the soldier. It bears a leaden messenger of a deadlier power, of sublimer force, and of a surer aim, which will hit its mark, though it is distant a thousand years. —Chapin.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
BEEVES	$8 75	@$10 50
HOGS	3 85	@ 4 30
COTTON	11⅛	@ 11¾
FLOUR—Superfine	5 10	@ 5 50
WHEAT—No. 2	1 31	@ 1 44
CORN—Western Mixed	60	@ 65
OATS—Mixed	39	@ 48
RYE—Western	88	@ 90
PORK—Mess	11 37½	@11 50
LARD	7	@ 7½
CHICAGO.
BEEVES—Choice Graded Steers	4 80	@ 5 50
Cows and Heifers	2 10	@ 3 35
Medium to Fair	3 75	@ 4 00
HOGS	3 40	@ 3 95
FLOUR—Fancy White Winter Ex.	5 75	@ 7 00
Good to Choice Spring Ex.	5 75	@ 6 25
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	1 15	@ 1 16
No. 3 Spring	1 04	@ 1 05
CORN—No. 2	42	@ 43
OATS—No. 2	31	@ 32
RYE—No. 2	76	@ 77
BARLEY—No. 2	83	@ 84
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	29	@ 30
EGGS—Fresh	15½	@ 16
PORK—Mess	11 00	@12 00
LARD	6½	@ 6¾
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—No. 1	1 18	@ 1 19
No. 2	1 15	@ 1 16
CORN—No. 2	41	@ 42
OATS—No. 2	31	@ 32
RYE—No. 1	73	@ 74
BARLEY—No. 2	73	@ 74
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red Fall	1 20	@ 1 21½
CORN—Mixed	38	@ 37
OATS—No. 2	30	@ 30
RYE	67	@ 68
PORK—Mess	12 25	@12 50
LARD	6½	@ 6½
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT	1 20	@ 1 27
CORN	42	@ 49
OATS	33	@ 35
RYE	88	@ 86
PORK—Mess	11 00	@11 50
LARD	6½	@ 6¾
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—Amber Michigan	1 20	@ 1 30
No. 2, Red	1 27	@ 1 28
CORN—No. 2	45	@ 46
OATS—No. 2	33	@ 33
DETROIT.
FLOUR—Choice	6 75	@ 7 75
WHEAT—No. 1 White	1 24	@ 1 25
No. 1 Amber	1 23	@ 1 24
CORN—No. 1	51	@ 52
OATS—Mixed	33	@ 33
BARLEY (per cental)	1 15	@ 1 45
PORK—Mess	12 00	@12 25
EAST LIBERTY, PA.
CATTLE—Best	4 90	@ 5 10
Fair	4 00	@ 4 60
Common	3 10	@ 3 50
HOGS	3 70	@ 4 00
SHEEP	3 00	@ 4 25

AUBURN COURIER.

THEO. REED, HOR. J. LOWRY } Editors.

An association composed mostly of foreigners has purchased many of the leading newspapers in Italy and is actively negotiating for the possession of others.

Gen. Grant looks upon Beaconsfield, Bismarck and Gambetta as the three greatest men in Europe. He also wrote in a lady's album, in answer to the question, "Which two characters in history do you dislike most?" "Napoleon and Robespierre." It is said that the General has an intense dislike for the character and acts of the First Napoleon.

Dr. J. M. Ward, in the Medical Record, recommends, in all cases of poisoning by poison ivy, the use of Labarraque's solution of chloride of soda. When the skin is unbroken it may be used clear three or four times a day, or in other cases diluted with from three to six parts of water. It is a good local application in erysipelas, burns and scalds.

The Paraguayan Government has imposed a tax of $5 a year upon all single men between the age of 25 and 50. Women are not taxed, on the assumption, no doubt, that many of them would get married if they could, and are, therefore, not to blame for not becoming wives. The object is to make up for the loss of population caused by the long and terrible struggle between little Paraguay on one side, and Brazil and the Argentine Confederation on the other. A few years hence the effect of this tax will be worth observing.

Here is the statement of one iron firm of Pittsburgh, as showing what the revival in that business really is. In one mail it received thirty letters, twenty-two of which contained orders for the immediate delivery of steel work at good cash prices. But this firm couldn't fill the orders until after Jan. 1, so great had been the previous demand upon them. The kind of goods demanded is what they call Pittsburgh specialties, such as hoops, wire, horseshoe iron, cotton ties, etc., on which the profits are very large. The demand for these goods has been so large that it is said one firm has made $300,000 profits since the revival started.

The fires that have swept over the Northwestern prairie regions have not been more destructive than those in the forests of the Northeast. The ravages of forest fires in Canada, New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New Hampshire are described as almost unprecedented. At Montreal the smoke was so dense for several days that vessels were compelled to come to anchor and wait for a favorable wind to lift the smoke and allow them to proceed. The loss by detentions is estimated at $100,000 to Montreal merchants alone. In Vermont and New Hampshire large tracts of valuable timber have been destroyed. Several thousand acres have been burned over in Pike county, Pennsylvania, and a large amount of valuable timber has been destroyed, with cordwood and bark.

It is reported that the French have spent $200,000,000 since the Franco-German war in rearming troops, replenishing arsenals, and reconstructing lines of defense along the German frontier. It is said that the old detached forts around Paris have been replaced by new and heavily-armed forts. On the eastern frontier the war deprived France of the Rhine, the Vosges, the Moselle, and her principal fortresses on that side, and left six lines of railroad open by which the country might be invaded. These lines have been closed, and a wall of defense has been raised from Longwy to the Swiss frontier. Intrenched camps have been formed at Haxe, Verdun, Tavanne, Commercy, Toul, Epinal, and Belfort. In view of these new defenses, the Pall Mall Gazette thinks that "the Germans would now have a far more difficult task before them than they had in 1870 should they attempt another dash on Paris."

It is announced that Col. Gordon, one of the most remarkable men England has produced during the present century, is about to resign his position as Governor of the Soudan country in Central Africa. He commenced his active service at the head of the Chinese army, at a time when China was so rent with rebellion as to threaten the existence of the present dynasty. His skill and bravery saved the falling fortunes of the Government and routed the rebels in every direction. Upon leaving the service he received the thanks of the Chinese Government, and Prince Kung addressed a letter to the English Government, recommending him to its highest consideration. His next mission was the destruction of the horrible slave-trade in Central Africa, and the establishment of peace and civilization in that region. This great work he has also accomplished. The slave-trade has been suppressed and destroyed, and the whole Soudan country has been opened up to commerce and organized upon a peaceful and civilized basis. His last great work was the prevention of war between Egypt and Abyssinia. As he announced that he should resign when this was accomplished, his resignation may come at any time.

The Canada Pacific railway, according to a late London Times, has secured the capital for the construction of the entire road, in London. This fact has scarcely been alluded to in Canada or the United States, notwithstanding the above good authority. The negotiation is that the road gets 100,000,000 acres of land from Canada, which is given the British capitalists as security; the grant is to be vested in Commissioners, one of whom is to be appointed by the Imperial Government, and is to watch over the interests of English investors. A very considerable part of the railway is be open for traffic within two years; the long stretch from the head of Lake Superior to Selkirk, on the Red river, is divided into three sections; two of them, the easterly and westerly, are finished, while the intermediate one is in progress. From Winnipeg, the capital of Manitoba, the line is under contract for 300 miles west. The cost of laying and equipping the line west of Winnipeg is let at the low price of $10,000 per mile. But 400 miles west of that place the land is described as like a sea, with gentle undulations. The highest range of mountains the road crosses is but 3,000 feet, while those of the United States Pacific roads are 8,235 and 7,042 feet respectively. The only barren land is in the vicinity of Lake Superior.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

Of the 9,000,000 voters in the United States 6,000,000 are farmers.

Georgia gold mines are yielding at the rate of $1,000,000 per annum, and the amount will be largely increased this year.

Louisiana's Temperance Alliance gives the amount of liquor drunk in the State at $42,000,000 yearly, or $2,000,000 more than the value of the combined cotton, sugar and rice crops.

A box freight-car costs from $400 to $450. A baggage-car costs from $2,000 to $2,200. The usual price of a sleeping-car is $12,000. Drawing-room cars cost about $13,000. The ordinary mail-car costs about $2,000 to $3,000. The ordinary passenger-car about $4,500.

Iowa has a population of 1,500,000 people, 441 newspapers, 2,700 church organizations, with 1,400 edifices, and sittings for 431,000 persons and a membership of 200,000; 10,296 school houses for accommodating the 567,859 persons between the ages of 5 and 21, together with a school fund of $3,500,000.

A reliable Irish authority says that there are in Ireland 155,675 mud cabins, not one of which contains more than one apartment. These apartments are occupied by 227,379 families. There are also 357,126 mud cabins of a better class, which afford accommodations for 432,774 families. There are at least 100,000 small farmers who live in mud cabins of the worst class, in a large number of which the cows and pigs share the solitary room with the family.

India ranks fourth among the countries of the world in the extent of coal deposits. She has 30,000 square miles of coal-fields; the United States, 500,000; China, 400,000; and Australia, 240,000. Only 500,000 tons of Indian coal are now consumed annually, and this quantity is mined at Ranigunj, Kurhurbali, and Daltongunj in Bengal, and Mopani and Warora, in the central provinces. But there are 1,000,000 tons used every year for locomotives and factories, the other 500,000 being imported, mainly from Europe and Australia. Indian coal is almost all bituminous, and its structure is laminated, presenting alternate bright and dark layers. Its heating quality is inferior to English coal, but the native coal gives good results when mixed in equal proportions with the latter.

Monsters of the Past.

Prof. Cope, of Philadelphia, who is spending his summer leisure in California, gave, the other day, to the San Francisco Academy a description of two fossil animals. One of these was an enormous vertebrate somewhat resembling an aquatic kangaroo, named the camarasaurus supremus, whose neck was nine feet in diameter, whose hind legs were twenty feet long, whose spinal vertebræ were fifty-six inches across, and which must have been seventy-two feet long by measurements carefully taken. This animal could walk in forty feet of water and catch its prey with its fore paws. He also described another similar monster found, whose spinal vertebræ were six feet across, and whose hind legs were forty feet long, with carnivorous teeth placed in the upper and lower jaws like shears, so as to cut up animal food by traversing each other in the most perfect manner. The bones of the lower half of this animal are solid and very heavy, to keep its feet down in the water, while bones in the upper part of the body were built in honey-combed layers as thick as pasteboard, strong but very light and buoyant in water. This monster has been named amphicoelias fragilissmus, and must have been considerably over 100 feet in length. Both animals have large and powerful tails like kangaroos, and when catching their food in the water must have appeared as if on three-legged stools, the tail acting as an equal support of the tripod.—Burlington Hawk-Eye.

FARM NOTES.

[From the Chicago Times.]

An Adjustable Rack.—Among the articles of recent invention in the agricultural department of the Exposition are three different patterns of adjustable racks for farm wagons. They are designed to fit on the top of any wagon-body, and are so constructed that they can stand upright and increase the height of the box one-half, or they may be let down so as to incline over the wheels of the wagon. In the first position they make a high box that is very convenient for hauling hogs, calves and sheep as well as for carrying corn in the ear and bags of grain. In the second position they form an excellent rack for hay, straw and grain. The entire rack is easily removed and is held in position by means of thumb-screws. The weight of the rack is about 125 pounds. It is a marvel that the rack was not invented and brought into use before.

Safety of Stacks.—In visiting a farm near the city, recently, seventeen stacks of hay and grain were found so near each other that it was difficult to drive a wagon between them, while the most distant one was so near the house that sparks from the chimney might light on it. It was apparent that all the stacks would be consumed if a fire was started in one of them. With the stacks on fire, all the farm buildings would, as a matter of course, be swept away. So far as feeding is concerned, it is convenient to have all the stacks of fodder near the barn, but locating them there involves a great deal of danger. A provident course would be to build a large proportion of the stacks of hay in the field at quite a distance from the buildings. Some cautious farmers locate their straw-stacks on ground that is plowed, so they will not be in danger of ruin.

Impure Water in Wells.—The present is an excellent time for cleaning out wells, as in most parts of the West they contain little water. Persons are generally astonished at the amount and character of the filth found in the bottom of wells that were cleaned out the previous season. In addition to offensive vegetable matter, there are often dead reptiles, insects, and small animals. Still the water in which these creatures have been soaking for months has been used for cooking and drinking purposes. There are sanitary reasons for allowing wells to be open, but an open well should have a high and tight curb. The curb, or platform on which it rests, should also fit tight to the wall of the well. The stones which compose the wall of the well should be laid in hydraulic cement for at least four feet below the curb, and the place between the platform and the wall should be closed with cement.

The Health of Farm Stock.—The prosperity of farmers the present season is not limited to large crops and good prices. The year will long be remembered as one when good health prevailed among all kinds of domestic animals and fowls. Since the advent of the disease popularly known as hog cholera, there has been no season in which so few died from it. Sheep have been remarkably healthy in all parts of the country. In the East a few cases of pleuro-pneumonia have occurred, but none have been reported in the West. It has been a general season of health among dairy cows, and quacks have been called to treat but few cattle troubled with the "hollow-horn." Even the poultry-yards have been exempt from disease. Very few chickens have died from the gapes or cholera. In no time or country was there ever a more general state of health among farm animals and fowls than in this country the present season.

Reliable Seed-Corn.—The years are few in which farmers do not sustain large losses in consequence of having planted corn that did not germinate. It is more important that the seed of corn be good than that good seed be planted for other cultivated crops. Corn ordinarily requires the entire season in which to mature, and, if replanting is rendered necessary on account of worthless seed, that which was late planted may not mature till the coming of early frosts. Corn-growing from seed planted at different times will not be even at any time during the season, and on this account the field will be difficult to cultivate. Farmers sometimes obviate the difficulty by replanting with seed of an early variety. The two kinds of corn may ripen at about the same time, but a yield of mixed corn will be the result, and mixed corn never brings the highest market price.

The Time to Import Stock.—There never was a more favorable time than the present in which to import stock from Great Britain. American farmers are prosperous, and those of the latter country are in adverse circumstances. American farmers have money in abundance, while English farmers are sadly in need of it. There is plenty of feed here and a scarcity of it there. American farmers require fine stock, and English farmers are obliged to sell some of theirs. We are not suffering for any more short-horn cattle, but more of other improved breeds are desired. What we want more than any kind of cattle is sheep. England has the finest mutton sheep in the world, and sheep that will produce superior mutton have received but little attention in this country. A fleet of vessels leave our ports for England every week laden with grain. They have small return cargoes. They might bring back sheep.

How to Save Seed-Corn.—The poorest way, though one that is practiced quite extensively, is to allow it to remain on the stalks till near midwinter, to husk it, and throw it in a crib with the corn that is intended for the market or for feeding. A good way, if not the best, is to select the ears before the stalks are removed from the hill, the preference being given to those that are of large size and thoroughly ripe. The ears should be broken from the stalks with the husks attached. In this shape they may be taken to the house or barn in a basket. All the husks should be removed, except three or four of the inner ones, that should be used for braiding a sufficient number of ears together to form a string five or six feet in length. If the weather is fine, these braids may be hung over a rail where the sun and wind will have free access to them. During the winter they may be hung in a garret or unfinished room in the house, or in a dry place in some out-building.

Heeling in Trees.—To heel is a nautical expression, which signifies to incline to one side. It is likely that some old salt, tired of "life on the ocean wave," introduced the term into the language of horticulture when he thought to set out an orchard. To heel in trees means to cover their roots in a pit, their trunks being inclined so that the branches will touch the ground. Nurserymen ordinarily advise their patrons to purchase trees in the fall; to take them to their farms; to heel them in, and to let them remain in that condition till the following spring, when they are to be set out. The process is a good one for nurserymen, but it is of very questionable value to their patrons. It takes nearly as much time to heel in trees as it does to set them out. Unless the operation is conducted with great care, they cannot be taken from the place where they are heeled in without damage. If the earth is removed from around the roots with a spade, they are quite likely to be cut or bruised. If the trees are pulled from the pit without first removing the earth, they are liable to injury. If the pit is quite deep, the roots of the trees will be likely to be covered with water. If it is very shallow, they will be in danger of freezing and thawing several times during the winter. If straw is placed round the roots to prevent their freezing, mice will make their home in it and eat the bark on the roots.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

A Pudding.—Butter a mold and stick inside pieces of preserved raisins, etc.; fill up with sponge-cakes broken in pieces; pour in a custard (with a pint of milk, three eggs and sugar to taste); flavor with brandy or essence and boil for an hour.

Sauce for Puddings.—One cupful sugar, half cupful butter whipped to a cream; add one cupful of boiling water, and scald, but not boil; thicken with two teaspoonfuls of corn starch; add one wine-glass of wine (brandy is best) and a well-beaten egg.

Johnny Cake.—One quart buttermilk, teacupful flour, two-thirds teacupful molasses, a little salt, one teaspoonful saleratus, one egg, beaten; leave it so thin that it will almost run; bake in a tin. If it is not light, it will be because it is too thick.

Peaches in Cans.—Peel ripe peaches; cut them into halves, put them in a preserving-kettle, with a little sugar sprinkled over them. Let them heat thoroughly in a pan of hot water on the range. When the peaches are scalding hot put them in glass jars and seal them up.

Apple Custard Pie.—Scald the milk and let it cool; grate some sweet apples; to each cupful of apples have two-thirds cupful of powdered sugar, four well-beaten eggs, one cupful milk, one-fourth of a nutmeg; line an earthen pie-dish with a rich crust, and let it bake; then fill with the custard and let it bake for half an hour. To be eaten cold.

Chester Pudding.—Take a large lemon, grate the rind, squeeze out the juice; one dozen sweet almonds, one dozen bitter (pound these), one ounce butter, quarter pound loaf sugar, the yelks of four eggs; put all into a saucepan over a slow fire, and when the butter melts beat all together; line a dish with puff paste, and lay in the mixture; bake in a quick oven. It should be sent to table on a napkin, with the whites of the eggs beaten and laid upon the top.

Queen Mab Pudding.—Soak a sixpence packet of gelatine in warm water for two hours; then boil a pint of milk with lemon peel and add to the gelatine. When the latter is dissolved, sweeten to taste and pour in gently the yelks of four eggs; pour all back to the saucepan and simmer as a custard over a slow fire, not allowing it to boil. When thick enough remove from the fire and stir in gradually four ounces of preserved cherries; continue stirring till nearly cold, then pour into a mold.

Ham Balls.—Beat six eggs until very light, and add flour gradually until you have a batter stiff enough to admit of being made into balls. Prepare some cold boiled ham, fat and lean mixed, by chopping it up very fine; then flour it, and mix with the batter. Drop the balls into melted lard that is boiling hot; fry, and then drain them on a sieve till free from the adhesion of any grease. This is a nice way to use ham after it has been sent to table several days, and a good deal has been cut from the joint, so that it no longer makes a very sightly dish.

Chicken Salad.—Boil a large-sized spring chicken about two hours; let it get cold; then remove all the skin and fat; then chop not quite as fine as mince meat; have the same quantity of chopped celery and the yelks of four boiled eggs pressed smooth with a silver or wooden spoon; then take one pint of sweet milk, and bring it just to a boiling heat; then add the yelks of two eggs well beaten; as soon as this dressing is cold, add one table-spoonful of cider vinegar, and pepper and salt to taste; then mix the whole nicely together, and place on a platter, and trim the edges of the platter with the nicest of the celery leaves.

Curious Freak of Nature.

One of the most remarkable of nature's curious freaks can be seen in the garden of Mr. Caleb Crow, of this place. It is nothing more nor less than a peach tree bearing a full-grown pumpkin. This tree bore none of its natural fruit this season; but, nevertheless, there hangs the healthy-growing pumpkin, just as if it had grown from the blossom to its present size, which is considerably larger that a man's head. —Hartford (Ky.) News.

Ex-Senator Stewart, of Nevada, has retrieved his fortunes.

DAKOTA.

The Next New State.

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

The progress of settlement in the Northwest has, during the last four years, been immense. Into Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Iowa and Minnesota the stream has been continuous and large. Population has followed the extension of railways, and the surveyor who marks out upon the unbroken and unoccupied prairie the route of the railway finds, when he makes his first trip over the rails, a country peopled, with their farms in actual cultivation. This tide of settlement has, however, gone far beyond the organized States. It has been induced by various circumstances, but especially mining prospects, to go into Montana and Wyoming; but a great population seeking farms for permanent occupation has poured into Dakota, not merely in one locality, but from the extreme northern line to the Nebraska line. The present territorial boundaries of Dakota include an area as large nearly as that of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, and more than twice as great as that of Minnesota. That portion of the Territory west of the Missouri river is mainly set apart for Indian reservations, but all that part east of the Missouri river is rapidly filling up with agricultural settlers, pouring in daily from all points of the compass. The peculiar advantage of Dakota for settlers is that all the land is the property of the Government; no part of it has been granted to railroads, but all is open to purchase or for entry under the Homestead law. The land itself is extremely fertile, and the eastern half of Dakota is capable of producing more breadstuffs and other articles of food and of merchandise than any one of the existing States, not excepting Minnesota. Another advantage is that the settler takes his land unincumbered by any mortgages or heavy taxation resulting from county debts contracted in aid of railroads—a burden which unfortunately weighs heavily upon our Western States. The settlers are all well-to-do people, who go into the Territory with their horses, cows, breaking plows, and money enough to enable them to begin work as soon as they reach their land. They are not a floating population; they have gone there to stay, and the settlers of 1878 and of 1879 will have their crops selling in Chicago in 1880. So large has become this population, and so much of the land has been put under cultivation, that there are no less than six railways now constructing in the State, and, reaching westward from Minnesota, have already penetrated far on toward the Missouri river. The James or Dakota river runs from north to south through the whole extent of the new State, and enters the Missouri river at the southern boundary. The six railroads cross the State and this river from east to west. The Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad and the Chicago and Northwestern railroad will be completed to the Dakota river by January next. The Hastings and Dakota, the St. Paul and Sioux City, the Southern Minnesota, and the Northern Pacific are all rapidly pushing westward through Dakota. These six parallel railways cross the State at convenient distances, giving to Dakota a system of transportation and a facility of reaching market not surpassed by that of any State in the Union.

The population of Dakota at this time can hardly be estimated. The inflow of population during the last eighteen months has been very large. On each of these six lines of railroad the settlements have been rapid and continuous, as well as along the Missouri and Dakota rivers. It is not in any way extravagant to assume that by the date of the census next June the population of the State will not be less than 130,000, and before the expiration of 1880 it may be 160,000. There is no reason to expect that this rate of increase will not continue for several years to come and until the population of Dakota shall reach 500,000 to 600,000.

It is more than probable, therefore, that the Territorial Assembly of Dakota will, at the coming session, memorialize Congress to pass an act enabling the people of Dakota to adopt a State constitution, that Dakota may be admitted as a State into the Union. It is possible that the formal admission may be postponed until after the Presidential election, but there is no reason why Congress should delay taking such legislative steps as will result in the admission of the State of Dakota in January, 1881.

In the Coils of a Serpent.

One of the most intrepid wild-beast tamers in Europe, Karolyi, a Magyar of colossal stature and extraordinary physical strength, has recently fallen a victim to a dread contingency of his perilous profession. He was performing before a crowded audience in Madrid the other day, one of his most sensational feats, which consisted in allowing a huge boa constrictor, over twenty feet in length, to infold his body in its tremendous coils, when suddenly a piercing cry escaped him which was greeted by the public with a round of applause, under the supposition that its utterance constituted part of the performance. It proved, however, to be the outcome of a strong man's death-agony. The gigantic snake had tightened its coils, and crushed poor Karolyi's life out of him with one terrific squeeze. As his head fell back and his eyes became fixed in a glassy stare, the plaudits died away, and were succeeded by the stillness of utter consternation. The snake and its lifeless victim swayed for a second or two of inexpressible horror, and then toppled on the boards of the stage. But the boa did not in the least relax his grip upon the corpse, which remained for more than an hour imprisoned in its hideous thralldom, nobody daring to approach the lithe monster, of whose powers such appalling proof had been given. At length it occurred to one of Karolyi's attendants to place a bowl of milk in a cage within sight of the mighty serpent, which slowly unwound itself from the dead body and glided into its den, irresistibly tempted thereto by its favorite dainty. A post-mortem examination of the unfortunate athlete's remains discovered no fewer than eighty-seven fractures of his bones, effected by the constriction of the serpent's coils. His death must have been almost instantaneous, as the spine was dislocated in several places.—London Telegraph.

Visit to a Pin Factory.

A correspondent of the New York Evening Post thus describes the mysteries of pin-making:

"The pin machine is one of the closest approaches that mechanics have made to the dexetrity of the human hand. A small machine, about the height and size of a lady's sewing-machine, only stronger, stands before you. On the back side a light belt descends from the long shaft at the ceiling, that drives all the machines, ranged in rows on the floor. On the left side of our machine hangs on a peg a small reel of wire that has been straightened by running through a compound system of small rollers.

"This wire descends, and the end of it enters the machine. It pulls it in and bites it off by inches, incessantly, 140 bites to a minute. Just as it seizes each bite, a little hammer, with a concave face, hits the end of the wire three taps, and 'upsets' it to a head, while it grips it in a countersunk hole between its teeth. With an outward thrust of its tongue, it then lays the pin sideways in a little groove across the rim of a small wheel that slowly revolves just under its nose. By the external pressure of a stationary hoop, these pins roll in their places, as they are carried under two series of small files, three in each. These files grow finer toward the end of the series. They lie at a slight inclination on the points of the pins, and by a series of cams, levers and springs are made to play 'like lightning.' Thus the pins are pointed and dropped in a little shower into a box.

"Twenty-eight pounds of pins is a day's work for one of these jerking little automatons. Forty machines on this floor make 560 pounds of pins daily. These are then polished. Two very intelligent machines reject every crooked pin, even the slightest irregularity of form being detected.

"Another automaton assorts half a dozen lengths in as many different boxes, all at once and unerringly, when a careless operator has mixed the contents of the boxes from various machines. Lastly, a perfect genius of a machine hangs the pin by the head, in an inclined platform, through as many 'slots' as there are pins in a row on the paper. These slots converge into the exact space spanning the length of a row. Under them runs the strip of pin paper. A hand-like part of the machine catches one pin from each of the slots as it falls, and by one movement sticks them all through two corrugated ridges in the paper, from which they are to be picked by taper fingers in boudoirs, and all sorts of human fingers in all sorts of human circumstances. Thus you have its genesis:

"Tall and slender, straight and thin,
Pretty, little, useful pin."

The Russian Czar Makes a Speech.

A most remarkable speech of the Emperor Alexander to his troops at Odessa is reported in the Russian press. His Imperial Majesty was inspecting the troops of the Eighth army corps quartered at Odessa, and, after saluting the battalions of the Fourth brigade of riflemen, which has the Prince of Bulgaria for its nominal chief, his Majesty shook hands with the chief of the brigade, Maj. Gen. Krok, and, ordering forward all the officers and those men who were the happy possessors of the order of St. George, thanked them in the following words: "I have long wished to see, and to-day I am very happy to be able to thank you for your heroic service." His Majesty then took off his helmet and said, "Gentlemen, in the name of the whole Russian people and Russian troops, I thank you for your glorious work and heroic service." Then, replacing his helmet, the Emperor continued, "I expected in general a great deal from my troops, but you have surpassed my anticipations." His Majesty again shook hands with Maj. Gen. Krok and kissed him on the cheek, amid thundering hurrahs from the troops, which were silenced for a few moments, while his Majesty further said, "I would like to embrace each one of you, but you are too many; therefore, in the person of your chief of brigade, I embrace you all." This most gracious speech of the Emperor, delivered with much fervor, called forth tremendous enthusiasm among the assembled soldiers, who continued to cheer until his Imperial Majesty quitted the ground.

"Yacob und Kaderine"

"Jacob Strauss," said the Magistrate in Essex Market Court yesterday. An awkward-looking German lad stepped forward.

"Mrs. Catherine Strauss," said the Justice. A long, lank German lass advanced.

"You are man and wife?"

"Yah," answered Jacob.

"And you had a quarrel?"

"Dot's so," said Catherine Strauss.

"Mrs. Strauss has a black eye, which her husband gave her?"

"Und a pooty pine und plack eye it was," said the wife, crying.

"But Mr. Strauss declares that he is very sorry he hit her, begs her forgiveness, and says he will not do it again."

"So help me! uff I don't you lock me cop und send for me."

"Will you pardon him, Mrs. Strauss?"

"Vell, I don't like dot young man to get punished so quick, as only dree months married," she said, eying her spouse askance.

"Will you be ever so good hereafter, Mr. Strauss?"

"I don't speak von vord mit crossness mit her no more."

"You are both satisfied?"

"Yah," together.

"Let me see you make up then."

"Yakob," cried the wife, advancing toward Mr. Strauss.

"Kaderine," said the husband, as he embraced her affectionately with one arm and wiped away a tear on the coat sleeve of the other.—New York Herald.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, NOV. 6, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
THOMAS A. HENDRICKS,
Subject to the decision of the democratic national convention.

"NO SOLID SOUTH, NO SOLID NORTH, BUT A SOLID UNION."

Just for one small man, Grant requires more "receptions" than anybody.

It is rumored in railroad circles that Gould and Vanderbilt have pooled their extensive railroad interests.

Patriotism is at a discount in Ohio, sure. Stay-at-home bravos out-rank brave defenders of our country, in the estimation of the "truly loyal" Buckeyes.

Gov. Cornell, of New York, if he knows anything about Old Hundred, will be inclined to sing it thusly:

"Praise John from whom all blessings flow," etc.

Those democratic newspapers that were so certain that John Kelley had lost his influence in New York, must now conclude that Tilden has not gained what Kelley lost.

In all probability some of our democratic editors who have been insisting upon Tilden's popularity and influence in New York, will soon be seeking a very small knot-hole to crawl through.

The Cincinnati Gazette is not afraid to divulge true republican sentiments. It speaks right out in meeting, and says: Rather than have the democratic party come into power, it would have Grant elected Dictator for life.

The sale of the Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw railroad will take place on the first of December. If the Wabash company gets it, a through line will be established to St. Louis, and that portion of the Eel River road running from here to Butler will doubtless be abandoned.

Tom Starr, of the Hicksville News, after quoting several person's views relative to the cause of the democratic defeat in Ohio, gives it as his opinion that it was principally attributable to the fact that the republicans polled the most votes, and we are inclined to indorse his views.

It is not generally known that each convict now pardoned out of the Indiana penitentiaries by Gov. Williams, is released on the condition that he will not use intoxicating liquors for the remaining portion of the time for which he was sentenced. Any pardoned convict violating the conditions of the pardon is liable to arrest and confinement for his unexpired time. The governor proposes to start a little temperance society of his own.

From an exchange we learn that one Edwards, republican editor of the Frederickstown Free Press, recently printed his entire newspaper edition on calico. He probably indulged the fond hope that the girls would take to wearing them; but it is pretty generally understood that women are blessed with other sources for spreading the news. What scheme will some republican ninny concoct next? (Now, ladies and republicans, come at us!)

Mr. Wm. B. McConell, formerly of Angola, well and favorably known in this county, has hung out his shingle in Fargo, Dakota. Hundreds of Billy's friends in northeastern Indiana wish him unbounded prosperity in his new field of labor. The Fargo Republican gives him the following notice:

"Wm. B. McConell, Esq., attorney-at-law, from Angola, Ind., has been looking over the territory for several weeks and has at last decided to locate in Fargo. Mr. McConnell is a young man of fine attainments and comes well recommended. He was district-attorney in one of the largest circuits in Indiana nearly five years, which is sufficient recommendation in itself."

The November Elections

Elections were held in eleven states last Tuesday, New York state being the center of attraction. In that state the democrats claim a majority of 80,000 for all the democratic candidates except governor, who was defeated by the Tammany bolt. We were satisfied that such would be the result, and we are now more confident than ever that the defeat of Robinson means the shelving of Tilden. New York will be solid for democracy in 1880, as it is in 1879, and any democratic candidate for president, except Samuel J. Tilden, can carry the state without a doubt.

In Massachusetts, Ben Butler was defeated by the republican candidate.

In Chicago the republicans made large gains, and elected their entire ticket.

Pennsylvania is republican as usual.

Minnesota is still a republican state.

Wisconsin republicans claim a majority of 20,000.

Connecticut republicans increase their majority in the legislature.

New Jersey still has a republican legislature.

Maryland elects the entire democratic ticket.

Nebraska solid for the republicans.

Aside from the loss of the governor of New York, we are content with the result.

The trial of Jack Swain for the murder of Sheehy last fourth of July, now in progress at Ft. Wayne, furnishes material for about as forcible a temperance lecture as one could listen to. Young Swain had borne a moderately fair reputation prior to that time and was generally regarded as peaceable by those who knew him; that he was mixed up with a hard gang on the night of July 4th, however, cannot be disputed; but inebriation took him there. His chances for acquittal grow daily brighter, the testimony of several of the state's witnesses having been impeached.

Off The Track.

"We heard it on Monday that Mr. Lowry had retired from the COURIER establishment."—Waterloo Press, Oct. 16th.

We have questioned ourself about it personally, Bro. Baxter, and have every reason to believe that you have "heard it" wrong. The mere fact that the COURIER maintains its accustomed brilliancy and appears with its usual regularity every Thursday, is sufficient proof that no such catastrophe has befallen this establishment. We think our respected partner could not dispense with our services—unless compelled to by death—for any consideration; and besides, what would the people of Auburn do? Oh no, really, we couldn't think of leaving—except by request at the end of a stuffed club.

The following opinion, taken from a special dispatch to the Enquirer, dated at New York last Monday, so far as it relates to the nomination and election of Tilden, coincides with the views we have advocated during the New York campaign. The dispatch says: "If this campaign does not elect Robinson, it will probably be in Kelly's power to get republican help for the support of his city measures whenever the republicans see that they can not directly benefit themselves. In other words, Kelly's attitude now will make Tammany Hall for some time to come the beneficiary of a republican trade, instead of the different anti-Tammany organizations, as heretofore. This understanding, in my judgment, will go on through the presidential year, if Cornell be now elected, to the extent of beating Tilden for president in any event. But if another democrat is put up for president, TAMMANY HALL WILL SURPASS ITSELF IN SUPPORTING HIM. Some think that the democracy will be threatened from the Tilden side if Mr. Tilden is not run; but there will be few Tilden men left if Robinson is beaten now."

ZACH CHANDLER DEAD.

Another Republican Light Extinguished.

Senator Chandler died suddenly at the Grand Pacific hotel, in Chicago, last Satday morning. He had been speaking in Wisconsin, and stopped over in Chicago on his way home. The evening before his death he spoke to a large audience at McCormick hall, and afterwards during the evening complained of indigestion, but was not seriously alarmed. He entertained some friends until about eleven o'clock, when he retired, leaving orders to be called at 7 o'clock for an early train. When called in the morning he did not answer; the hotel clerk was notified, who gained an entrance through the transom and found the senator cold in death. He was immediately examined by physicians, who decided that death had occurred about three hours before he was discovered. His wife and friends at Detroit were notified at once, and a delegation left immediately for Chicago to accompany the remains home. The governor of Michigan issued a proclamation for the suspension of business at the state offices on Wednesday, the day of the funeral. At the same time the following order was issued by President Hayes:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, Nov. 1, 1879.

The sad intelligence of the death of Zachariah Chandler, late secretary of the interior, and during so many years senator from the state of Michigan, has been communicated to the government and to the country, and in proper respect to his memory, I hereby order that the several executive departments be closed to public business, and their flags and those of their dependencies throughout the country be displayed at half mast on the day of the funeral.

(Signed) R. B. HAYES.

In the loss of Chandler the republican party has lost its only true leader, the only great light in the party capable of expressing the real sentiment upon which the new issues of that party are based. No public man now living is capable of exhibiting so much venom toward his political opponents, none can sink so low in partisan depravity, none can so effectually set ablaze the fires of sectional hate, none so bold in the advocacy of evil political ideas. Yet, with all his faults, he was faithful to his party and to his friends, a good citizen, free from hypocrisy, and no doubt honest in motives. May he rest in peace.

Take Notice.

Whereas my wife, Elizabeth Newton, has left and separated herself from me, I hereby caution all persons not to trust her to any articles whatever, as I shall not be responsible for their payment. The said Elizabeth Newton left my house, in Concord township, DeKalb county, Ind, on the 2nd day of October, 1879, and I shall not be responsible for any of her expenses from that date.

ISAAC E. NEWTON.

November 6, 1879.

Lost.

On Friday, Oct. 31st, and seen in Auburn on Saturday following, a white hog, weighing about 225 pounds. The finder will please leave word at this office, and be rewarded for trouble.

Out of the Darkness into Light.

The saddest message that has come to us in many days is that of the death, on Thursday morning last, October 30, of Miss Flora Sherman, of Plymouth, in the twenty-second year of her age. She was a young lady possessed of rare qualities of mind and heart, as a consequence of which she was blessed with the regard and affection of numberless warm friends wherever known; and thus, in the bud of womanhood, is another flower taken from earth to diffuse its sweetness in a home above the skies.

For her mother, who has now lost nearly all that was dearest to her in life,—having but a few months since been bowed down with grief at the loss of her husband,—our tenderest sympathies are extended, while we would fain console her with the assurance that the father and daughter are now together, in a land where parting is unknown.

For Sale!

No. 1.

Farm, 120 acres, 4½ miles from Auburn, 2 miles from Garrett, well improved, good house and barn, and fruit trees of all kinds.

No. 2.

House and two lots, stable, good well, and small fruit, for sale cheap.

No. 3.

Farm, 137 acres, well improved, within 1½ miles of Newville, two story frame house, good barn, splendid orchard, small fruit of all kind, good bargains.

No. 4.

Farm, 70 acres, situated in Newville township, DeKalb Co. Ind., well improved, good orchard, small fruits of all kind, very cheap.

No. 5.

To trade, house and lot in Auburn for 80 acres of land, will pay difference.

No. 6.

To trade, 167 acres of land, well improved, good buildings and fences, will trade for 80 acres of well improved land or will sell.

SPROTT & WOOD,
Auburn, Ind.

Liquor License Notice.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of Garrett, in DeKalb county, in the state of Indiana, that the undersigned an inhabitant of said state, over the age of twenty-one years, will apply to the board of commissioners of said county, at their December session, 1879, for a license to retail spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in less quantity than a quart at a time, at and with the privilege of having the same drunk on the following premises, to-wit: Lot twenty-four (24) in block eighteen (18) in the incorporated town of Garrett, Keyser township, Indiana.

J. WILLIAM WAGNER.

Nov. 6, 1879.

Notice of Sale.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of an order of the DeKalb circuit court, the undersigned administrator of the estate of George S. Noff, deceased, will offer for sale at public auction on the premises, on an equal undivided two-thirds of the following described lands:

SATURDAY, the 15th day of NOVEMBER, 1879,

The undivided two thirds of a certain tract bounded as follows: Commencing at the northwest corner of the southwest quarter of section seventeen [17], in township thirty-four [34] north of range fourteen [14] east, running thence north until it intersects the north boundary line of the right-of-way of the Detroit, Eel River & Illinois railway, thence in a northeasterly direction along said right-of-way to the east boundary line of the west half of said southwest quarter, thence north on said east boundary line to the north boundary line of said southwest quarter, thence west on said boundary line to the place of beginning, containing about sixty acres of land. Also the following described real estate in said county: Commencing at the southeast corner of the west half of the said southwest quarter of section seventeen [17], running thence north to the south boundary line of the right-of-way of said Detroit, Eel River & Illinois railway, thence in a southwesterly direction along said right-of-way to the west boundary line of said west half of said quarter section, thence south to the section line between sections seventeen [17] and twenty [20], thence east on said section line to the place of beginning, containing seventeen [17] acres of land.

TERMS:—One third cash, the residue in equal payments at 12 and 18 months, with notes at interest, waiving valuation and appraisement laws, and secured by mortgage on said premises. Sale to begin at 2 o'clock p. m.

CYRUS C. WALTERS, Adm'r.

43-3

MAX G. LADE'S

WELL KNOWN

SPORTSMEN'S EMPORIUM!

58 EAST MAIN STREET,
Fort Wayne, Ind.

The finest and largest assortment of all kinds of Guns, Rifles, Revolvers,

Ammunition,
Fishing Tackle,
Hunting Suits,
Boxing Gloves,
Boat Oars,
Pocket Cutlery,
Razors, Scissors,

That ever was shown in this city, is now on exhibition at the above emporium. Prices, lowest in the state. Repairing of all kinds of guns, revolvers, locks, etc., done in first class style and cheap. Keys fitted and stencil cutting at lowest prices, satisfaction guaranteed every time.

I will be found in my place of business from morning till evening, every day. Send for circulars.

45-2m. MAX G. LADE.

FRUIT HOUSE PRICES.

Great Reduction in Coffees, Teas, Sugars Syrups and Tobaccos.

Goods have never in the memory of the oldest inhabitant been selling so low as now.

JUST THINK OF GOOD RIO

COFFEE	14c Per Lb
BEST WHITE COFFEE A SUGAR	9½c Per Lb
EXTRA NEW ORLEANS SUGAR	8c Per Lb
EXTRA C SUGAR NEARLY WHITE	8½c Per Lb
GRANULATED AND CUT LOAF	10½ Per Lb
Sweet Drawing Young Hyson Tea	65c Per Lb
Choice Extra Golden Syrup	44c Per Lb

Such low prices; there is no certainty of their continuing, but as long as we can purchase good bargains our motto is to give our customers the benefit of them.

RIO COFFEE DOWN 3 Cts; JAVA COFFEE DOWN 5 Cts.

Good Rio, 14c; best 17c; Old Government Java 25; Roasted Rio, 16c; best 20c; Roasted Java, 32c.

SUGARS DOWN 1 CENT.

White Coffee A 9½c; Extra C 8½c; New Orleans Yellow 8c; Crushed, Cut Loaf and Granulated 10½c.

TEAS!

THE LOWEST THEY HAVE BEEN FOR TWENTY YEARS

When teas a few years ago sold at $1.50 and $2.00 per pound the extreme high prices almost kept the use of tea as a luxury; this is not so any longer. Teas are now relatively cheaper than coffee and the demand for them so increased the last five years that we now sell 2 and 3 chests daily. We keep up our usual motto of no middlemen. Our teas go direct to our customers and we purchase direct from importers, thereby saving them the three profits of the speculators, jobbers and wholesale merchant, which is at least 16 to 20c per lb.

Young Hyson	20c, 30, 50, best 65
Imperial	40, 60, best 65
Gunpowder	50, 60, best 65
Oolong	30, 40, best 60
Uncolored Japan	20, 40, best 70

SYRUPS AND NEW ORLEANS MOLASSES.

Choice Golden Syrup 45c per gallon, Extra Sugar Loaf Drips 70c; best 70c; Best New Orleans Molasses 50c per gallon.

TOBACCOS!

PLUG, FINE CUT, SHORTS AND SMOKING AT BOTTOM FIGURES.

Best plug 50c; No. 1 50c; good 30 and 35c; smoking 28c; extra 35c; shorts 28c.

DRIED APPLES AND PEACHES.

Best dried apples 5c per pound. No. 1, dried peaches 7c. Choice raisins 10c. best 15c Seedless sultanas 14c. Best Zantee currants 8c. Leghorn citron 25c. Lemon peel 20c.

COALOIL, FISH OIL AND NEATS FOOT OIL

Headlight 18c; Neat's foot oil 70c; fish oil 70c; machine oil 25c best 40c. Scotch ale, London and Dublin porter 18c per bottle. Angelica California wine 25c. Old 76 for Medical use 50c All kinds of liquors and wines on hand.

MEATS! MEATS!

Sugar cured hams 9c; sugar cured shoulders 6c; best lard 9c; breakfast bacon 8c; pickeled pork 7c per pound.

FISH! FISH!

PICKEREL, WHITE FISH, HERRING AND MACKEREL.

No. 1. white fish ½ bbl. $5.00. Kitts 85c. No. 2, pickerel $1.50 Kitts 50c, No. 1. herring each 1c ½ bbl $3.00. Family mackerel in Kitts 65c and $1.25.

9-45 tf. 20 Cents on the Dollar saved by purchasing at

FORT WAYNE FRUIT HOUSE,
FORT WAYNE INDIANA.

$50,000! $50,000! $50,000

WORTH OF CLOTHING!

Which was manufactured for southern trade, is now offered at

Sixty Cents on the Dollar.

We bought these goods of a large New York house, which manufactures for, and depends principally on southern trade. Owing to the fever raging so furiously south, they could neither sell nor ship their goods, and were obliged, therefore, to dispose of their entire stock to northern dealers at a big sacrifice.

We took advantage of this rare chance by buying only for cash, and therefore are enabled to sell these entire new goods at 65 cents on the dollar.

SAVE MONEY BY FAVORING US WITH A CALL.

SAM, PETE & MAX, Managers
Star Clothing House, FORT WAYNE, IND.,

ROOT & COMPANY

We beg leave to announce that we have now in stock the most elegant line of

FALL DRESS GOODS!

That we have ever before displayed. Our Novelities are new in design and colorings and are simply exquisite. Some of the new effects this season are more beautiful than any that have been before produced. Besides an unusually fine variety of

COLORED SILKS,

In all the desirable shades, we have a line of elegant

Colored Brocades,

Plain Black Silks in all the best known foreign and domestic brands. In this line we have several special bargains, among which will be found heavy Gros Grain Silk. Eighteen inches wide, 75c; Nineteen inches wide, 90c; Twenty inches wide, $1.00. Most excellent goods for the money. We make a specialty of all kinks of consisting in part of all the fashionable shades of plain, stripe and fancy Velvets, Black and Colored Silks and Satins, Pekin Satin Stripes and Satin Moire Stripes, etc. We have some new, elegant and tasteful goods in this line not to be found elsewhere. Our stock of Black and Colored

TRIMMINGS,

FRINGES,

will be found unusually large and exceedingly elegant

Button, Button, who's got the Button?

is no longer an open question. Everyone knows that Root & Company have always got the particular button that anyone may want, especially if it be rare and elegant. Our assortment is really almost without limit. New Garments in Black and Colors in all the fashionable shapes.

Root & Co., Calhoun Street,
FORT WAYNE, IND

Another Car-Load

OF

PARLOR AND COOKING

STOVES

Received at the Hardware Store of

KIBLINGER & CO.

They were purchased before the advance, and will be sold at

Old Prices!

30 per cent. less than the advance now.

W. H. KIBLINGER & COMP'Y.,

North of court house, 1st door west of McQuiston & Ralston's double store.

AUBURN, - - IND.

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Auburn Courier.

Local and Miscellaneous

—Mortgages,
—Warranty Deeds,
—Quit Claim Deeds,
—Guardian's Receipts, (bound),
—Administrator's Receipts (bound,)
—For sale in large or small quantities at the Courier office. tf.

—Try some of Tom. Cool's fresh meat.

—Abright's is headquarters for sheet music.

—Quarterly meeting at the M. E. church next Sabbath.

—500 pieces of sheet music for sale at Abright's, the jeweler.

—Mrs. T. C. Mays spent a portion of this week visiting in Fort Wayne.

—Attend the lectures, to-night, to-morrow night and Saturday night.

—Excellent fresh tub-oysters at Hollister's, only thirty-five cents a quart.

—Rev. A. Marine will preach at the M. E. church next Sabbath evening.

—Call at Abright's, the jeweler, and examine the self piano and organ instructor.

—Fifty cents will admit you to the entire course of Prof. Clarke's scientific lectures.

—Jay Eastman, of the C. O. D. store, Garrett, gave us a pleasant call Wednesday last.

—Harman Lobmiller was twenty one last Tuesday, and he fixed all the boys off with cigars.

—Dr. Tritch has turned up again and is preparing to re-open his shop in this doctorless village.

—"Oh, the snow! the beau"—Somebody head us off, or we will get our pencil off rashly.

—C. H. Yesbera is prepared to cut, fit and make ladies' cloaks in the latest styles. Give him a call.

—The F. & A. M.'s of Garrett have concluded to have a festival. Further notice will be given soon.

—The Lutheran synod is now in session at Butler. It will not adjourn until Saturday of this week.

—Tom. Cool wants to see you. He can be interviewed at the new meat market, near the Central house.

—" 'It snows', cries the school-boy," and then he hides his books under the wood-shed and skins out for the hill.

—W. W. Hoffman came back Tuesday from a five weeks' trip abroad. He hangs out, as usual, at the junction.

Wanted.—Second growth hickory timber suitable for ax handles. For particulars enquire at the Auburn House. 45-4w.

—Joe Copper's phiz once more looms up in the familiar places, and he is again laboring for the railroad company at the junction.

—Mrs. Sophronia H., wife of Howard Coe, former resident of this place, died at Chicago on the 11th of last month, of pneumonia.

—Miss Zelpha McBride, who fixes up the good things at Hollister's restaurant, visited Garrett Monday afternoon of this week.

—Rev. R. F. Delo, agent for Wurtenburg college, delivered an eloquent sermon at the M. E. church, last Sabbath evening.

—A new assortment of piece goods just received at Yesbera's. Fine and business suits made at low prices and warranted to fit.

—After a pleasant visit of about three weeks, at West Unity, O., Miss Nellie Wheelock is welcomed home again by her friends in Auburn.

—Just think of it; 500 pieces of the very latest sheet music, received at Abright's every month. Call there when you want new music.

—Fred. Clark expresses a desire to be in Chicago on the 12th of this month, to help "receive" Grant, and it is quite likely that he will be there.

—The finest line of gentlemen's furnishing goods in the city, can be found at Yesbera's. Young man, if you want nobby toggery, go there.

—The ladies' social of the Presbyterian church will be entertained by Mrs. J. L. Davis, next Wednesday evening. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

—Every farmer in the vicinity of Auburn should attend Prof. Clarke's lectures at the M. E. church. Three nights 50 cents. Single admission 25 cents.

—The sporting man's furnisher at Fort Wayne, Max G. Lade, has something to say to the people of Auburn and vicinity in another portion of this paper. Read it.

—Married.—At the residence of the bride's father, in Concord township, by Rev. W. L. Meese, on Sunday, Nov. 2nd, 1879, Mr. Geo. Swineford and Miss Belle Hornberger.

—Last Tuesday brought Johnnie McIntyre home from the Valparaiso normal school, where he completed his education in telegraphy. Now he is ready for an office on the road.

—Women's heads are like safes; you can't tell how much they have in them by the number of locks they have on.—Ex. Yes you can; the more locks the less in 'em. Clear as mud, isn't it?

—The building to be used as a hotel at the junction is about ready for a tenant, but as yet no landlord seems to have had the nerve to apply for it. Nothing risked, though, nothing gained.

—Miss Anna Lowry and little sister, Lottie, were visitors in Auburn for the past two days. They returned to Ft. Wayne yesterday.

—Examine Yesbera's hats and caps. Our young friends from the country will find it good policy to select from a large assortment, where they can see all the latest styles.

—The German Methodist church, of which Rev. Wm. Conzelmann is pastor, has this week purchased a fine organ. It is of the Estey make, with the Packard improvement, and can be heard in the church next Sabbath.

—A thanksgiving dinner will be given by the ladies of the Presbyterian church, but we have not as yet learned where. It is perhaps needless to add, however, that we will take occasion to find out in due season.

—Sherm. Hollister had the sand to bet two whole dishes of oysters on Ohio's going 15,000 republican, and the other fellow came in to get them Friday night. Of course everybody knows who was stuck.

—The latest how out is "My Grandmother's Churn," a beautiful dirge in three verses. The next will probably be "Our Step-Mother's Slipper," and the chorus will be "Whack, whack, whack, whack."

—We don't go much on this practice of giving boys a license to smash up other people's property once a year. A portion of the Hallow-een programme is very pleasant, but the part alluded to above ought to be eliminated.

—Go to Abright's jewelry store for sheet music; he has made arrangements with the largest music publishing company in the United States, by which he receives five hunured pieces of the latest publications each month.

—Dr. J. J. Littlefield, recently of Jackson, has returned with his family to Auburn, and will continue the practice of his profession here. Like all the rest who leave Auburn, their coming back is a mere matter of time.

—Some parties a day or so ago were figuring on their chances for making another restaurant pay, and the location was to have been on Eighth street, next door to Parley Stimley's; but the idea, so far as we can learn, has been abandoned.

—Will somebody please be mean enough to move into the store-room under the Courier office, recently occupied by the C. O. D. store?—not that it would swell our finances any, but only because our feet get so all-fired cold.

—Railroad fare was down so low last Monday that even a poor, inky editor might have taken a ride (on the back platform). Frank Copper sold a round-trip ticket to Fort Wayne for ten cents; but Mrs. Dr. Ford was the purchaser, and rectified the mistake on her return.

—Howard Griswold, the affable clerk in McQuiston & Ralston's big store, proposes to take a lay-off this winter, owing to rheumatic affliction. His place, during his resting spell, will be filled by George Lanning, who is now heaving potatoes and "sich truck" in the store.

—The Courier office has now got a new coal-stove—a bran,span new "Garland," Kiblinger's boss—and it is a "daisy," without a doubt. (And we are liable to have to sit up and work all night for seven weeks to come, in order to get even).

—What a question! "Where would your wife be if it hadn't been for your mother-in-law?" If you are ugly as a mud fence but have wealth laid up, the chances are if it hadn't been for your mother-in-law your wife would be some other fellow's.

—A day or two since Dr. Cowan took us out to the junction and back "just a flying," behind his little black mare. Doc. isn't the most careful driver, either, particularly in turning corners; but we tied our hat on, shut our eyes and trusted to Providence,—which probably accounts for our getting back all in one piece.

—Miss M. Cleveland, our enterprising milliner next door to Abright's jewelry store, has just received a fine stock of new goods. She is well prepared to attend to millinery and dress-making, and keeps up with all the new styles and fashions. Just received a fine lot of fur beavers, which she will take pleasure in showing to her numerous customers.

—A lady subscriber at Butler, who called in the office a day or so since to help us pay our rent, wages, paper bills, office expenses etc., said that "the Courier is an essential is her family" and that "she could hardly manage to do without it." Such words are quite naturally encouraging, and they go a great ways in helping newspaper manufacturers over the hilly places.

—How is this for a "sweet-scented scoundrel?" On Tuesday or last week, a fellow named G. R. Andrews, living at Muncie, was twice arrested and in the evening was married to a respectable young lady. Miss Fannie Burgess, on her death-bed, confessed to having had an abortion performed, and said that Andrews performed it; at 5 o'clock he was arrested as the principal party; at half past six Miss Burgess died; at 8 o'clock he was married to a Miss Daugherty, and at 9 o'clock he was arrested for manslaughter. If this isn't a checkered career for one day, we give it up.

For the Auburn Courier.

Auburn Junction R. R. Employes—Is it Civilization or Barbarism?

Messrs. Editors:—Allow me to say that having witnessed the development of DeKalb county since the beginning of 1855, and having a more or less intimate acquaintance with many of your citizens throughout the county, it affords me great pleasure to bear testimony to the marks of rapid, as well as substantial improvements in every thing that marks an enterprising and prosperous people. It is gratifying to see rich farms, and even school houses or churches occupying the places where twenty-five years ago there was almost unbroken forests, and in some cases impassable marshes. But what is still more pleasing is the fact that the intellectual, moral and religious interests of society have not only kept pace, but even outstripped the material development. Having spent several days in your goodly city, I could not help comparing its present status of civilization with what it appeared to be twenty or twenty-five years ago. No better argument could be presented to silence those croakers who are lamenting the good old days of pioneer life and depreciating the present, than an intelligent comparison of things in general as they are now, with what they were within the boundary of a quarter of a century ago.

There is however one dark spot that mars this very pleasing picture, the very thought of which is unpleasant, and which I cannot refrain from noticing. While spending several hours at the B. & O. depot at Auburn Junction, I was compelled to litsten to the most violent swearing, blasphemy and red-hot imprecations, that I have listened to for many long years, even during the war I did not hear it excelled for offensive violence. The thought suggested by this barbarous and indecent conduct at a place of public resort, and that too, while ladies traveling were in waiting in the depot, were something like the following. Do the officers of the B. & O. R. R. approve of such vulgarity on the part of their employes? and if so, have they no respect for the feelings of those citizens who are by the misfortunes of travel thrown into the hearing of language which the most barbarized sailor would blush to utter? I do solemnly declare that I have on numerous occasions traveled on the L. S. & M. S. and the P., Ft. W. & C. R. R's., and to the best of my knowledge and memory, I heard more profanity in one hour at the B. & O. depot at Auburn Junction, than in all my experience on the roads above mentioned, on the part of employes. What does the great public say? What do the citizens of Auburn and DeKalb county say? Shall and must such intolerable savagism be tolerated in your midst?

Rambler.

[The above has no reference to J. J. Martin, the gentlemanly agent of the B. & O. road at the junction, as he was not in the office at the time in question. Eds.]

—As evidence that the lectures of Prof. Clarke were highly appreciated by the citizens of Waterloo, we give below the card of Mr R. Wes. McBride, as published in the Press last week. Prof. Clarke commences his lectures in Auburn to-night, at the M. E. church, and we hope to see our citizens manifest as much interest as our neighbors at Waterloo.

Editor Press: Allow me to congratulate the citizens of Waterloo, upon the intelligence, culture and desire to learn exhibited by them, in flocking in such immense crowds to attend the course of lectures, by Prof. Clarke. It shows that they can appreciate and enjoy an entertainment which tends to elevate and improve their minds, to extend their boundaries of knowledge, and to give them grander and truer ideas of nature and of nature's God than they would otherwise have, and that they are not of that class whose mental calibre will not allow them to grasp or enjoy anything more intellectual than a circus, a puppet show, or a troupe of negro concert singers.

The town is also certainly to be congratulated most heartily that its school trustees, school teachers and its ministers, take such a decided interest in these lectures, as adding to the educational facilities of our town. How pleasing it is to see those who have charge of our young, and who together constitute the educators of the community, striving so earnestly, both by respect and example, to lead those under their charge to study, to think and to learn the truths of science. It shows that they do not belong either to that class of self-sufficient asses, who think they already know all worth knowing; or to that other class of narrow minded bigots, who are afraid to use eyes or ears, lest they should learn something new, that will conflict with pre-conceived ideas. As one of those who guaranteed to Prof. Clarke the pay for his course of lectures, in the belief that they would be appreciated and liberally patronized, and in behalf of my co-guarantors, I return sincere thanks to the community.

R. Wes. McBride.

Don't All Speak at Once.

If any one has a good house to rent, or knows of one,—a small house with four or five rooms in it, and located somewhere within a day's walk of the printing office,—information concerning it will be gratefully received at the Courier establishment.

—James Anderson will shoe your horses for $2.50 per span, and do a first class job. All kind of repairing done on short notice and at low prices. 44-4t

—The boys got their work in very beautifully last Friday night. It was Halloween, you know; or if you didn't know it at the time, it is quite likely you did next morning. When we strolled around town next morning and noticed several windows minus the glass, and numerous doors with their pannels missing, we thanked our lucky stars that our residence was in the second story of a business block.

What's The Reason.

Editors Courier:—Why is it that the treasurer of DeKalb county locks the door of his office during business hours? Section 3 of an act approved June 4th, 1852, reads: "The treasurer "shall keep his office at the seat of "justice of his county, and shall keep "the same open for the transaction of "business during business hours." On last Tuesday the office door was locked during business hours, and Mr. Gonser on the [illegible]; a number of our tax-payers came a considerable distance to pay their taxes and the penalty imposed, but could not gain admittance, and were forced to return home again. As this is in clear violation of law, it is to be hoped that this official will discharge his duties faithfully hereafter.

Taxpayer.

Punctual Pupils.

Names of pupils neither absent or tardy during the month ending Oct. 24:

HIGH SCHOOL.

Rebecca Shull,
G. W. Becker,
Flora Hoffman,
Laura Keeran,
Franklin Teeters,
Clara Stamets,
Mattie Swihart,
Sarah Tarney,
Ida Swihart,
W. I. Franks,
Geo. Essig,
Louie Henry.

A AND B INTERMEDIATE.

Ada Spake,
James Hoffman,
Bertha Hale,
Marion Willis,
Missie Michael,
John Zimmerman,
Mattie McKay.

L. Daniels, Teacher.

C INTERMEDIATE.

Minnie Wilson,
Laura Hoffman,
Frank Shugers,
Mary April,
Ada Gross,
Kittie Dills,
Alza Ralston,
Lena Hebel,
Nannie Peterson.

L. Clark, Teacher.

D INT. AND A PRIMARY.

Lizzie Ashley,
Mary Beuret,
Nettie Askew,
Ida Gehrett,
Ida Wites,
Bertie Casebeer,
Matie Bash,
Dora Jones,
George Clark,
Mabel Hartman,
Cora Culberson
Lena Korff,
Blanche Peterson,
Harry Henry.

L. McTighe, Teacher.

B AND C PRIMARY.

Charlie Hoffman,
Maurice Eckhart,
Eddie McKay,
Forest Moody,
Henry Cloy,
John Wolf,
Eddie Mason,
Viola Thomas,
Isa Koder,
Alda Barkley,
Emma Beurett,
Mettie Heist,
Mattie McKay,
Laura Ober,
Mary Slifer,
Eddie Klotz,
Ellis Summers,
Eugene Altenburg
Frankie Baker,
Zenith Stamets,
Ulla Brandon,
Anna Strebe,
Ella Gregg,
Lucy Otto,
Della Weaver,
Eva Ensley,
Addie McCord,
Estelle Hague,
Katie Berg,
Nora Ashley.

F. Stahl, Teacher.

D PRIMARY.

Freddie Ashley,
Oscar Hoffman,
Georgie Wolf,
Darlie Clark,
Della Hale,
Emma Shutt,
Frenchie Harter,
Joey Gerardot,
Wessie Lanham,
Nettie Wiles,
Clara Hoffman,
Millie Spake,
John Youngblood,
Henry Garver,
Earle Lawrence,
Gertie Wilson,
Minnie Gordon,
Clara Otto,
Dora Bochringion
Frankie Beuret,
Walter Hartman
Willie Eckhart,
Daisy Davidson,
Della Olinger,
Iona Treesh,
Bobbie Showers.

B. Tritch, Teacher.

SUBSCRIBE NOW.

The "Courier" Clubbing List.

For cash in advance, we will send the Courier, and either of the following periodicals, to any subscriber in DeKalb county, for one year, at the price named below:

State Sentinel (weekly)	$2 60
Western Rural "	3.00
Scientific American (weekly)	4.15
Young Folks' Monthly	2.35
Demorest's Magazine, (with premium)	4.60
Demorest's Magezine, (without premium)	3.20

Sample copies of the above can be seen at this office.

The publishers of the publications named below, offer the balance of 1879 free to all who subscribe now.

Western Rural, Young Folks' Monthly.

Liquor License Notice.

Notice is hereby given to the citizens of the incorporated town of Auburn, in DeKalb county in the state of Indiana, that the undersigned, an inhabitant of said state over the age of twenty-one years, will apply to the board of commissioners of said county, at their December session, 1879, for license to retail spirituous, vinious and malt liquors in a less quantity than a quart at a time, at and with the privilege of having the same drank on the following premises, to wit: The lower room of the building situated as follows: Commencing at a point thirty-three and one-half (33½) feet west of the southeast corner of lot number ninety-four (94) in the original plat of the town of Auburn, thence west twenty-two and one-half (22½) feet, thence north seventy-one and one-fourth (71¼) feet, thence east twenty-two and one-half (22½) feet, thence south to the place of beginning. William Gnosgor.

November 5, 1879.

Land For Sale.

Eighty (80) acres, 50 acres improved, on the road from Butler to Newville, in Stafford township. $1,700 will buy it. Two-thirds cash. For further information inquire of Peter Haas, Butler, Ind. 45-tf.

Spencerville.

—Miss Mattie Smith has returned from a visit with friends at Ashland, O.

—Mr. H. Wilson returned home from Tennessee Wednesday last.

—J. R. Nichols and Miss Cochran have formed a life partnership.

—Charles Emanuel was in town Friday last, taking depositions in the Hazzard case.

—The birth-day party given in honor of Mrs. R. Scott, brought that lady a number of fine presents.

—Dr. Purman, of Fort Wayne, visited Spencerville last week.

—Mrs. Dr. Emanuel is visiting at Seville, Ohio.

—S. N. Olds has been adding some improvements to his store front.

—Mr. Joseph Sputler was taken suddenly ill Saturday evening.

—Mr. Levit Shutt and daughter, of Michigan, are visiting relatives near town.

—We are informed that Mr. A. Depew, of Michigan, has purchased property at the village of Rising Star, (St Joe) and will make that place his future home.

—School closed Wednesday, Nov. 4. Prof. Walters will have charge of the school during the winter. The teacher for primary grade has not yet been selected.

—Tommy Fales is speculating in poultry.

—Messrs. Bishop and Cohill have been repairing the sidewalks in front of their business rooms.

—Mrs. D. M. Allen, of Maysville, O., spent Saturday and Sunday with friends in town.

—Rumor has it that Uncle Jake will take Miss Ellen to preside over his household in a short time.

—Look out for revolution! The young folks will hold a mock congress at Maysville, on the 18th of the present month.

—Miss Ella Emanuel, Miss Bessie and Carrie Kinsey, and Miss Lena Olds will attend the teachers' institute at Fort Wayne.

—Rev. Kelso, with Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bishop, are attending the synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church, at Butler, Ind., this week.

Notice.

No visitors will be admitted to the county poor asylum except on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. 44-4w.

Jonathan Rummel, Supt.

GET MARRIED!

There is a place in this State where wedding outfits for gentlemen,

CLOTHING

Furnishing Goods,

Hosiery, Hats, &c.

is a specialty. Parties contemplating

MatrimonY

will consult their interest if they wish

Stylish Garments

artistically constructed to visit this place. Besides we carry the largest, best made and finest trimmed stock of Men's Boys and Children's Clothing in the State. Be sure and find

A. S. LAUFERTY & CO.
C. O. D.
one price, fine clothiers
Opposite North Door Court House,
FORT WAYNE, IND.

$66 A WEEK in your own town, and no capital risked. You can give the business a trial without expense. The best opportunity ever offered for those willing to work. You should try nothing else until you see for yourself what you can do at the business we offer. No room to explain here. You can devote all your time or only your spare time to the business, and make great pay for every hour that you work. Women make as much as men. Send for special private terms and particulars, which we mail free. $5 outfit free. Don't complain of hard times while you have such a chance. Address H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine. 23-ly.

"We Heard a Mighty Rumbling and Could'nt tell Where"

UNTIL WE HEARD OF

C. H. YESBERA

Coming to the front with the finest line of

Piece Goods and Suitings,

Gents' Furnishing Goods, Hats and Caps,

ever brought into DeKalb County. The acknowledged judgment of the proprietor renders it unnecessary to say that his stock has been selected with the greatest care and with a view to pleasing the tastes of his customers. Call and examine his goods and satisfy yourselves that is the cheapest, and that a suit furnished by him will outwear three ready-made suits and cost but a trifle more; besides you are always sure to get a good fit.

Custom Made Work

His Hats and Caps and Gents' Furnishing Goods are the very latest out. Call and see them, in the third room north of the Postoffice. AUBURN, INDIANA.

41—tf

CLOCKS, CLOCKS,

WHELLERY
1071075
WALTHAM, MASS.

GOLD

—AND—

Silver Watches

Rodgers & Brother's PLATED WARE,

SPOONS,
FORKS and KNIVES.

Rings, Necklaces, Vest Chains, Ladies Gold Chains, Castors, Everything in the Jewelry line.

Violins, Guitars,
Banjos, Accordions
Violin Strings.

special attention given to repairing fine watches

All Work Warranted.

No charge for marking silver ware sold at

JOE. ABRIGHT'S,

Second door north of Postoffice, Auburn, Indiana.

ROSAMOND.

In the current bright June morning, Rosamond the queen of girls,
Down the marble door-steps loiters, radiant with her sunny curls;

O'er the greensward, through the garden, passes to the river's brink,
Throws away an old bouquet, and wonders if 'twill float or sink,

Then returning through the garden, round and round the lawn she goes,
Singing as she cuts fresh roses—she herself her world's fair rose;

In her dainty morning robe, and straw hat shading half her face,
Picturesque in form and feature, lovely in her youth and grace;

In her hand a little dagger, sharp and glittering as the sun,
Rifling hearts of thorny bushes, cutting roses one by one:

Pink and white and blood-red crimson, some in bud and some full-blown—
There through lawn and grove and garden sings she to herself alone;

Softly sings in broken snatches some old songs of Spain or France,
She holds her roses off at full arms-length with side-long glance,

Shifting groups of forms and colors, for a painter's eye hath she,
And all beauty pleaseth her, so artist-like and fancy-free.

Now she enters her boudoir, and sets her roses in a vase:
There for seven days and nights their bloom and fragrance fill the place.

When the petals droop and fade she'll bear them to the river's brink,
Musing, throw them on the waves, and wonder if they'll float or sink.

Will she bear away to-night a bunch of lover's rose hearts—pray?
Set them in her vase a week—then throw them with her flowers away?

—C. P. Cranch, in Harper's Magazine.

MY CHUM'S REVOLVER.

A College Reminiscence.

BY C. A. S.

It was a Smith & Wesson six-shooter—a small affair only—that my chum brought to our room after dark one evening, with a box of cartridges. He was angry. I had never seen such a sullen, ugly gleam in his eyes before. For Ned was naturally as genial, good-hearted a fellow as ever breathed, though very high-spirited.

It was our first term at college, and we had been having a little "unpleasantness" with the Sophomores for a week or two. Tall hats and canes were the cause of it. The Sophs did not approve of tall hats on the heads of Freshmen nor of canes in their unsoph-isticated hands.

These belonged, by royal right, to the Sophomores; so, at least, they claimed—and it was not healthful nor safe for a Freshman to ignore the claim. It had long been the custom, when a Freshman appeared with a tall hat on, or was seen sporting a cane, to promptly confiscate the article and sell it, and expend the proceeds in a "peanut drunk."

In other words, if a Freshman "put on style," he was "hazed" made to feel that he was a "sub." Indeed, about the first Latin we learned that year was the full signification of sub. We found that it meant under in every sense of the word, and applied to all Freshmen.

Now as to tall hats; my chum and I had both worn "Kerseys" during our last year at the academy. Being 19, and men grown, we were of some little importance in our own estimation, and had the opinion that tall hats were becoming.

In Ned's case, certainly, a tall hat added to his good looks, for he was a handsome fellow, 5 feet 10 inches in height.

We knew—at least we had heard—what the Sophomores claimed, and we had talked the matter over before entering college. Long ago we had concluded that such "hazing" was mean, contemptible tyranny.

Still, I had decided that, rather than have any trouble with the upper classmen, I would allow my tall hat to remain unused during my Freshman year. The point of "rights" at stake did not appear to me to be worth fighting for.

Ned, however, was more pugnacious and high-spirited. The fact that his right to wear what he pleased was disputed angered him. He said that he did not wish to wear his tall hat every day, or in a way offensive to the Sophomores. He had no wish to provoke a quarrel with them, but he declared that, if he wanted to wear his Kersey to church on Sundays, he should wear it, or if he were going for a day on a visit or for recreation he should wear it if he liked.

Ned certainly had right on his side. Therefore I hardly knew how to change his purpose. That he would have trouble I felt sure, and it had always seemed better to me to keep clear of that if possible. But when I gave this as a reason for him to accept the college custom he declared that I hadn't manly spirit.

In reply, he argued that it was not only cowardly, but wrong, to yield to injustice, or budge one inch for a bully. "A man," he said, "should always stand for his rights," which may be true, or may not, according to circumstances.

For the first week or two of the term no demonstration of any sort was made. We were getting acquainted with the students, and had joined some of the "societies." During this time Ned had not worn his "Kersey." One morning, however, he received a letter, stating that one of his sisters, with another young lady, would pass through the town that day on the 2 o'clock train.

This train stopped ten minutes at the station. Ned, of course, went to the depot to meet them. The other young lady, I may add, was a particular friend of Ned's. Perhaps for that reason he put on his "Kersey."

There were always more or less Sophs about the depot at train-time, and while Ned was talking with his sister and her friend in the Pullman car one of these youngsters saw him. Word was at once passed that "there was a Freshman under a tall hat!"

Three of the Sophs instantly boarded the car, and, coming up the aisle behind Ned, one of them brought down his double fist with all his might on the top of Ned's hat, driving it completely over his ears.

For a moment Ned was fairly hoodwinked, and could scarcely get the hat off. Then he turned on his assailants like a tiger. His sister screamed and caught hold of his arm; and, seeing not only her terror, but that of the other ladies, Ned abruptly checked himself.

"We will see you later," one of the Sophs said, with a grim bow, and they went out.

Ned came back to our room with his battered hat, in a raging excitement, and I could not blame him. To have been insulted in that gross manner before ladies was a severe test for a man's good temper. But he had met with a still worse affront. As he came up the outer steps of the college hall, some of the Sophs threw a bucketful of dirty water over him from a second-story window. The poor fellow rushed into the room completely drenched and smeared.

The water nearly ruined a good suit of clothes, and as for his hat, that was utterly spoiled. Imagine, if you can, his anger. It was only by a great effort that he controlled himself as he changed his clothes. Then, taking his "Horace," he attempted to go on with his lessons. I do not think that he closed his eyes that night. He was too much excited to sleep.

But those Sophs were not done with him yet. As we went to recitation, next afternoon, at 3 o'clock, he was again "ducked" from one of the upper windows.

The water fell like a cataract, and being close behind him I received a share of it. We went to recitation with our clothes saturated; but we were hot enough inside to counteract any danger of a "chill."

Going out, however, I was waited on by two Sophs, who told me, with their regrets, that my ducking was wholly unintentional; and they advised me, with a laugh, not to walk too close to "Freshman Gilmore" in future.

In return for their warning, I hinted that it was as much as somebody's life was worth to insult Ned as the Sophs were doing.

With a sneer, they replied that they would take some of that conceit out of him. "He carries his head," said one of them, "higher than the chapel tower!"

It was true that Ned did carry his head pretty high. He expressed his hatred and contempt of the Sophs in every movement. They, on their part, resolved to humble him.

Ned was ducked more than a dozen times during the next week. It seemed as if he could not stir out without bringing down a deluge upon his head. He was hooted, too, and insultingly asked why he didn't come out in his "Kersey" again. They meanly tried to provoke him in every way, until the poor fellow, like a caged and tormented animal, seemed driven to desperation.

Ned was a young man of good principles. He abhorred anything mean or bad. He was warm-hearted, too, and not a youth likely to do a cruel or an unlawful act. Yet the insults which the Sophs heaped upon him, and his strong sense of what he knew to be his rights, led him to buy a revolver.

Now the man or boy who buys a revolver in anger against a fellow-being has murder in his heart. This I think I fully realized when Ned came into our room and took the revolver out of his pocket.

I was frightened, and I hardly knew what to say or do. I was indignant at the treatment Ned was receiving, and had, too, something of Ned's feeling that a young fellow ought to have manly spirit enough to stand fast for his rights; still, I saw something of the folly of Ned's conduct. Now, I know full well that no such "hazing tricks," that nothing save the absolute necessity of defending one's life, should ever induce any one to use a pistol for the purpose of shooting a fellow-being.

"I will give them fair warning," Ned said. "I cannot endure these insults any longer. I will give them fair warning. Then if they attack me, they must take the consequences."

I replied that he had better go away for the rest of the term, and so prevent trouble.

"Why should I leave?" Ned argued. "I have broken no law. I have interfered with no one. Those Sophs are cowardly bullies. I will not budge an inch."

But, in this not-yet-very-perfect world, it is often the part of superior wisdom to foresee evil and judiciously avoid it. No man, however eminent and talented, can always get his full rights. Some points he must yield to the imperfections and prejudices of his fellow-men. The man who starts out determined to insist on his full rights in everything will soon find himself at war with everybody. Yet it is one of the hardest lessons for a spirited young fellow to learn when and how far it is better to waive his rights or his preferences.

Ned was as good as his word. He gave the Sophomores warning. At the door of their end of the hall the following notice was found posted at sunrise next morning:

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Certain members of the Sophomore class have outrageously and persistently insulted me. I hold that, in the matter of ordinary dress, I have a right to wear what I deem proper. That right I shall stand for. Hereafter, whoever assaults me on that account will do so at the peril of his life. EDWARD S. GILMORE.

This was fire and fagots for the Sophomores. A Freshman had defied them! The honor of their class—a poor honor enough, to be sure—was at stake, and class pride runs very high in many colleges—even in those where it is claimed that "hazing" has been abolished.

Hoping to avert mischief, I privately told several Sophs that Ned really had a pistol, and would shoot the first man who attacked him.

But I only added fuel to fire. Their whole class met that night and voted, almost to a man, to "crush Gilmore" at all hazards. They, too, were "spirited fellows."

This was Friday night. Saturday passed in a sort of ominous silence. Ned went out but once, and then wore his cap. But Sunday morning, he dressed himself carefully for church, and put on a new silk hat. The hat was a tall one, in the height of the prevailing style.

"Ned, I wouldn't do it," I said to him. "There will be trouble, and you may be sorry for the results."

"I will!" said Ned, firmly. "Bullying has got to stop here."

He then put fresh cartridges into his revolver, and placed it in his breast pocket.

I confess I would rather not have walked to church with Ned that morning; but I could not desert him in danger.

We set off together, and had gone about half-way, when near the corner of one of the halls we met three Sophs, each with a stout cane. No doubt they had been on the lookout for Ned.

Burnett, a leading classman of the Sophs, was one of the three. I knew they meant to attack Ned the instant I saw them. Burnett was a trained athlete, and the best oarsman and base-ball player in college. The moment we met, he leaped in front of Ned, and with a quick stroke of his heavy cane sent the tall hat whirling into the ditch.

Whether he would have struck Ned, I don't know. He seemed to raise his cane again, but perhaps only to defend himself. For Ned jumped backward on the instant, and, drawing his revolver, fired three shots at his assailant.

I shall never forget what a sound those shots had for me.

At the first fire, Burnett reeled across the sidewalk against the fence, and I saw the blood start from under his collar.

The ball had gone through the left side of his neck. It seemed to stun him partially, though he did not fall, but lay or hung on the fence.

The second shot missed him; the third went through his coat and vest, and bedded itself against the breastbone.

The other two Sophs fell back.

Ned stood a moment looking at Burnett

"You ruffian!" said he. "If I've killed you, you deserve it!" Then he turned and went to his room.

The other two Sophs were completely cowed, as well they might be. Together we carried Burnett to the steps of the hall, and took him into one of the recitation rooms. A physician was brought as speedily as possible.

The ball had made an ugly furrow across Burnett's strong neck. It was a dangerous wound, the doctor said, but not necessarily mortal. The wound on his breast was of much less consequence.

That was all I waited to hear. Leaving the wounded man, I hastened to our room. I shall never forget how Ned looked at my face when I opened the door. He sat on a chair, pale as a corpse, with the revolver in his hand.

"Is he dead?" he asked, in a low tone.

I told him the doctor had said that Burnett would probably get well. The pistol dropped upon the floor, he buried his face in his hands, and cried like a child.

Burnett was pronounced out of danger next day, and, as he declined to enter legal complaint, no arrests were made.

Three days after, however, Ned was summoned before the President and faculty of the college, and on the following day not only he, but also Burnett and the other two Sophomores engaged in the affair, were expelled from the college, as they deserved to be.

Hazing, as well as carrying revolvers for personal defense, are both of them barbarous practices. There is no evidence of manhood in either. They show how enduring are the savage traits that characterized our earliest ancestors. Reason and every true manly instinct revolt at the repetition of such practices, and can only condemn them.

Bitten by a Cat.

One of the pictures of the late French Salon represented the fable of the woman who was turned into a cat. She is depicted crawling on all fours, a woman in figure, but a cat in nature, with kindling eye and stealthy movement, toward a mouse in the corner of the room. In the Rue de Montreuil, yesterday, the inhabitants were witnesses of a scene in which a woman assumed for a short space of time all the attributes of a cat. It was the most appalling of all human maladies that took possession of this poor woman. Last August she was bitten by a mad cat, and, although the wound was considered quite healed, suddenly, yesterday afternoon, she was seized with hydrophobia. She uttered a terrible scream, like that of a cat, and threw herself with frightful grimaces, as if to bite a neighbor, who hastened to get away. The mad woman pursued her, but fell in the middle of the street in paroxysms of agony, tearing out her hair. The crowd looked on petrified with fear and horror. Finally, some policemen threw blankets over her, and succeeded in carrying her to the nearest hospital, but she was dead before arriving there.—Paris Cor. London Daily News.

The Influence of Temper on Health.

Our English contemporary, Capital and Labor, which is generally correct in its assertions, thinks that, while excessive labor, exposure to wet and cold, deprivation of sufficient quantities of necessary and wholesome food, habitual bad lodging, sloth, and intemperance are all deadly enemies to human life, none of them are so bad as violent and ungoverned passions. Men and women have survived all the former, says the writer, and at last reached an extreme old age; but it may be safely doubted whether a single instance can be found of a man of violent and irascible temper, habitually subject to storms of ungovernable passion, who has arrived at a very advanced period of life. It is, therefore, a matter of the highest importance to every one desirous of preserving "a sound mind in a sound body," to have a special care, amid all the vicissitudes and trials of life, to maintain a quiet possession of his own spirit.

JUDAH P. BENJAMIN, the remarkable man, who has made home and fortune over again since the end of the war, recently sent a poor country editor in Louisiana a check for £500.

A NEW WORLD.

The Strange People and Curious Sights Nordenskjold Saw in the Arctic Regions.

When the ice closed in upon the Vega, and left the stout ship enslaved in those northern solitudes, Prof. Nordenskjold wrote a letter to Dr. Oscar Dickson, the main contributor toward the fitting out of the expedition, describing the scenes along the coast. The letter, dispatched on the 20th of February, has at last reached its destination, and is now published in the London Standard. The letter calls attention, in the first place, to a group of islands which are very remarkable from a scientific point of view. These islands, the New Siberian, open the book of the history of the world at a new place. The ground there is strewn with wonderful fossils. Whole hills are covered with the bones of the mammoth, rhinoceros, horses, uri, bison, oxen, sheep, etc. The sea washes up ivory upon the shores. In this group is possibly to be found the solution of the question of the ancestry of the Indian elephant, and important facts with regard to the vertebrates which existed at the time of man's first appearance upon earth. How came horses and sheep in a region now locked in the fetters of an eternal winter, uninhabited by man, not now supporting animal life in any form, and almost impossible of access? Prof. Nordenskjold was unable to solve the question himself, and he suggests that it is of the utmost importance to science to send a light-draught steel steamer to those islands for a thorough exploration.

At Cape Schelagskoff the Vega passed the point where the Siberian merchant Schalawroff ended his persistent and intrepid attempts to reach Behring straits from the River Lena, by a lonely death, with his whole company of men in a hut on the snow-clad shore. Upon rounding this cape Nordenskjold met the first natives seen along that whole coast. They spoke a tongue utterly unknown. Not a comprehensible sentence could they utter in any European language. They lived in tents pitched on the sand banks separating the lagoons peculiar to this coast from the sea. A hardy, jovial, handsome race, fur-clad, keen at barter, ignorant of the value of money, and preferring a red flannel shirt, a few brass buttons and the piece of tin foil on a cake of soap to golden rubles and silver coins; they live an active and healthy life, use stone and bone implements, and are without a trace of religion in their customs. Their tents are double, one within the other. The children are totally naked within the inner tent, and were often seen outside, running about on the frozen ground with the temperature down below 32 degrees. The women wear nothing when within the tents except a girdle, and the men have shaven heads. A remarkable similarity was noticed between the implements, dresses and customs of these people and those of the Esquimaux and North American Indians. These people are the Tschuktschers. Though armed with stone and bone weapons, and though wild and itinerant, they evidently have a history. They drove off the original inhabitants of the region 200 years ago, the Onkilons, whose houses, places of sacrifice, circles of moss-grown bear skulls, and weapons are still to be found almost everywhere on the coast. Lieut. Nordqvist devoted himself to learning their language. These Indians are on the original highway between the cradle of the human race and the home of the aborigines of the northern part of North America, and it is not thought that the resemblance between them and the Greenlanders is accidental. The arrival of the Vega on the Tschulitscher coast was an event like the landing of Columbus in the New World. It was an unprecedented occurrence and made a sensation throughout the region.

East of the Lena, Prof. Nordenskjold found on shore no scattered blocks of stone such as are distributed over a continent by glaciers and such as are found elsewhere in Siberia. This fact was held to point to the absence of land out to sea north of that coast, and it excites anticipations as to the possible discoveries which are to be made by the Jeannette. Not the least of the peculiarities of this strange region is the fact that the coast appears to be rising slowly out of the sea. The inhabitants have to shift their villages at times nearer to the edge of the water, which is gradually receding from them. Prof. Nordenskjold's letter is full of facts like these, and the scientific world will wait with impatience the further publication of the results of his discoveries.

A Danger in the Jury System.

The dry, cutting satire practiced so much by the cross-examining lawyer of to-day is sometimes as dangerous in court as it would be on the street. A short time ago a jury was sitting on a case in Southern Colorado. A woman took the stand and was somewhat unceremoniously treated by the lawyers. At last a particularly dry and caustic fellow began to practice on her with the cross examination. Now, among the jurymen was one gentleman who was drawn with apprehension and fear of consequences. He was a free, wild miner, with no more idea of the restrictions of law and justice than a buffalo. He had twitched uneasily while the woman was being examined, and could only be kept still by being provoked into a whispered conversation with the foreman. As the cross-examination reached a particular point, he astonished the court by jumping up, thrusting his hand into his hip-pocket, and exclaiming to the lawyer: "Hi, thar, Mr. Stick-in-the-mud!" This from a juryman brought every eye in wonder and amusement upon him. He heeded nothing, and proceeded: "Jack McCabe won't 'low no man to talk to a woman in that shape; not while he's round!" The Judge rebuked honest Jack, and he slunk into his seat, embarrassed but mad. The lawyer, turning upon him with withering scorn, began, bombastically: "Of what weight with me is the opinion of an ignorant juryman? I—" "That's what I thought," said Jack, as with one bound he cleared the rail and wound himself around the lawyer. Before a constable could reach and separate the struggling pair, Jack had macerated the lawyer so that he was obliged to give up the case and go home on a shutter. The juryman nearly cleaned out the court before he could be placed under arrest, disabling two constables and putting the crier and the Judge to flight. Another argument against the jury system.—Boston Herald.

November.

One can never see the approach of this month without thinking of the poems of Burns, Tom Hood, and William Cullen Bryant. Burns speaks of this month as a "chill" month, and its blasts as "surly." It was in this month that he wandered by the banks of the wooded Ayr—now gloomy with falling leaves and saddened by leaden skies—and thought of the ingratitude, the unkindness, and cruelty of man, whose inhumanity makes "countless thousands mourn." A choice month for such somber and heart-rending meditations.

This is the month in which come those "melancholy days" spoken of by Bryant in his beautiful poem, "The Death of the Flowers." How sadly sweet is this dirge of the decaying year! The death of the flowers, in this dreary month, read to the poet a moral lesson that sinks deep into his heart.

But poor Tom Hood, whose sadness was always wreathed with the brightest flowers and gems of humor and wit—wine, as it were, glittering in the skull-goblet of a Byron—cannot even write about this ghostly November without bursting into fits of rich laughter. Is not he truest genius, after all, who is capable of weaving the woof of joyant laughter in the warp of his sober hours? It is such contrasts that give the greatest enjoyment to man. Shakespeare has a fool with his waggeries ever following the broken fortunes of a despairing King, uttering his puns and witty quips and conceits, while the wretched Lear raves loudest in his misery. A poet of great talent, but no genius, dares not attempt such a double flight as this. If his poem is melancholy, it is melancholy from first to last—there is no ray of sunshine lining its somber cloud. If he is funny, like Holmes or Saxe, he gives his whole mind to the fun, and shoots no drop of sorrow into his verse. Hood and Shakespeare had a delight—yea, a very passion—for mingling the two extremes in a weird sort of way, that make the wildest and most wondrous music for all time.

So does November mingle sadness and joy. The falling leaf, the fading flower, the dripping rains, the cool nights and mornings; and then, too, the gorgeous splendors of a million forests, the voluptuous sunshine that warms the bright earth at happy intervals—satisfy us that this is the wonderful genius of the months, the solemn and severe, the silent and serene, the laughing and the jubilant era of the season.

In this month the farmer is preparing for winter; and so is the inhabitant of the city. The thrifty rustic is wintering his root-crops, top-dressing his defective grain-fields, water-furrowing to prevent washing, stacking or housing his corn-fodder, fattening his hogs, dry-shedding and sunny-yarding his sheep, putting flesh upon his beeves, and building up his compost-heaps for the ensuing spring. And the young folks have leisure now for parties at night and frolics in the day-time. November is a good month for the farmer and his family and friends.

Pueblo, Colorado.

The emporium of the cattle trade of Southern Colorado is still young, and its growth was retarded by "the panic," but it is now getting its full share of the prosperity which has come to the Centennial State, and the twenty-five people who were there in 1865 have grown to between 6,000 and 7,000. It has two daily papers, two railroad depots, two national banks, with goodly lists of stock-raising depositors, and two school-houses in juxtaposition, a sketch of which will give a good idea of the old and the new in Pueblo. Like many other Western settlements, it has had, too, its baptism of blood. It was a trading post of stout old William Bent, and became other than this only in 1858, when the gold excitement began, and "Pike's Peak or Bust" was the motto painted on the canvas cover of each prairie schooner, or emigrant wagon. One may still see, near the handsome stone station of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad, the remains of the old fort into which, when, on Christmas day, 1854, the residents, thoughtless of danger, were gathered around the fire and enjoying the festive season, the Ute Indians broke, with brandished tomahawks and wild war-cries, and massacred nearly all.

Throughout the region of country tributary to Pueblo—where are found, besides the nutritious grasses and running streams, which are indispensable, a genial climate and mild winters—are scattered cattle ranches, great and small, including the immense Craig property, often mentioned in Eastern papers.—A. A. Hayes, Jr., in Harper's Magazine.

Irishmen vs. Yankee.

The other night at a London club some Americans were boasting about their inventions and the wonderful machines to be found in the States. One of them told of the well-known mincing machine, which, a live pig being introduced at one end, turns out the animal in sausages at the other. An Irishman, who was not going to have the Yankees riding rough-shod over every other nation, turned on them and said: "Be dad, we've got the same machine in Ireland, only ours is more perfect, sure, for if you don't like the sausages, you can put them back into the machine, and by reversing the action they'll come out a live pig agin where he went in."

THE magnificent diamonds which were presented as a bridal gift to the daughter of Gen. Sherman by the Khedive of Egypt are still kept in the vault of the United States Treasurer. The daughter, Mrs. Fitch, lives in St. Louis. She has three children, the oldest being a boy of 4 years.

PRIDE IS AGONY.

BY [illegible]

What means this gaudy, showy dress,
With jewelry flashing from the hand so fair
Why still 'tis fashion's strange device
To lead from right the young and fair
Seems strange to me; that those so free
Should engage their thoughts to pride,
And their daily life a drudgery be,
While on fashion's air-castle they ride.

Could all but plainly dress and go,
And think of truth and honor bright,
And to all by their actions show
They are struggling to duty, right,
To make their lives and others' bright;
To wake the dark of life to light;
But, alas! as they lay aside this pride
To die, comes a groan of anguish, too late.

And now, my friend, you need never
Fear this last, eventful end;
You can make life bright forever
By shunning the evil of this device, and blend
Your heart and soul in truth and love.
For your God and fellow men.
For pride extreme and fashion's dress
Will never crown the temple, "Fame."

OLNEY, Ill.

PITH AND POINT.

ACORN on the tree is worth two on the toe.

THERE are several Kings in Europe who are total rex.

"I WISH there was more get-up to that boy," said a doting parent of his slothful heir, who was prone to lie abed.

ONE is an onion boiled and the other is a bunion oiled. There is the answer. You can fit a conundrum to it at your leisure.

"IT'S cool to-day," said a mother to her little son. "Yes, it's school five days out of the week," replied the embryonic paragraphist.

A DETROIT restaurant-keeper hangs out a sign of "Free chops," and when the old loafers come around he shows them an ax and a wood-pile.

"WHAT'S eggs this morning?" "Eggs, of course," says the dealer. "Well," says the customer, "I'm glad of it, for the last I bought of you were all chickens."

THE worst case of selfishness on record is that of a youth who complained because his mother put a larger mustard-plaster on his younger brother than she did on him.

A MAN who is bothered to know just what fees to extend to a hotel-waiter doesn't enjoy his meals half as much as the man who decides right off that he won't be juggled out of one red cent.

THE fool goeth out in a sail-boat when he doesn't know a boom from a breaker, but the wise man picks up pebbles on the shore and flirts with the girl in the pink dress.—Detroit Free Press.

FIRST boy—"Where yer bin, Billy?" Second boy—"Bin fishin'." First boy—"Ketch anythin'?" with an anxious expression on his face. Far-seeing second boy—"No. But I expect ter when I git in the house."

M. FALCONNET, who was a clever physician, was called in by a hypochondriac. The lady declared that she ate, drank and slept well. "Ah!" said the doctor, "come quick; let me give you some medicine, and we shall soon get rid of all that!"—French paper.

THERE will be five Sundays in next February. Think of so much Sunday-night bliss in the shortest month! But then this won't happen again in forty years. Let the old gentleman remember this, and be hopeful when he lays in the winter-coal supply.

"A NEW belt-clasp has three compartments, in which the wearer may stow pins, needles and cotton." Cotton in a belt-clasp? Well, perhaps the wearer may stow it there, but it would be a change that—that is, we don't know anything about it.—Norristown Herald.

"I AM told," said Mrs. Gubbins, the other day, "that a good deal of suffering exists among the 'pheasants,' in Europe, in consequence of their not being able to obtain work." And, when Mr. G. kindly suggested that perhaps she meant peasants, she flared right up, and said he had been "mighty willin'" to "catechise" her talk ever since he was elected Alderman.

THE Sanitary Engineer offers a reward of $500 for the best plan of a model school house. Our small boy will contest for that prize. His working model is not yet ready, but we may state that his idea of a model school house is one in which the teacher never licks; where recess comes five times of a morning, vacation every other week, and examination never; where all studies are elective, and chewing gum is insisted upon; where there is co-education of the sexes, provided the girls are pretty, and where there is no punishment for a fellow save sending him to sit by the girl to whom he was caught passing notes.—Albany Journal.

One Way to Cut Glass.

Many persons may not be aware that glass can be cut under water with great ease to almost any shape by simply using a pair of shears or strong scissors. In order to insure success two points must be attended to. First, and most important, the glass must be kept quite level in the water while the scissors are applied; and, secondly, to avoid risk it is better to begin the cutting by taking off small pieces at the corners and along the edges, and so reduce the shape gradually to that required, as if any attempt is made to cut the glass all at once to the shape as we should cut a piece of cardboard, it will most likely break just where it is not wanted. Some kinds of glass cut much better than others, the softer glasses being the best for this purpose. The scissors need not be at all sharp, as their action does not appear to depend on the state of the edge presented to the glass. When the operation goes on well the glass breaks away from the scissors in pieces in a straight line with the blades. This method of cutting glass has often been of service, when a diamond has not been at hand, for cutting ovals and segments, and, though the edges are not smooth as might be desired for some purposes, yet it will answer in a great many cases. The two hints given above, if strictly followed, will always insure success.

THERE are two things to which we never grow accustomed—the ravages of time and the injustice of our fellow-men.—Talleyrand.

SABBATH READING.

"We All Do Fade as a Leaf."

Falling all around,
Floods of wondrous glory,
Silent as the snow-flakes,
Breathing each a story:
Like a shower of sunbeams
In the autumn mellow,
Fall the leaves of crimson,
Russet, brown, and yellow.
Sobbing out low music,
When the wind is sighing,
At the thought so mournful
That the year is dying:
E'en the leaves are fading:
With the thought comes sadness:
Ah! my spirit longs
For the land of gladness.
For the golden pavement,
For the flowers immortal;
Fain my feet would press
Toward the pearly portal;
Falling all around,
Floods of wondrous glory,
All things here must fade—
This the leaflet's story.
—Christian at Work.

The Still Hour.

To do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly before God are, according to a high authority, the three essentials of the highest life. Of these the first is the hardest to practice. It is often easier to be generous than to be just; easier to show men favors than to recognize and respect their rights. But when we turn from the gracious to the legal mood, trying to be just, we are apt to be very careful lest we yield to others any more than of right belongs to them. This is the characteristic of many men who take pride in being just, and who in spite of this honest scruple are soundly hated; they are always bound that nobody shall get from them anything more than even measure; and in this exacting spirit they not seldom pervert the justice on which they are intent. "If people calculate the judicial mean too nicely," says a great writer, "they will not hit it; in their hearts they ought to go a little beyond it or they will fall short of it." The only kind of justice whose company we can afford to keep is the justice whose handmaid is sweet charity—the justice that would give a man a penny more than his due rather than give him a farthing less.

Bring One Soul to Jesus.

To stand fast in his own place, and bring at least one to his side, is the very lightest view of each Christian's responsibility. Should each one, by example, by testimony, by loving entreaty, "praying always with all prayer," bring one soul to Jesus, how would the numbers of the saved be swollen just in that alone! To think that there should be multitudes who in the course of their whole lives do not even so much as this; that, saved themselves, "so as by fire," if saved at all, the mass of professing Christians enter heaven with not a soul to ever, in all eternity, greet them there as the direct instrument of its salvation; that, upon the contrary, the balance is even a doubtful one of the good they do with the evil necessarily resulting from a wavering walk, and a conversation scarcely tinged with the godliness of the gospel; while in the burning which consumes the wood, hay and stubble of their imperfect Christian development the dear Lord's kingdom itself suffers loss! It is saddening to reflect that of the majority of professing Christians this must be true. What an access of power, then, would the kingdom at once receive if the fact in this regard should change, and a steadfast host stand up all through the Christian world, witnesses for Jesus unimpeached and unimpeachable!—Patmos; or the Kingdom and the Patience.

Changed by Charity.

A few months ago, a merchant in Philadelphia had occasion to visit the almshouse of that city, which is in itself a village, within enormous white marble walls, containing between 3,000 and 4,000 souls.

Passing through the insane department, his attention was called to a certain cell by the howls of the inmate, and, looking in, he found the wretched stump of a creature, more brute than human, crawling over the floor in the midst of filth, and making fierce efforts to attack him. Both legs were cut off above the knee.

Most men would have hurried on, but Mr. L—— belonged to that small minority who hold every human being as a brother; he insisted on going into the cell.

"He will kill you," said the keeper. "We have to use the whip to him when we carry him food."

"Let us try kindness," said Mr. L——. He entered boldly, sat down in the loathsome place and began calmly to talk to the maniac, who presently grew quiet, watching him furtively.

Mr. L—— came the next day and the next. On the fourth day he took the madman out of the cell, had him thoroughly bathed, dressed in a clean suit of decent clothes, and placed on a rolling chair which was wheeled about the grounds.

In less than a week, under the influence of kindness, fresh air and cleanliness, he was a sane man.

His story was a tragical one. He was a German, educated and intelligent, who came to this country last winter, failed to meet his friends on landing, or to find work. From exposure one night both legs were frozen and he was arrested, his despair being mistaken for drunkenness.

After his legs were amputated he became insane and was thrown into a cell where he would have died, if our friend had not rescued him. Mr. L—— procured a pair of artificial legs for him, and secured him employment and good wages. The other day they dined together, and a guest says it was hard to tell which was the happier man.

Thousands of visitors might have seen the poor wretch in his cell, and held out no helping hand. Yet Christ set a most beautiful example of sympathy for cases like this. To the power of His words of grace the demoniacs yielded, and the people were led to see that all things are possible to God.

Pinel, the French Christian philanthropist, attributed his success in influencing and helping the insane to those lessons of sympathy that the New Testament teaches. Charity changed the patients when all other methods failed. —Youth's Companion.

TYPES play funny pranks sometimes. The Gouverneur (N. Y.) Herald says: "In our Hammond items, instead of 'Miss H. Gregor had her collar-bone broken' read 'the lady had her cellar broken into!'"

THE HOME DOCTOR.

CURE FOR HICCOUGH.—Under this title, Dr. Grellet, of Vichy, states, in the Revue Medicale, that he has never failed in immediately relieving hiccough—i. e., not dependent upon any appreciable morbid condition—by administering a lump of sugar imbibed with vinegar.

NICE BROTH FOR A SICK PERSON.—Take a few slices of lean dried beef, put to boil in a quart of water, or a little more; wash two table-spoonfuls of rice, put it in with the beef and simmer slowly till the rice has boiled very tender; put in more water, if necessary, while boiling; when done take out the beef and add one or two spoonfuls of rich sweet cream, boil two or three minutes, pour in a bowl, and when cool it is ready for use.

A CURE FOR CONSTIPATION.—Prof. Storer, of Harvard University, gives the following: Dissolve fifteen grams of Epsom salts and eight grams of common salt in a quart bottle of water. A small wine-glassful of this solution may be taken on going to bed and on arising in the morning. If needed, a couple more doses can be taken through the day. These salts can be obtained almost anywhere, and may be readily carried when traveling in dry powders and dissolved when needed. Fifteen grams is about four even teaspoonfuls and eight grams about two.

SIMPLE TREATMENT FOR SCIATICA.—The Brussels Medical Journal gives, on the authority of Dr. Ebrard, of Nimes, this method of curing sciatica and neuralgic pains. Heat a flat-iron sufficiently hot to vaporize vinegar, wrap it in woolen cloth moistened with vinegar, and apply as warm as can be borne to the painful spot two or three times a day. As a rule, the pain disappears within twenty-four hours, and recovery is rapid.

LOCKJAW.—Having lately seen accounts of several cases of lockjaw, resulting from injuries by stepping on rusty nails, etc., I send you a remedy which has been known to prevent this painful disease in several instances: Take a red-hot coal from the fire and pour sweet oil (olive oil) on it; then hold the wounded part over the thick smoke, as near as possible without burning. It will be necessary to repeat the operation two or three times a day. This remedy has been known to cure after the jaws had commenced to get stiff.

ANOTHER CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.—By using celery well-cooked, Mr. Ward, an English gentleman, declares it will be impossible to suffer from rheumatism, the latter ailment springing less from cold and damp than from acid blood. Used in the following form, he declares that celery is a preventive of both rheumatism and gout: Cut the celery into inch-dice; boil in water until soft. The water may be drunk by the invalid. Then take new milk, slightly thicken with flour, and flavor with nutmeg; warm with the celery in the sauce-pan; serve up with diamonds of toasted bread round dish, and eat with potatoes.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE AND ICE-WATER.—A Baltimore druggist of experience and ample opportunity for observation has advanced the idea that Bright's disease is attributable to the immoderate use of ice water and cold drinks. He cites the fact that the people of this country use 90 per cent. more ice in their drinks than the people of any other country, Greenlanders not excepted. We have 75 per cent. more of Bright's disease. He cites the fact that the wine-drinking countries of Europe are comparatively free from the malady. Travelers have observed and commented upon the prejudice which seems to exist against ice-water and iced drinks in all countries outside of the United States. The Englishman and the German fairly shun ice, though placed in easy reach of boundless quantities of it, and the Frenchman who sips the light wines would as soon think of taking an emetic as of chilling his stomach with an iced draught. Our drug friend points to the fact that Bright's disease has kept pace in this country with the increased consumption of ice, and claims that, before ice became a common household necessity, the malady was scarcely known among physicians. There may be something in this theory.—Baltimore Gazette.

Costly Paintings.

Considerably less than a century has elapsed since Horace Walpole said that Sir Joshua Reynolds in his old age had become avaricious because he asked 1,000 guineas for the picture of the "Three Ladies of Waldergrave." Formerly his prices had been lower—only 200 guineas for a whole-length portrait, 100 for a half length, and 70 guineas for a "kit cat." It is needless to say that no one would part with the portraits for such a figure now. In 1774, for instance, Lord Carystort gave Sir Joshua 50 guineas for the "Strawberry Girl," which Lord Hertford paid £2,205 for at Samuel Rogers' sale in 1856.

The great name of Gainsborough reminds us of still more conspicuous instances of the same mind. The celebrated "Duchess of Devonshire"—we need not for our present purpose enter into the controversy as to whether it was really his—was bought by Wynn Ellis for £65, and was resold, as every one knows, to Messrs. Agnew for 10,000 guineas. After this extraordinary illustration of the fortune found in a work of art, which was worth as many pounds as it was originally sold for pennies, others less startling seem to lose something of their point. Yet it ought not to go unmentioned here that Greuze's famous "Broken Pitcher," which must now be worth several thousands of pounds, was painted by the artist (who, by the way, died in poverty) for something like £160—the sum it realized at the Marquis de Vetri's sale, in 1785; and that the "Chess Players," which Muller sold for 75 guineas in 1843 (and did not think his labor of only two days ill-requited), fetched, thirty years later, £4,153. Over the water-color drawings of David Cox, even those, perhaps, which were rejected from the Academy, comparative fortunes have been lightly won.

When Mr. Vokins gave him £50 for "The Hayfield" in 1850, the great artist was so pleased with what he thought a liberal price that he insisted on presenting a second drawing to the purchaser, little dreaming that at Mr. Quilter's sale in 1875 there would be a spirited contest as to who should take it—as Mr. Agnew did in the event—for £2,750. The profit was not in this case, nor in many others made by the first purchase, for Mr. Vokins sold "The Hayfield," with two other sketches by David Cox, for 110 guineas to Mr. Cumming, who resold them to Mr. Quilter for 1,150 guineas, and the total sum realized for the three at his sale was no less than £6,047 10s. Of Turner's water-colors the same story should be told, and should the "Vesuvius Calm" and the "Vesuvius Angry," for each of which Turner got 15 guineas, and which Mr. Ruskin secured some time ago for 550 guineas, ever come into the market it will be curious to note how enormously their value has been increased.—The Magazine of Art.

POLITICAL NOTES.

OHIO is not a keystone State. Allen lost it in 1875, but Tilden swept the country in 1876. Ewing has lost Ohio in 1879, but —— ——, the Democratic candidate for President, will sweep the country in 1880, and will not be counted out, either.—Boston Post.

IN pursuance of not only the effort, but the combination organized to whoop up a Bayard Presidential "boom," Senator Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, has written a letter to a friend in this city, in which he says that the present aspect of politics appears to him to suggest the nomination of Bayard and McDonald as the Democratic ticket for 1880.—Washington Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE latest development in the New York Tilden and Kelly imbroglio is that Kelly is to get the control of the politics of New York city from the Cornell Republicans in case Cornell is elected. It is charged that the bargain is similar to that consummated at one period by a faction of the New York Republican party with Tweed, and by which he was enabled to perpetuate his enormous robberies. Can there be truth in these charges? Chicago News (Rep).

THE New York Tribune has been delighted with the downfall of Mr. Thurman. The defeat of no other man in public life could have so pleased the proprietor of that concern, Mr. Jay Gould. He is in the Union Pacific for the purpose of making the most of it, to the disadvantage of the United States; but Thurman persistently urged his bill, and finally secured its passage, compelling the company to create a sinking fund from its earnings for the discharge of its obligations to the Government. This he did in the face of Jay Gould's shameless lobby. Just as Jay Gould's organ is rejoicing that Thurman's political career will soon be ended there comes the decision of the Supreme Court that the Thurman law is constitutional. It will be enforced, therefore, greatly to the disgust of the Gould crowd, who will find that Thurman survives sufficiently to make them do the honest thing.

WILLIAMS, the African who was elected a member of the Ohio Legislature in Hamilton county, accompanied Charley Foster to New York the other day, intending to engage with him in a canvass of the State in the interest of Cornell, Conkling and Canonchet. He was received by the Republican managers with chilling civility and sent to a hotel, where he was told to remain until his services were needed. The clerks, regardless of the Civil Rights law and the failure of the wiping out programme, assigned their Senegambian guest a room near the eaves, where he was informed he might also eat, the dining-room being reserved exclusively for the played-out Caucasian. When the full force of this Southern outrage was appreciated by the honorable moke from Ohio, he picked up his consumptive grip-sack and started for a restaurant, inveighing bitterly against the house in which he could not be treated as a gentleman. He and his brother stumpers will make the Robinson-Tilden faction suffer for this when they warm up to their work.—Chicago Times.

Too Clever to Live.

John Barretier is declared to have been the master of five languages when he was only 9 years of age. In his 11th year he published a learned letter in Latin, and translated the "Travels of Rabbi Benjamin" from the Hebrew into the French. Four years later the fame of his learning and writings attracted the notice of the King of Prussia, who sent for him to court. On passing through Halle on his journey, he so distinguished himself in his conversation with the professors of the University that they offered him the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. The whole university was delighted and amazed with his wit and knowledge, and on his arrival at Berlin the King honored him with peculiar marks of distinction, declaring that such abilities properly cultivated might exalt Barretier in ten years to be the greatest Minister of State in Europe. But the young philosopher was not dazzled with such prospects, and returned to Halle to pursue his studies. His health unfortunately gave way in his 19th year, and after lingering for eighteen months he died; another illustration of the expression, "Too clever to live long."—Chambers' Journal.

EVERY hotel in Brattleboro, Vt., is closed, and travelers are compelled to find accommodations at private houses. This is in pursuance of the plan to make the Prohibitory Liquor law unpopular.

LAMAR ON SHERMAN.

A Magnificent Arraignment of a Stupendous Humbug.

Senator Lamar recently addressed a large audience at Winona, Miss., in the course of which he spoke at some length in vindication of the Democratic party and of the South, against the charges made by John Sherman. We make the following extracts from his speech:

And now, fellow-citizens, I have to say something upon a subject which, if not graver in its character than that which I have discussed, is more difficult to treat with perfect unreserve. A public officer, whose position makes him the representative of the national interests, and whose duty it is to respect and vindicate the character of the whole people whom he represents, has lately taken the field as an open, and, I believe, an avowed, candidate for the Presidency. His immense patronage and his necessary influence with the great money corporations of the country are all so many forces operating to give success to his aspirations. Indecorous, in my opinion, as is this attitude of a Cabinet officer holding such immense patronage; compromising to the administration, of which he forms so conspicuous a part, as is this open disregard of the patriotic professions as to civil-service reform made by the President—I would not feel called on to follow him in his popular canvasses, but for one fact. He has lately made, published, and extensively circulated two speeches (one delivered at Portland, Me., the other at Steubenville, Ohio), which are bitter and malignant misrepresentations of the whole South; misrepresentations uttered not in the heat and passion of honest excitement, but cold, calculating, venomous words, meant to stimulate honest and ignorant people to the exercise of sectional hatred.

Before I read you what he says, especially about the South, let me call your attention to his charges against the national Democracy:

"If I felt at liberty to choose the theme most important to you and to the whole people of the United States, I would present the recent revival by the Democratic party of the Southern doctrine of States rights. This doctrine has been the evil genius of American politics. It was born of hostility to the Union. It was the bulwark of American slavery. It poisoned and estranged a large section of the country. Under the name of secession it led to the late rebellion, and aimed to destroy the Union by an open-armed conflict with the National Government. Every life that was sacrificed and the treasure that was wasted in that war were the bitter fruits of this doctrine.

"Now it takes the form of nullification—not nullification by State officers as when Gen. Jackson throttled it, but nullification by members of Congress, the sworn agents and officers of the General Government. These officers would surrender essential powers of the National Government, nullify its law, cripple it in executing its conceded powers, and make it a Confederate instead of a National Government."

Here is a direct and a positive statement that the Democratic party has revived and committed itself to the Southern doctrine of State rights—not using the phrase to convey that meaning which is acceptable to the minds of all the people of all the States, both North and South, but using it to convey that meaning which is repugnant to the Northern heart, and which the people of the North regard as subversive of national security and the integrity of the Union. He expressly says: "The Southern doctrine of State rights," involving "secession" and "nullification."

Now what was that "Southern doctrine of State rights" involving secession and nullification, of which Mr. Sherman speaks? The gentleman knows well what the doctrine is, and he knew equally well that neither the Democratic party nor any member of Congress now maintains it, or asserts it, or follows it.

He knows that the doctrine of which he spoke was a claim that every State of the United States had reserved in its own hands the right to judge of the constitutionality of an act of Congress, and to pronounce it null and void within its own limits.

Now, Mr. Sherman knows, and knows well, that every Southern State has yielded up that doctrine; yielded it up in good faith and forever; aye, more, has written its renunciation in its organic law. He knows that nowhere in this great Union is there one State which sets up any claim of right to determine the limits of Federal authority, or claims any power over the Federal Government or any department of that Government. What, then, does the Secretary mean by this reckless assertion? And what is the impression which he in his high and responsible position intends to produce? He knows what ideas and feelings are associated with the ante-bellum Southern doctrine of State rights in the mind of the people before whom he made that charge; that is to say, secession and slavery, rebellion, nullification and dismemberment of the Union. Such are the impressions made upon their minds, and such are the impressions which he knew would inevitably be produced when he made this charge against a great national party which at the last election gave to its candidate for the Presidency an overwhelming majority of the popular vote of the United States. Is it true that this great party has done this thing? Not only is it not true, but Secretary Sherman ought to know it to be not true. Fellow-citizens, I do not believe that in all the annals of party war are to be found assertions more reckless of consequences, more destitute of foundation, more cunningly framed for the production of erroneous impressions on the popular mind than are those of Mr. Secretary Sherman. Nowhere throughout the extent of the Union is there any conflict of State with Federal authority, nor is there any possibility of such a conflict for the future. But, says the Secretary, "it takes the form of nullification, not by State officers, as when Gen. Jackson throttled it, but by members of Congress, the sworn agents and officers of the Federal Government." Listening to this statement, would any one not acquainted with the Secretary's position and necessities imagine that, in making it and in reiterating it, he meant to be understood as referring to an act of legislation by the Congress of the United States? Would he not rather imagine a Cromwellian dissolution of Congress by the pike of a Gen. DeTrobriand marching into legislative halls with fixed bayonets? Was ever the passage of a bill through the House of Representatives and the Senate characterized before this as nullification of a law of Congress? Is such language the utterance of a statesman? Knowing the meaning of such language as we do know it, and seeing the connection in which the Secretary has used it, to what conclusion can we come save this: either that the Secretary is ignorant of that of which he speaks (and for such a man so engaged to be this ignorant is a crime), or that, not being ignorant, he has paraded before our Northern brethren an impertinent and senseless phrase to lead them into a delusion?

Does he mean to say that all or any of the Democratic members of the last Congress either openly advanced or covertly relied on the ante-bellum doctrine of State rights as a foundation upon which to rest measures antagonistic to the perpetuity and glory of the Federal Government, or as an end to the attainment of which such measures were to be presented and justified? If so, I assert it is not true, either in letter or spirit, and I challenge him to specify the man, or the men, or the time, or the measure, or the speeches, or the votes.

I repeat, then, why did the Secretary use the word "nullification" when speaking of an orderly, formal and ordinary act of Congress to repeal an existing law? The word has but one true meaning in American politics, when used in connection with State rights—that is, the asserted right of a State to interpose its authority to invalidate an act of Congress. This is the meaning which the honest masses who listened to Mr. Sherman would attach to it; and he used the term not for any pertinency it had to the matters at issue, but with the knowledge that it would revive forgotten prejudices, reawaken quieted alarm, reinflame cooled passions and remadden the extinguished animosities of sections. I hope he may be disappointed in his purpose.

He repeats the charge in another form, and in doing so makes a statement equally unfounded and misleading. He says: "When, by the firmness of the President, they failed in their main object, they sought by conditions in appropriation bills to compel him to agree to nullify laws in violation of his oath of office." What are the exact facts of the proceeding to which he refers? The Congress passed all the appropriation bills, providing for all the expenses of the Government in all its departments, as Mr. Sherman himself admits. Into those bills were inserted certain provisions amendatory of existing laws, so as to withdraw the authority to use troops at the polls, to secure impartial juries in the Federal courts, and, lastly, to take from the United States Supervisors the power to interfere with the freedom of elections. I shall not now discuss the propriety of making such amendments and repeal a part of an appropriation bill. I indorse and adopt as my own the view presented by Hon. Frank Hurd, of Ohio, a gentleman whom I regard as among the ablest, most useful and most promising of our public men: "If anything," says Mr. Hurd, "has been settled by the legislation of the last quarter of a century, it is that even general legislation may be tacked to appropriation bills, and certainly, no man at any time in the history of this Government has disputed the proposition that measures in the interest of economy, propositions relating to the revenue, such as these are, might be incorporated into bills when originated by the House."

But for the purpose of this argument let me admit that in their course in this matter the Democratic party were wrong; let me admit that they were flagrantly, fatally, hideously wrong; let me admit that that scheme of tacking is a scheme "conceived in fraud and brought forth in iniquity." What then? The very law which the Democrats were proposing to alter and amend became a law in this very manner, and became a law in this manner by the contrivance of the very party for whom Mr. Sherman speaks, and with which he was co-operating at the very time. They and he conceived the fraud; they and he brought forth the iniquity; and if the Democrats, following in their footsteps in the single instance of trying to pull down by such a practice a flagrant and crying evil by them created through such practice, have committed a wrong, then is the Democratic party responsible, not to Mr. Sherman and the stalwarts, who have sinned worse than we, but to the great body of the American people, and to them alone. If we have sinned in attempting thus to procure the repeal of an oppressive law, framed in such a manner, how much greater is their sin who conceived and first practiced the plan for the purpose of stripping from the President of the United States the veto power granted by the constitution, and who did succeed by this very method in passing this law over the President's head without having the constitutional majority.

INDIANA NEWS.

THE nut crop in all parts of the State is reported to be immense.

THE Lafayette water-works have been put to a satisfactory test.

MR. BRICE, one of the pioneers of Wayne county and earliest settlers of Hagerstown, has died suddenly of heart disease.

THE increase in hog receipts at Indianapolis for nine months this year, over the corresponding period last year, is about 22 per cent.; of cattle 8 per cent.

MISS KATE, second daughter of Hon. Thomas R. Cobb, member of Congress, was married at Vincennes, last week, to W. W. Cullop, assistant principal of the Vincennes University.

THERE is trouble in the public schools at Covington. The pupils have been caught playing draw poker for money, and the school board are called upon to break up the game.

THE annual convention of the Central Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers of Indiana met at Kokomo last week. About seventy-five delegates were in attendance.

PROF. COLLET, the State Geologist, has been to Hancock county to see the newly-discovered Indian mountain near Greenfield. Pottery, stone axes and hatchets, human bones, a stone whistle and other reminiscences have been discovered.

THE list of old settlers of Floyd county has been completed, and foots up 142. The oldest man on the list is John Coleman, of Lafayette township, aged 95, and spry as a cricket. The youngest man is 60, and was born in the county.

IT is expected that the foundation of the State House will be up to the surface of the ground by the time winter sets in. This is not as far as the Commissioners laid out, but they are satisfied that the work is being pushed as rapidly as circumstances will permit.

PROF. CALEB MILLS died at his late residence in Crawfordsville, of pneumonia, after an illness of two weeks. At the time of his death Prof. Mills was Rose professor of geology and mineralogy, professor of the Greek language, and curator of the library of Wabash College.

A PRIVATE dispatch from Alden, Col., announces the death of Gen. Lazarus Noble, of Vincennes, who was there prospecting. Gen. Noble was Adjutant General of the State during the greater part of the war; afterward Clerk of the Supreme Court, and after that resided at Vincennes. He was born in Wayne county, and was 53 years old.

THE Grand Council of Royal and Select Masons met at Indianapolis last week. A resolution to merge the Council with the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons was voted down. Officers were elected as follows: Walter R. Godfrey, Illustrious Grand Master; Edward O. Ross, Deputy; Perry W. Gard, Master; Albert Hayward, Grand P. C. of Work; Charles Fisher, Grand Treasurer; John W. Brammel, Grand Recorder.

JOHN IRVIN and John Revo, of Vevay, were drowned while attempting to wade the river. They had crossed over to the Kentucky side in a skiff, and some one had returned in the skiff. They attempted to wade across, and were swept down by the current. Irvin was a young man who attempted to cross the river three or four years ago in a leaky skiff with five of his brothers and sister, when the skiff sunk, drowning four of the other children, only two of the six escaping. Revo leaves a wife and three children, and Irvin a father and mother, who have lost a family of children by drowning.

A HORRIBLY brutal story comes from New Albany. A man named Stringham, who has had familiar acquaintance with the police for several years, accepted a wager to fight a savage bulldog. He prepared himself for the brutal encounter by getting down upon his hands and knees and growling and snarling, dog-like, until the other brute became gradually infuriated. The dog was then turned loose, and attacked Stringham savagely, but he caught the ear of the brute in his teeth and chewed it off. This only infuriated the dog, and when loosed from Stringham's teeth he made another and fiercer attack. This time Stringham caught the dog with his teeth in the under lip, and so lacerated and worried the brute that it howled from pain, and, when finally released, fled from his torture, and could not again be induced to renew the fight.

A Prairie Fire.

In an article entitled "Some Features of Kansas Farming," in Scribner, Mr. Henry King gives the following vivid description of that beautiful scourge—a fire on the prairie: "Next to calamities like that the homesteader's wife told of, the great besetting fear of the settlers on the border—in all the new and thinly peopled portions of Kansas, in fact—is the coming of the autumn prairie fire, which so frequently menaces their stacks and cribs, their helpless stock, their stables and cabins, and even their lives. Were it not for its known danger and power of havoc, this tempest and scourge of fire would be a spectacle of commanding force and beauty. First, you will catch glimpses of what you take to be gray wisps of haze away off on the horizon; and, watching, you will see these vagrant particles deepen gradually, and gather into a definite volume of smoke, black, like a rain-cloud, and bronze about the edges. Then the strange, somber bulk starts forward across the prairie, and you hold your breath at sight of the rapid progress of it. (A mile in two minutes is not an exceptional rate of speed for a fire once fairly under way.) It halts an instant, you note, over a broad swale where there is standing water; but it is for an instant only. The next moment it reaches the upland again and the dry grass; and directly it grasps a belt of the tall, thick blue-stem, and the flame leaps suddenly and madly out above the smoke, then subsides again, and the black mass grows blacker than ever, and rolls higher and higher, and you can scent the burning grass and hear the distant roar of the fire—an awful roar, resembling the sound of artillery in heavy timber. And it is so calm immediately about you that you do not so much as miss the ticking of your watch in your pocket; there is no breath of air stirring, and the sun is shining, and the heavens above you are blue and placid. But the stillness will be broken soon. The oncoming cloud is only a few miles away now, and you easily trace the scarlet and terrific energy at its base; the smoke begins to hurt your eyes, too, and the heat becomes heavily oppressive. And then, all at once, the wind smites and staggers you, that appalling roar deafens you, and the sun is blotted out, and you are in a darkness as of a midnight without moon or star. It is an experience of but a dozen seconds or so, this sudden plunge into darkness, though it seems an hour, and when you look out again you find that the fire has passed you a mile or more to your right, and is still rolling desperately onward; and there in its track are charred and smoldering stacks of hay, and an occasional house aflame and tottering to its fall, and a group of men and boys beating back the outer line of the fire with brush and old clothes, and sending forward little counter-fires to meet it and if possible keep it at a safe distance. The creek may stop it and smother it when it gets there, though such a hope has mere chance for a warrant; sometimes these mighty conflagrations vault across streams, twenty or thirty yards in width, so swift and resistless is their momentum; and as a rule they are effectually stayed only when they reach a wide extent of plowed land, and have to yield, sullenly, for lack of anything more to feed their inexorable fury."

The Joke.

"How much for a pear?" he asked, and with a chuckle paid the 3 cents demanded. Then came the joke. "I only took a pair," he said, exhibiting two of the articles. And what a satisfied grin that punster started away with! "All right!" shouted the huckster after him. "Pears is only a cent apiece, but I knew you'd be up to some dodge. You keep the joke, old buster, and I'll keep the extra cent."

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.
(Formerly Dr. Craig's Kidney Cure.)
A vegetable preparation and the only sure remedy in the world for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and ALL Kidney, Liver, and Urinary Diseases.
Testimonials of the highest order in proof of these statements.
For the cure of Diabetes, call for Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure.
For the cure of Bright's and the other diseases, call for Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

WARNER'S SAFE BITTERS.
It is the best Blood Purifier, and stimulates every function to more healthful action, and is thus a benefit in all diseases.
It cures Scrofulous and other Skin Eruptions and Diseases, including Cancers, Ulcers, and other Sores.
Dyspepsia, Weakness of the Stomach, Constipation, Dizziness, General Debility, etc., are cured by the Safe Bitters. It is unequaled as an appetizer and regular tonic.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.

WARNER'S SAFE NERVINE
Quickly gives Rest and Sleep to the suffering, cures Headache and Neuralgia, prevents Epileptic Fits, and relieves Nervous Prostration brought on by excessive drink, overwork, mental shocks, and other causes.
Powerful as it is to stop pain and soothe disturbed Nerves, it never injures the system, whether taken in small or large doses.
Bottles of two sizes; prices, 50c. and $1.00.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS
Are an immediate and active stimulus for a Torpid Liver, and cure Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Bilious Diarrhœa, Malaria, Fever and Ague, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly. No other Pills require such small doses for thorough work. Price 25 cts. a box. Warner's Safe Remedies are sold by Druggists & Dealers in Medicine everywhere.

H. H. Warner & Co.,
Proprietors,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Send for Pamphlet and Testimonials.

Auburn Courier.

AUBURN, INDIANA, NOV. 6, 1879.

THEODORE REED, ROB. J. LOWRY
EDITORS.

The Model Railway.

There is no link in the chain of railways across the American continent, from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans, that has played so directly an important part in that great continental railroad, as the link of five hundred miles composing the Chicago & North-Western railway, from the inter-continental metropolis—Chicago—to the Missouri river at Omaha.

In starting westward from Chicago, it was the pioneer to connect with the Union Pacific railway; it virtually made that road practicable, and was substantially the father of it. It thus earned its well deserved title, "The Old Pioneer." That it in a measure exhausted itself financially in its rapid and forced construction across the then unsettled but rich prairies of Illinois and Iowa, accounts for the fact that it was for some time as its later day and would-be rivals smilingly put it, "a streak of rust." Yet its history, on a review, shows it to have ever been, as to time and to absence of accidents, a "Cunard line" for safety, speed and regularity at terminal arrivals. This may be accounted for from its having less gradients and curvature than its new competitors to Council Bluffs, at the same time being the shorter or inside line. It started its trains last from termini and arrived first. It has ever been the most accommodating for the through passenger. This much for its past history.

The last two or three years, in its roadway, its rail, its equipment, has witnessed the most wonderful change of any road in the east or west. It is now the First-Class railroad; second to none, the equal, we think the superior, of any, which justly entitles it to the appellation, The Model Railroad. Gravel ballasts, white oak ties, steel rails, stone culverts, iron bridges, first-class engines, coaches that are airy and elegant for comfort, having Miller couplings and Westinghouse steam breaks and attached to each train is one or more of those marvels of splendor, the Pullman Palace Hotel cars, in which the traveler eats and sleeps in more luxurious appartments than old world potentates ever dreamed of. The matchless track, the scientific equipment, has won for this road, for its ease and comfort that mead of praise, the triumph of art, in railway travel. Its praises should be ever sung in the far Orient, and especially those near lands that owe so much to the continental railroad—Colorado, Nevada and California, and the distant occident—that all may know of its well deserving of the public's patronage. Quite in place will it be here to say, that that much traveled, observant and skillfull officer of the United States army, Major-General Irvin McDowell, in passing over it the other day, on his way to San Francisco, was pleased to say of it: "It is the finest road I ever traveled on either in Europe or America."

The road has additional praises to those of its excellence of construction, natural location, and perfect equipment, the sprit du corps of its employes lends a charm in their care, attention and gentlemanly deportment, which adds the cap sheaf, grace, to its material perfection.

For the year past it was a road without a terminal detention. Its greatly increasing through travel and immense way business will soon require a double track—Republican, Dec. 7th, 1878.

The Right Sort of Man.

You will find as a rule, that the men who are favorites with men are the best and truest in their relations to women. Yes, the men who like sometimes to turn their backs on all women, and go off "with the other fellows," and have a good boyish time on the water, or the mountain, or in some other man's 'den.' Women never need be afraid to trust their happiness to those whom other good men esteem good fellows; but, if a man is avoided by men, however much women may admire him, shun him. It is he who has flirtations that come to nothing, and has not been very nice to the girls who have broken their engagements with him; who when he marries, wrings his wife's heart if she has one, and spoils her temper, if she is naturally an angel. Manly men are the best lovers, the best husbands, the best companions for women, just as womanly women are the best sweethearts and wives. What do we think of women who shun their own sex, however charming men may find them? It is seldom, if ever, that your men's favorite ill-uses his wife. Perhaps it may be explained in this way—friendship of a sublimated sort is what love becomes after a year or so of marriage, and he who is friendly to the very depths of his soul enters into this state hapily, and is ready for all the delights that follow. But a man who is capable of nothing but that fleeting affection which ever pursues a new object, and cares for no woman when she is won, hates the domestic ties and becomes detestable in consequence. It is the man who would die for his friend, and for whom his friend would die, who makes a miraculously happy wife of the woman to whom he scarcely knew how to make love when he courted her.

Some Facts About a Well-Known Substance Not Familiar Even to Smokers.

[Boston Commercial Bulletin.]

A dealer in smokers' articles informs us that within the past year or two the market has been flooded with all sorts of imitations of amber, some of which are so like the real that the most experienced eyes may be deceived. The genuine article is simply a fossil resin, and the imitators, starting from that point, have adopted as the basis of their falsifications fresh resins, which they treat in such a manner as to gives their products all the appearance and most of the qualities of the true article.

The most esteemed specimens of the latter are procured on the coast of the Baltic, and come from submerged forests of pine, very similar to those now in being, which are in the state of lignite, that is to say, between the condition of coal and that of peat. The amber accompanying this lignite is generally found in rounded masses, the form ordinarily assumed by oozing gum. The substance principally used in the imitation article is colophony (a resin produced by the decomposition of turpentine,) but many other ingredients are made use of to give it the repulsite qualities.

So perfect if the imitation that the false amber has the electrical properties of the true, and some ingenious producers have even managed to introduce into the substance foreign bodies, insects, &c., to render the resembiance more striking, and enhance the value accordingly.

Notwithstanding the accuracy of the imitation, means exist of detecting the false from the true. Genuine amber requires a heat of from 540° to 550 Fahrenheit to melt it, while the spurious substance becomes liquid at a much lower temperature. Moreover, while the real article is only slightly attacked after a very long time by ether and alcohol, the imitation rapidly loses its polish in contact with these liquids, and soon becomes soft. With numerous small pieces of true amber a lump of much greater value can be formed. All that has to be done is to moisten the surface to be united with caustic patash, and press them together while warm, when they produce a transparent and homogeneous mass.

BOB BURDETTE.

The Iowa humorist's brief professional autobyography is as follows: "Nine years ago I found myself a proof-reader on the Peoria Transcript. Previous to that I had received the education that Peoria high schools treat young people to. After a while I started a paper of my own—the Peoria Review. I ran it two years. It was a comfortable sort of paper. It brought to me few cares, but no uncertainty. I knew every Monday morning that on the next Saturday night I would not have enough money to pay the hands. During my career as editor of that wretched sheet it never disappointed me in that particular—not once. Finally, the sheriff took me into partnership, and there was a glorious increase of activity. He was an enterprising man—very. He realized more in an hour than I had done in two years. Presently the partnership dissolved, and I looked around for something to do. I thought I would try to get on the Burlington Hawkeye. It was a sober, staid old paper financially solid. I was young and active. Thought I, "I think I can do that paper good. If I can get on the staff I am sure it will do me good." Well, I was thinking of going over there, when one day its business manager, Mr. Wheeler, came to see me, and effered me the position of city editor and reporter. Well, if I live 10,000 years it will not be long enough time for me to be sufficiently thankful that I accepted the offer, and besides that, I am proud of the fact that they sent for me. It gave me an independence of personal satisfaction that I have never recovered from. I suppose now that I have as good a newspaper position as anybody in the world. I do as I please, go away from town when ever I want to, and write whatever I feel like writing about. The Hawk-Eye demands one thing—a column a day, which I usually write on the train. It is easier to do it there than anywhere else. A man with his eyes open can't travel a mile without finding a subject."

Removing a Wagon Bed Easily.

[Rural New Yorker.]

To raise a wagon box or bed, put a strong screw ring in each side near each end of the box. Fix a strong hook, with a bolt and nut to secure it, through a beam over head in the shed. To this hang a pair of blocks and tackle. A two or three wheel block will be the best. Arrange four hooks on the ends of the two ropes, and fasten the ropes together in the middle with an eye or ring, so that each hook may fasten to one of the rings in the wagon bed, and the eye or ring in the middle of the ropes may hook on to the lower block. Then one man can easily raise the wagon box to the beams by hauling on the rope which is rove through the blocks. When the box is high enough, the loose end of the rope is fastened to a cleat or ring in the wall or to the wagon box itself. The box is thus hoisted out of the way, and when it is wanted it may be lowered on to the wagon again. Hay racks, wood racks and wagon boxes of all kinds may be thus hooked up to the top of a shed. One set of blocks and tackle will do for all, by having a set of stout ropes and hooks for each box or rack, which may be fixed to the beams.

Goldsmith Maid and Her Groom.

Recently Charlie Cochrane, who was for many years the faithful groom of the celebrated trotter, "Goldsmith Maid," arrived from California, and wishing to see the grand old trotting mare and her colt, called on Mr. Smith, her owner, to obtain permission to visit Fashion Stud farm in New Jersey. Mr. Smith accompanied Cochrane to the farm, and on arriving, remarked: "Charlie, the 'Maid' is very jealous of her colt, is very cross, and will permit no one to approach it." Cochrane arranged that "Goldsmith Maid" should hear his voice before she saw him, and although they had not seen each other for years, a loud whinny presently assured the visitors that the mare had recognized the man. Cocrane next showed himself, when a touching scene occurred. The old queen of the turf, who for months would not allow any one to approach her, making use of both heels and teeth if it was attempted, rushed with a bound to her old friend forgetting even her colt, and rubbed her head upon his shoulder, her nose in his face, played with his whiskers and showed every action that her heart was full of joy to see him. Directly the colt came up to them, and the old mare was delighted when Charlie placed his hand on the little fellow. When Cochrane left the place the mare followed him to the gate, whinnying for him even after he had passed out of sight—Baltimore Sun.

Pause, Ponder and Peruse!

The invention of that Superior and Complete Sewing Machine (The Family Sewing Machine), marks one of the most important eras in the history of machinery and when we consider its great usefulness and extremely low price ($25), it is very difficult to conceive of any invention for domestic use of more or even equal importance to families. It has great capacity for work; beautiful, smooth, and quiet movement, rapid execution, certainty and delightful ease of operation, that at once commends it above all others. The working parts are all steel, strong and durable, and will last a life time; the bobbins hold 100 yards of thread; the stitch is the firmest of all the stitches made, neat and regular, and can be regulated in a moment to sew stitches from an inch in length on coarse material down to the finest, so infinitesimal as to be hardly discernable with the naked eye, and with a rapidity rendering it impossible to count them as fast as made; it has more attachments than any other, and it does to perfection all kinds of heavy, coarse, plain, fine, or fancy needle-work with ease, and far less labor than required on other machines. It needs no commendation, the rapid sales, increasing demand and voluntary encomiums from the press, and the thousands of families who use them, amply testify to their undoubted worth as a standard and reliable household necessity, extending its popularity each day. Machines sent anywhere to be examined before any money is paid. Agents wanted by the Company. Address them for information. Family Sewing Machine Co., 755 Broadway, New York. 43-1y.

$1500 TO $6000 A YEAR, or $5 to $20 a day in your own locality. No risk. Women do as well as men. Many make more than the amount stated above. No one can fail to make money fast. Any one can do the work. You can make from 50c to $2 an hour by devoting your evenings and spare time to the business. It costs nothing to try the business. Nothing like it for money making ever offered before. Business pleasant and strictly honorable. Reader, if you want to know all about the best paying business before the public, send us your address and we will send you full particulars and private terms free; samples worth $5 also free; you can then make up your mind for yourself. Address, GEORGE STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine. 33-1y.

WHAT PAYS BEST
AFTER HARVEST,

Is a serious consideration of its cost and profits, and how to economize by comparing your own experience with that of others in farm labor.

Only $1.15 a Year,

Will place you in possession of the only newspaper that gives the actual experience and experiments of practical farming.

"The Cincinnati WEEKLY ENQUIRER, is the medium through which producers of every class make known their own experience, and seek that of others."

"The best teacher of farming, is the farmer himself! A fact fully demonstrated in the department (two pages a week) devoted to the farmer and his household in the WEEKLY ENQUIRER."

"Every department is complete."

"It is worth $100.00 a year to farmers, but costs only $1.15."

"The best is the cheapest."

"It always has the news in advance of all others."

"There is none better."

"It is the best political friend the people have, advocating its democracy upon the principles of justice and equity to all."

"It is the original greenbacker."

Such are a few of the many compliments paid to the Cincinnati ENQUIRER, by the press throughout the country.

The merits of its editorials, agricultural, political, correspondence, literary, telegraphic news and commercial departments combine to make it all that is required in an A No. 1, first-class family journal.

WEEKLY ENQUIRER.

One copy, one year.....$1.15
One copy six months.....65
COPY FREE TO CLUBS OF SEVEN.

DAILY ENQUIRER.

	without Sun. issue.	with Sun issue.
One year	$12.00	$14.00
Three months	3.25	3 75
Sunday's issue alone, per year		2.00
Any two day's issue	"	4.00
Any three day's issue	"	6.00

Specimens Free. Agents Wanted.

FAREN & McLEAN, Publishers,
41-3m CINCINNATI, O.

GUGERLI;
THE FASHIONABLE
Merchant Tailor,
Has just received the largest and finest assortment of Foreign and Domestic
Goods in his line, ever opened in DeKalb County. The very latest patterns in FRENCH CASSIMERES,
BROADCOLTH
DOESKIN,
CHEVIOT,
DIAGONALS,
And all kinds of fancy suitings. Beaver and chinchilla
OVERCOATINGS,
Of all colors, the finest ever brought to this market. A fine line of Beaver for
LADIES' CLOAKS,
Which the ladies are requested to examine. Cloaks cut, fit, trimmed and made at very low prices and
WARRANTED TO FIT.
No trimmings used on either gent's or ladies' wear, except the very best. Call and examine goods and leave your measure at
J. H. GUGERLI'S,
North Main street, opposite Duck's furniture store, Auburn, Indiana.

ISAAC HAGUE'S
NEW SHOE STORE!
A NEW STOCK OF
BOOTS AND SHOES
Arriving daily, for spring and summer trade. Fine goods for ladies a specialty. A full line of men's and boy's shoes, of the lates styles, at low prices. Our facilities for buying are such as to enable us to buy at manufacturers prices, thereby saving our customers one or more profits. Call and examine our stock and satisfy yourselves that what we say is true.
MR. CHARLES RAUT
Is associated with me, and as we are both experienced workmen we are prepared to do custom work, either sewed or pegged, on short notice and at reasonable rates. Repairing promptly attended to. Remember the place,— first door east of McQuiston & Ralston double store, north of the court house, Auburn, Ind.
16-tf. ISAAC HAGUE

RAILROADS.

Lake Shore & Mich South'ern R. R

AIR LINE DIVISION.

On and after Sep. 29 1878, trains will run as follows:

GOING WEST

	Special Ex.	Pacific Ex.	Accom
Toledo	11 05 a m	12 01 a m	p m
Wauseon	12 10	1 08
Bryan	1 05	1 52
Butler	1 42	2 25
Waterloo	2 00	2 40
Sedan	2 10	2 50
Corunna	2 15	2 55
Kendallville	2 28	3 05
Ligonier	3 07	3 40
Goshen	3 38	4 10
Elkhart	4 00	4 35	4 15

GOING EAST

Elkhart	1 10 p m	9 50 p m	3 05
Goshen	1 29	10 10
Ligonier	1 56	10 42
Kendallville	2 30	11 18
Corunna	2 40	11 32
Sedan	2 47	11 38
Waterloo	2 55	11 45
Butler	3 10	12 01 a m
Bryan	3 45	12 40
Wauseon	4 27	1 27
Toledo	5 40	2 40	9 50

CHAS. PAINE, Gen. Supt.
J. W. CARY, Gen Tic. Agt
J. E. CURTIS, Division Supt.

Pittsburg, Ft. W. & C. R. R

Condensed time card Nov. 10, 1878.

GOING WEST.

	No. 1 Fast ex.	No. 7 Pac. ex.	No. 3 Night ex	No. 5 Mail.
Pittsburgh	11 45 pm	9 00 am	1 50 pm	6 00 am
Rochester	12 53 am	10 12	2 55	7 45
Alliance	3 10	12 50 pm	5 35	11 00
Orrville	4 50	2 26	7 13	12 55 pm
Mansfield	7 00	4 40	9 20	3 11
Crestl'e ar.	7 30	5 15	9 45	3 50
" lv.	7 50	5 40	9 55
Forest	9 25	7 35	11 20
Lima	10 40	9 00	12 25 am
Ft. Wayne	1 20 pm	11 55	2 40
Plymouth	3 50	2 46 am	4 55
Chicago	7 00	6 00	7 58

GOING EAST.

	No. 4 Night ex	No. 2 Fast ex.	No. 6 Pac. ex	No. 8 Mail
Chicago	9 10 pm	8 30 a.m	5 15 pm
Plymouth	2 46 am	11 48	8 55
Ft. Wayne	6 55	2 25 pm	11 30
Lima	8 55	4 20	1 30 am
Forest	10 10	5 27	2 33
Crestl'e ar.	11 45	6 55	4 05
" lv.	12 05 pm	7 15 pm	4 15	6 05am
Mansfield	12 35	7 45	4 55	6 55
Orrville	2 26	9 38	7 00	9 15
Alliance	4 00	11 15	9 00	11 20
Rochester	6 22	1 20 am	11 06	2 00pm
Pittsburgh	7 30	2 30	12 15 pm	3 30

Trains Nos 3 and 6 run daily. Train No. 1 leaves Pittsburg daily except Sunday. Train No 4 leaves Chicago daily except Saturday. All others daily except Sunday.

F. R. MYERS,
Gen. Pass. and Ticket Agt.

Ft. Wayne, Muncie & Cin. R. R

Muncie Route.

THE SHORT LINE TO INDIANAPOLIS,
—AND—
THE SOUTHWEST.

Time Card in effect November 10, 1878.

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	1 Mail.	3 Express.
FORT WAYNE	1 00 pm	40 pm
Bluffton	2 12 pm	53 pm
Montpelier	2 52 pm	22 pm
Hartford	3 17 pm	58 pm
MUNCIE	4 08 pm	9 pm
Newcastle	5 00 pm
Cambridge City	5 37 pm
Connersville	6 17 pm
Cincinnati	9 20 pm
INDIANAPOLIS	8 15 pm	10 55 pm
Louisville	11 00 pm	6 20 am
Terre Haute		1 31 am
St. Louis		7 30 am

GOING NORTH

STATIONS	Mail.	Express	Accom.
St. Louis		8 00 am	7 00 pm
Terre Haute		3 27 pm	1 22 am
Louisville		2 00 pm	6 50 pm
Indianapolis		6 40 pm	4 15 am
Cincinnati	8 00 am
Connersville	11 13 am
Cambridge City	11 46 am
New Castle	12 25 pm
Muncie	1 25 pm	9 20 pm	6 55 am
Hartford	2 18 pm	10 08 pm	7 47 am
Montpelier	2 40 pm	10 31 pm	8 12 am
Bluffton	3 13 pm	11 00 pm	9 15 am
Fort Wayne	4 25 pm	11 15 am	9 45 am

Trains Nos. 1 and 2 run through between Fort Wayne and Cincinnati without change.
Through cars are attached to trains Nos. 1 and and run between Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, via Muncie.
All trains daily except Sunday.
Trains run on Columbus time.
GEO. W. MULLEN, Act'g Gen. Tick. Ag't.
W. W. WORTHINGTON, Gen. Supt.

Detroit Eel River & Illinois R R

TAKE EFFECT DEC. 2, 1878.

GOING EAST.

Stations.	MAIL. No. 2.	ACCOM. No. 6.	LOCAL FT No. 8.
lv. Logansport	8 30am	7 30pm	6 45am
Mexico		8 28	7 51
Denver		9 00	8 45
Chili		9 12	9 08
Roann		9 37	9 55
Laketon	10 13	10 00	10 38
N. Manchester	10 25	10 17	11 10
Liberty Mills	10 35	10 30	11 37
Collamer	10 51	10 50	12 20pm
S. Whitley	10 58	10 55	12 30
Columbia City	11 25	11 31	1 40
Collin's	11 40	11 56	2 25
Churubusco	12 00	12 12am	2 55
La Otto	12 25pm	12 42	3 55
Cedar Creek	12 3	12 53	4 15
Auburn Junct'n	12 50	1 12	4 55
Auburn	12 54	1 17	5 05
Butler	1 20am	2 00am	6 30pm

GOING WEST.

Stations.	No. 1.	No. 5.	No. 7.
Logansport ar.	5 10pm	1 00pm	5 30pm
Mexico	6 33	11 55	3 55pm
Denver	6 23	11 28	3 30pm
Chili	6 17	11 27	3 10pm
Roann	6 02	11 08	2 50pm
Laketon	5 46	10 38	1 52pm
North Manchester	5 36	10 25	1 28pm
Liberty Mills	5 28	10 13	1 00pm
Collamar	5 15	9 53	12 40pm
South Whitley	5 11	9 48	12 30
Columbia City	4 48	9 12	11 28
Collin's	4 30	8 46	10 37
Churubusco	4 18	8 29	10 04
La Otto	3 55	7 57	9 03
Cedar Creek	3 43	7 45	8 42
Auburn Junction	3 25	7 23	8 00
Auburn	3 20	7 18	7 16
Butler lv.	2 45pm	6 30am	6 00am

FRANK J. BECKER, Gen. Sup't

Notice of Administration.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been appointed by the Judge of the DeKalb circuit court of the state of Indiana, administrator of the estate of Margaret Bell, deceased, late of said county. Said estate is supposed to be solvent.
JOHN HARVEY, Adm'r.
October 13th, 1879.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

CHICAGO DIVISION.

TIME TABLE No. 4.

TO TAKE AFFECT MAY 18, 1879.

GOING EAST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Expr'ss
Chicago		10 00pm	9 10am
Walkerton Junction		1 08am	12 10pm
Milford Junction	2 30pm	2 16	1 20
Cromwell	3 30pm	2 40	1 42
Albion	4 35pm	3 10	2 00
Avilla	5 30pm	3 20	2 14
Garrett ar.	5 45pm	3 45	2 30
Garrett lv.	4 15am	3 50	2 30
Auburn Junction	am	4 00	2 41
St. Joe	am	4 20	2 48
Hicksville	am	4 41	4 00
Defiance	6 45am	5 27	4 45
Fostoria	2 30pm	7 25	6 40
Tiffin	3 45pm	7 54	7 05
CHICAGO JUNCTION	6 00pm	9 00	8 10

GOING WEST.

STATIONS.	Accom. & Frt.	N. Y. Expr'ss	Chicag'o Expr'ss
CHICAGO JUNCTION	5 30am	8 15am	6 00pm
Tiffin	8 20	9 07	7 56
Fostoria	9 25	9 31	8 34
Defiance	4 45pm	11 20	10 28
Hicksville	6 18	12 16pm	11 24
St. Joe	6 58	12 30	11 41
Auburn Junction	7 26	12 50	12 08am
Garrett ar.	8 00	12 55	12 10
Garrett lv.		1 25	12 20
Avilla		1 40	12 36
Albion		2 08	12 56
Cromwell		2 33	1 22
Milford Junction		3 00	1 55
Walkerton Junction		4 06	3 20
CHICAGO		7	6 40

N. H. WOOD, Master of transportion Chicago Division, Garrett.
C. H. HUDSON, Superintendent Trans. Ohio Division Chicago.

Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Sag. R. R

Short Line.

75 Miles Shortest to Indianapolis, Louisville and all points South. 58 Miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas, Texas, and all points West. Direct Route to Detroit and all Michigan and Canada points.

TIME CARD IN EFFECT OCT. 12, '79.

SOUTH.	MAIL.	EX.	ACC.
Bay City		6 30am
Saginaw		7 15am
Lansing		10 07am
Grand Rapids		6 00am	12 15pm
Detroit		7 00am	3 55pm
Ann Arbor		8 40am	5 20pm
Jackson	6 00am	11 50am	6 40pm
Jonesville	7 14am	1 00pm	8 37pm
Bankers	7 27am	1 15pm	9 05pm
Reading	7 38am	1 27pm	9 20pm
Angola	8 00am	2 10pm	11 00pm
Waterloo	9 11am	2 50pm	12 10am
Auburn	9 22am	3 02pm	12 42am
Auburn June.	9 27am	3 08pm	12 45am
Ft. Wayne	10 25am	3 55pm	2 00am
Indianapo'is	6 20pm	10 54pm
Cincinnati	7 00pm
Louisville	11 00pm	6 20am
St. Louis	7 30am	7 30am
Washington		8 00pm
Baltimore		9 20pm

NORTH.	EX.	MAIL.	ACC.
Baltimore		7 10am
Washington		8 35am
St. Louis	6 00am	7 00pm
Louisville	7 20am	6 50pm
Cincinnati	9 00am
Indianapolis	11 50am	4 05am
Ft. Wayne	5 00pm	11 35am	1 35am
Auburn June.	5 55pm	12 30pm	2 45am
Auburn	5 59pm	12 34pm	3 15am
Waterloo	6 14pm	12 45pm	3 40am
Angola	7 15pm	1 20pm	4 45am
Reading	8 05pm	2 10pm	6 15am
Bankers	8 22pm	2 23pm	6 35am
Jonesville	8 37pm	2 37pm	7 10am
Jackson	9 45pm	3 40pm	9 05am
Ann Arbor	3 00am	6 10pm	10 35am
Detroit	3 35am	6 20pm	11 50am
Grand Rapids	7 10am	10 05pm	4 00pm
Lansing		5 45pm
Saginaw		9 30pm
Bay City		10 14pm

Accommodation going north daily except Monday. All other trains daily except Sunday. For information as to routes and connections apply to

P. B. LOOMIS, Pres't & Gen'l Mang'r.
S. K. HOOPER, Gen'l Ticket Ag't.

SAVED!
TIME, PATIENCE & MONEY
By always taking the great
Wabash Route,
FOR ALL POINTS
North, East, South or West
LIGHTNING TRAINS,
Invariably on Time, with Close and Sure Connections.
No changes of cars to St. Louis, Hannibal, Quincy, Keokuk, Peoria, Burlington, Kansas City, Atchison and St. Joe, and only one change to all points in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Arkansas and Texas, forming the SHORTEST AND QUICKEST
—AND—
Only Direct Route
From the West to all points in the East, including New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.
Through Sleepers from St. Louis to Boston, 1223 MILES,
The Longest Sleeping Car Line in the World.
A. L. HOPKINS, Gen'l Manager.
R. ANDREWS, Gen'l Sup't.
H. C. TOWNSEND, Gen'l Passenger Agent, Toledo, O.

For Sale a Sacrifice,

A GEISER THRESHING MACHINE in good condition, offered for sale by Mr. D. D. Moody at a very low price, and on time. This is an excellent opportunity to get a bargain. 27tf.

—For first-class job work, come to the COURIER office. Good work, good material and low prices guaranteed.

ROBERT OGDEN,
Plumber, Steam and Gas Fitter,
IRON AND LEAD PIPE,
BRASS GOODS
OF ALL KINDS.
125 Calhoun street, Fort Wayne, Indiana
9-23-1y

THE AUBURN COURIER.

Devoted to the Interests of the Democratic Party and to the Collection of Local and General News.

Volume 9. AUBURN, DeKALB COUNTY INDIANA, NOVEMBER 13, 1879. Number 46.

The Auburn Courier

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY BY

THE COURIER COMP'Y.

EDITORS,

THEO. REED & ROB. J. LOWRY.

BUSINESS CARDS.

Cards not exceeding five lines each will be inserted under this head for $5.00 per annum. For each additional line 50 cents extra will be charged.

ATTORNEYS.

W. H. Dills,

ATTORNEY AND NOTARY, Auburn DeKalb County Indiana.

D. D. Moody,

ATTORNEY AT LAW AND NOTARY public. Also Prosecuting attorney for DeKalb County. Office in Court House, Auburn, Ind.

A. F. Pinchin

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Butler, DeKalb county Ind. Insurance and real estate business promtly attended to.

Thos. H. Sprott.

REAL ESTATE, COLLECTION AND INSURance Agent. Loans effected on improved farms. Kansas lands for sale or trade. Auburn, Indiana

Guy Plumb,

ATTORNEY AT LAW and notary public. Office over First National Bank. Special attention paid to the collection of claims. Also agent for the Home Insurance Company

PHYSICIANS.

Drs. Cowan & Allyn,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS. OFFICE in Case's block, Auburn, Indiana.

Dr. W. S. Allen,

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, Office West of Court House, on Main Street, over Eldridge's store, Auburn, Ind.

Dr. J. Miller.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON AND ACCOUCHER. Gunsenhouser's Corners, two miles east of Butler, DeKalb Co., Ind.

D. J. Swarts, M. D.

SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO DISEASE[illegible] rhoids or Piles and Chronic Ulcers. Office on Main street, over Shafer's Furniture Store, Auburn, Ind.

Drs. Casebeer & Matheny,

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, having associated themselves in the drug business and in the practice of medicine, are now prepared to answer all professional calls, day or night. Office at their drug store, first door south of the First National Bank, Auburn, Ind.

HOTELS.

Central House,

TENTH STREET, EAST OF MAIN. GOOD Sample rooms, and low rates. T. D. Gross, Prop't Auburn, Ind.

BUTT'S HOTEL,

FORMERLY THE BIGLER HOUSE. JOHN BUTT & A. B. RICHARDS, Proprietors, Waterloo, Ind. Free omnibus to and from all trains Good sample rooms on first floor.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

Examinations for the year commencing June 1st, 1879, will be held regularly, at Auburn, the last Saturday of each month; at Waterloo, the first and at Butler the second Saturday of every spring and fall month. Special examinations at other points on due notice.

W. H. MACKINTOSH,
Co Sup't, of schools.

LIVE AGENTS WANTED.

To sell Dr. Chase's Recipes; or Information for Everybody, in every county in the United States and Canadas. Enlarged by the publisher to 648 pages. It contains over 2000 household recipes and is suited to all classes and conditions of society. A wonderful book and a household necessity. It sells at sight. Greatest inducements ever offered to book agents. Sample copies sent by mail, postpaid, for $2.00. Exclusive territory given. Agents more than double their money. Address Dr. Chase's Steam Printing House, Ann Arbor, Michigan. 41-3m.

$300 A MONTH guaranteed. $12 a day at home made by the industrious. Capital not required; we will start you. Men, women, boys and girls make money faster at work for us than at anything else The work is light and pleasant, and such as anyone can go right at. Those who are wise who see this notice will send us their address at once and see for themselves. Costly outfit and terms free. Now is the time. Those already at work are laying up large sums of money. Address, TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine. 23-1y

Vacation of Alley.

Notice is hereby given of the pendency of a petition before the board of commissioners of DeKalb county, Indiana, to be heard at their December session, 1879, praying the vacation of an alley running north and south along the entire west side of Park's addition to the town of Auburn, in said county. The persons to be effected by said proposed vacation are Joseph H. Ford, Christopher Goodbreak William Snell, Charles Snell, John R. Weaver, Minnie Garver, John Otto, George H. K. Moss, John Sawyer and Joseph R. Lanning.

GEORGE H. K. MOSS.
W. H. DILLS, Att'y, And others.
Oct. 21st, 1879. 45-4.

Read. Read.

Persons desiring to purchase a first-class sewing machine, will please call on G. Rohrbaugh, Auburn, Ind. He is the only person in DeKalb county, who is authorized to sell the Singer Machine. Horses or cattle taken in exchange. Attachments on hand at all times. Office in Stamets' store, second door south of First National bank. 30-tf.

Wild Westerners—How Shanty Boatmen Float Down the O-h-i-o.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

Nathaniel H. Bishop has just published in the east "Four Months in a Snake Box—A boat voyage of 2,600 miles down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers." A "snake-box" is a peculiar kind of tough, light, decked punt invented by Barnygat duck-shooters, and one of them will carry 400 pounds on a draft of from four to six inches of water. Mr. Bishop started on his voyage down the O-h-i-o and Massassip December 2, 1875, and writes a very gossipy and readable account of what he saw and experienced en route. His discoveries in the wild west and south-west possess a special interest hereabouts. Speaking of the shanty-boats of the Ohio, he says:

The shanty-boatman looks to the river not only for his life, but also for the means of making that life pleasant; so he fishes in the stream for floating lumber in the form of boards, planks and scantling for framing to build his home. It is soon ready. A scow, a flatboat, about twenty feet long by ten or twelve feet wide, is roughly constructed. It is made of two inch planks spiked together. These scows are calked with oakum and rags, and the seams are made water tight with pitch or tar. A small, low house is built upon the boat, and covers about two-thirds of it, leaving a cockpit at each end, in which the crew work the sweeps or oars, which govern the motions of the shanty-boat. If the proprietor of the boat has a family, he puts its members on board—not forgetting the pet dogs and cats—with a small stock of salt pork, bacon, flour, potatoes, molasses, salt and coffee. An old cooking stove is set up in the shanty, and its sheet-iron pipe, projecting through the roof, makes a chimney a superfluity. Rough bunks, or berths, are constructed for sleeping quarters, but if the family are the happy possessors of any furniture it is put on board, and adds greatly to their respectability. A number of steel-traps, with the usual double barreled gun or rifle, and a good supply of amunition, constitute the most important supplies of the shanty-boat, and are never forgotten Of these family-boats alone I passed over two hundred on the Ohio.

This rude, unpainted structure, with its door at each end of the shanty and a few windows relieving the barrenness of its sides, make a very comfortable home for its rough occupants.

If the shanty-man be a widower or a bachelor, or even if he be a married man laboring under the belief that his wife and he are not true affinities, and that there is more war in the house than is good for the peace of the household, he looks about for a housekeeper. She must be some congenial spirit, who will fry his bacon and wash his shirts without murmuring. Having found one whom he fondly thinks will "fill the bill," he next proceeds to picture to her vivid imagination the delights of "drifting." "Nothing to do," he says, "but to float with the current, and eat fresh pork, and take a hand at euchre." The woods, he tells her, are full of hogs. They shall fall an easy prey to his unfailing gun, and after them when further south, the golden orange shall delight her thirsty soul, while all the sugar cane she can chew shall be gathered for her. Add to these the luxury of plenty of snuff with which to rub her dainty gums, with the promise of tobacco enough to keep her pipe always full, and it will be hard to find among this class a fair one with sufficient strength of mind to resist such an offer; so she promises to keep house for him as long as the shanty-boat holds together.

Her embarkation is characteristic. Whatever her attire, the bonnet is there, gay with flowers; a pack of cards is tightly grasped in her hand, while a worn, old trunk, tied with a cord and fondly called a "Saratoga," is hoisted on board; and so, for better or for worse, she goes forth to meet her fate, or, as she expresses it "to find luck."

More than one quarrel usually occurs during the descent of the Mississippi, and by the time New Orleans is reached the shanty-boatman sets his quondam housekeeper adrift, where, in the swift current of life, she is caught by kindred spirits, and, being introduced to city society as the Northern Lily, or Pittsburgh Rose, is soon lost to sight, and never returns to the far distant up-river country.

Another shanty-boat is built by a party of young men suffering from impecunosity. They are "out of a job," and to them the charms of an independent life on the river is irresistable. Having pooled their few dollars to build their floating home, they descend to New Orleans as negro minstrels, trappers or thieves as necessity may demand.

Cobblers set afloat their establishments, calling attention to the fact by the creaking sign of a boot; and here on the rushing river a man can have his heel tapped as easily as on shore.

Tinsmiths, agents and repairers of sewing machines, grocers, saloon-keepers, barbers and every trade indeed is here represented on these floating dens. I saw one circus boat with a ring twenty five feet in diameter upon it, in which a troop of horsemen, acrobats and flying trapeze artists performed while their boat was tied to a landing.

The occupants of the shanty-boats float upon the stream with the current, rarely doing any rowing with their heavy sweeps. They keep steadily on their course till a milder climate is reached, when they work their clumsy craft into some little creek or river, and securely fasten it to the bank. The men at the well baited steel traps along the wooded watercourse for mink, coon and foxes. They give their whole attention to these traps, and in the course of a winter secure many skins. While in the Mississippi country, however, they find other game, and feast upon hogs of the woods' people. To prevent detection, the skin, with the swineherd's peculiar mark upon it, is stripped off and buried.

When engaged in the precarious occupation of hog-stealing, the shantyman is careful to keep a goodly number of the skins of animals stretched upon the outside walls of his cabin, so that visitors to his boat may be led to imagine that he is an industrious and legitimate trapper, of hightoned feelings, and one "who wouldn't stick a man's hog for no money." If there be a religious meeting in the vicinity of the shanty-boat, the whole family attend it with alecrity, and prove their belief in honest doctrines is a very different thing from their daily practice of the same. They join with vigor in the shoutings of their "amens," drown all others, while their excitable nature, worked upon by the wild eloquence of the backwoods preacher, seem to give evidence of a firm desire to lead Christian lives, and the spectator is often deceived by their apparent earnestness and sincerity. Such ideas are, however, quickly dispelled by a visit to a shanty-boat, and a glimpse of the people "at home."

A Murdered Girl's Monument.

[Chicago Times.]

Spartansburg, S. C., Oct. 27.—To-day a magnificent marble monument was unvailed here over the grave of Miss Frances Woodward, a girl of twenty years, who was murdered by John J. Moore, in this county, on June 5 of the present year. The crime was committed in a dense forest about two miles from Moore's store. Miss Woodward was a stranger in this county, and stopped at Moore's place to ask for directions. He followed her into the woods, raped and murdered her. He was arrested next day and lynched by a crowd of about one hundred of his neighbors, in the presence of his wife and children. Soon after the perpetration of the crime, a movement was started among the ladies of the state to raise a fund to place a monument over the remains of the poor girl whose life was given up while defending her virtue. A large sum was promptly collected, and a magnificent shaft of Italian marble was erected over the grave here to-day, in the presence of twelve or fifteen thousand persons. Rev. A. C. Durham delivered the memorial address, and his touching and pathetic allusions to the deceased brought tears to the eyes of thousands in the vast assemblage. After the ceremonies of unvailing were concluded, the ladies present covered the monument with rare flowers. The inscription on the monument, cut on raised shield facing the east, is as follows:

In memory of
FRANCES WOODWARD,
Born June 29, 1860.
Died defending her virtue, June 5, 1879.
Gentle stranger, softly tread,
For a Christian sleeps below.

They Deserve Praise.

What sickens us is to see a few democratic papers blaming the democracy of Ohio or the democratic candidates for their defeat, attributing it to one cause or another and overlooking the true and only cause which can be found in the numerical strength of the parties. As between the democratic and republican parties in Ohio, there can not be the least doubt but on a full vote the republican party in Ohio is yet in the majority, as clearly and undeniably as the opposite is the case in Indiana. The democracy of Ohio deserve all praise, therefore in the character of their ticket and in the spirited campaign. They had to contend against the combined power and money of the administration at Washington and all the office holders of government. It was an unequal contest and they deserve all the more praise.—South Bend Herald.

Interesting Chat With a Diamond Merchant.

"O, rich and rare were the gems she wore."

Learning that Mr. Alvin Patton, the widely-known diamond merchant, was a guest of the Grand Hotel, an Enquirer reporter was yesterday detailed to seek him out and interview him on the subject matter of diamonds, a subject which lies very near to the American heart. Mr. Patton would hardly strike the average person as being a man who is in the habit of frequently having on his person diamonds and other precious gems to the value of from $30,000 to $35,000. He has the appearance, of being a modest, unassuming business man, as such he really is. He carries his diamonds hidden from view. On his shirt-front is a stone worth $4,000, but it is entirely hidden by his cravat. Mr. Patton is about thirty-five years of age, but he is prematurely gray. He has a clear-cut face, and eyes which in conversation sparkle little less than his diamonds. Mr. Patton carries a fine collection with him. Among the diamonds shown the Enquirer reporter were a pair weighing nearly twenty carats, perfectly white. One of them is a Brazilian gem of dazzling brilliancy. The mate is a Cape or African stone, but equally as fine. The pair are held at $20,000. In addition to these he has the magnificent cross, containing seven large diamonds, which was made for Madame Gerster, but which she did not take on account of a financial stress.

THE HISTORY OF THE DIAMOND.

"Mr. Patton, what was the origin of the name 'diamond?'"

"The name of the diamond is from the Greek Adamas, meaning invincible, referring to the hardness of the gem. The Syrians are said to have first known the diamond. In early ages it was traded in by the people of the east and was esteemed for medicinal virtues, and worn in the rough state as amulets to ward off diseases. The art of cutting it with its own powder, or diamond dust, was discovered in the fifteenth century (or in 1476) by Louis Van Berghen. In the beginning it was cut flat, or table form. The present beautiful [illegible] in the seventeenth century, and is called 'brilliant cutting.' Diamonds were long considered as minerals. Isaac Newton first proved them to be combustible, and, therefore, not minerals, but pure carbon. Various views exist in regard to the origin of diamonds. The subject is, still in dispute among the scientists."

"Can they be artificially produced?"

"They can not. All speculative experiments to imitate this most precious gem have thus far proved abortive. The old alchemists never produced gold, and modern science can not make a diamond. Diamond, being the hardest of all substances, yields to no file, scratches all other minerals, and is not touched by any. Some persons think diamond can not be broken. They can be broken, but do not wear in use."

COLOR IN DIAMONDS.

"What are the colors of diamonds?"

"They are sometimes tinged light green, more rarely red, blue and black; but those only used for jewels are selected of the colorless kind. In fact the present fashion demands the white or pale blue. There are also known diamonds of genuine rose color, and pistachionut green. Mr. Hope, of London, has a very valuable blue stone of extreme beauty and rarity. There are also jet black diamonds, but always very small. They are the hardest and most difficult to cut."

WHERE DIAMONDS ARE FOUND.

"Where are they found?"

"On this point opinions are very much divided. The rough diamonds are moved about in the beds of streams. The original bed is not known, but it is supposed that all the diamonds known to the world until recent times were found in the Golconda District of India. In 1728 they were accidentally discovered in Brazil, and probably in one hundred years the mines of Brazil furnished diamonds for the commerce of the world. Diamond washing ceased in India soon after the discovery in Brazil. They still find some fine stones in the vicinity of Sumphulpore. Authentic accounts of the finding of diamonds in many parts of the world are given by all writers on the subject, but really the great quantity of diamonds known to commerce has come from three localities, viz: Golconda District of India, Bahaia District of Brazil, and since 1868 from South Africa.

"The South African discovery has proved the most wonderful of all; in fact, the millions upon millions of dollars worth of brilliant diamonds now offered for sale in all the cities of the world, and more especially in American cities, come from the new mines or washings of South Africa, in the vicinity of the new Orange Republic. The diamonds were first called 'Cape diamonds,' or 'African diamonds,' when they first made their appearance in the markets, and were disparagingly spoken of by the experts and dealers, but I will venture to say of the $30,000,000 worth of diamonds imported into this country during the past ten years, $25,000,000 worth were from South Africa. When a diamond is fine and white, and of pure brilliancy and water, we call it 'Old Mine.' The time has gone by for disparaging the magnificent gems recently found in Africa. The 'Dark Continent' has furnished the world with $200,000,000 worth of diamonds in the past ten years. Rather more than fourteen years ago a little Dutch boy named Jacobs, at the Cape of Good Hope, amused himself collecting little pebbles from his father's farm near Hopetown. One of the stones was sufficiently bright to attract his mother's attention, and she called the attention of some merchants to it. They offered to buy it. She laughed at the idea of selling so common a stone, but she did sell it for a trifle, and upon examination it proved to be a genuine diamond of great value. This was in March, 1867, and since then from the gravel beds of the Vaal and Orange Rivers have been produced for the markets of the world over $200,000,000 worth of diamonds. True, a large number of new or African stones are "off color," or of a yellowish tint, but many are beautifully white, and a few are real gems, rivaling the old mine darlings in beauty and purity. Indeed, the diamond fields of South Africa are unique, and among the wonders of the world."

Well Deserved.

